Suffolk University Endowment To Suffolk Men and Friends of Suffolk We Offer These Suggestions In Response to Requests for Information

OUR AIM

An Endowment, to assure Educational opportunities equal to any in the land for those who must earn while they learn.

In Suffolk University lie opportunities for those who wish to present educational facilities equal to the best, for those who would study as they work.

This Institution has proven its stability and its worth in more than thirty years of service. Without resources at its inception, it has developed five schools and colleges of high order, including a graduate school of Law. Ahead are horizons of unbounded possibilities, because of its location, its progressiveness and its spirit of cooperation with those who must work and who will study. These high ideals of service and scholarship, together with the ministrations of a faithful Faculty and Executives, have made Suffolk one of the leading evening universities of the Country.

To uphold these standards every possible encouragement should be given. Tuition alone cannot meet the growing needs of the Institution. The difference between expenditures and income from tuition must be met by endowments and gifts.

Encouraging indeed it is to see the half-million-dollar building with additions and renovations now nearing completion. This, representing over thirty years of effort by President Archer, is the physical basis of Suffolk's Endowment.

In June, loyal students responded liberally to a request for contributions by Professor Thomas J. Finnegan, chairman of the Administrative Committee, who at that time issued the first call for Endowment. Faithful alumni have since pledged both time and money to aid in expansion of University activities and to insure its perpetuity.

In response to requests from those desiring to carry on the great work of Suffolk an outline of some of the needs is given herewith. These needs can be met by gifts of varying sums, from contributions for books and equipment to amounts running into the thousands. It is only possible here to visualize in a general way opportunities offered for Endowment. Details of specific needs can be secured from the President of the University, the Director of the Fund, or the Chairman of the Administrative Committee.

OUR NEEDS

1. A Permanent Endowment Fund: That is, gifts to capital, income only to be used.
- A. General Endowment, offering means of meeting general administrative expenses as well as assistance to specific departments.
- B. Specific Endowments:
 1. Foundations
 - Library
 - Research
 - Chairs
 - Law
 - Arts
 - Sciences
 - Commerce
 - Journalism

A WORD FROM DEAN MILLER

DONALD W. MILLER, Ed.D.

It is a well-known fact that many young people enter colleges and universities each year. Important as that may be for democracy and its perpetuation, far more important is the answer to the question: "How much college enters each of these individuals?"

What should the student do in order to make sure certain college will produce in him desirable changes in knowledge, skill, attitude, and ideals. Frankly the first thing that should be done in every course that one takes is to develop an interest in that subject. Everyone knows that learning is easier when one is interested. But you ask, "What if a subject isn't particularly 'interesting'?" Once again, you often find a prescription for developing a greater interest in that subject.

Here is one worth while prescription that seldom fails. Do more work in what is to you at the time an uninteresting subject, read more than the minimum assignment, in fact, seek out all the opportunities for gaining information in regard to the subject. Take every opportunity to discuss the subject with fellow students and other friends. Whenever possible, try to see what you learn.

All of this does two things: First, you increase your knowledge of the subject. Those who know very little about a subject are generally not greatly interested in it. What is more, better than to have someone ask us questions on a subject about which we know very little? Second, in order to increase your knowledge you have to invest imagination effort. The excitement, a great deal of time and energy leads one to always more interested in the subject. It is always more interesting in which his money is invested than in other stocks listed.

So it is with courses in the college. The greater knowledge of a subject derived from a substantial investment of time and energy leads to interest in that subject. Can you apply this prescription? If you can, you are to that extent a self-motivating, dynamic individual. The world needs more of your type! Municipal Committees, and coun-

Numerous Staff Appointments Announced by Registrar

Most Important Duties Well Represented On Journalism Staff

Suffolk University announces several important appointments to its Faculty effective at the opening of the University this year.

Cyril N. Angell, M.C.S., has been appointed to teach accounting at Suffolk University, College of Business Administration. Mr. Angell received his degrees from Dartmouth and Amos Tuck School. He is also a C. P. A. of Massachusetts, was for many years on the staff of Lybrand, Ross Bros. & Montgomery, and is now associated with Peitch, Angell & Company.

Wescott H. Fraser, B.B.A., LL.B., will also teach accounting in the Suffolk University, College of Business Administration. Mr. Fraser was for many years office manager of the Willard Storage Battery Company and is now a statistician for Ellis & Company, Boston. He received his degrees from Boston University and Suffolk Law School.

Harvard K. Ratcliffe, Colby '28, will teach a course in newspaper administration at Suffolk University, College of Journalism. Mr. Ratcliffe formerly taught Journalism at Simmons College. He is associated with the Colby Club of Boston and is the feature editor of the Transcript. Frank E. Schaefer, treasurer of the Midwest Free Press, will assist Mr. Ratcliffe in this course.

George R. Adams, Law School '30, has been appointed to the position of Night Telephone Operator and during the hours of 6:00 to 10:00 p. m. he may be seen busily handling the many calls which are received. Last year Mr. Adams assisted Mr. MacDonald in the intricate details of the NYA payroll. He was later employed by Tyler, Lamm & Reynolds.

At the close of school last year, as a reward for work well performed in the Law School Library as a student-assistant, Miss Nellie Smith, Journalism '37, was given a staff appointment. Miss Smith has been assigned to the University Library.

At present she is engaged in repairing books, and although shy is enthusiastic about the work. Miss Smith does not recommend the students staging a book battle just to keep her supplied with things to do. The new Library work room is a model of efficiency and although daily equipped, however, Miss Smith also enjoys cataloguing and archiving her turn at the charging desk.

Incidentally, the Library Work Room was designed by our efficient and popular Librarian, Miss M. Esther Newsome.

When July 1st dawned, Suffolk University added to its staff Miss Louise R. Weisocoff, the daughter of Edwin L. Weisocoff, Suffolk Law

She, since receiving her Bachelor of Science degree from Simmons College, Miss Weisopff has done literary work for the Gillette Razor Company, Boston Globe, Boston Herald, the Needham Public Library, and more recently, the New England News Campaign. Miss Weisopff's experience and training make her one particularly adapted to Suffolk University's needs. At present she is engaged in organizing and conducting the departmental libraries. When the new library is finally completed, Miss Weisopff will undoubtedly be found at the charging desk.

