Individual accolades brighten the Rams' season

If a season could be measured only in terms of personal achievement, then the 1994-95 men's bascetball season would be one of the most successful in recent sports memory But alas as any avid athletic fan knows, a truly rewarding year can only be achieved when the team's goals have been realized. And so according to these aforementioned terms at least, this past hoop season may have been somewhat discour-

"This season was disappointing to us." echoed Coach Jim Nelson, "because with the nucleus of veterans that we had, we expected to perform somewhat better."

According to Nelson, the Rams fell shy of two specific pre-season objectives he was determined to have accomplished. In short, the coach desired to see an overall 500 record turned in by his team, as well as a return to post-season tournament play. Unfortunately, neither materialized, and this despite the Rams' veteran status as a team.

There was also senior forward Rick Ace, whose 19 points in the season conclusion against Nichols College put him second on the scoring index with a grand total

And there was also senior guard Chris Toglia, a player who commenced the season in the shooting spot, but then had to fill a void unexpectingly in mid-season, when regular point man Jake Mikalauskis had to depart from the team for personal reasons. "Toglia needed to refocus to become a shooting guard and a play-maker," commented Coach Nelson. "He did it in an all-star

Seniors Dave McL aremand Tim Bean also churned out fine individual seasons for the Rams, and both may have been wrongfully shunned in terms of immediate credit because of a lack of gawking career statistics.

SGA election convention sets stage for election week

By Ron Vieira

Candidates for Student Government Association (SGA) election flocked to the Sawyer Cafeteria on March 2 to outline their positions on student issues in anticipation of this week's voting.

While many unopposed incumbents reiterated a theme of SGA experience as reason enough for continued support, newcomers and others, involved in the few SGA positions that were contested, placed special emphasis on issues ranging from the recent tuition increase to the university's recycling program.

After stressing her impressive attendance record with SGA. Cristina Lenares, current president of the Class of 1998, began the round of electoral speeches with a description of her involvement and accomplishments. Lenares, concerned about lack of student input, also stated that getting students to utilize SGA was a

Her opponent, Jocelyn Maleus, was primarily concerned about the issue of rising tuition costs and advocated an increase in student activity allocations. Saying he "want(ed) to let Suffolk students know that the skyrocketing tuition is not in their interest." Maleus outlined his personal plan of action.

To get more money allocated to the student activities budget, Maleus said that he would ask President Sargent to take a 10% pay cut. He also suggested an agreement with the MBTA that would reduce sub-way fares for Suffolk students, as

While his proposals provoked a reaction that consisted equally of high-

fives and incredulity, his assertion, near the end of his speech, that "Cristina hasn't done anything" about the recent tuition increase inspired disbelief within some and anger in

Lengres responded to the Malene assertion calmly, saying "I'm sorry that Jocelyn felt that way about the tuition increase, but as far as representation of the freshman class, I feel I've done my best."

Nevertheless, questions later posed to Maleus from skeptical students indicated that some students were still angered by his blaming dentified student, after questioning Maleus about his awareness of bud geting systems relating to student intense and somewhat heated disention ended

On Monday March 6 over 300 tudents walked through the Clothesline Project exhibit, a special display of tee shirts in the Fenton Lounge.

These special works of art were tured in the second annual exhibit ponsored by Suffolk University's omen's Center, Women's Studies and Program Council.

Individually each shirt depicts specific types of violence and abuses as chronicled by both victims and their loved ones. Acts of violence depicted are varied with shirts docunting incidents of incest, rape

During the exhibit, sound effects ncluding whistles, gongs and bells were used to represent actual statis-tics, including the numbers totaling deaths of women from battery, domestic violence and abuse, also depicting rape and other crimes against

The Clothesline Project started in the Clothesinie Project started in the fall of 1990, originally in Hyannis, MA. According to National Network Director, Carol Chichetto, the project now has between 350 to 400 exhibits nationally and internationally, dis-playing an estimated 50,000 to 60,000 tee shirt art works. Addressing many of the problems leading to the club's breakup, including lack of organization as well as poor student interest, the club has a new emphasis on letting club members decide as a whole the path the organization will take.

Current president Mike Botte. along with other concerned students and FMA advisor Professor Ki Han of the Finance department, has managed to lay the groundwork for future funding and formal membership in Suffolk's Council of Presidents

The club is in the process of cheduling speakers for the remainder of the spring semester as well as the fall term. The speakers will cover a wide variety of topics from various areas of the finance industry.

