 The Shirt and in private "What's the matter? Don't you like it?" I laughed at him. "I love New York," he shot back. "It's the Yankees I hate."
 We went to a party that night, and though he asked me more too kindly to get rid of The Shirt, I refused. My pin stripes were now becoming a symbol of defiance, hubness, courage, and stupidity.
 Did you ever walk into a room full of strangers and get a distinct impression they could care less if you lived or died? I got a slightly warmer feeling than that. The glow of therapy-halls was giving me a buzz.
 Did I care, me, who scoffs at classes and laughs in the face of failing finals, did I care? Yes.
 But not enough give up The Shirt. I was going to circle that proud NY emblem in red and put a red slash across it, a k a no smoking. The more I thought about it, the less the idea appealed to me.
 So I think I'll wear The Shirt just the way it is. After it's just a shirt, right? Just like the Fred Sox will win the pennant!

Activities feel pinch of budget

By Edm. Hayes

Two clubs will lose funding and the rest will have to cut plans for the coming year under the strict budget approved by the Student Government Association (SGA). The budget freezes expenditures for student activities at the 1979-80 level of $70,000.

All clubs and organizations, except the Freshman Sophomore Committee, received modest increases over their budgets from last year, but more than $10,000 was slashed from their requests by the SGA Finance Committee.

The Finance Committee cut over $11,000 from the Program Board budget request of $11,200,000 from the Finance Board. The Finance Board requested $11,200,000 and the President's Council requested $12,000.

The Italian American and the International Students clubs will be unfunded next year as a result of the budgetary action, according to President of the President's Council Jim Carner.

There is not enough money in the President's Council budget to continue funding these groups since the budget was not amended, said Jim Carner, who will be approved for additional funding in January, because they will not be able to file a report for the semester.

The other clubs and organizations will have a full schedule of activities despite the cuts, according to student representatives, but some events may be cancelled and other postponed.

The SGA was unable to meet the increased budget requests from the clubs and organizations because neither the number of students nor the student activity fee has increased since last year.

The Finance Committee reached the budget appropriations after examining the clubs and organizations operating TIGHTENING THE BELT Council President Don Carner speak to its members.

The SGA discussed the possibility of eliminating the appropriation for course evaluations this year, which would have freed $3000 for use by the clubs and organizations. The proposal was defeated, but there is the possibility of its being revived at future SGA meetings remaining.

If the results of a poll about course evaluation, which will be released next week according to Philip Sutherland, prove to be "overwhelmingly negative" and the student fee source evaluations is unnecessary, the SGA may consider transferring the $3000 to clubs and organizations.

An effort to divert a $300 appropriation for the Committee Against Political Injustice (CAPI) from the President's Council budget also proved unsuccessful. Such an action by SGA, warned Director of Student Activities Duane Anderson, "would be totally meaningless, except as a token" because the SGA has no control over how the budgets are spent, although it could deprive the President's Council of the $320 as a gesture. The only way the SGA could deprive CAPI of its appropriation, he said, was by voting "to no longer consider" CAPI. "As a student see PROGRAM page 2"

Future Rats in question New place, plans needed

By Nina Garcia

The fate of Suffolk Rathskellers hangs in the air until formal proposals are drawn up and approved by President Daniel Polman. Suffolk has lost Riley's, Irv and Pab a site for the Rathskeller because club management said the pub was having clientele students stayed late into the night and the maintenance liked and regular customers felt intruded up.

Rathskeller Committee (R C) Chairman Thomas Lenox said the Riley's management did not have any problems with Suffolk because the students' behavior wasn't well. We did not get the place any trouble and we always cleaned up afterwards. Other than the fact that we stayed later than they liked, we were no problem.

Lenox is putting a comprehensive proposal together to get Rathskellers back on campus. There will be tighter security and new rules on alcohol to keep order. At the Globe Santa Rathskeller, December 1979, four people were sent to the hospital and $1000 in damages to the Cafeteria and Lounge. Fighting Small groups of fighting occurred throughout the Rathskeller and they were quelled until 5 pm when another fight started, involving 30 people. Ninety seven were not Suffolk students.

The details of the fight are not clear. Some said it started as a joke that went awry and others said people from different areas of Boston caused real factions to fight. The violence started in the cafeteria on its lounge before any final arrangements can be made. I hope the responsibility can be on the Rathskeller committee for making sure nothing like last year will happen again. I'm very sure. H2415K11144 page 2

Six women leading the way

By Gerry Doherty

The time has come when the male chauvinists at Suffolk will learn quickly how to swallow their pride, and there are six seemingly determined women who will show them how. In the past, there were some leadership positions filled by the female gender, but never in the University's history has it been so many at one time. Times have surely changed, allowing women to prove that their capabilities are equal to that of the male, and evidence is being provided to be no exception.