Library Committee Appointed

As of August 26th, President Archer formed a Library Committee and appointed the following Faculty members:

- Dean Miller, of the College of Liberal Arts, chairman, Dr. Robert W. Desmond, Christian Science Monitor, and Harold E. Hatfield, Boston Evening Transcript, representing the College of Journalism; Professor John Griffin and Professor Cyril M. Angell, of Peabody Angell & Company, representing the College of Business Administration; Professor Hiram J. Archer, Professor Kenneth B. Williams, and Dr. Arthur V. Getchell, representing the Law Department; and Miss M. Esther Newman, Librarian.

Policies for the organization and operation of the Suffolk University Library were passed upon and equal progress is being made for the formal opening of the Library during October.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT

Among the many improvements to be noted by Suffolk students returning to school this fall is the new Treasury Department. It is centrally located on the second floor on the hall formerly occupied by the Graduate School of Law. Here the Bureau's office is located and all the tuition records will be kept. There is ample space for receiving calls, for our operators report that the filing out tuition slips and making payments. This will be a relief to those who remember the cramped and crowded conditions under which Miss Farber labored on tuition days in the past at the Law School.

It is expected that the consolidation of financial matters in one department will not only lift a heavy burden from the Secretary's office but will make possible as efficient an administration of Suffolk University as has been the case of Suffolk Law School in the past.

A schedule of hours for receiving tuition payments has been arranged. It is flexible enough to suit the convenience of all.

Suffolk Scribe Views the Sports

By James F. Rand

COINCIDENCE? ... One night in June, 1936, Joe Louis fought Max Schmeling, underdog Trouton, in a fight that had been postponed by rainy weather and was knocked out in the twelfth round.

One night in August, 1937, Joe Louis fought short-order Tommy Farr in a fight that had been postponed by rainy weather and managed to shake out a fifteen round decision in a rather lullish manner.

Coincidence? This corner thinks not for we have a pet theory concerning the two losses of the present world's heavyweight champion. And it is contained in those opening lines. A fighter is normally carefully trained to bring him up to fighting pitch on the night of the fight. Postpone the fight and he will go stale. It is evident that this has been the case of Joe Louis. And it is evident that his managers have not been able to find a way to freshen him up after a postponement had taken the razor like edge off his boxing. It was not the excellence of Farr's boxing that made him a favorite with the crowd by the fifteenth round. He looked good because Louis was not Louis. Put Louis in the ring when he is fresh and we think that both Farr and Schmeling will be devoutly defeated by Joe Louis. Are we willing for Louis? Well, let time tell the story.

BASEBALL MUTTERINGS ... Back in June, we told you that the Red Sox and the Red Sox were playing good baseball, but not so good as the Red Sox were playing good baseball. As normal as a hot summer day was that streak of victories during July and it was far beyond our expectations. But we were right when we predicted by the end of the year. In the junior league, the Red Sox would have had a chance but for the Yankees' series that sent them off to a long stretch after a two-game winning streak. The Yankees this year made the race over before it had hardly got into the backstretch. The Yankees' shumped badly, this year, during the first month of the campaign. The team that will beat them next year, and we hope that it will be the flanking base inhabitants of Fenway, must get the jump on them during the first third of the season if they expect to win. In the month of July and certainly through back memories of that hectic 1934 campaign. All these fence busters when they have pitchers like Fette and Tarnes? Incidentally, it surely gave proof to the fact that Bill McKelvie was still there when it comes to managing a real coaching and leading ball team. "Good pitching and holding will offset fence basting any day," he says, "as words to that effect. McKelvie has always given the fans a real treat nearly every year with the exception of one. And who would criticize him for his 1933 team when the management itself was barely holding its head above water. He even managed the awful Babe Ruth buster? It may be too early to predict anything but we're strong along with Bill McKelvie's crowd next year, and perhaps we won't say "we told you so" when they're right up there."

YOUTH MOVEMENT ... Youth figured rather prominently in the sport news the past hot weather period. ... The youngsters show brightest in the lifting of the Davis Cup over there at Wimbledon. It took the youngest player on the youngest team ever to participate in the blue ribbon event of international tennis to end the ten-year fast that started back in '27 when the elderly Tilden couldn't stand the competition of French René Coste. While public acclaim went to Frankie Parker, it was well-earned Don Budge, who overhauled Frankie in his clinching victory over Hare of England. And it was Budge who won a singles match and partnered a winning doubles combination. Quite a guy, Budge. Then we have Joe Louis. Some people after the Farr victory wouldn't have him, though. Contrasting with our prediction in the June Journal, he easily won the world's title from Jimmie Braddock (remember him?). Then only three weeks ago he licked Tommy Farr in a fight, the recollections of which are likely to last for some time. Oh yes, we almost forgot the American League victory over the older Nationals and the Yankee's victory over T. M. Spinks' Conference. Two younger organizations whipping their older contemporaries in this instance. ... Hurrah for youth and such!

JUST A WORD ... About the Puckin parade now just about to pass this reviewing stand. Watch the college boys get in our morning calls, for our operators report that the boys' men will scale the heights!

The Endowment Campaign

By Professor Thomas J. Flanagan Chairman of Student Committee

If the business men and philanthropists can be led to understand Suffolk University's mission, the success of our Endowment Fund drive is assured.

Founded originally as a school of opportunity for the young, Suffolk University is open to the world. It extends its hand to all young men and women who desire to prepare themselves for important work in life. Those of us who are in contact with the world outside of the University walls are finding day by day what an impressive place Suffolk University occupies in the heart of the common people. The public at large is realizing that Suffolk fills a need, not only in the educational life of New England but also in the social life of this new man of today is afraid of the new communism, fascism, and all the other dangerous things. He knows that it is only by the light of the torch of both cultural and spiritual education that we shall find our way out of the dark and devious byways of our present social, political, and economic maze. Business men are definitely interested in Suffolk University.

The spontaneity with which the student body has greeted the inauguration of the Endowment drive is heartening. In those of us who are attempting this difficult task of establishing an endowment fund is an inspiration. When students think as well of their own University, their spirit is contagious and quickly communicated to the general public. Already, students have pledged a sum total of $4,517.00, and we confidently expect that after the opening of school, every student will be on our roll of honor and that the fifteen million will pass the $100,000 mark.

Aldon M. Cleveland, Law School '24, has been appointed Director of the campaign. He has already received many pledges from the Alumni but to date the returns are still incomplete to justify a report. We note the names of ex-presidents Tutchell and Badger of the Alumni Association among the $100 contributors from the Alumni ranks. Enlight is the goal for Alumni contributions.

