Suffolk University. Boston. Massachusetts

the following pages are dedicated to those individuals who are a part of everything and everyone, yet stand apart with distinction; to those individuals who can respond to the rapture and ruggedness of life, yet are responsible to its commitments; to those individuals who will always remain individual in their practices . . . in their perceptions . . . in their pursuits.

Dedication

In a society where the common philosophy is self-fulfillment by the gratification of self-centered desires, where international discord breeds ugly pettiness and hatred, it is extraordinary to meet one whose self-fulfillment is carried through by the fulfillment of others.

The year 1967 marks the close of two decades of devoted teaching to the students of Suffolk University by Dr. Ella Murphy, Professor of English. A rare and generous educator, Dr. Murphy has guided many students onto a successful path in life. With her patience and understanding, with her wisdom and sincere warmth of friendship, she is a truly great human being. She is one of the few who cared enough to care.

It is to express our sincere appreciation for "her dedication" to Suffolk University that we, the Class of 1967, dedicate our yearbook to Dr. Murphy with heartfelt hope that she continues teaching for many more years to come.

SPEECH

Joseph H. Strain
Professor

Boy, these class meetings are a gasssss.

And that's how the Indians lost Manhattan.

Up, up with people!

Education 1.2345

Aghhh!

What'd ya mean you don't like the band?

