HONORABLE GEORGE W. BALL
Under Secretary of State

"The series of lectures at Suffolk University on "Europe's Contribution to American Civilization" will bring together a wide range of informed opinion on this important subject and should result in increased public understanding of our common vital interests. I congratulate all concerned with this project."

HONORABLE WILLIAM R. TYLER
Assistant Secretary of State
for European Affairs
Washington, D.C.

"This series of seminars on American-European relations at Suffolk University represents a significant effort to make the public more conscious of the part mutual understanding plays in our foreign policy. Before we can appreciate and deal intelligently with the many complex issues involved in our foreign policy we must understand, and have the understanding of the countries we are dealing with. This understanding must extend beyond the diplomatic and official level. Responsible citizens in every segment of our societies have an obligation to contribute to this understanding.

This series on Europe's Contribution to American Civilization given by the Ambassadors of major European countries, will stimulate exchanges of views, will open new avenues of thought, and should promote a true sense of American interdependence with the European countries."