The club also offers its members an opportunity to apply for membership in the national chapter of FMA, the only collegiate national associa tion for financial managers. Included in membership is a chance for students with high achievements in finance to apply for entry into the National Honor Society. FMA is currently organizing a stock investment competition as well as tours of the major brokerage houses in Boston

One of the first acts of the reorganized FMA was addressing numerous complaints from students concerning finance classes displayed in the course bulletin, but not offered as part of the curriculum. Another concern was that classes offered every semester did not represent the inter ests of many finance majors.

Working with members of the finance department faculty, FMA managed to have Futures and Options, a class added to the curriculum in the spring, 1995 semester, a course never before offered to undergraduates

Suffolk's chapter of the FMA is open to all students with interests in the finance field. Meetings are held weekly or bi-monthly and times for club meetings are posted in the major lobbies of the school.

Clinton Vows To Veto Student Loan Change

By College Press Service SAN FRANCISCO - President Bill Clinton has vowed to veto any legislation that would eliminate the interest subsidy on student loans.

In a recent speech to educators of the American Council on Education, Clinton attacked GOP plans that propose students pay back the interest accrued on loans while they were still_in school.

The Republicans "want to pay for the tax cuts in their Contract with America by eliminating the student loan subsidy so that we can start charging interest on the loans to our poorest students while they're still in college," said Clinton.

Eliminating the subsidy, which is about $2 billion a year, "would be the biggest cut in student financial aid in the history of the United States."

If interest subsidies are eliminated, graduates making payments on a typical $5,000 student loan would be charged an additional $350 in interest for each year they were in school, Currently, borrowers do not accrue interest charges on student loans until after they finish school and start repaying their loans.

The president also defended his direct loan program, which eliminates hanks and state student aid commissions from the federal loan

"We eliminated the middlemen and got the funds directly to the schools and the horrowers, which meant, unbelievably, lower fees lower interest rates, easier repaymen choices for students." Clinton said

Republicans have said that elimi nating banks from the student loan equation only adds to an alreadybloated federal bureaucracy.

Clinton told the attending college presidents that they shared simiresponsibilities. "Our job - your and mine together - is to redefine the partnership to empower our people through education and through training to face the demands of this age."

The president also campaigned for his income tax deductions of up to $10,000 a year for college or tech nical training.

"The fight for education is the fight for the American Dream." Clinton said. "It is the fight for America's middle class. It is the fight for the 21st century."

Suffolk Palooza '95 rocks C. Wal

By Instin Grieco and Jennifer Michael

The C. Walsh Theatre had its roof blown off by Suffolk Palooza '95 on Friday, March 3. The second annual rock extravaganza kicked off approximately at 8:00 p.m. and ran for roughly four hours.

The show, which lagged at times, was a feast for rock music lovers and definitely had its share of alternative music stylings. The jam allowed some local college bands and even some Suffolk talent a chance to nerform on stage while also being a benefit for the Children's Hospital Pediatric AIDS Ward.

The night started with a forceful blast of adrenaline provided by One of Many, a band who gave audience members a new meaning to the word loud. Fronted by Jason Brandenberg, One of Many came off as a cross between Green Day and The Mighty, Mighty Rosstones

Shawn McKinnon, best known as The Man with No Band played a nice, mostly acoustical set which soothed the audience after the opening roar. McKinnon did a folky yet grungy rendition of Peter Gabriel's "In Your Eyes" but he was at his best performing his own quirkier

Suffolk Palooza '95 rocks C. Walsh

By Justin Grieco and Jennifer Michael

The C. Walsh Theatre had its roof blown off by Suffolk Palooza 95 on Friday, March 3. The second annual rock extravaganza kicked off approximately at 8:00 p.m. and ran for roughly four hours.

The show, which lagged at times, was a feast for rock music lovers and definitely had its share of alternative music stylings. The jam allowed some local college bands and even some Suffolk talent a chance to perform on stage while also being a benefit for the Children's Hospital Pediatric AIDS Ward.

The night started with a forceful blast of adrenaline provided by One of Many, a band who gave audience members a new meaning to the word loud Fronted by Jason Brandenberg One of Many came off as a cross between Green Day and The Mighty. Mighty Rosstones

Shawn McKinnon, best known as The Man with No Band played a nice, mostly acoustical set which soothed the audience after the opening roar. McKinnon did a folky yet grungy rendition of Peter Gabriel's "In Your Eyes" but he was at his best performing his own quirkier

Soylent Green was the next band to perform and this group which includes Palooza coordinators Dan and Stephen Hunt is formerly known as Dusthead. The band has now toned down their original mosh-pit image for a slightly lighter, grungier set. The audience seemed to welcome the change.