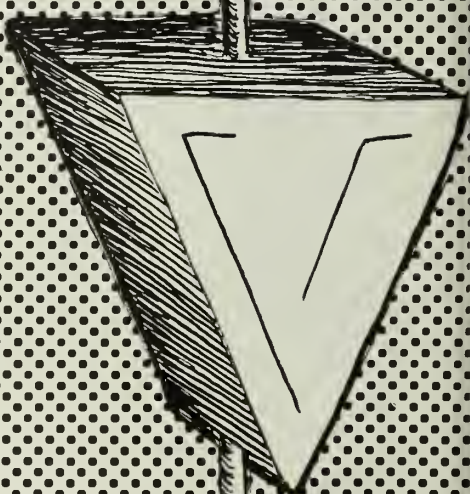

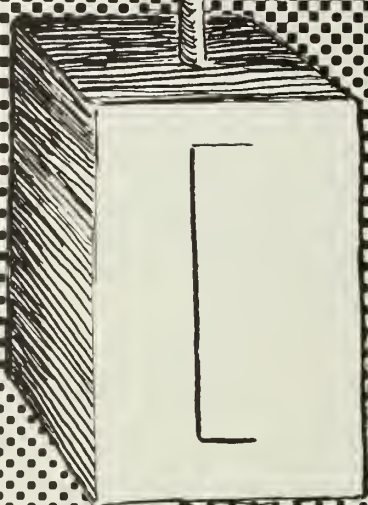

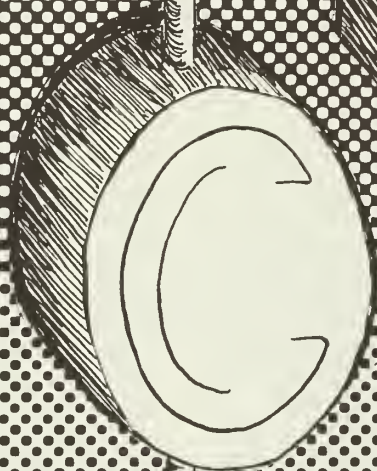

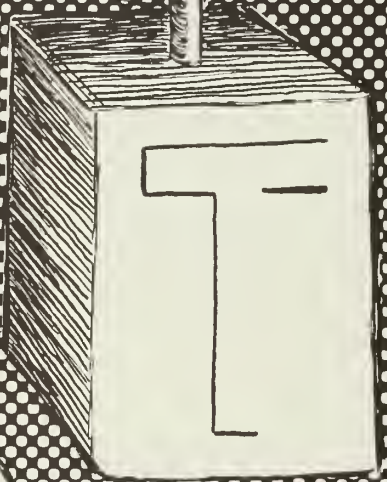

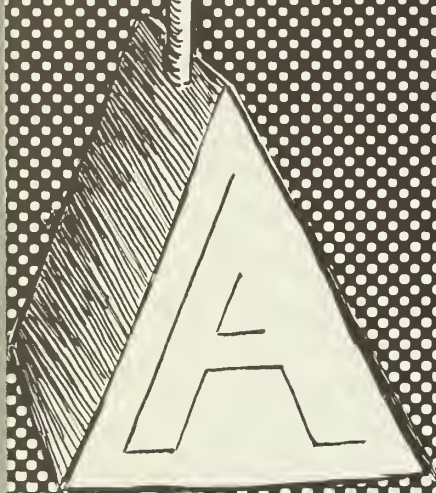

Next year I head my own department.

