

What is Suffolk University ?

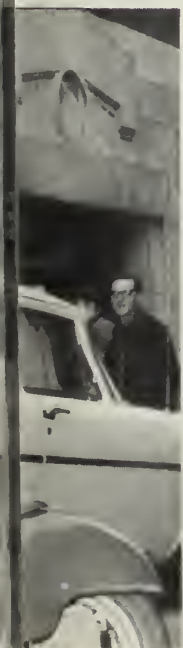

Easily accessible for all modes of travel . . .

Each school is unique in some way. Suffolk's uniqueness lies in its ability to draw students from many walks of life, from hundreds of communities throughout the Commonwealth, nation and world, under the simple but cohesive title of Student. A basic factor in achieving this unity is the daily mode of transportation which Suffolk students use to arrive at school.

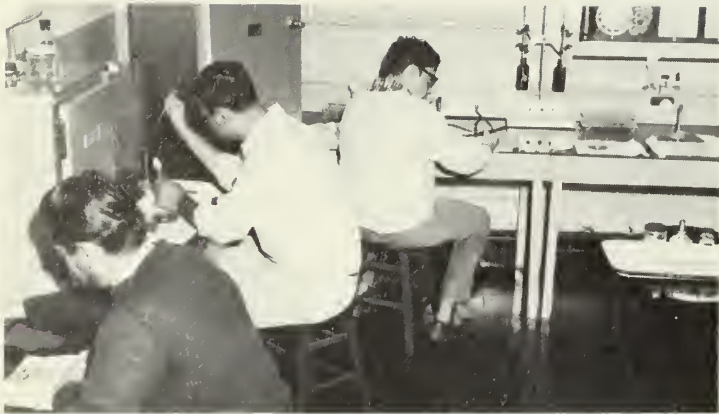

Summer was over and students began the painful, but necessary exodus from North, South, East and West to the academic world of Suffolk University. One could tell that autumn was approaching for the Blue and Gold of the Suffolk beanies served as a preview of the reds, browns, golds and greens of falling leaves. On Registration Day the sun reflected off the tanned, beaming faces of old acquaintances coming together once more to begin a new year. There was wonder, anxiety and a sense of expectation mirrored in the faces of incoming Freshmen.

It starts a year of the exciting unknown . . .

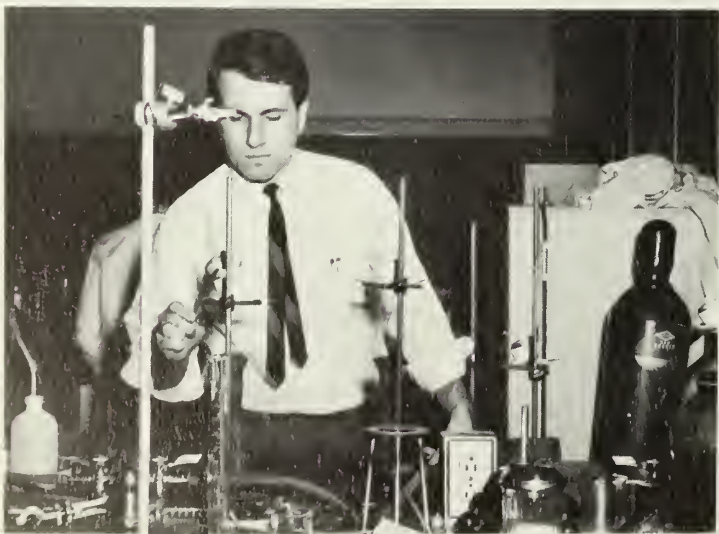

It is in the library that the student is confronted with those hard bound transmitters of knowledge. For the student the library is a living friend, a taskmaster and refuge center in which he can search through the world of reality and theory.

In the classroom, another transmitter — the professor — exchanges knowledge and theory with the student.

Should the student desire clarification of an issue, discussion of his marks, or a personal problem, he goes to one of the busiest places in the school — the Faculty Room.

Provides facilities for exchanging ideas and opinions . . .

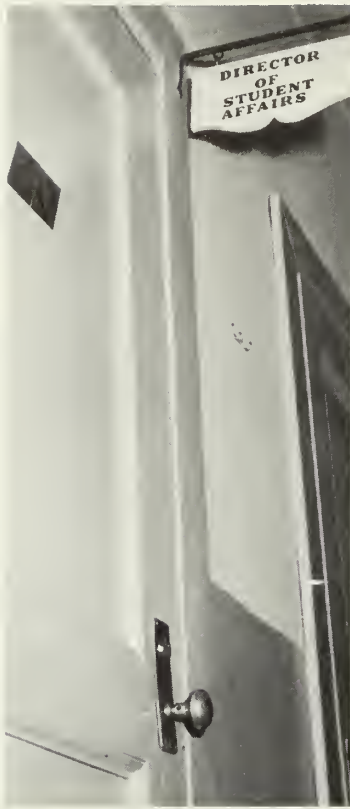

A place to relax, "Goof-off" and sway from the norm . . .