These gentlemen who attempt to make life interesting and busy for the student, the gentleman of the faculty have also taken active part in the campaign and by their contributions, advice, and skill have shown that their interest is not entirely academic.

Let's all get together! Let's all drive our best! Suffolk gave us our chance! Suffolk gave us the opportunity to hold open the door of opportunity to the student of tomorrow! There is the task to keep burning brightly the torch of wisdom that emanates from Suffolk. Let's all do our part now!

STUDENT LOANS

The attention of students in all departments of the University is called to the personal loan-plan of The First National Bank of Boston.

Loans may be made from $100 to $1,000 for one year, to be repaid by twelve equal monthly installments.

The discount charge is $5.00 for each $100.00 borrowed. This is the only charge made for personal loans. It is the equivalent of 6 1/2 per cent a month on a year loan.

Any man or woman of legal age who is a customer or employee of a customer of The First National Bank of Boston and who has a steady income from salary, business, profession or other sources may apply for a personal loan. While personal loans will be made for any justifiable need, the following are some of the more usual purposes for which applications will be considered: Payment or consolidation of urgent personal and family debts or bonds, taxes, mortgage interest, insurance premiums, expenditures for home improvement and replacement of furnishings or equipment, payment of educational fees and medical expenses.

TYPES OF LOANS

1. Loans Without Collateral. Personal loans made to individuals without collateral generally require only a charge-maker in addition to the signature of the borrower. Co-makers may be relatives, friends or business associates who are of good standing and have a reliable source of income.

2. Collateral Loans. Collateral loans are made to individuals with acceptable collateral. In these cases co-makers are not required.

Business Loans

Merchants and business men who are eligible may borrow funds for the discounting of bills, payment of debts, purchase of merchandise, improvement of business property, and expansion of operations. Business loans will be made on the basis of the applicant's business record and financial statement.

OTHER FEATURES

One of the advantageous features of an unsecured loan under this Plan is that for the period of the loan the life of the borrower is insured, without charge, for the amount outstanding. This insurance protects co-makers and the estate of the borrower.

Borrowers are given the privilege of selecting a date for their monthly payment which will most conveniently coincide with the receipt of salary or other income.

ADVANTAGES

You have the following five major advantages when you borrow under this Personal Loan Plan:

1. The discount charge is 5 per cent and there is no service investigation, insurance or other charge.

2. You may select the monthly payment date best suited to you. Payments may be made at any one of the 24 offices of this bank.

3. Applications will be passed upon as soon as possible. When an application is approved, proceeds are immediately available to the borrower.

4. Credit Reputation. In meeting all the requirements of this Personal Loan Plan we depend on your established credit reputation with the largest bank in New England.

Suffolk's Latest Building Campaign

Joe Lemay, who seventeen years ago marshaling our forces in the construction of the original building, proved himself a man of vision and a man of courage. He has demonstrated the old time skill as Superintendent of construction in our new building campaign.

All summer long he labored to make the building of the new building a thing of the past, even though the construction of the original building involved a paving chestnut. He carried on in this fashion in the hope that the building of the new building would be a thing of the past.

When the work began, we had believed that the study of the original building and the additional weight of these stories, but our engineers soon discovered that the building would be a great success. The differing necessities arose in involving every detail in the building to strengthen brick walls and concrete pillars. Several sections of plastered wall needed to be removed and replaced with concrete. To make ready for new buttresses of brick from roof to basement, we were given Miss Archer's office changed the windows and the main stairway, but brick did not cover them through the barrier.

Dean Archer's office was taken over by the new building. For more than a month the Bureau Department was a scene of change.

The most interesting feature of all was the necessity of cutting great openings in concrete floors from roof to basement. Reinforced concrete, supported by steel beams for seventeen years, offered the resistance of temporary steel. These units were checked carefully by a beam that alarmed all the way to the corner of Beacon Hill and nearly drove the Law School Staff Team. From roof to the foundation, great holes were carved, through which masonry steel supports were to be lowered to support the weight of the new floor. The 27 holes were cut in late June, but because of the steel strike did not receive the expected attention until September.

The lack of superintending work on the top of the old building soon presented greater engineering problems than of the structure had been built from the ground up. The problem of the stone capping and the lack of the old building was a tribute to one that might have staggered most.

The valiant department moved into the new executive offices during the last week of August, although the University Librarian was obliged to remain in the building at 28 Hancock Street.

At this writing Joe Lemay is working valiantly to complete the new Library in double time, time would have been complete before the opening of school. With new work to be done and the need for steel now confronted us, the order to rolling stock was sent to the steel industry. The order was to steel industry. The order was to steel industry. The order was to steel industry.

There was a time when even though Joe Lemay would have followed the example of others who were handicapped in the same way by superintending operations until the arrival of steel. Dean Archer intended, however, that the steel frame of the building be carried on.

LIBRARY LINES

Suffolk will have one of the most beautiful libraries in Massachusetts when the new University Library opens. Construction was delayed for several months due to the steel strike, but the library will be open before the first of the year. It will be the most modern temporary quarters will be prepared in the second floor, Halls 2 and 7.

In order to make it easier for the students to use the library, the book stacks will be on open stacks this year. The Library of Congress classification will be used for all but law books, the law books will be arranged geographically.

The library will be 120 feet long, 40 feet high on all sides, and will be a complete newspaper, magazine, reference, books, and reviewed books. The library will have facilities for two hundred and twenty-five students at a time.

Library hours will be from 9 a. m. to 10 p. m. except Saturday and Sunday. On Saturday the library will be open from 9 a. m. to 5 p. m.

Many valuable gifts have been received. The bookplate Massachusetts by J. S. Reynolds and many other law books from Professor H. J. Archer from Professor A. B. Smith, The Law of Massachusetts by Professor W. B. E. from Professor Crutcher.

President Archer has given a full set of Massachusetts Reports and many other law books, to be placed in the Research Library, and many books on history, literature and law for the general library.

Both graduating classes of 1937 made gifts to the library. The Law School Senior Class gift was a set of Massachusetts Annotated Laws and the Liberal Arts Senior presented a set of Harrison's U. S. History.

EXTRA-CURRICULAR ACTIVITIES

Various extra-curricular activities are being planned for the coming year. A program is being worked out for the students' use of the radio after school. Both the Suffolk Players and the Law School Debating Society will have meetings during the coming year. The Thomas J. Ryan Debating Society starts its second year, too, in their third year debate.

