Students drive drunk

by Greg Beeman

About 80 percent of the students who took a breathalyzer test at a recent Suffolk party had blood alcohol levels exceeding the legal limit, according to Program Board and Council (PBC) Social Committee Chairperson John McDermott.

Anyone with a blood alcohol level of .10 or above is considered legally intoxicated. "No one who failed the test at Sunday's party at Aquarius II Quins was prohibited to drive," but McDermott said he hoped the test would prompt students to stop drinking after the coming legally allowed.

According to the results of an informal poll, however, more than half of those questioned said they continued to drink even though they were legally drunk. Also, more than half said they were planning to drive after the party. "I said the test but I was not drunk," said one student.

McDermott said about 150 people, about 1,000 were in attendance back the test. It took about three minutes to complete the test. It took a while for it to catch on. It was about 11:30 p.m. before it started to pick up, he said. McDermott said some students were reluctant to participate because they thought the police were involved but the police had nothing to do with it.

The tests were conducted by the law enforcement Maintenance Company, in conjunction with the Massachusetts Criminal Justice Department at a cost of $1.00 per test. The tests were paid for by the PBC.

McDermott said he was disappointed that the event was not covered by the media, despite the fact that press releases were sent out to newspapers and television stations. "We were doing a good thing to help a serious problem and I thought more people would be interested," said McDermott.

McDermott said the PBC plans to have the breathalyzer available at another Suffolk party. "Next time I hope we can accommodate more people," he said. "We want people to realize how little it takes to break the legal limit."

Lack of security?

extension. Farten conceded that it was possible that the place was busy and agrees that there are not enough emergency lines. "If you're called in and tied up the emergency line, he said, and somebody else is calling right after you, they're going to have to wait." He said that this happens with other police departments, even the city police department. "You call and you wait. You're put on hold. It could be a life and death situation but you're still put on hold. He also explained that he has taken steps to acquire an additional emergency line. Police officers Bill Slavin and John Luttrell recently completed training at the Campus Police Training Academy. Slavin finished first in the class of 40 officers. Farten also said that one of the officers of the security force has been promoted to sergeant. He is Pasquale Piscatelli, who joined the force in August and has been a member of the Reserve Auxiliary police for 12 years.

Dorothy West to speak at Suffolk

In commemoration of Black History Month, Dorothy West, a novelist, short story writer, and editor, will speak on February 25, 1982 on "My Life and Work."

The lecture sponsored by Suffolk University, the Museum of Afro-American History, and the National Park Service, under auspices of the Carter Center, at Afro-American Literature will be in Fenton 603 at 1:00 p.m.

Born in Boston in 1910, West later graduated from Columbia University School of Journalism in the 1930s she lived in New York where she was part of the Harlem Renaissance, a constellation of black writers and artists among them Langston Hughes, Aram Buntenips, Claude McKay and Countee Cullen.

West also founded the quarterly "Challenge and New Challenge" and is also the author of several short stories and a novel, "The Living is Easy."

The lecture is free and open to the public. A reception for Miss West with refreshments will be held following the lecture.

EDITORIALS

More security needed

The recent petition circulating throughout the campus charging that there is a need for more security on campus should be addressed by President Penman and the administrators.

In the past few months there has been a lapse in the security at Suffolk with the relocation of the police desk to the Ashburton building. Recently, there have been charges made that the response time for emergencies has been too slow. We feel that the case is a valid one and should not be dismissed lightly.

We also hope that the addition of an eleven police officer and the relocation of the security desks to the Ashburton building will improve things. Police Chief Edward Farten has told the Journal that there is a need for another emergency line for the school. He also said he has made the initial steps to acquire such a phone. We hope the administration will recognize the importance of this request.

Time will tell if street patrolling is more effective than having an officer stationed in the lobby of the Donahue building. But we would like to be assured that there is adequate coverage of all of the entrances, exits, alleys and hallways of the Suffolk campus, and we feel the officer in the Donahue is necessary and should be retained.

