Snow Makes New Date

The worst snowstorm in a generation temporarily halted Suffolk's Golden Anniversary celebration, but as Boston prepared to shovel itself from under dreary drifts the dance committee made necessary plans to hold the affair on Thursday, April 5th, at the Sherry-Biltmore Hotel.

Dancing will begin at the prescribed time, 8:00 P.M., but the banquet time has been moved to 7:00 P.M.

Notices will be sent to alumni, informing them as to when they will vote on the acceptance of a new Constitution.

MacDuff Kills MacBeth Almost
That was the morning headline in a fiction newspaper following the presentation of MacBeth by the Drama Club when Miss Addie P. Embree, 41, 35 Endicott Ave. Reverse attended Suffolk University.

SENIORS NOTE

Candidates for 1956 degrees must fill out the necessary application, according to Miss Giroux, of the Registrar's office.

Forms are available from either Miss Haines, or Mrs. Hollist, at the switchboard, and should be returned to the Registrar as soon as possible.

NEW JOB PLACER

Fondness

That tiny lad so brave and gay
I scarce could notice now
Though year or so ago, I'd say
I'd recognize somehow
Just a tiny little boy
With more than charming way
The chubby lad could bring
More joy
With merely childish say
The every little gesture made
The easy going friendly signs
This tiny boy like piece of fate
Has wealth in boyish lines
'Tis perhaps the timid looks
Or even sadness of the eyes
That places round your heart
The hooks
That tug for love like little jets

STUDENT GROUPS STARTED

By WILLIAM F. REARDON

The formation of a round table discussion group in conjunction with the Family Service Association has been announced by Dr. Leo Lieberman, Director of Guidance.

With ten once-a-week meetings scheduled, the group discusses individual problems of self-understanding.

Each student gets his particular views on an aspect of school life and the group in turn discusses the issue in round table fashion.

Over 35 students have attended the conferences and expressed their ideas.

It is hoped that the groups we have set up will encourage a closer knit body of students, improve their mutual understanding, and promote their mental development," said Dr. Lieberman as he addressed the trained students who will aid him in the conferences.

It is reasonable to assume that an increase in mental development should help a student improve his academic efficiency," he concluded.

Students interested in participating in these discussions should contact Miss Katz in the Guidance Office, room 29.

There are three conveniently timed groups each week.

TRY POLITICS, SAYS STUDENT

By DAVID GLAINSTONE

Winning your first political race isn't the most important aspect of training, says one Suffolk student.

"Share you are in there to win," says law student John Feeney, recently defeated in his bid for Winchester selectman.

"But the thrill of campaigning, and the excitement involved in rewarding, especially for the novice," he said.

"Although I had strong opinions in my own precinct, I made countless friends, and I feel that much of the 16 per cent increase in voting was due to my efforts to get out the vote," stated Feeney, whose campaign was entirely self-supported.

Five lovely young ladies recently nominated by the student body for the "Miss Suffolk" title prove that Suffolk University ranks high in the field of beauty.

The quartet of lovelies trying for the "Miss Suffolk" title are: Cecilia Letohmsny, Alice Shea, Marion Pratt, Virginia DeGutis and Annie Young.

A number of carrying interests and activities occupy much of the time of these girls in clubbing the Drama Club, German Club, Education Club, class officers, and the girls' has been the Hamletes, the football team, the Hamletes.

Miss Shea, 21, 52 Malvern St. Lawrence expressed "pleased surprise" at being nominated for the title of "Miss Suffolk."

Miss Shea is majoring in Education, and hopes to go in to the teaching field. She is a member of the Education Club.

The Value Of Spirit

The spice of academic life is university spirit. It is that light uplifting that alleviates the burdens of a laboring brain and eases the journey of the fruits of graduation.

It acts as a cigarette-break during a period of high tension. Like "coke time," it refreshes. Without it, college life is apt to become a heavy, cumbersome thing that will sink of its own weight.

The essence of this spirit is variation which both excites and relaxes the will to learn. As an urge, it inspires the enjoyment and self-realization that is derived from study. As a relaxation, it is a pleasant interruption during a profitable task.