The Men's Glee Club will be directed by Mr. Ralph LeRoy Hoxby, assistant to the President of the Yankee Yacht Club. If there is sufficient interest, a Women's Glee Club will be organized. The Suffolk Debating Society will be under the direction of Mr. Austin Every, formerly manager of the Harvard University Debating Club. The Pictorial Society of 1937 will have a special meeting on the 15th of October.

The Suffolk Players will hold their first meeting on October 4 at 1:00 p. m. and 7:30 p. m. The program is being planned, and all students are invited to attend. The board of directors will be made consisting of representatives of all organizations.

Suffolk College of Journalism

Second Semester 1936-1937
Harris Sherman, 41, Malden — 66 1 1
Harold Kacarian, 41, Bedford — 66 1 6

Many of the Liberal Arts students like the rest of the men and faculty were surprised and on payroll day has answered to find that Professor Sebastian is his number in the roll call. Professor Lettger has entered the movies.

Professor Lettger (who has been on leave of absence at the U. S. Naval Academy at Annapolis, had toiled at the construction of the original building in 1919-1920) has returned to our payroll this summer. Professor Lettger, a labor delegate for several years, has been running a mathematical problem and later in concrete masonry in the present job of building several buildings to the best, and giving an excellent account of himself. He may have been dejected in his union but he certainly knows how to work.

Although an electric elevator for the new building is being installed, it will be the first to be installed in the new building. The elevator is being installed by the Suffolk University Construction Company. The elevator is being installed by the Suffolk University Construction Company.

We Invite You to Join Us in Publishing the Journal

First Anniversary!

This issue of the Suffolk Journal marks the first anniversary of the official student publication of Suffolk University. The paper is destined, according to terms, to become one of the outstanding college publications in New England.

The growth of this monthly news organ has been swift, for only one year ago today the first issue appeared in the corridors of Suffolk. It was an issue devoted by publishing the 10th anniversary of Suffolk Law School, if necessary it was nearly all faculty produced.

Today, the first issue of the 1937-38 season is out. Written by students for students, the Suffolk Journal will soon shortly exhibit the most student talent. For in the basement of the Journal building will presently be found a modern printing press capable of producing a paper ranking technically with the finest of college papers. It is planned that students of the university will run the press themselves under the supervision of an expert printer.

The Suffolk Journal is now firmly established as an inseparable part of the University. It should and will reflect the opinions of the students of the university whether they be in the Law, Liberal Arts, Business Administration or Journalism departments. Students of Suffolk University are responsible for the success or failure of the paper. They will make the Suffolk Journal outstanding in New England college circles.

Welcome!

April 29, 1937, marked two events in the history of Suffolk University. The first, already mentioned in the public print and the most important, was the establishment of Suffolk University. The second was the granting of a charter for the Suffolk College of Business Administration.

In a few brief days, the newest member of Suffolk University will begin its academic sessions. Like its immediate predecessor, the College of Journalism, which is entering upon its second year, instruction will be given by a faculty selected by Dean Archer following his own theory that these men and women who are engaged actively in the profession by day are better qualified to teach than those who have not this working knowledge.

To these new students who are entering these walls we wish the Suffolk Journal staff join with the other students of Suffolk University in extending a hearty welcome.

Motion Picture Advertising

Recently much publicity has been given to the drive to abolish commercial advertising from the motion picture screen. Probably the best known organization engaged in this work is the Society for the Banning of Commercial Advertisements in Motion Picture Theaters. Organized in Little Rock, Ark. by M. C. Blackburn, the movement has spread into the major cities of the country. It is not necessary to give your name to become a member of the S. B. C. A. M. P. T. All that is necessary says Blackburn is that you "see long, loud, and often until the administration is abated."

In Tifton, Georgia, the campaign has spread into the newspapers where Local No. 3, Society for the Banning of Commercial Advertisements in Motion Picture Theaters, engaged space early this month for advertising the organization to non-members. The advertisements read in part:

"Do you enjoy paying your good money to have a surge of commercial advertisements thrust at you every time you go to the theatre? Tifton theatre interests brought out against the newspaper (Tifton Commercial Advertisements in Theaters."

Tifton theatre interests brought out against the newspaper (Tifton Commercial Advertisements in Theaters."

In Boston there have been a few theatres showing advertising "shorts" from time to time. It happens, however, that it has been more in the form of an experiment than an innovation in policy. As far as commercial advertising, the "shorts" appearing only in houses showing fourth-rate productions. Although in advertising has been seen on the screen locally, instigated by nationally known firms, local distributors have, on their own initiative, advertised well known refrigerators and other appliances. That it would appear that the large concerns, although not participating, do not refrain on motion picture advertising.

In answer to a question from the writer dealing with this matter, Ruth Valle had this to say, while lecturing here last winter: "I believe there will not be a future of any great importance in motion picture advertising. It has been tried and abandoned as not fulfilling its purpose. A theatre audience, however, is not a through an advertisement when they have paid to see Greta Garbo or Mickey Mouse. Unlike the radio, it is here impossible to avoid the advertising unless you want to sacrifice your admission price. If it could be made easily entertaining, there might be some hope for it, but not otherwise."

Honor Men in Law School

Suffolk University Law School takes pride in its high scholarship list for the year 1937-38. Competition is exceedingly keen among our aspirants for the legal profession.

SENIOR HONORS

Paul T. Smith of the Class of 1937 led the competition for his class, maintaining a four-year scholastic average of 92.13. He is one of the first men to have maintained this high an average throughout his entire four years. He won the "Duggan Walsh" Scholarship, the "Thomas J. Boynton" Scholarship, the "George A. Frost" Scholarship and was awarded the honor of being Valedictorian of his class. He was recently awarded the "Wm. H. Evans Memorial" Scholarship in the Graduate School of Law. He is a graduate of Roxbury Memorial High School, '32, entering Suffolk Law the following September. His wactiousness shows of age at the time of graduation.

Henry C. Gill of Boston finished second with a general average of 91.31. Mr. Gill is a graduate of Brockton High School, '32 and Harvard College, '37. He had the honor of being the 1937 Salutatorian and has been awarded the "Gen. Charles W. Bartlett" Scholarship in the Graduate School of Law.

The third highest man in the Class of 1937 is Roy K. Patch, ex-Mayor of Beverly who maintained a four year scholastic average of 90.11. He is a graduate of Beverly High School, '36. He also attended the Massachusetts Agricultural College. Mr. Patch was awarded the "Massachusetts Agricultural College" Mr. Patch was awarded the "James H. Vahsy Memorial" Scholarship in the Graduate School of Law.