Duck and Cover was the fourth band to play, but the audience did not seem tired. The theatre was very crowded by this time and the band, fronted by Roger Fisk, played a strong, if lengthy set which boasted the nights most unique sound.

Uninvited Guest, the fifth band to take the stage, performed a set of cover tunes from Marillion. The Police, and Peter Gabriel. Their set was unfortunately cut short due to time restrictions at the theatre. The band suffered a similar fate last year at Palooza when they performed as Jig-

All that aside, Uninvited Guest had the strongest set due to a solid rhythm section and front man John Smolinsky's wide vocal range. The bands best songs were "Message in the Bottle" and "Sugar Mice" by The Police and Marillion respectively.

The final hand to perform was Two Less Feet. This band played a funky, upbeat set and had the distinction of having the most band members and the only female band member of the night, Sarah Gray, on bass. Two Less Feet ended the night on a spunky note. Next year, let us hope a female fronted band is granted the chance to take the stage.

Behind the Scenes with Jon Stewart

By Ian Spelling College Press Service

It's just a short walk to the Chelsea Studios on Manhattan's Lower West Side, past a long line of twenty-somethings and would-be audience members, up several flights of stairs, past the set of the "Maury Povich Show" to the green room of "The Jon Stewart Show."

But the green room of the popular syndicated talk show, hosted by comedian and former MTV talk show guy Jon Stewart, isn't exactly green.

And it isn't exactly a room. Instead, it's a long corridor lined with rooms where tonight's guests -Lauren Velez, Sheryl Crow and Nichelle Nichols - ready for the show. Nearby, there's food aplenty and publicists and producers, assorted friends and relatives of the guests, all milling about.

"I honestly haven't seen this show," says Nichols, who plays Star Trek's Lt. Uhura, "but everyone tells me it's the show to be on."

Down on the set, a warm-up guy chats with the audience which numbers a few hundred. "Where are you from?" he shouts to a narticularly enthusiastic group.

"Millersville!" they volley back in unison

"Where's that?" he asks Pennsylvania, he's told "Pennsylvania! Wow," he screams. "Touch a Jew!"

A few moments later Stewart wanders out, pulling his high-haired and slightly bizarre sidekick Howard along in a red wagon Stewart introduces himself, talks to the crowd for a few moments then disappears to change clothes and start the show.

Unon his return, he sports a green foam body casing that allows various humorous outfits - a nerdy suit, a Deadhead tie-dye shirt, and so on to be superimposed over him. Then he performs his monologue.

Once that ends. Stewart races to the main set, a post-modern looking structure. Rover car bench seats (custom-covered in red leather) serve as host and quest chairs.

Stewart, now in black pants and a brown sweater, drags on a cigarette during the first break. "Five, four, three, two, one. . ."

counts and assistant leading the audience to applaud as the camera roll and Stewart introduces his first quest. Lauren Velez, who starred in the film "I Like It Like That" After a few moments of flirty conversation, they cut for a break. Velez and Stewart gossip as makeup and production people work on and around them. Next comes a fake interview with Fay Resnick, author of the controversial Nicole Simpson book that gave Judge Lance Ito fits. This Resnick is actually a guy in drag, and it's a pretty funny skit. Another commercial break follows, during which Stewart chows down on a large cookie and swigs some beer.

Then Grammy-nominated Crow and her band come on stage and prep the first inearnation of "The Ion for their performance. Given a green Stewart Show."

light. Stewart introduces Crow, the crowd cheers, and the hand begins to play Crow's hit "All I Want to Do." Afterward. Crow bounds over to the couch for a short interview

Nichols, who's there to talk about her autobiography, takes her turn. Stewart is respectful but can't help wonder if there'll ever he an end to the stream of "Trek" tomes.

Then, Crow and her hand return and kick into another well-received song. And with that, Stewart thanks everyone, and the show's a wrap. "That show was pretty good," says Stewart later. "Lauren was ador e, very charming." Was Stewart, who's single and living in downtown Manhattan, hitting on her for real? "No," he protests, laughing. "She's married. It's always like that. It's six minutes of my flirtatious conversation and then 'Thanks a lot. My husband's here, and I gotta leave. "We had Sheryl Crow on the old (MTV) show. She's so big now, and it's nice to see what happened to her. Nichelle Nichols was interesting, too Overall, I enjoyed that show.

Stewart is proud that his program isn't a carbon copy of "The Tonight Show." "Late Night with David Letterman" or "The Arsenio Hall Show," which his program replaced in many markets. There is no rock band, no 20-piece orchestra creating pretentious atmosphere. The audience sits close to the set. Stewart's style is casual and playful, and the show as a whole feels more intimate than many of its competitors

The move from MTV's "Stewart Show" to the nationally syndicated "Jon Stewart Show" came about when Viacom, which owns MTV, bought Paramount, which sought a program to fill Hall's vacated slot.

