DELESBY JOINS IN ENDORSEMENT OF FREE SPEECH

Says It Is One Right of U. S. Citizen Of Criticize Public Officials.

HIGH LIGHTS.

Every American citizen shall enjoy the ancient and sacred rights of free speech and peaceable assembly.

It is one of the rights of an American citizen to criticize the acts of his officials.

No man may advocate resistance to the law and no man may advocate the violent overthrow of the government.

The government, consisting of the people, must progress and be achieved through and under the orderly process of law.

Quincy, Ill., Aug. 20.—Lieutenant Governor John G. Oglesby, democratic candidate for governor, in speaking to the citizens of Quincy said he joined with the authors of the national republican platform in the declaration that every American citizen shall enjoy the ancient and constitutional rights of free speech and free assembly.

The candidate for governor declared that while it is one of the rights of an American citizen to criticize the acts of his officials, "no man may advocate violence in the law and no man may advocate the violent overthrow of the government. It must be kept constantly in mind that no one has the right to attack the government by violence, but the way of its improvement has been provided for in the constitution, which provides for a free speech, a free press, a free speech and free assembly, and the no less sacred right of the qualified voter to be represented by his duly chosen representatives.

"No man may advocate resistance to the law and no man may advocate the violent overthrow of the government. It must be kept constantly in mind that no one has the right to attack the government by violence, but the way of its improvement has been provided for in the constitution, which provides for a free speech, a free press, a free speech and free assembly, and the no less sacred right of the qualified voter to be represented by his duly chosen representatives.

"We may advocate resistance to the law and we may advocate the violent overthrow of the government.

"I talk with the authors of the national republican platform in the belief that every American citizen shall enjoy the ancient and sacred rights of free speech and peaceable assembly, and the no less sacred right of the qualified voter to be represented by his duly chosen representatives.

"We may advocate resistance to the law and we may advocate the violent overthrow of the government. It must be kept constantly in mind that no one has the right to attack the government by violence, but the way of its improvement has been provided for in the constitution, which provides for a free speech, a free press, a free speech and free assembly, and the no less sacred right of the qualified voter to be represented by his duly chosen representatives.

"I take as little patience with a scaring reactionary as I have with a wild radical. I believe that economic justice and social progress can be achieved through and under the orderly process of law.

It is one of the rights of an American citizen to criticize the acts of his officials. It is one of the rights of a citizen of free government to discuss a pig and much laughter.

WRITES HEARTY APPRECIATION OF DR. BANNISTER

J. Seymour Currey Pays Tribute to Life and Work of Evanstonian.

DISTINGUISHED FOR SCIENTIFIC SEARCH

Member of Party Which Made Expedition to Siberia in 1865.

By J. SEYMOUR CURREY.

Dr. Henry M. Bannister, the subject of this sketch, was a man deserving of an important place in the annals of the town in which he lived so long, and this tribute is offered by one who knew the deceased intimately and friendably during the past forty years or more.

He was the son of a Methodist minister, formerly professor of Hebrew on the staff of Garrett Biblical Institute, and the eldest son in a family of six children. He was born July 21, 1844, and was named after the famous missionary, Henry Martyn. He died in Evanston May 1, of the present year, after a long and painful illness, at the early sixty-first year. His father, Dr. Bannister, was so called in virtue of the degree of "doctor of divinity" which he held, while Henry, his son, bore the same title by virtue of his degree of "medical doctor." The elder Dr. Bannister died in 1883 in his Arctic year. Both father and son were eminent in their different fields of activity.

Was Distinguished.

Henry Bannister, the younger, was generally distinguished for his scientific acquirements, having spent some time in the best medical institutions of Chicago, and also acquiring experience at that time of the Chicago Medical College, in which institution he was designated as a member of an expedition sent by us to the Western Union Telegraph company to survey a line across Siberia; it will be remembered that the Atlantic cable was at that time still in an unfinished condition and it was the general belief among scientific men that a telegraph line across Siberia would find, if it could be laid, and in the fall of 1865 had completed sufficient of Bannister's expedition, when a father's family lived at "The Grove," some seven miles west of Evanston.

At that time Alaska was still in the possession of Russia and consequently was a foreign country so far as the United States was concerned. Consequently, the expedition was forced to make a necessary expedition to carry assembled at St. Michael's, and from there crossed Behring strait to Siberia. At this point the leader of the expedition learned that the efforts to lay the Atlantic cable had been finally successful, and the expedition was ordered to return to the United States.

Suffered Exposure.

While absent on this expedition Mr. Bannister suffered from exposure as a result of the death of the Arctic night, with four companions, he underwent a journey of 1,000 miles in a sledge drawn by dogs, with a loss of all but one of his party. Bannister, and although the two other men accompanied by a full moon, the party soon lost its way on account of a previous snowstorm, which came after a storm. They finally reached their destination after severe hardships, but Bannister did not fully recover from the effects of his adventure for many years.

After his return from Siberia, then about 18 years of age, Bannister was sent to Europe, where he was a student at Heidelberg University