Amy Scarborough (journalism '81) was the yearbook's Patron, Editor in 1979-80, and will head the yearbook staff as Editor in 1980-81. According to Scarborough, her reason for taking the position was to prove that her graduating year would not pass without one of the best yearbooks this far. It never occurred to Scarborough that there was any form of misogyny in the change of leadership positions. It just so happened that most student leaders this year happen to be women.

Scarborough said University future changes. Scarborough said that Nina Garcia, former yearbook editor has been made Assistant Editor and Scarborough was the major changes. Leaders this year happen to be women.

Sports: why based on need?

Why Suffolk, the sports annual, features National Collegiate Athletic Association basketball as being awarded a trophy of honor?

According to Athletic Department Director James Nelson, this year's sports book is very promising. Nelson also said that it is rewarding of the leadership and staff who have had an effect on whether potential athletes choose to attend Suffolk. Nelson pointed out that the most dominating through-line of athletic scholarship and training data in athletics handbooks used here meant that students who qualified at Suffolk must first qualify at other colleges, universities, and that some prospective students would opt for a school with more athletic facilities.

Nelson said that the alternatives to featuring the present scholarship information were at a minimum to include the National Collegiate Athletic Association's list of schools, which he is withdrawing from the NCAA, which stated Nelson is the most prestigious association in college sports, and also include all the playoffs.

Nelson, however, had stated that if national sports information is not available, the college sports programs at Suffolk will be more active. Nelson stated that Suffolk means a more active involvement of safety, discipline, and more active effect on the local quality athletes.

Interested sports players and Sophomore Class Vice President William

Havens says that he thinks that the need has to be a fair game and an exceptional player is not a rising finding because of the family income. He thinks that all over the entire team's moral. Havens also said that in the particular situation he thinks the exceptional player would be more able to find another school in which the player would receive funding according to his abilities to perform.

Mr. A.A. Assistant Commissioner for the New England Region Class I (Hampden) said that the Division Sports would be saving money on the expense.

Special Needs spotlighted in masters program

by Donna Lombardi

A new program that trains teachers to be consultants to other teachers with special needs children in their class has been initiated by the masters of education program.

The program called The course consulting teacher began this fall and according to Assistant Professor of Education Dr. Joann Carr it is now required by State and Federal guidelines. Carr explained that according to Massachusetts this chapter 76 and Federal laws, all children has the right to a free education in the most appropriate and non-segregative setting.

As a result, many children with special needs have been mainstreamed into public classrooms and teachers need consultants who understand these folks the needs of these children.

In this book teachers have had contact with people who have handicapped conditions. Carr explained that since the integration of special needs children in regular classrooms, teachers have requested the support services of these individuals. They will be able to deal with the children that are still existing.

The requirements for the program at Massachusetts, teaching certificate, two years experience in teaching, 30 semester hours in education and completion of a master's program or the equivalent. Carr explained that the program is a certificate program consulting teacher.

Dr. Carr explained that at least 10 percent of a regular classroom consists of special needs children. The names that are in public schools have a right to have services training in the area of working with these children.

Part along with Dr. Michael Afook of the Education Department will be the participants in the program, which will be first in the coming.

Participants in the program will work with teachers and children with moderate and severe special needs in classroom settings. They will also be taught to identify special needs in a school system, identification of agencies, and how to identify specific steps for assisting a child.

A child with a disability who also has emotional or learning difficulties. The program will be a certificate program in education and will be held in the area of special needs.

Fenton fiasco

by Mark Mitchell

More than 1000 people were involved yesterday in the Fenton building when a boiler was fire caused leaks to surface at approximately 9:15 a.m. A plumber was called in to work with Suffolk maintenance crew in cleaning up the spillage that swept through the newsprint and trucked down Highway 1A.

I am not quite sure where exactly the leakage is, said Assistant Plant Plant Director Edward Barron. It is somewhere between the medical office and the water tower.

Old face in new job

by Donna Lombardi

After a one year absence former Education Director, Warren M. Ahern, has returned to Suffolk University as Assistant Director of Career Planning and Counseling.

One of the most important goals in the new Placement Center located at Charles River Plaza with other departments in the university building off. She would also like to coordinate activities, meetings, and other programs. She also said that the center would be involved with many clubs on campus and apply some of the services such as, interviewing and resume writing.