University spirit is capable of many forms. It may be simply a sincere desire to acquaint oneself with other students and to share in student activities.

With more complexity, it may be a thirst for knowledge, a craving to be intellectually cultured—not polished and aristocratic, but learned and wordly wise.

University spirit: Do I need it? How do I get it? These two questions may be answered by a third question: What am I in college for?

If your answer is both correct and honest, you are aware of its need, but you already have it.

Small Schools Satisfied

Here at Suffolk University there are many advantages for the college students who prefer concentrated study in smaller groups.

The highly rated teaching standards used at the University provide study in most phases of education. Pre-legal courses, for example, are offered for those interested in entering well-known Law School. Journalism courses offered are exceptional. At present, classes are small in number, allowing for extra individual attention being focused on the student.

To date at Suffolk, courses of study have been split into many sections, due to increased enrollment. This can only spell a step forward in character and high standing for the University.

As part of the Suffolk family, we can write with confidence in stating the great advantage point our small university has over larger institutions. Having attended a larger university, which will remain nameless, we can truthfully state that the areas for extra study and confined classes were not up to the grade that Suffolk University offers.

The University is celebrating its fiftieth anniversary as an educational institution. With the last five years enrollment has mounted considerably, and this can only mean more students are seeking knowledge from attending a smaller university.

JAMES A. TRAVERS

Night Grad Proves It,
Makes Boston 'Top Ten'

The Boston Junior Chamber of Commerce recently named a Suffolk University night school graduate as "one of the outstanding young men of 1955." Dick Booker gives an interesting background of the activities of the 29 year old Travers. EDITOR'S NOTE:

By DICK BOOKER
"Journalism" perhaps more than any other competitive field typifies the great old adage, "everybody starts on the first rung of the ladder." It has become a law among newspaper reporters which few have dared to disobey.

James A. Travers, of Roxbury, State House political reporter for the Boston Daily Herald, is no exception. Travers began his due to the Golden Dome on Beacon Hill he explained. "While on my way to an office job for the Boston Herald, I took a look in fact all state activities which may be of an interest to the taxpayer. I typed up the call 'hey' which cut the stories, and then an office boy 'hangs them to the line' for print. The rest of the day with irritating regularity, I worked on my copy.

Working days and attending Suffolk a night school did not hamper the active reporter's interest in extra-curricular affairs.

Helped Alumni
In 1946 he was publicity director of the school's reorganization program. He sparked eight students' alumni interest in its early stages.

While a senior at Suffolk, the versatile student did substitute teaching in journalism. A few years later the faculty offered him a full time instructor's job, which he declined in favor of his present post.

'49 Grad
Taking his B.S. degree in 1949 he entered Cotton College College where where his publicity work continued. He received his master's in June, 1950.

With pressure of undergraduate studies, the reporter's commitments in various fields increased.

He became director of publicity for the City of Hope Medical Center of California in New England. A radio program, WYOM, sponsored by the City of Hope, was his. The City of Hope Citizen Papers, soon had the Suffolk Journalism grad handling weekly reviews of community news.

Explains Job
In August 1952 Travers was assigned by the Record to his present post in the State House press gallery. "It's my job to gather all news

Girl Basketballers
Honored At Banquet

Suffolk's sire-shooting Ramettes were recently rewarded for their efforts with a banquet at Hinostrota's Village in South Boston.

The Suffolk girls enjoyed the winningest season in the history of Girls Basketball in the school and played a strong school wide feature meet of Greater Boston's top colleges.

Trophies Awarded
Players who showed outstanding qualities during the season were awarded trophies for their exceptional efforts.

Virginia Zapolski was awarded a trophy for best attendance and Lena Carnicelli was cited as the "most improved player" and outstanding team player was Terry Grynowsky and the top sportsmanship honor went to Celia Lefortney.

The most valuable player award went to Tessie Riley, the high-scoring forward of the Ramettes.

Coach Views Sports
Coach Rose Hobbs, who herself contributed greatly to the team's success, with sterling play, praised her club and said team honor had been the goal of every player.