The corridors, which tunnel through the University, shuttle the student from one class to another. They serve as a meeting and leaning place after a long and weary day. The corridors also serve as a means of access to the lounges and cafeteria, as well as the great outdoors — Condas, the Chambers and other spots on the "Hill."

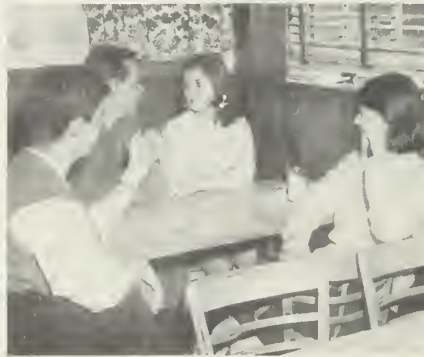

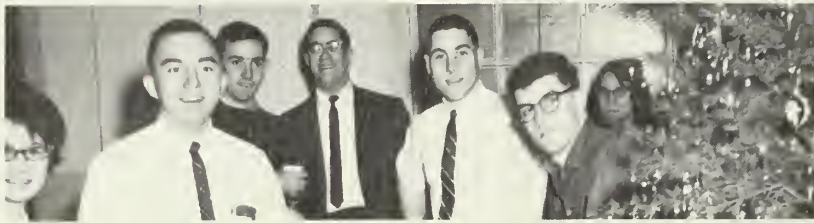

Although every room in Suffolk is of prime importance, there is one small room on the fourth floor with a never-ending bustle of activity. Room 40 is well known to all students. Here in this nerve center are gathered the threads of all student activities as well as the people who plan, communicate and work on various projects. From this center the Student Government, Journal and Beacon begin their year channelling major student activities and interests.

Fellow students planning, executing and recording activities . . .

Beacon Hill, a long established center of cultural, political and social activities, provides Suffolk students and faculty members with an opportunity to broaden their scope of interest throughout the year.

"The Hill" affords a wide variety of extracurricular activities . . .

Education — 24 hours a day . . .

The Evening Division has become more integrated with the Day School due to the determination and drive of an excellent staff of officers. They have started this process with the logical step of expanding their activities to heighten interest and participation in extracurricular activities.

The Evening Division Student Council has begun to coordinate their activities in conjunction with its Day Division counterpart in order to make the activities of the school more widely advertised and to encourage greater participation by all students, day and evening.

While knowledge and study should be the primary objectives of a college education, the social life of the student also plays a vital part in the formation of his total personality. Through such activities as lectures, art exhibits, dances, parties, plays and variety shows, the student is given ample opportunity to develop his social poise and to form personal relationships.

All aspects of education are offered . . .

A constant test of one's knowledge . . .

To the student they are the moment of truth; the difference between a college career or a trudge to the local employment office. Thus they are one collective ogre – a haunting spectre – which must be faced and struggled with.

To the professor they mean a lot of hard work combined with the assumption of a responsibility to decide whether an individual will remain or depart.

To parents, husbands, wives, and sweethearts they mean periods of short tempers, little sleep and much anxiety.

What are they?

They are exams, a distasteful but necessary measure of what the student has done in a course.

An institution affording opportunity to those who knock . . .

The annual Commencement ceremony serves to prove the validity of Shakespeare's statement, "Parting is such sweet sorrow". Commencement represents, at one and the same time, the pleasure and personal satisfaction derived from the culmination of four years of college work. The class with which one has lived and studied has ended physically. Yet, it will continue in spirit as a result of experiences and personal relationships which have developed. These leave lasting impressions on the personalities of each individual to be carried throughout life.

Faculty: The growth of the intellect is spontaneous

Ralph Waldo Emerson

Hiram J. Archer

In Memoriam

One of the great joys in life is friendship with a man whose personal qualities forever influence the lives of those who know him. Such a man was Hiram J. Archer--father, teacher, trustee, and friend. His impact is all the more remarkable by contrast with his modesty and humility.

Born eighty-eight years ago on the "Maine frontier," the son of a blacksmith, he worked as a lumberjack to earn money to attend Boston University and the University of Maine. Upon graduation, he helped his brother Gleason found Suffolk Law School, taught law for fifty years, and has been continuously associated with the University until a month before his death on March 4, 1966, a period of sixty years.

A devoted family man, he never tired of talking with pride of his children, grandchildren, and wife. Others are proud of their fine houses and cars, but his wealth was his family. He was characteristically kind and courteous, though quick to censure injustice or deviation from principle. In an age when people often seem more concerned with what they can get than with what they can give, it is profoundly sobering to know a man who asked so little and gave so much. His life was a sermon by example: when man works for love of others, the spirit of God moves in him.

His writing and speech were characterized by Yankee wit, frugality and incisiveness. He could say more in a sentence than most men can in a page. Although dedicated to the ideal of excellence in education, he also appreciated the worth of the average student. "God bless the 'C' student," he once said. "He never turns into an educated fool."

As a teacher of Constitutional Law, he had faith in the American democratic process, and taught not only an understanding of the Law but an appreciation of the values on which the Constitution is based. In an age when fundamental values are often deserted for the new or expedient, his life reminds us that personal fulfillment comes not through license but through duty.