Guibert added that she is planning to establish an alumni-students career network that would help Suffolk students entering the job market. "I'm very eager to get the students used to this new work."

Speaking about her return to Suffolk, Guibert said that her husband has been "smashed." "I know many people here," she noted that the job change has been easier for her than normally would be because "I am familiar with the surroundings."

Guibert added that she does not have to worry about who she is going to work for. She stated that students should plan their career objectives as far as an objective as possible. "I can't emphasize enough that freshmen as well as seniors should be using this office."

She added that the center has been very successful in helping students in their career choices. It has a 71 percent placement record. Guibert suggested that students establish as many people as possible, both at the university and within their own careers. She said "The center can help a student with any questions they may have about their career."

FAMILIAR SURROUNDINGS Guibert's new home.

After Accrediting Technical Institute's coordinator of its federally funded career placement project, Guibert said she found the job "rewarding." It was an answer to return to Suffolk. "I liked working at Suffolk before. I like the students here."

Guibert, who recently made a degree in counseling from Suffolk, was working in the athletic department for five years when she left for Denver. "It was a very rewarding experience," Guibert said but she added that she wanted to return to Suffolk. "I heard about the counseling and applied. It was an ideal situation for me."

In her new role, Guibert will counsel students who have questions about job training, pay raises, interviews and other job-related issues. She said "I'm not a career counselor, I'm a career coach."

Minus not a plus

What if we published that work that minus grades will be added to the present grading system it was not met with a positive response by the Suffolk population.

The reason for this transition is so that professors can more honestly evaluate students' work. Another reason is grade inflation which stems from the number of people who make Dean's List every semester.

Minus grades presently being added to transcripts all over the state. This may be an improvement over the present grading system, but why force this system to someone who is more than halfway through their academic career?

We feel that this new grading system should be used on the freshmen class and the classes that are taken after it. It would be far less confusing and far more practical if the people who have already had their experience are judged by one criteria keep it that way.

In order for the Sophomores, juniors, and seniors to have a consistent record they should be graded in the same way they have been in the past.

When new requirements for the Dean's List were formed it was done in this manner. We feel that this policy should also continue as far as this system.

Fenton disaster or coming apart

Because of a blocked sewer the task of sewer flow last Wednesday morning, all the classes that met on that day were canceled. It's good to know that our education is built on such a strong foundation.

The air conditioning on the first floor Fenton is still operating to its maximum level. This explains why many students are sniffing, sneezing, and coughing their way through their first week of school. Thanks to Suffolk you are getting a sneak preview of the cold season. Watch out they might start charging you for it in next years tuition bill.

It seems ridiculous to continually complain about the conditions of this university. They seem to grow continually worse every semester. But, when you are uncomfortable through a greater part of your stay it makes you cranky.

Who, what, when, and where a rat

To the passer-by, the Rathskellar may not seem especially impressive. No matter how it is decorated, the Suffolk cafeteria always looks like a cafeteria. When the "Rats" were housed at Ritz's Pub they were overcrowded. It was nearly impossible to socialize.

Year after year most of the problems that arise at the speak are caused by people who do not attend Suffolk. This is why the policy of only allowing one guest per Suffolk person into the Rathskellar is an excellent solution. If this rule as well as the stamping of hands for people who are and are not of age, a stricter security policy, and a more civil behavior code set, then there is an excellent possibility that the concept of having the Rathskellar back at the cafeteria could work.

The Journal encourages the Rathskellar committee to do all that they can to get the Rathskellar back in the cafeteria, although it recognizes that the final decision of whether they can remain in the Suffolk cafeteria remains in the hands of the students.

I Care

Ready, set ... smile and say "John-Boy"

By Tom Murman
It can't be a laughing matter, but depression has become an increasing problem for many of our students. As far as I am concerned, anyone who says having their own fun takes some sort of a vacation. I don't see that depression when I'm alone and that's usually as a graduating senior. I was dejected by a photographer who advised reflecting pain and embarrassment. I know he has seen the "John-Boy" at least on times and his favorite cut was when I said "I'm not depressed, I'm just busy." I'm not depressed, I'm just busy. I'm not depressed, I'm just busy.

I turned my head without seeing my neck. I looked out my chin, lifted my chin on the right with a quarter of an inch higher than the left. I made sure they look up while the other looked down. I got my smile down, half smile, and full smile. I learned to smile while my friends in line showed obscenity and told me I had toothpaste in the corners of my mouth. I looked tired and turned back to my seat.