Health Important
"The history of the body and the muscles, for some end are essential if one is to be efficient in order to reach some particular goal, one must reduce the body to subjection. Health is a means to complete living. Each of us has the obligation of moral duties and must overcome both personal and social weaknesses."

Health is the beginning of wisdom, and athletics are a means to obtain good health, which is the greatest blessing man has in life. Man's soul needs a vigorous outlet through good ideas, service to others, and by clean, wholesome activities. It's what better way can one do all of these than in the field of sports?

Proxy Attends
President Robert Manno, one of the Ramettes' biggest backers, also had high praise for the girls and was in attendance at the Hinostrota's banquet along with Athletics Director Charles Law and Busset Dorothy McNamara.

"The Girls Basketball team deserves commendation," said the Suffolk proxy. "They had a creditable record during the season just past. All during patient practice sessions and strenuous game play, the squad manifested a wholesome team spirit, and it was a lot of fun."

"Most significant to me was that I overheard an official in one of the games express his appreciation to our girls for their cooperative spirit while on the floor."

Tranmates Honored
At the banquet, every girl who joined they team received a check of trophies. Lena Carnicelli, Virginia Legutis, Terry Grynowsky, Carol Hames, Celia Lefortney, Marian Pratt, Tessie Riley, Barbara Tomoshunas, Annie Young, Virginia Zapolski received the awards as members of the first and second teams.

Coach Rosemary Hobbs presented a pair of bookends suitably inscribed with girl basketball players, for her "love on Children and Youth," a post Miss McNamara.

SPORTSCOPE

By LOU CONNELLY

They're still talking in the Suffolk corridors about the group of hockey enthusiasts from S.U. who drove up to Merrimack to play the Merrimack pucksters.

Playing as an independent outfit, the Suffolk gay blades showed up all six of them, and when asked by the Merrimack coach where their team was announced with a smile. "Here we are, but we need a goalie."

Merrimack obligingly sent them a netminder. The result: Suffolk's skaters 10, Merrimack 1.

The Merrimack sextet played winner. He's a strong southpaw entry facing such colleges as Holy Cross. On the other hand, the nomadic Suffolk independent plays when the urge is there. Apparently the urge is there enough to encourage pushing and the revival of the sport at Suffolk may not be too far away.

Hard is remembered most for his axe duties in basketball; but his 64, 215 pound frame should look mighty awesome at and behind the plate this spring. While in service, Carl caught the St. Louis Cardinals' kites: Haven Haddix, so the 200 knows his way around.

The 1956 Tech Tanager recently completed again proved to be Boston's barner sports at Franklin. Even without Storer, who was absent for the first time in 14 years, the meeting was a million played to a family losses in the Garden.

Many fans, hoping the snow has vanished for the year, are turning thoughts to basketball. One has only to go as far as 800 on the dial to hear Curt Goswami and Co report the doings from the Grapefruit League. Yet it's hard to find any thing more fruitless than the Grapefruit scores at this early date.

Gowdy is a capable man and easy on the ears in the summer months but even he'll have to admit it's a bit easier for him to work up baseball interest as he enjoys that salubrious climate while we battle March winds in the Hub. We'll take a Julie London record until the boys hit Beantown. Curt

Baseball is beginning to germinate at Suffolk too, as a few of the February Lefty Givens and Joe Jacksons crank up their arms and loosen tight muscles in indoor throwing drills.

At present, Coach Charlie Law has carded baseball games with Tufts, Brandeis, Lowell Tech, and Boston Teachers. He's had added several more by the time the ink dries on this paragraph.

Two of the players Law is waiting to see for the first time in Suffolk regains are George Doucet and Carl Hunt. These two could well form Law's number one battery.

Doucet, the Rams basketball captain, is playing baseball this season and could be a big

It has certainly been a busy month for us students. With all the clubs showing growing pains, and the big dance and celebration, it seems our studies are harder. But this vacation come just in time to save us.

Possibly the most startling sight never seen in years was Arthur Walker and Cecilia LeTorne in their fifty year old garb, walking and talking throughout the school. They certainly deserve praise for the job they are doing in publicizing our celebration.