JUNIOR HONORS

Joseph S. Fox of Everett who held first honors in the Junior Class of 1936 has been awarded the "George A. Frost" Scholarship for the coming year. Mr. Fox made an average in his Junior year of 90.12. He is a graduate of Rindge Tech. Class of 1924 followed by two years in the College of Business Administration of Boston University.

Arthur J. Carnes of Malden won second honors in the Class of 1936 with an average of 89.5. He has been awarded the "Gilman L. Archer" Scholarship having maintained second highest average. He is a graduate of Malden High School, Class of 1923 and of the Massachusetts Nautical School, '25.

SUFFOLK UNIVERSITY

Suffolk's first full year as a University finds it physically equipped, as few educational institutions are, to carry on the great task before it. Under one vast roof with more than an acre and a half of floor space in six floors of bright light, it is conveniently divided into offices, library, auditorium, lecture halls and corridors. The various departments of the University are thus brought together for the common purpose; co-ordination of effort and teamwork in the past of the administrative staff of the several departments. Zealous cooperation of the faculties of our four colleges, of our library workers, and all employees of the University should render Suffolk, one of the most efficient institutions of higher education in America.

We are not only equipped to impart knowledge but also to build character. A miniature city in itself with future lawyers, jurists, journalists, educators, captains of industry, workers of culture and the three things of life coming and going through our long corridors or gathering on our roof, what an opportunity for the forming of lifelong friendships! Tasks of individuals may differ and goals may be far apart yet throughout important formative years young men and women of all departments of the University meet on common ground. The next four years, I believe, will prove unique in this respect.

It seems to me inevitable that within that period of time the natural growth of the institution will render necessary the construction of other buildings to house departments now in their infancy. The College of Business Administration will probably be the first department to leave the main building for a building of its own, — a building on Beacon Hill and land now controlled by officials of the University. Much, therefore, should be done in these years of close affiliation of the five departments of Suffolk University under one roof.

CHAPTER ONE

Another stride to win. Larry Grapton, Hudson's great miler, strained his body forward, reached forth with his chest for the tape that would mean victory. But he felt rather than saw that hurtling black shape slip past him but the tape first and snatched victory from his grasp.

From the press box, Jack Wilson, coach of the slow blade, gazed unbelieveingly on the scene. He stood there like a man asleep. What had happened just wasn't possible. Unbeaten college champions, don't they before several miles like Jack Wilson. But Larry had had an accepted defeat in such a manner that it spoke of "winning." Larry had weakened, steadily losing ground until Harley on the last stretch, long drive had struck with paralyzing force, had rushed past as the finish. Jack rounded himself from his perch and with his friend, Don Wilson, are sports commentators for the Gloucester fields, rushed for the dressing room.

"Larry-Larry," Jack equipped his voice choked with excitement. "What's the matter, boy? Harley's no prize package, how could you let him beat you?"

"The tall, handsome blonde youth, finished stripping off his uniform, grabbed a towel and with a curt, "As can it coach, I get lost."

"The two stood there, stunned and leaving the tumult as the team happy over their victory over State University, their nearest rival, crowded their way into the dressing room. This broke the silence.

"What's the matter with him, Jack?" He's never been like that before. Why it breaks his heart to lose a race. Back in '22 when Yankee beat him, he nearly tore the dressing room apart. You're in a hell of a fix now. Your best miler's gone west or yellow and the conference championships are only two weeks away.

"You don't know the half of it. Don, the athletic board's given me the works. Win the conference championship or else. And they mean it. I don't know what to do. Think. He may have been just a swell braced tonight. The girl friend was in the stands and he had to show off. He did? Dan big own race, wouldn't listen to me and look what happened to me next. I told him to watch out for that last minute kick of Harley's. That boy may be a second-rate miler, but let him get close enough at the end and goodbye race."

While they had been talking, the two men had left the dressing room and stood in one of the glowing tunnel entrances to the indoor coliseum. The vast building has emptied rapidly. The mile run with its spectacular climax had been the last event on the dual meet program. "Both men turned to go to the coach's office when a swift pat of feet was heard and an excited voice calling for Jack.

Joe Dawson, diminutive trainer, came up the long ramp breathless. Larry and Harley are in there micing it up, habner and tongue. We can't stop there. They're like wild men."

The three rushed down the long ramp and burst into the Hudson dressing room just in time to see Harley connect to Larry's chin, driving him across the room crashing into the steel lockers. Attempting to follow up his advantage, Harley was met with a kick in the stomach as Larry, unable to say out in the lead had suddenly run, defended himself with

Before the two could get together again, Jack stepped in between them. "Here you two. Cal it. What do you think this is, a prize fight ring?"

Wilson, addressing the State coach who had just forced his way through the crowd of athletes and the crowd, "Take care of Harley. I'll let you Larry." The two left and Larry followed his coach down the corridor to his office on the other side of the sports coliseum.

"What's the matter between you and Harley?"

"Nothing, coach," Larry solemnly answered.

Nothing the coach could do would try the secret boss from Larry's student lips. At length, giving up in disgust, he told the state miler to report before practice Monday. While he had been talking, Jack had been fixing up Larry from the hexer Harley.

"Nothing," Harley said, "I'm coming out of the tiny office at the Larry had left. Jack bumped into Don Wilson.

"I've been waiting around. I think I've got an idea about this little 'fracy tonight,'" said the sports writer.

"I wouldn't say any good. You sports writers are all alike. You never get anything right. The last time I took a sure tip the horse came in fast," grumbled the sport-faced coach.

"Cut the kidding. I really think I've got something."

The two men emerged from the dim, seldom lit recesses of the sports palace into the cool winter light. Clambering into his car, Jack, still in a mournful mood, warily answered, "All right. Tell me on the way home."

"You know with Larry a sure bet to cup that conference title. Anything that's written about the great Larry is eaten up by the fans."

"All right, so what?" as he showed the car to a stop for a red light at an intersection.

"Just this. I ran across a little feature story in my files about the 'Mile Team.' That's the pet name they tacked onto Larry and Harley when they were school runners together back in Oklahoma. Among other things, I ran across a little item that described how Jake and Larry ran some twenty mile race together with Jake always the winner. Larry always the bridesmaid."

"I see. You think Larry's fixed in his brain that he can't beat Jake?"