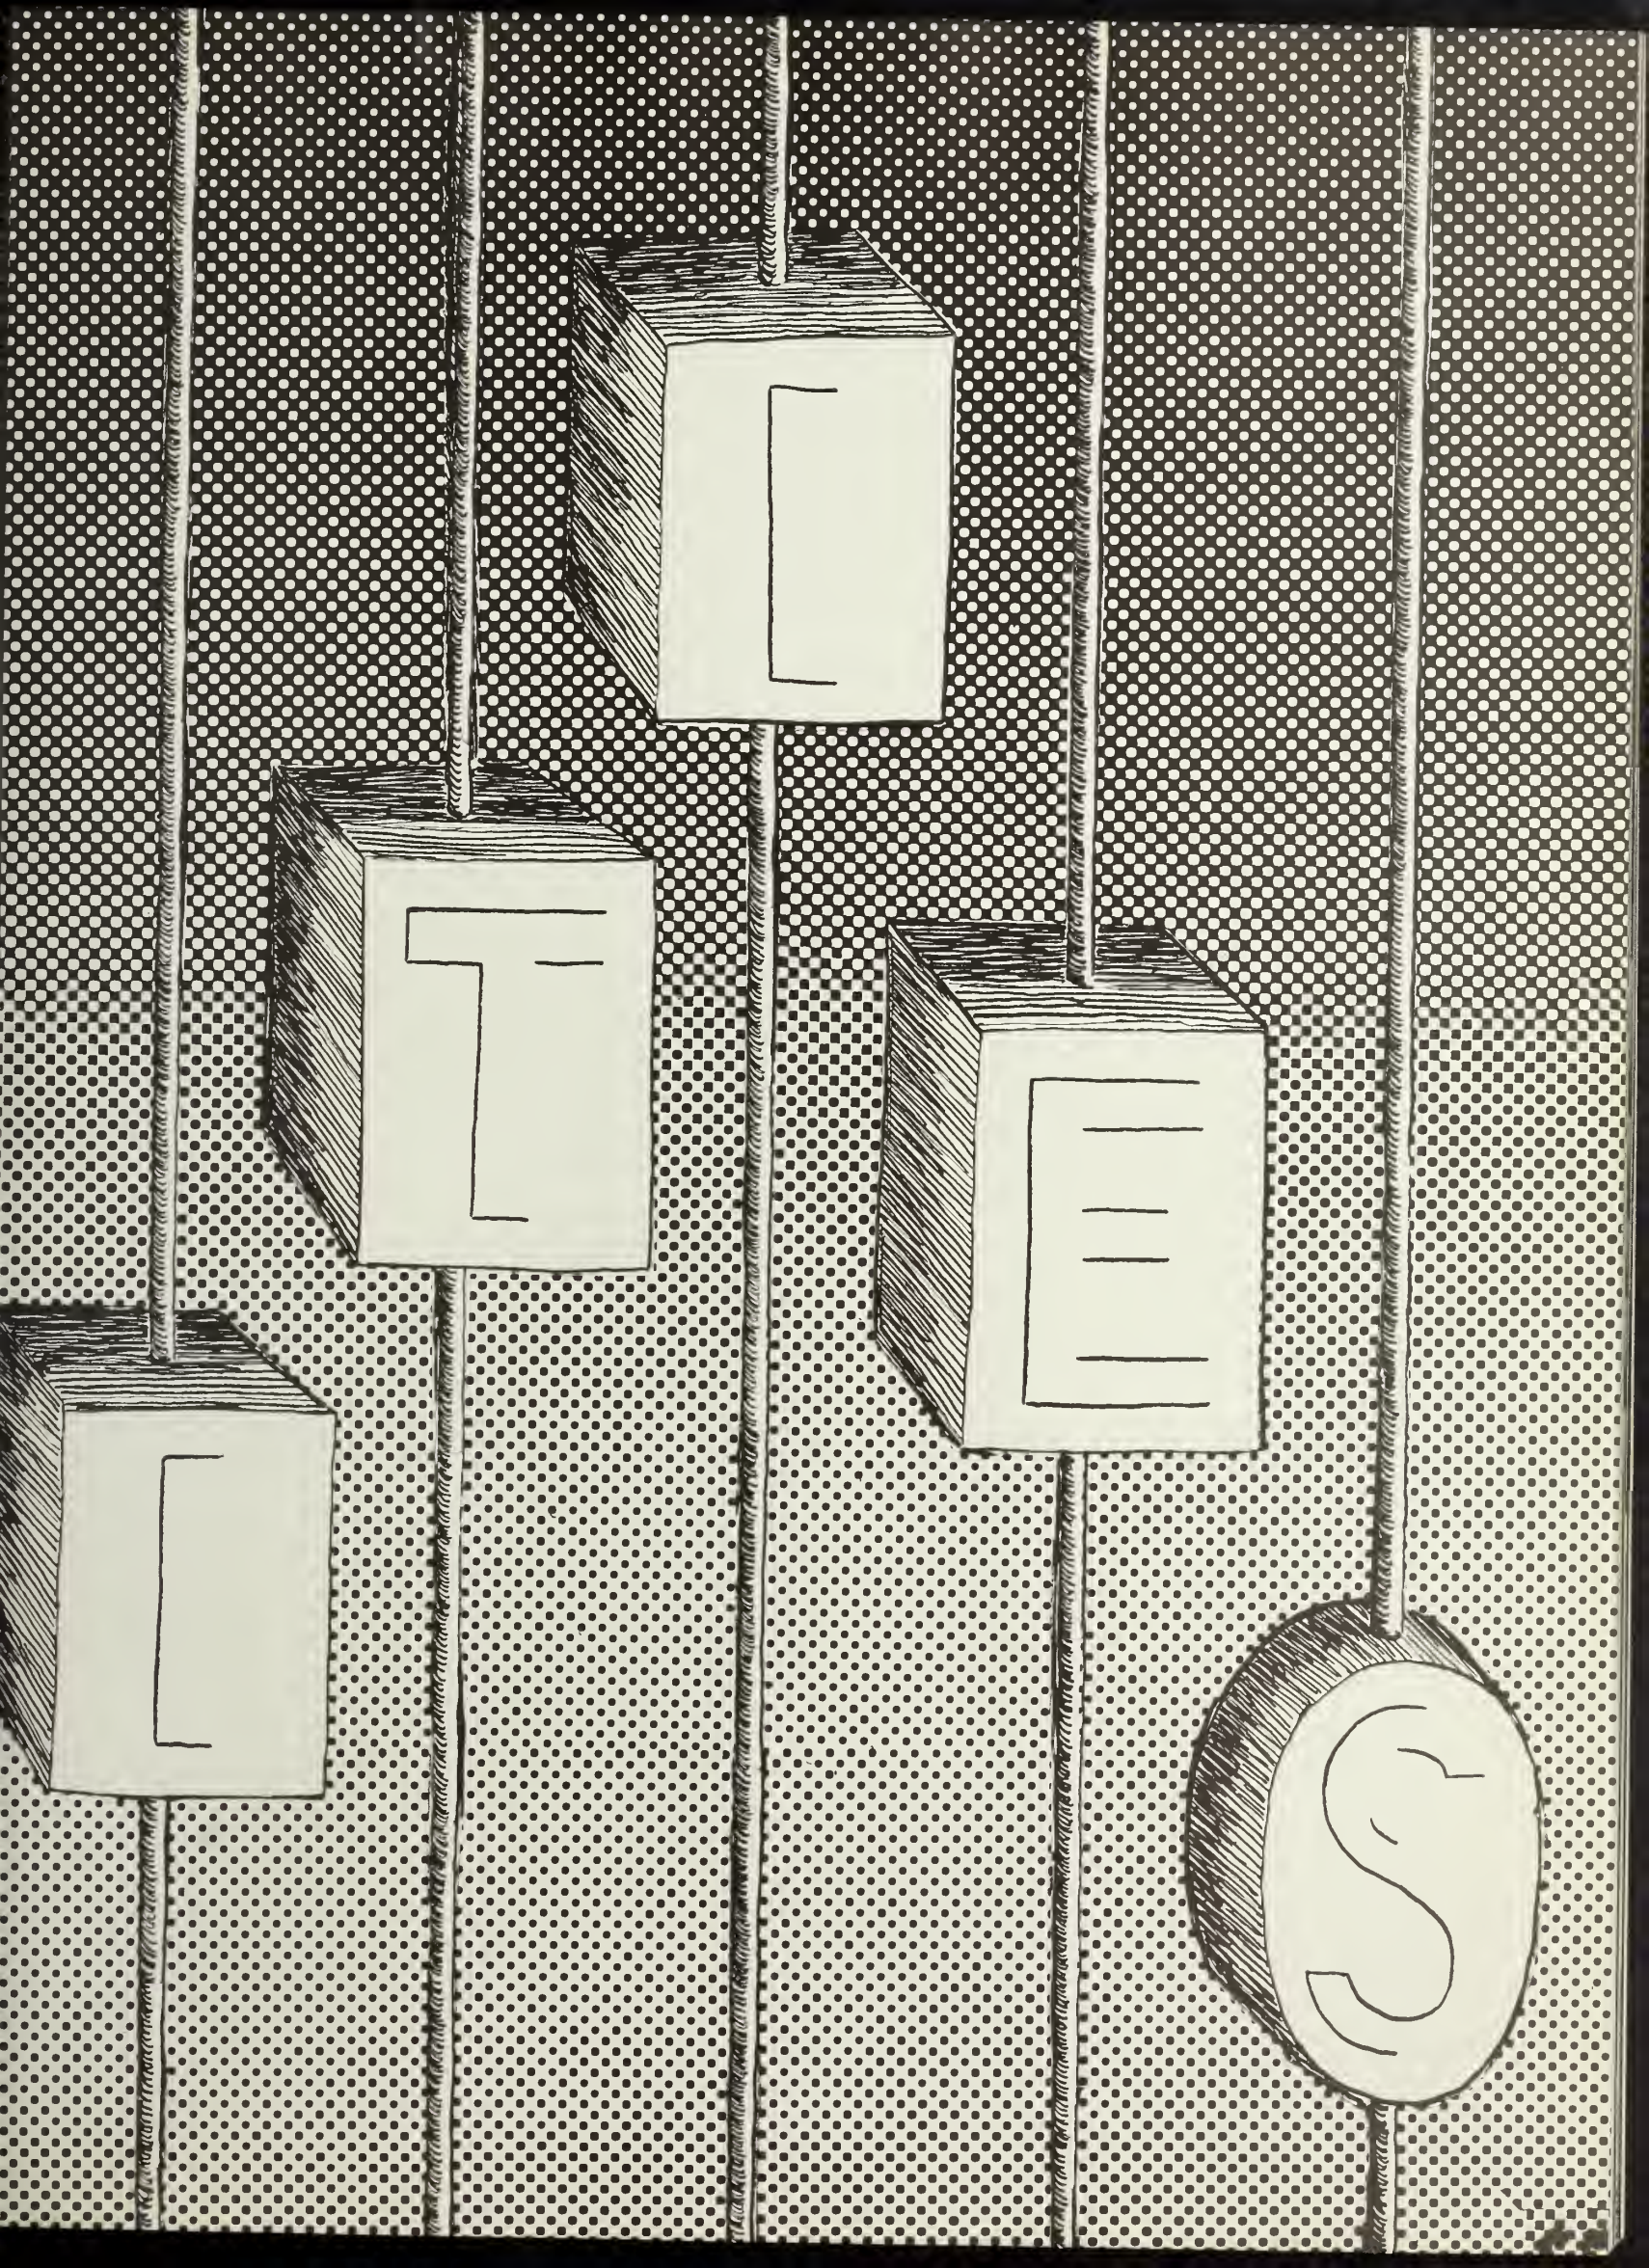

So, what's a little hair loss!