Drunk driving is no joke

We applaud the PBC for taking some action to make students more aware of the problem. As PBC Social Committee Chairperson John McDermott said, "We want to make people realize how little it takes to break the legal limit. But it is up to the individual to realize the danger he is putting himself, his passengers, and other drivers in when he gets behind the wheel of a car drunk."

This is a problem students should not take lightly. Unfortunately, too many realize the severity of it only after a tragedy. As one student who passed the breathalyzer test said, "You really don't have to be drunk to have a good time."

It is not encouraging that about 80 percent of the students who took a breathalyzer test at a recent Suffolk party were found to be legally intoxicated, according to the Program Board and Council (PBC).

What is even more upsetting is that more than half of the students questioned in an informal poll said despite the fact they were intoxicated they were going to continue to drink and were planning to drive afterward.

Everyone likes to have a good time, but drunk drivers kill thousands of people each year and their good time suddenly turns into a horrifying nightmare.

THIS WEEK I have spent the afternoon in the art studio at the Suffolk Junior High School. I am looking at the work of a young man named Mark.

Mark is a senior at the school. He is a very talented young man. He has a very unique style of painting.

Mark's work is very different from the work of most other students. He uses a lot of geometric shapes and colors.

"Do it for the money"

by Cheryl Keene

Another year. Another opportunity. I don't want to get your hopes up but just maybe a lot of things could be different this time around.

Just maybe if you received the professors you wanted at the time you requested, your classes may not be so dreadful to go to. Just maybe you would have a lot of friends.

Just maybe the new faces in class at the beginning of the semester may turn out to be good friends by midterms which really aren't that far off but if they don't who said you wanted more friends anyway?

Just maybe the new professors that no one knows about will be excellent lecturers and lead interesting classes. If not, at least you had a better chance than anyone else.

Just maybe the new library will prompt you to study, and as a result you will obtain better grades. However, the cafe seems to have more students in it when it's open than the library does these days.

Women's basketball teams two—

They drop Regis 61-46, and Endicott 68-40

by Peggy Riley

The Suffolk women's basketball team had three very close games last week. They lost to Regis 61-46 and to Endicott 68-40. The team was very close in both games, but they were out of sync in the second half of both games. In the game with Regis, Suffolk was down 10-0 at the end of the first half. They came back in the second half, but they were still down 10-0 at the end of the game. In the game with Endicott, Suffolk was down 10-0 at the end of the first half. They came back in the second half, but they were still down 10-0 at the end of the game.

Sports highlight

Dedicated to basketball

by Marjorie Maids

Captain Elaine Buckley is most proud of her achievements but is quick to give her team the credit. She describes the spirit of the Women's Basketball team as very good. Last year was the first winning season. This year we have lots of fans who are enthusiastic.

The team has grown in the last few years. From six to 11 players, they are now a team. They are dedicated to basketball. They are dedicated to basketball. They are dedicated to basketball.

Over the six years that she has played, Elaine Buckley has more control than she did when she first started. She feels that her understanding of what is going on in the game has improved.

Buckley found that playing basketball for a season without a team was a lot like playing basketball for a season without a team. She found that playing basketball for a season without a team was a lot like playing basketball for a season without a team.

Press conference called

New allegations in Mulvey case

by Nancy Rezendes

In an attempt to lay out the facts of the Mulvey case, the Suffolk Journal has called a press conference to discuss the allegations against Mulvey. According to Biology Department Chairman Arthur West, a practicing attorney, Mulvey of the faculty resigned February 10 after missing numerous classes often without notifying the Biology Department.

The press conference was scheduled for Thursday, Feb. 25 after this week's Journal had gone to press. The Journal first reported the story Feb. 5.

Since then the Journal has learned that Mulvey met with Dean of the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences Michael Ronayne and Dr. West earlier in the academic year to discuss the possibility of Mulvey becoming a part-time professor.

An informed source said the stumbling block in their discussions was that Dr. Mulvey's son, Philip F. Mulvey III, would not get 100 percent free tuition at Suffolk Law School.