"It was a bunch of odd steps coming together." explains Stewart. "We knew getting into it that it wouldn't be an instant slam dunk where America would go, 'Thank God, a breath of fresh air, another talk show!

Born in Manhattan and raised just outside Trenton, N.J., Stewart studied psychology at the College of William and Mary. Early entries on his resume included acting classes, toiling for the Jersey state government, and bartending

"I wasn't exactly happy with what I was doing," he remem moved to New York. It took me another year to get on stage [at comedy clubs], but the whole idea was to find a niche somewhere, whether it was clown college, stand-up or whatever felt right. If I had any musical inclination at all, I'd be in a rock

Stewart spent about seven years eliciting laughs at comedy clubs all over the nation and appeared on such and several cable specials. Then came a stint as host of MTV's series "You Wrote It, You Watch It" and

Now there's the major league "Jon Stewart Show" and so far, so good. "I'm happy with some parts and unhappy with other parts," he admits. "There's very little time to nat yourself on the back with a show like this. We can't say, 'That sketch in act four was really good, let's go out and party.' It's more like, 'That was nice, so what are we doing

"The wild thing that I'm learning about all of this is how disposable it is. You work really hard to create nething, it goes out on T.V. and then it's gone, and you've got to come up with something else. I guess that's the fun of the whole thing."

As for future challenges, Stewart igures there are all sorts of avenue explore. Right now, getting his show to the top of its game is his main priority, but Stewart hopes to graduto writing and acting in films.

"One of the things that drew me to this business was I was a hit rest less," he explains. "Every night on the show is different and, between the interviewing and monologues, do a lot of different things I'd love to write movies and maybe act, but the main thing is I just want to keen

A Christian response

If there is one single issue that threatens to divide this country in two, it's abortion. And the first casualty of that divisiveness may be the Republican party.

Many Republicans across the country have come to the realization that a dogmatic anti-abortion stance is not realistic, and have adopted a pro-choice platform, if only a soft one. This has not sat well with the religious right, which has had a stranglehold on the Republican party for

Even Newt Gingrich, the current Republican golden boy, has come under fire for making a comment that "gays are welcome in the Republican party."

Perhans it would be best if the religious right started their own party, promoting a completely religious platform that would try to turn this country into a theocracy. At least that movement would have the benefit of a short life due to the constitutional principle of separation of church and state

That principle has been a guiding principle in this country since its founding, and for good reason. As Americans, we enjoy, at least theoretically, a freedom of religion. That freedom guarantees the right not to have one religion thrust into one's face.

And that is exactly what anti-abortion activists are attempting to do. Because they feel abortion is wrong or "evil," they want to have everyone march in line to their reasoning, and ignore the differences others have with their philosophy.

The term anti-abortion is used specifically, because with the current sport among radical "pro-lifers" to bomb clinics and shoot doctors brings the phrase "pro-life" into

In the light of these dogmatic and zealous attitudes, a reasoned pro-choice stance is the only fair option. If one feels so strongly against the principle of abortion, they are free not to have one, but their rights over other's beliefs is prohibited by this country's Bill of Rights.

If, however, these religious people feel so strongly against abortion, it would be better if they took positive action rather than the negative actions of harrassing women going into clinics and taking the law into their own hands, murdering doctors in the name of some "higher principle."

There is a shortage of qualified adoptive parents in this country, causing a backlog of children without good homes. It would seem that helping out in finding good homes for these children, or volunteering at homeless shelters or battered women shelters would help the situation more, rather than causing more problems and exacerbating an already out-of-control situation.

After all, isn't that a more christian thing to do, anyway?

Hey what's with all of this rhetoric over affirmative

Did you read the front page of the Globe yesterday? There was a big headline saving that Deval Patrick, the Justice Department's head bureaucrat on civil rights, was "cool" to the current administration's new stance on socalled equal rights in the workplace.

Well, what a big surprise He's kissing his bosses' collective butts.

But that's not the real point. The big story is that Clinton's aides have said that the president is considering whether or not he should sunport a "Color Blindness" policy in the federal workplace, as opposed to the affirmative action policy that is now in place.