"Perhaps. The thing we got to do is to drive it out of his mind. How we're going to do it is another matter."

CHAPTER TWO

His arm high above his head, Larry lay on his bed trying frantically to get some sleep. The exertion of that night had taken a lot of strength out of him, his body felt tired all over, but still he couldn't sleep. Ever recurring thoughts of the evening's events flickered and faded before his eyes, like the March of Time.

Four years of triumph not only in winning his races but in not squabbling over that old feat that he couldn't win. Now this. Harley lay up to this year had been safely encountered in little Bradley College, a school too small for big colleges to even consider scheduling but he had finally succumbed to the lure of the State University athletic director. When he had seen that little news item in the paper announcing Harley's tryout for the track team, he felt that old fear gnawing at his vitals. He couldn't beat Harley. He never had and never would. His training as the night of the State meet approached had slumped noticeably.

He had not tried Jack's stitching him out of the corner of his eye, wondering then, tonight, with the taunts of Harley ringing in his ears, he had gone berserk, tried to beat the stouter, heavier man by a mile. It was no use, though. Harley smug as he was, packed a wicked left that played havoc with Larry's face.

Tonight's fight had done more harm than good. He had made a fool of himself in front of the team and had deepened the wondering look in Jack's eyes. To light, clambering into his car, Jack, still in a mournful mood, warily answered, "All right. Tell me on the way home."

"You know with Larry a sure bet to cup that conference title. Anything that's written about the great Larry is eaten up by the fans."

"All right, so what?" as he

STAFF NOTES

VERSATILE RECENT HIGH-SCHOOLERS JOIN SECRETARIAL STAFF

Tim Hartline, Law School '33, is still holding forth as Assistant to the Registrar of the College departments. This year he will assist the Bureau on College tuition nights. Tom's swell fellow as well if he does have to take time out to swap the morning afternoon ideas with his fellow class-mate, our cheery mascot man.

Miss Frances G. Goding, North Quincy High School '32, and Miss Agnes C. Graydon, Duxbury High School '31, joined the staff of the Adagio Departments immediately upon their graduation. Miss Goding is following in her sister Josephine's steps, as being an efficiently capable stenographer, thus relieving the Executive Secretary of many details. Both Miss Goding's received their training under Miss Lillian Gormley, Liberal Arts, '31.

Miss Teravann likewise is proving independent, she really couldn't do less, having won highest of all honors in Duxbury High University. The Suffolk Players will early enlist her aid for her unmarked ability, as an actress.

From the Law School, as student assistants in various departments, including the return of French, Beverly, Goding, Velle, Donald, McLaughlin and Fairbush.

Miss Mary B. Young who was appointed stenographer for the Suffolk University on August 16, 1932, is a graduate of Emmanuel College in the class of 1926. Since her graduation Miss Young has been employed in the Immigration and also the Insurance Departments of the State House of Boston.

Miss Young comes to us highly recommended by the Telephone Company. She was selected personally by one of the Supervisors as being a person exceptionally well qualified to fill the position of operator-in-chief of the Suffolk University Switchboard.

SWITCHBOARD

In line with the recent enlargement of Suffolk University, there has been installed a new switchboard of the latest type, to replace one of the smaller model which has hitherto served the needs of the institution.

The latest equipment of the University for purpose of communication, is operated by means of ten trunk lines and thirty extensions, whereas the original equipment was of the type operated type and had provisions only for three trunk lines and seven extensions.

The present volume of traffic of the inter-school communication system will only employ a portion of the existing capacity of this new switchboard, leaving ample opportunity for the expansion of the departments of our University.

To those not familiar with such a device there appears to be considerable mystery abounding in its numerous cords and plugs, but to those who have had the opportunity to become more or less familiar with the apparatus, it presents an array of fascinating features and generally impresses the observer as being one of the many miracles offered by the modern scientific and engineering world.

Another feature which will be used in Suffolk University is the intercommunicating system. On several desks in the Executive Offices there is a set of keys. On these sets there is a spare key which is used for intercommunicating. When this key is thrown in, people in different offices may engage in direct conversation without the means of the switchboard.

It is hardly necessary to set forth the part played by the communication system in everyday modern life. The whole country is interlaced by an enormous system of telephones and the particular system that has been referred to above is merely a small counterpart fitted to meet the increasing needs of a growing institution.

Suffice it to say that the enlarged telephone facilities recently installed will adequately and efficiently satisfy the many demands that will be made on it by the Executive Departments of Suffolk University.

Miss Theresa Bodwell who has been a student in the College of Liberal Arts for the past two years was appointed file clerk and recorder for the Suffolk University College Departments in June, 1932. In preparation for this new work Miss Bodwell attended the Boston College of Filing during this summer.

After spending an enjoyable season learning the latest system of filing from expert instructors she has now resumed her duties in the new Executive Office of the University.

Miss Bodwell also plans to continue her course and has a paper on Liberal Arts, where she has already made an available record.

SHE WHO LOVES IN VAIN

By Harry Sherman, L. 11

Beyond the banks of the river mile instead of you, then I could Jack, and on little Saunders Island at least take sides." Her heart in upper New England, there lived now and fell with the tide of sup-

Sandy, Tavish and Agnes Rankin, proved years. Her central town; She was a homely lass, eye and was not loud nor harsh, but it was bony too. Agnes was known as a plain girl. She was not sophisticated, nor able, nor did she smoke. I ask you to marry me?" He was However, she had more than an average share of good looks, and her crown of blonde curls accented her dark complexion.

Sandy, the ardent lover of Agnes, was not so fortunate in his share of beauty. He was six feet three, heavily built, and with muscles aplenty. Down over his unshaven face streamed magnificent locks. Bushy eyebrows added a majestic touch to his features. His body seemed to ripple with waves upon waves of superfluous hair. Though most men would look and feel humbled with such hair, Sandy, at 25, looked justly distinguished. Rarer than that it was a drink of whisky, and the Scotchman's eyes. As a matter of fact, "Who's Who" in this town traced him back to a noble

Sandy and Agnes were sitting on Lover's Bench, atop Bartlett Hill. Sandy's pipe glowed. He had his hand tucked under his chin. He said to Agnes, his golden hair gleaming in the moonlight:

"Why didn't you do something?" she asked after many minutes of silence.

"What do you want me to do?" he answered. He stared dreamily at distant stars.

"Put your arms around me," she moved closer to him.

"What for?" He did not try to fight. His words were accompanied by sports of tobacco smoke.