Am I getting through to you boy?

On Monday, September 13, 1966, Suffolk University took a gargantuan step forward in the progress of education when the "New Building" was officially dedicated before a large gathering on Temple Street. The ceremonies, attended by such noted dignitaries as Richard Cardinal Cushing, Speaker of the House John W. McCormack, Mayor John F. Collins, General James J. McCormack, and Governor John A. Volpe, were realized after four years of slow but progressive development.

Now we are part of a truly vibrant intellectual institution. To quote Suffolk Journal Editor Robert Reynolds, "Suffolk University is only on the brink of tomorrow. It, too, must be carried across the threshold never again allowing itself to stand in the shadows to watch the present pass it by. Anything which does not ring true to change has to be anathema to Suffolk from this time forward".

We have not been disappointed.

THE PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

As Graduates of the Class of 1967, you are the most important product of Suffolk University. You have been fortunate to have witnessed and been a part of the great transformation of the physical facilities of the University and to have become educationally enriched by the principal and sustaining recourse of Suffolk University, its faculty.

The goal of your University today, as always, is to train, inspire, and give to the world men and women of understanding; men and women with a thirst for truth and a passion for excellence, imbued with a knowledge of and the ability for the qualities of intellectual and moral leadership needed for the times which each generation must serve.

We, at Suffolk, feel that you are equipped to enter and take your rightful place in the society of educated men and women. However, you should not regard your education as complete. Education of the mind and spirit of man is a life-long pursuit and a neverending process. Therefore, you must constantly keep refreshing your acquired knowledge in the fields in which you earn your living, particularly as it will embrace new concepts, new attitudes and new techniques.

In all that you undertake, never be satisfied with mediocrity in purpose or achievement. Always have a regard for excellence, a sense of dedication and a commitment to perfection. As alumni, be active and enthusiastic in support of all of the worthwhile programs offered by your University.

I commend and congratulate you; wish you every joy and happiness, and sincerely hope you attain great success in the future.

We awake
to the amplified whisper of falling sand.

Soon the sonorous clock strikes
out
through the door,
over muted earth
to a stentorian stage.

Then smothering evening
spares
the concording letters, notes and numbers that lead us
leeward, dream-filled.