Congratulations to the Miss Suffolk finalist. It's going to be difficult trying to pick only one queen from the five pretty girls.

A happy round of eisteddfod games has occurred at Suffolk. Two students, including both seniors, are getting married on the same day within minutes of each other in the sanctuary.

Steve Juba will marry Marie A. Laves and Louis Vangel will wed Kay DeJong. They lived in Lawrence.

A June wedding was announced for James Ronald Collette and Jean Milani in Ephraim. Two other engagements complete the season for this month.

Louis Vangel Junior announced his engagement to Roma Byrne of Westmoreland.

Another James, James Vangel, announces his engagement to Phillippe Vilers of Westmoreland.

Bill Waxman, another SE student, completed the first varsity basketball season with his JV's and many expect the Brevier varsity to cause trouble in the strong CHL season next winter.

Charlie Law, taking the break between basketball and baseball, was in Chicago for the NCAA meetings last weekend but had more serious business on the local front before that.

He recently joined the guest list of coaches at the home of Charlestown's Charlie Chelley, where he spent two hours selling Suffolk to the kid Chevrolet fast becoming secondary, is allegedly the greatest thing to hit basketball since the Sputnik.

Father Champ

The tournament, which is the largest of its kind in the Northeast, is held annually at Suffolk University. Joseph A. Freshman, Sr., set a record of 100 balls in 1927, which was a record for the entire Northeast. He is now a popular attraction at Suffolk.

Joseph A. Freshman, Jr., is the son of the former champion. He is also a business student at Suffolk, and is currently operating a pool room in that section on Summer Street.

STAIID SUBWAY ROCKS AS STUDENTS REVEL

A group of some eighty college students caused some good-natured lured eyebrows recently as they rode a rented, ancient trolley car for almost six hours through America's oldest subway.

Miss Kelley, a senior, was present when the plans were formulated, and here she tells of the events and obstacles she met as a result of motivating an idea.

By GERALDINE KELLEY

It all began about five weeks ago in my apartment, where a group of us were discussing music and party plans, a subject that consumes an inordinate amount of our time. I'm afraid it was then that one of the few students present suggested a subway tour. Since and since the rest of the group seemed and joined in the project when I talked to a very unresponsive MTA official.

The provisions made for the trip included first-class tickets for the trip, a living room, not another, but I determined to make the trip to "C" station to begin, then all returning later for a month of extra work. I told you so, we decided to let them have their day by telling them we'd follow in our steps.

The only trouble with this plan is what someone would believe us when we finally told them the truth.

Although our intention was anything but enthusiastic, a few MTA employees were anything but enthusiastic. A few? Yes, any time. But to see a hundred of us charging a trolley for longer than that—!—is a new experience.

Still, I forgot these thought the fact of us weren't complete. I began to begin a plan they soon changed their minds when we expressed complete confidence in the course we'd take. I suppose most people do when transportation with a slow forward where it will take them.

Actually we had had to go to Harvard Square, but the tracks there had all been ripped up, and Boston College was out because the other type trolley was insisted on would have been thoroughly impossible of several things that including but not limited to the Heights. But we did enter the antique map to cause it held more people, and we more picturesque and appealing to Life magazine.

Eighty Aboard

After we were given a guide, plans began to form. Our first party included four round trips about five and a half hours from 9:00 p.m. to 2:20 a.m.

This may sound like a fairly grueling way to spend an evening, but most of the 80 people on board stayed right there till the end, if only to retrieve their cars at Arborway. Many disembarked at various points and then caught the trolley on its way back with little delay in maintaining the strong car.

The assembly represented 30 schools, and states as far distant as Nebraska, Colorado, and Iowa. At least 50 people had to be turned away from the trip, and ultimately I'm sure we could have filled at least five streetcars with interested parties.

Brown's Band Played

We were fortunate in obtaining Peter Brown's band to accompany us. At least he became an band consisting mainly of BU students. This group enjoyed the trip considerably, by giving out Christmas music whenever the car stopped, causing people to be participating in the party and by letting "The Saints" march in every time we stopped. I thought Park Street was the repeated sight of the turned faces at the various stations. They exhibited every expression from appalled to a ghost — mainly incredulous. Could this be said of Boston?