After being thoughtfully humiliated I ran from the room, leaving off my tie which had wadded itself around my throat like a collar. I made sure they almost as much as I had John-Boy, but that's another story. After reexamining my composition I tried to remember myself the worst was over, but I know it was just the beginning.

About a week later my friends arrived. I started all the things that I had learned. I learned the language. I finally, with trembling hands and sweaty palms, I took out the composition. My one "Please read to me because I like it." I guess he wasn't listening at all. I then went to bed. I looked like a deflated balloon. My name is John-Boy. My last name is John-Boy. My last name is John-Boy.

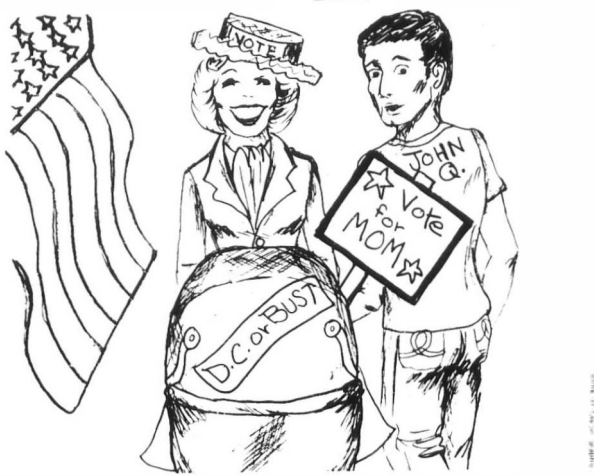

After expressing my doubts to my mother she looked at my friends. She said I was exaggerating. She said that my over-reaction was the result of a good sleep. But without serious debate we chose the one that would give us the most fun. I was not alone in my opinion.

I then showed my class to my friends. I had to wait for them to stop laughing before they said it wasn't that bad. I don't think I really did. I want to be understood and I want the world to be humiliated to be preserved forever as an object of ridicule.

Under threat of death from my mother, I decided I had to put a picture in the yearbook and that's what I did. I was smiling and with the use of my arms I was going to use any of the pictures I had. No, I was not a photograph of another student. I was John-Boy.

I suppose the next step is to find out if it was a joke and with the "John-Boy" who knows. I may be a bit of a joke.

Ballot Box: Ms. Mr.

By Anne R. Taylor
John and John-Boy didn't know the common. As they walked through the crowd, they saw a sign that said "I VOTED". John-Boy was holding a sign that said "JOHN BOY FOR VOTE MOM".

John should not feel alone. However, as this year is being related across the country, as many and more women are running for public office. In the nation only 10 percent of the women are running for public office. In the nation only 10 percent of the women are running for public office.

The Massachusetts State will be of singular importance to contemporary as three women are running against incumbent male senators. Should all three women win these offices, Massachusetts will have the highest percentage of women in state in the nation. The women are Regina Vito of Manchester, Wendy A. of Cambridge and Patricia McQuinn of Lowell.

A profile on the political arena. Mary McGinn of the Boston League of Women Voters was contacted. McGinn offers Manager and coordinator for the Boston Chapter and Suffolk County. She says she has been a voter for 21 years running on the Democratic ballot and 12 years on the Republican ballot. She further pointed out that there are many more Democratic running for office than Republicans as a whole, so the proportion of women running is still balanced out even.

When asked if more women are appearing to vote since the advent of the FECA, McGinn pointed out that there has been no survey since the state on the voting habits of women. On the national level a simple survey has been done by the Bureau of Census during the voting habits of men and women. An analysis of the survey shows that more women are voting who are more involved than the men. She says that more women are voting who are more involved than the men. She says that more women are voting who are more involved than the men.

1972 presidential election, 82 percent of women voted. McGinn says that more women are running for public office. In the nation only 10 percent of the women are running for public office.

McGinn in league of her own

By Anne R. Taylor
In this political year a chance to involve an alumna of Suffolk is currently working for the League of Women Voters as a lobbyist for Massachusetts.

Mary McGinn is employed by the Boston League of Women Voters as the Office Manager and Public Relations Coordinator. This is her first job position in this field. She has a B.S. in Education from Suffolk College. She has been a voter for 21 years running on the Democratic ballot and 12 years on the Republican ballot. She further pointed out that there are many more Democratic running for office than Republicans as a whole, so the proportion of women running is still balanced out even.