He accepted on faith the paradoxical nature of God's plan. He understood that the potential for good and evil exists in every man; that intelligence and education are not synonymous with honesty and integrity; that the logic of emotion is often stronger than the logic of reason; that men must live by principles yet achieve social goals through political accommodation. He recognized the limitations of man as well as his ability to transcend those limitations.

This lean, erect man with the gentle voice prided himself on his physical fitness and longevity, which he attributed to "healthy stock, hard work, and the will of God." Having survived tuberculosis in his youth and cancer in his maturity, the loss of a son in war and death of his wife, he knew that "Through many tribulations we must enter the kingdom of God."

Even in his eighty-eighth year he scorned the use of the elevator. Typically, he would pause beside a cluster of overweight students waiting for the elevator and, eyes twinkling, say to the heaviest, "Young man, when you get to be my age, what condition do you think your heart will be in?"

Several years ago he invited me to his farm in Middleboro and with characteristic generosity sent me home with a carload of shrubs. The shoot of a crab apple tree on my front lawn is now fifteen feet tall. It has strange gnarled branches and thorny spikes. Clusters of golden nuggets defy the winter wind and snow so that hungry birds may eat. And now, as the buds prepare to burst, I am reminded that the tree, like the friend who gave it, gives comfort, beauty, strength.

"May the choir of angels receive you, and with Lazarus, who was once poor, may you have everlasting rest."

The President's Message

As you, Graduates of the Class of 1966, take leave of Suffolk University, I commend and congratulate you upon having taken advantage of the fine educational opportunities offered by this University. It is my sincere wish that you will profit by the ideals and standards of excellence instilled in you by the Faculty.

One of the real challenges to the college graduate today is to keep alive, after graduation, the intellectual enthusiasm, stimulation, and zest of college days. In this era of rapid advancement in specialized knowledge, you should understand that your education is largely a continuing personal matter, involving a total commitment to self-perfection and the fullest realization of your own individual potential during the remainder of your life.

As you receive your degree, deservedly earned by years of difficult study and self-sacrifice, and take your place in the society of educated men and women, I urge you to live exemplary lives and, as alumni, to continue to remain loyal and steadfast to the lofty purposes and objectives of Suffolk University so that your University may continue to remain proud of you.

Personally, and as President of Suffolk University, I heartily congratulate you on your achievements, and sincerely hope that you will enjoy many years of good health, good fortune, great happiness and continued successful accomplishment.

Although still in the experimental stage, the lab has proven to be indispensable in aiding in the study of foreign languages and speech.

In future years, the Language Laboratory will prove to be of supreme value to every department of the University.

Since 1963, Suffolk has been in the process of declaring a new image . . . expanding to keep up with the changing Boston. In order to facilitate our expansion program, all alumni, trustees, officers and students of Suffolk University have been diligently working toward a goal of three million dollars to pay for the "New" Suffolk University. Expansion was necessary — funds were necessary — unity was necessary. All were achieved to provide Suffolk with the most modern utilities to better educate its present and future students.

Since the class of 1963 graduated, much has materialized — the physical "New" Suffolk University. The graduating Class of 1966, although envious of the new facilities, looks on with great pride in the part it had in making Suffolk University a stronger institution in the academic world.

Looking to the future . . .

Class of 1966 – Faculty Advisor

Dr. Arthur J. West, II

Class Advisor's Message — 1966

Congratulations to the Class of 1966 for the way in which you have participated in the effort to move Suffolk University forward with a new vitality. A few short years ago when you entered this University you found only the hope of a modernized educational facility; today, you see the reality of it.

The lessons you have learned during the years you have spent at Suffolk have extended beyond the classroom. The realization of accomplishment is yours when you look upon the new building that is to open in the fall. You have experienced, first hand, what it takes in the way of cooperation to accomplish such goals. You have worked for that which you will not be able to enjoy first hand. Yours is the last class to be taught solely within the "traditional" facilities of Suffolk University.

As Suffolk University reaches the 60th year since its humble beginning as an evening school of Law, much in the way of tradition has been changed by your Class. It was the officers of your Class that initiated and executed the change in the design of the college ring.

The Class ring has been somewhat emblematical of a spirit of "rebellion" that has been in evidence within the student body. You have been rebellious without being incendiary; dissatisfied without being resentfull; and, in disagreement without being antagonistic.

Yes, you have learned your lessons well; both in and out of the classroom. You may take satisfaction in the progress that you have made to date, but you must build upon this foundation that has been established here. For, as June 12th, 1966 is designated Commencement, this is only the beginning. Suffolk is proud of you and asks that you "wear" her degree well.

Message

Fellow Seniors,

Four years ago when we entered Suffolk University our basic task was to learn to face responsibility. We learned that we are responsible for ourselves and our actions; we soon realized we must make our own decisions and cope with the results. Now we are graduates — “The sum total of all the choices we have made” — as Eleanor Roosevelt wisely wrote. So in the future weigh your decisions carefully. Value your opportunities. Tackle each task as it comes your way. Think. Create. Be an individual. Free expression is the hope for our bold world. Speak out! Communicate! We can only preserve our freedom to make our beliefs known if we exercise that right.

Best Wishes,
1966 BEACON Staff