Confined at his Fountain office, Mulvey said he would make no comment until the press conference.

Ronayne said Mulvey's work situation was discussed at the start of this academic year and, over the last couple of visits, he understood his outside work would not interfere.

According to Ronayne, Mulvey recently met with Vice President and Treasurer Francis Flannery and personnel officials to work out retirement benefits. Ronayne said Mulvey loses all his current benefits as of the time he resigned, including the tuition waiver for his son.

The source also informed the Journal that Mulvey missed classes while involved in a Suffolk Superior Court case. During that time, Mulvey occasionally had guest speakers fill in for him, according to the source.

The Journal has learned Mulvey also missed several classes in November 1980 when involved in a suit in Suffolk Superior Court. Shortly before his resignation, Mulvey was involved in another case in Florida.

Farewell but not goodbye

by Larry Buckley

There comes a time in every man's life when he must say back and take an evaluation of his accomplishments, ethics and personal goals. Oten times, this is a very disconcerting experience. I am writing this article for a couple of reasons. Firstly, to say farewell but not goodbye to some people who have affected my life. And secondly, to try and show others whomay be going through a similar period of questioning they are not alone.

I began my dubious career at Suffolk in the fall of 1980. An impressionable freshman at all of 18 years old, the proverbial college life was at least as much as they had told me it would be. My mind expanded in a way I never thought would be possible. The daily commute into the city was a new and exciting experience—as was the Red Hat. I began writing for the Journal, covering the weekly student government meetings every Tuesday. I became involved in Suffolk's Springfest talent show where I made lasting friendships and invaluable connections. I was contented with my life—for the most part.

I moved out of my parent's house in the summer of 1981, to live in the big bad city. I rented a mega expensive roach infested studio (with a working fireplace) in Kenmore Square. This turned out to be such a personal and financial disaster that after a few months, I moved back to the family's suburban utopia where I could spend my money on the more frivolous pursuits of drinking and dining out. This turned out to be a good move in several ways. It was especially the changed attitude of my parents that seemed to make this venture worthwhile. I was at last being treated as the adult I was—or thought I was. This year things seemed different.

I started off the fall semester in my usual positive light. With the annual savings of I know this is going to be the semester I buckle down and raise my grades. Other interests were popping up. I was made lecturer editor of the Journal.

And yet, something has changed. No longer were all of my classes as stimulating as I remember my freshman classes to be. I began to slack off in doing homework assignments. I no longer looked forward to the daily commute as a daily adventure, but rather as a daily grind—a boring routine. Toward the end of the semester, I was skipping two out of my four classes regularly and another not so often. The Red Hat and John's ceased to be something events.

Five police officers suspended

by Jolinda Mattison

Five police officers on the Suffolk University police force were recently upon suspensions for holding a party for a retiring police sergeant after hours on school property.

The Journal has learned that the five officers involved were: Thomas Lemmus, Kevin O'Connor, David Maloney, Lauren Kane, and William Mulgrew.

One of the officers, who wished to remain anonymous, confirmed that a party took place on January 16, 1982. The officer said that the party did not start until after midnight when all the officers involved were off duty and lasted until 2:30 a.m. The party was held in the cafeteria.

Although Farren would not confirm or deny whether there was alcohol, one of the officers said that there was beer at the party.

The party was for former Sgt. Michael Benson, who recently left to join the Boston College police force. According to Police Chief Edward Farren, the officers were given three day suspensions for being in violation of department and university regulations.

Farren said he and Sergeant Harold Grover filled in for the suspended officers. The suspensions he said were spread over a two week period.

However, one of the officers said that he was given a four day suspension. Farren refused to comment about the incident and would not tell the Journal any specifics about the party or the suspensions.

The suspensions were spread out over a two week period. He said that there was always coverage during this period. Farren said that the sergeants worked extra to cover the suspended officers. He added that he himself had put in extra hours.

When inquired of this investigation, Farren said, "I think it's an internal affair and not a matter for public record."

When asked if he feels that the suspensions affected the morale of the other police officers, Farren answered, "I think they created it."