Tom Flanagan

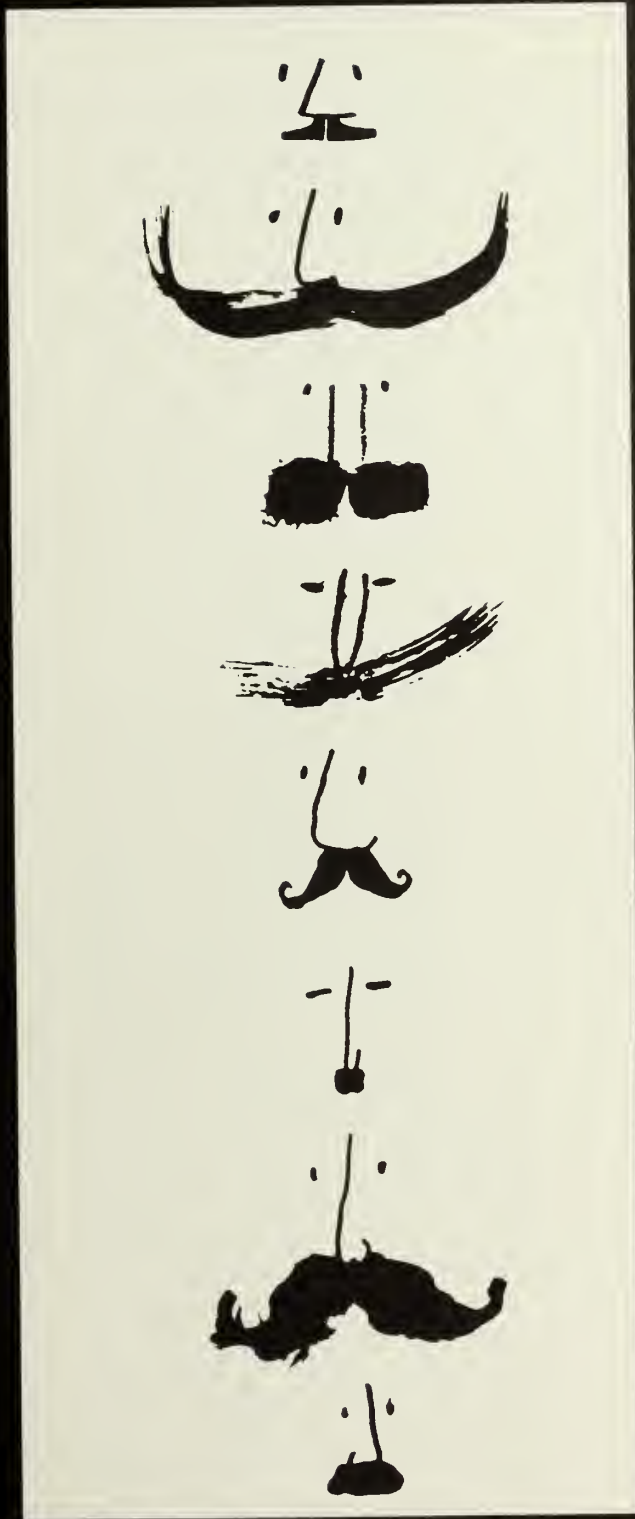

It was hard, hard work, and it did take longer than expected, but we finally came through and on top. I would like to especially thank those individuals who cared enough to put that little extra to make this yearbook a living memory of the Class of 1967.

I extend my thanks to Mr. Virgil Spencer for being my guide and informer at the American Yearbook plant in Maryland, and to Mark for his layout schemes without which I would have had a lopsided yearbook. Thank you Mary Hefron and Mary Hall for your time and concern. And to you Dick Weir, American Yearbook representative, for being patient, courteous and always there if I needed you. I am sure you have never seen a yearbook put together like this one! To my artists, Carolyn Atwood and Dick Rubin, I appreciate the extra effort and earnestness you poured into your projects. To Maureen Parsons and Mark Craven for being there when I really needed someone. You, too, Bob Morey and Phil Bailey for those great pictures. Without your insight and imagination my theme would not have been realized.

Now for those special two whom I can never repay in words for their loyalty, perseverance and ingenuity throughout the entire life of the BEACON. With tears and smiles I sincerely thank you Michael Tysver for bailing me out when I was "up tight" for a business manager. You rolled up your sleeves without a second's hesitation and worked wonders in the limited time you were given. And to you Irene Spaneas, my little sis. You were the only one I could bully and get away with it. Thank you for your painstaking effort and saint-like patience in trying to make the drawings exactly as I wanted them. In the wee, wee hours your light was still burning to complete that wondrous psychedelic ram and divider page.

Finally, I want to express my deep gratitude to Suffolk University for affording me the opportunity to express myself and my university in a living picture book of memories. Because of this responsibility I have learned much about my generation and my small world. I read into another chapter in the infinite book of human beings and human relationships. I learned with frowns and smiles, with pain and joy. And through it all I have come to look for and respect one quality in people, one quality that was not always expressed or was not always sincere and genuine. That quality is "individuality," to any degree, be it acceptable or not today, for tomorrow most likely it will be. Each of us has this jeweled quality, but how often is it suppressed or adulterated. Imagine how many more people might become outstanding except for the fear of being different. I do not mean individuality without purpose, direction, responsibility and honesty. Cast an embracing glance over man's history and seek out those who have been truly great, within and without, publicly and privately, and you will behold true individuals. And some of them did not need to leave the group to express themselves. One can be an individual and still be a part of the group . . .

Karen Spaneas