"Ain't the 27th us lovin' in your heart?" she cried. "Don't you feel the moonlight?"

"None," answered dream-laden Sandy. "Can't say as I feel anythin'."

Agnes moved close to her lover. Slipping her arm about his mighty shoulder, she said, "Look, I've put my arm around you. What else can I do? Don't you want to kiss me?"

"Well," throated the stoical Scot, "As long as you've got a y' arm near it, you might take the pipe outta my mouth, w'ch I can say."

"What kind of a man are you? Ain't these notions in your heart?"

"No, no. There ain't nothin' in my body. I'm a clean man, and strong too. Why I can lick any man in the world. People come from miles around, just to see my muscles ripple. Here feel this arm!"

He rolled up the torn sleeve of his right arm. Bending back his forearm, he produced a tremendous lump.

Agnes didn't feel it. She jumped up and stood with her hands on her hips, glaring at the muscle-bound rustic.

"Muscles? Muscles? Is that all you can think of?" "Have you got any eyes?"

"Now there, Agnes."

"I thought I loved you," she broke into his speech. "But I don't. You've got a swell heart somewhere under all that hair. But you're as dumb, and slow, and dead as a mule is. Gee, I wish I had the

A. For General Purposes.

B. For Specific Purposes, such as books, scholarships and the like.

Unrestricted gifts are a particular boon to any educational institution, including Suffolk.

Restricted gifts are likewise welcomed.

Bequests of monies, securities or real estate are deeply appreciated, whether large or small.

There are those who may choose to give a living memorial to alumni or friends, and it is indeed gratifying to thus link their names forever with the University.

To give to a University is to invest in Humanity, both Educationally and Socially, clearing a Path to Higher Plateaus of Achievements."

AMOUNTS

A contribution or bequest of any amount may be made either to Permanent or Current Endowments or to General or Specific Foundations or Funds.

Small amounts are permitted to accumulate until they total a sufficient sum for investment by the Trustees.

Foundations, Chairs, Scholarships and Prizes may be named for the donor.

A General Endowment of $1,000,000 means an income, at 4%, of $40,000 for general administrative purposes.

Specific Endowments: Foundations of varying amounts; a Library or a Research Foundation from $5,000 to $100,000; but a purchase book fund, or a fund for purchase or maintenance of equipment for research and other equipment for any amount up to thousands of dollars.

Funds necessary to endow individual professorships, from $10,000 to $100,000.

Undergraduate scholarships named for specific donors, $1,000 to $6,000 and up; income only to be used.

Graduate Scholarships, particularly for Research, $1,000 to $25,000.

New buildings to meet the needs of this growing institution at a cost of $300,000 and upwards.

FORMS

For the convenience of those who wish to make a gift to Suffolk University, the following forms are available:

1. General Endowment, in specific sum, or residue of estate.

2. Gift and bequest to Suffolk University, in Massachusetts jurisdiction, the sum of dollars, the residue of my estate to be used for any number of purposes, at the discretion of the University.

3. Specific or Restricted Endowment, in specific sum, or residue of estate.

4. Gift and bequest to Suffolk University, in Massachusetts jurisdiction, the sum of dollars, the residue of my estate to be placed in the hands of the Trustees and invested in the funds in this behalf now invested. The income therefrom to be expended by said Trustees for the following purposes:

Suffolk's New Building

In spite of steel strikes, national and local, Suffolk University's new building is rapidly nearing completion. Steel that should have been delivered not later than July 15th did not actually arrive on the building site until August 21st. Had it not been for this fortunate circumstance that when the architect's plans were being drafted in March, 1937, Dean Archer insisted that the front and rear sections of the building should be constructed with reinforced concrete, the middle portion only of steel, our plans for the housing of the University would have met with disaster. As it is, however, a forty-foot section in the rear and a similar section on the Berne Street end of the building have been carried up to the new mid-level making possible the completion of commodious lecture halls for school use in September. Thus the immediate needs of the University are fully met.

By the last of October, the building should be complete in all its details, with about twenty-four lecture halls, one of the most up-to-date and scientifically equipped school buildings in New England. Air conditioned offices in all departments are features of the new building, eight phase units providing ventilation, air cleaning, air circulation, minimization of street noises, heating and humidification in winter, cooling and de-humidification in summer, are being installed in these offices.

In the Law Department, the Dean's office, the Secretary's office, and that of the Director of Research and Review each have complete air conditioning. In the University offices, on the second floor, the office of the Executive Secretary, the Dean of the College of Liberal Arts, offices of Journalism and Business Administration, as well as the stenographer's rooms are air conditioned.

On the third floor the office of the President of the University, the Trustee's Rooms as well as the office of the Librarian and the Radio Studio are equipped with complete air conditioning. The Library will be supplied with filtered air in suitable volume by means of air pilots that are completely adjustable as to air intake. All lecture halls in the building will be similarly equipped. More than forty air pilots are located in various parts of the building and thus the old nuisance of dust and dirt from the street will be eliminated. The air pilots also shut out street noises. Drafts from open windows will be no longer a nuisance in classrooms. Drinking fountains will be found in proper location for student needs. Rest rooms for women students, and smoking rooms and toilet services for men have been installed in the new part of the building. The roof as planned will be a grand recreation ground, the surface being covered with rubber tiles that will be proof against damage from athletic activities.

Alumni Notes

Leo F. Caldwell, '24, of Arlington was admitted to practice before the Supreme Court of the United States in June. Mr. Caldwell has been associated with the Gillette Safety Razor Company since 1918 and is now a member of its legal department. Mr. Caldwell is also a member of the law firm of Curran & Caldwell of Watertown.

In June, Cyril F. Butler, '19, of Boston was appointed to the State Parks Board. Mr. Butler, who is a member of the Massachusetts Bar, was born in the British West Indies.

John E. Fenton, '24, of Lawrence, was appointed to the bench by Governor Hurley in June. Judge Fenton fills the vacancy created by the death of Judge Michael A. Sullivan. Prior to his service as Register of Deeds, Judge Fenton was for many years a teacher of English history, economics and commercial law at Lawrence High School. He served as faculty manager of athletics and assistant supervisor of playground. Shortly after Judge Fenton's graduation from Suffolk Law School, he was admitted to the Massachusetts Bar and later was admitted to practice in the United States District Court. Judge Fenton is a member of many fraternal organizations.