HOLDING PASSENGER LIST, Suffolk senior Geraldine Kelley stands center with students representing 33 schools before ancient "Streetcar Named Disaster" at Park Street subway station. Miss Kelley made all arrangements for the 3 1/2 hour party trolley trip. Thousands of Suffolk subway riders were slightly shocked to see the swaying trolley snaking through the MTA system.

Holiday Cheer

Indeed the case of "Happy New Year" didn't seem one bit out of place on a trolley that looked like a holiday ballroom. Naked bulbs were hidden under Japanese lanterns while short card balloons hung everywhere. Card factor tape festooned the entire vehicle.

Boys were given mustache cards, paper cigars, and all possible. The extent of the car carried enormous signs bearing legends such as "A Streetcar Named Disaster," "So long and away with the MTA," "The Third Theme," "Just Mar-let," "Next Stop Tomerville," etc.

Bernard shorts were the predominant mode of dress, and one gentleman tapped his shorts with a "mexico" jacket, dress shirt, and summer-hat velvet opera top high silk hat and came all the way to the end of the line. I was quite an experience in the Boston Herald.

Better Beware, Boston!

Naturally, many schemes have been advanced by way of a complete repeat performance. The current ones include a hot party, submarine the Good Year stamp and most recently a few local Swambers. So watch out! Boston Common, here we come!

S. U. Marathon Runner Tells Of 5 Hour Grind

By FRANCIS X. DURHAM

Every April 1961 the BMAA sponsors the Marathon, a race of 26 miles and 385 yards. It starts in Hingham and finishes on Exeter Street in Boston. It usually takes the winner about 2 hours and 25 minutes to finish. The time record is held by Hiroo Hamanaka of Japan who has just run the distance in 1:48:22.

Runners converge on Boston from all over the world just for the thrill of running. Foreign runners, however, have greatly outnumbered the American fans since Johnny Kelley won in 1945.

Didn't Train

I did not train too much for the race. I used to run about 2 miles a day. For running I used road work, but sometime on my feet, and taped the shoes to my feet. Nothing happened to my feet after the race and I was glad of that.

Finished Race

I took with some authority about the race, having watched it since I was about 5 years old. I'd also having run in the event in 1954 finishing 102 out of 150 contestants.

Ever since I can remember, I always wanted to run in this grueling race. So, in 1961, I did it. I finished at about 5:15 after having been on the road for about 5 hours.

It was a very hot day. I ran 1 1/2 Wollsey, a distance of 15 miles, before fatigue momentarily stopped me. I then after a while ran and walked the rest of the way, and finally crossed the finish line. I was sure glad to see Exeter Street.

Did you do the night before? Radio interviews in your own living room are rather novel, and watching yourself on television is quite an experience, too.

Better Beware, Boston!

Naturally, many schemes have been advanced by way of a complete repeat performance. The current ones include a hot party, submarine the Good Year stamp and most recently a few local Swambers. So watch out! Boston Common, here we come!

Aside from attending press conferences and board meetings in distant cities for American Mutual, Addie is editor of her company's newspaper, a monthly, 12-14 page publication.

She is also president of the Massachusetts Industrial Editors Association, Keweenaw, with industrial development in New England is MIEA's prime objective.

The association grew after its first meeting in 1941 from six editors to 125 members. Versatile Addie grew with it.

Woodrow

Mr. Donald P. Woodrow, of Natick, assumed his new duties on March 16th. At present he is organizing a program aimed at getting more employers to hire working Suffolk students.

Well qualified for the position, Mr. Woodrow was formerly Public Relations Director for the Boston Better Business Bureau. His wide and varied background places him in an excellent position to help students with their employment problems.

He graduated from the College of Journalism in 1951. A staff member of the "Journal" and captain of the "B" basketball team, he was also class secretary and treasurer of the Varsity Club.

The Placement Office is located on the second floor of the main building, room 21A.