Under the current standard, federal departments must set quotas on how many minorities and women must be hired out of all job applicants every year. But now this new "color blindness" policy threatens to destroy that. In it's place will be put new standard. There will now be a quota not on minoritie but on poor people. Sounds good, right's Wrong. This whole thing stinks like last weeks garbage. What the hell are our leaders think ing? Both ideas are stupid Plain and simple.

opposition is going to say. They'll bring up statistics about how women and minorities are pooped on in the workplace. They'll try to con vince me that affirmative ac tion is a good idea because i has finally introduced scores of these so-called disenfran chised people into the work force

While getting spiritually ready for church Sunday morning with a Fresca and some fries. I was flipping through the new April copy of "Perky Hooters Illustrated". Just kind of enjoying the view, if you know what I mean.

I'm just like anyhody else. Nice tall beverage, some Nine Inch Nails, a nice glossy centerfold of somebody's penitalia That's what God had in mind when he gave everybody but mall employees Sundays off.

Seems to me that porno is completely harmless. I mean, just because I see people de-able, abused, and sometimes massacred, that doesn't mean I treat women any differently.

Like everybody else, I watch no more than 15 hard core porno movies a week. Even though I visit hookers twice a day, I'm no dope. I wear a condom. And just because I no longer wear underpants, and I can be found carrying long spiked leather punishment equip ment with me, that just Man. I had been living a lie. Pornography is evil! The human body is a dirty garden of vulgar sickness Girls have cooties!

I made a bonfire of all my old porno. Then I burned down my house. I needed to be free of lust! I felt dirty, sick, evil. I also suddenly felt homeless.

Pornography has got to be stopped. When we as a society condone degradation, manipulation, subjugation, and stuff, we risk doing really bad harm to ourselves and stuff

There is no rock hand no 20-piece orchestra creating a pretentious atmosphere. The audience sits close to the set, Stewart's style is casual and playful, and the show as a whole feels more intimate than many of its competitors.

The move from MTV's "Stewart Show" to the nationally syndicated liacom, which owns MTV, bought int, which sought a program to fill Hall's vacated slot.

"It was a bunch of odd steps coming together," explains Stewart.

It's more like, 'That was nice, so what are we doing

As for future challenges, Stewart figures there are all sorts of avenues to explore. Right now, getting his show to the top of its game is his main priority, but Stewart hopes to graduate to writing and acting in films.

atter what the source of their gripes may be, is that we are only amateurs We do not receive a paycheck every Friday for our diligence; all the work we have done, and will be doing, is salary-free

We are amateurs, and as ama teurs we are learning. Learning how the common everyday newspaper is to be successfully operated. Learning how to appeal to a fickle audierice. And for this matter, learning how to deal with criticism.

We may strive for quantity with our constant appeals for stories, but that does not mean we have steered away from quality. The Journal may be understaffed, under-manned, and any other "under-" word you can conjure up, yet we still maintain some ournalistic responsability. Any keen fournal reader can see that

It takes no energy for someone to say what needs to be done: it takes all energy for someone to do what needs to be done. And when you've become a member of The Journal's staff like this writer, you'll see firsthand where my feelings have originated when someone badmouths your baby.

throw a new element into the equation: Let's forget all of the racial and gender barriers, and put up new, economical ones. So now an upperlower class person will be denied a job, even though he or she may be more qualified, simply because somebody who has a few hundred less dollars in the bank needs the job too?

So to what end should we persue this? What if the person who is more qualified has the same amount of money as the less qualified person, but has less pocket change on him? If you follow the logic, you will have to etermine that the less qualified person has less money, so he needs the job more, maybe he can't afford the train ride home. Or perhaps his money will only get him halfway there in a cab? Then how do you decide?

see other people naked! A repressed, naive society is a happy society, I'll say. Legislation should be passed to compel people to switch their regular clothes for large body socks. Just think. Imagine everyone covered head to toe! There'd be no more need to dress to impress. Just find a clean body sock and be on your way! Sex should be outlawed!

If people want to show somebody they love them, they should buy them flowers! Sex Ed would be so much easier. "O.K., daisies show your lover you're manly and desirable." If people want to have kids, they should kidnap other people's kids. We're overpopulated to begin with, and looking around the good old USA today, why would we want to continue pushing this faulty gene pool forward?

The pinnacle of human physical contact? Kissing. How can you outlaw kissing? But no tongues! And no hands! And no touching! And no necking!

Everybody in this country should voluntarily have their sexual organs removed. While we're at it, you might as well have your arms removed. A society that doesn't touch one another is a clean, safe happy society! I, in fact, have undergone both of these operations (I'm typing with my face, thank you very much).

So, as you venture out onto the beaches of the world for good old Spring Break, be sure to have a nice, baggy body sock on. And a lifepreserver.