During July, Thomas H. Carr, '26, received the appointment of technical adviser to the Appellate Tax Board. Mr. Carr has for many years been a member of the Massachusetts Legislature and the Suffolk County Board of Appointment.

Among the summer marriages was that of Joseph P. Moriarty, '32, to Miss Mary Clare Bartle, of Southbridge, Massachusetts. Mr. Moriarty is associated with the Second National Bank of Nashua, New Hampshire, and is in charge of real estate and public relations. He is also active in the Nashua Young Business Men's Club and a director of the Fitchburg Advertising Association of New England.

Wesley Voss, '25, of Portland, Maine, passed the Maine Bar examinations during the summer. Mr. Voss ranked third in the class.

Attorney Jeremiah A. Drosell, Suffolk Law, '22, has been appointed as Review Attorney for the Social Security Board, Washington, D. C. Mr. Drosell, a resident of Brookfield has been secretary and treasurer to the Milk Drivers and is past president of the Massachusetts Federation of Labor. He has held an outstanding labor record for a great many years.

The appointment of John Campbell, Jr., Suffolk Law, '26, by the United States Senate as an attorney to the Social Security Board was made during the summer. He is regional representative of the Bureau of Old Age Benefits. He is in charge of the Field Office Activities for New England. For many years he has been general counsel attorney in Boston and at one time was associated with Congressman John W. McCannick. He was also the supervisor of the Boston Census for the United States Government.

During July, Thomas J. Kelley, Suffolk Law, '25, took over his duties as the manager of the Boston and Metropolitan Shipping Office. Prior to this appointment, Mr. Kelley was with the New England Exchange.

SUFFOLK UNIVERSITY GRADUATE SCHOOL OF LAW

The graduate courses are intended to supplement general professional education in the closely related fields of law and government by an intensive study of special subjects outside the ordinary scope of undergraduate law school curricula. The mental stimulus of return to the classroom — renewed association with lawyers who are ambitious to rise to greater heights in the profession — new vistas of law and of cultural understanding — these are some of the advantages of the Master's Course at Suffolk Law School. Every subject is given by an expert and every subject is of great value to the ambitious lawyer.

OPENING DATE
Graduate courses reopen on Monday, September 27, 1937, one week after the opening of the undergraduate law courses.
Classes are held on Mondays, Tuesdays and Fridays from 6 to 9 P. M. There are no day sessions.

ADMISSION REQUIREMENTS
Candidates holding the degree of Bachelor of Laws providing they satisfy the current educational requirements for admission to the law school are qualified for admission.

TUITION
Tuition for the entire course, if taken in one year, is $160; in two years $200, payable quarterly. Graduates of Suffolk Law School are excused from paying the registration fee. A graduation fee of $10 is to be paid by every student who qualifies for the degree of Master of Laws. A University Fee of $10 will be charged to students who wish to take advantage of the extra-curricular activities of the University.

NYA College Aid Program

FOR 1937-1938
This year Suffolk University will have monitors (daytime Law School students) stationed in each corridor. They will serve as information guides, having on their desks a sheaf of reports to assist them in remembering all the intricate details of the new building and its operation. The men will also estimate this year according to a recent announcement by Mr. Macdonald who will again be in charge of the NYA activities at Suffolk University.

Fifty-six needy students may be given employment at one time during the school year. They will also receive an average of $15 a month. The total amount which may be earned during the school year is $180.

Those students whose applications are accepted by the school and the State Youth Administration will work on various projects according to their adaptability. Twenty or more will work in the school building, some doing clerical work and others acting as hall and roof monitors. The others will work at the Settlement Houses and the Barroughs Newsboys' Foundation.

Students are selected according to need. Only those who can prove they actually need this aid in order to continue their school work are accepted. There is one other limitation. Only those who are over sixteen and under twenty-five years of age are permitted to participate in the program. This rule tends to work a hardship on some of the older boys in the Law School but it is an unchangeable rule laid down by the NYA authorities in Washington and it cannot be waived.

One hundred and fourteen Suffolk students were helped over the financial hump last year by NYA, and it is certain to be a great help to many worthy students this year.

Sometimes birds remain in young couples striding in narrow old streets, reveling in the quaintness of the architecture of the houses. Are it any they walk, their bright eager eyes catching every bit of interest, even the purple glass affected by some of the windows - window panes, the like of which is said to be found nowhere else.

 Summer squares and with the end of the brick fall months comes the holiday season.

And then Beacon Hill shakes it all and really comes into its own! For on the Night Before Christmas, when everyone should be in bed and not thousands of people swarm all over the Hill, gathering in clusters to hear the vocal singers and following wandering bands of street musicians, paraded in the traditional Christmas costumes of Merry Old England around the streets as they celebrate The Birth.

SCHOOL NOTES

Mr. Executive Secretary, Mrs. Sarah A. Bryant, has not in a very strenuous summer organizing the staff activities of the College Departments, and in other routine duties of the University.

Dr. Donald W. Miller, the newly appointed Dean of the College of Liberal Arts, began work on a full-time basis on July 1st. Since that date he has been busy with student schedules in preparation for the coming year. As chairman of the Library Committee he has devoted much time and effort to the selection of books for the new University Library.

Miss M. Esther Newcome, our Librarian, has found time during the summer to complete successfully an important course in education at Boston University. They are high in Boston society. They still live on Beacon Hill, their old families and perhaps never will surrender their domain to those who have crept in since the turn of the century.

The new University Bookstore is a great improvement over the previous bookstore. Mrs. May Donald will continue to preside over its affairs.

The setting up of a distinct Faculty Department is an innovation that is bound to be appreciated by the students of the various departments. With a purposeful attention for the filling out of positions and four windows for the payment of tuition, the old time delays should be considerably minimized.

Paul A. McDonald, Law '37, will continue in charge of the NVA project for Suffolk University. He will also have recovery of student tuition payments in the Treasury Department, for he is scheduled to be the Recital of the University when the department is completely set up.

It is very appropriate that Miss Irene Lenay should become a student in Suffolk College of Liberal Arts since it was, in part, to the McNamara, who has been a very able and real of her father, Joe McNamara, that Suffolk University has such a fine set of buildings. Miss Lenay is a talented musician. Among the additions to our Law school staff of workers during the past few months are Mrs. Esther Holland and Miss Evelyn McNamara, experts in the Law School Department. Miss Holland is a niece of Mrs. Carabell while Mrs. McNamara is a sister of Dorothy McNamara, who has been a very efficient member of the staff.