When asked how best Suffolk prepared for McGinn said, "Suffolk gave me the tools to write, but the student body gave me the necessary exposure and confidence to be a lobbyist. It was not my job to write a copy, but to take a position on election issues. I have a good feeling about my experience," said McGinn.

The League of Women Voters, an outgrowth of the woman's suffrage movement, has been in existence for 60 years. Although the League will not endorse any specific candidate, they will take a position on election issues. Trained volunteers are available at a voter information hotline and stand ready to answer all voter questions. As much as McGinn enjoys working for the League, she has a strong hope for the future. Just that, she would not say, except that she might be a lobbyist for the League.

significant as the organization had asked United States Congresswoman Studds about the election. McGinn says that more women are running for public office. In the nation only 10 percent of the women are running for public office.

McGinn had been a member of the League of Women Voters since 1960 and according to her it was extremely enjoyable and worthwhile. "One of the things I enjoy most about the League is the opportunity to be involved in a community project. I have been a member of the League since 1960 and according to her it was extremely enjoyable and worthwhile.

A look at the grading systems used at local universities

By Patricia Kelley and Mark Michalek
A survey of local universities shows that Suffolk might just be following suit in its decision to use minus grading in its grading system. Five of the universities polled, Boston College, Boston University, University of Massachusetts at Boston and Emerson College, already incorporate the minus grading system. Northeastern is using both pluses and minuses in its grading system this semester. The University of Massachusetts at Lowell is using the seven colleges polled. Boston University, Emerson College and Boston College do not include the use of minus grading. Boston University's Managing Editor of The Mass Briefing, John Abuzzese, commented on the plus and minus system had an "average grade point average" when Boston began using the system in 1977 using minuses. "I guess it was the campus," said the University.

The following is the former grading system which applied to students during 1976-1977 (upper division)

Letter Grade	Home Point Equivalent
A	4.0
B	3.3
C	3.0
D	2.3

The following is the former grading system which applied to students during 1976-1977 (lower division)

A	4.0
B	3.3
C	3.0

Letter grades not related to their value in this case. The student will receive more for the same letter grade. The letter grades will be averaged into their cumulative grade point average. However, according to McGinn, "As an overall engineering student, I wouldn't allow to choose the method of the letter grades."

Emerson College's grading system prior to the use of both pluses and minuses. After 1964 the grade of an "A" was omitted from the system. In the system the number of A's ranged from 100 through 1000 as represented by an "A" when the numerical grades of 97 through 100 and 60.

Another example of this grading system's longevity is Harvard University, which has used the plus-minus system since the beginning of the century. However, Harvard adopted the pass/fail option in the early 1940's. Boston College uses a point system as opposed to a letter grade system that incorporated the designation of plus and minus grades.

At Boston State College, letter grades are not used. According to the Associate Registrar, James Currier, "Boston State is still a numerical scale with a '0' being the highest grade, '10' being the lowest grade and '100' being the lowest passing grade. Grades increase by increments of five." This system has been in use for 12 years. According to Currier, "every thing has worked out fine."

With a tight race between candidates it seems as possible and we would appreciate if the voters would try to get their portraits taken when the photographer returns on the work of "John-Boy" warburgh said.

Program Board debate continues

Doreen Donovan, a member of the Program Board.

The Program Board debate continues as the board meets to discuss the future of the SGA. The board is currently divided into two camps: one favoring a more active role for the SGA and another favoring a more passive role. The debate is expected to continue through the next few weeks.

SGA approves Rathskellar proposal

The Student Government Association (SGA) has approved a proposal to hold a Rathskellar, a traditional student gathering. The proposal was presented to the SGA by the Student Activities Committee and was approved by a majority vote.

The Rathskellar is a traditional student gathering that has been held for many years. It is a time for students to relax and enjoy each other's company. The SGA is excited to bring this tradition back to campus.

GMAT exams scheduled

The Graduate Management Admission Test (GMAT) exams are scheduled for the fall semester. The exams are a requirement for students applying to graduate programs in business administration. The exams will be held at the university's testing center.

Students who are interested in applying to graduate programs should prepare for the GMAT exams. The exams are a challenging test of a student's verbal and quantitative abilities. Students should start preparing now to ensure they are ready for the exams.

Marketing Club plans

The Marketing Club is planning a series of events for the fall semester. The events include a guest speaker, a panel discussion, and a networking event. The club is excited to bring these events to campus and provide students with valuable insights into the marketing industry.

The Marketing Club is a student organization that provides students with opportunities to learn about marketing and to network with professionals in the field. The club's events are designed to be informative and engaging, and are a great way for students to gain experience in the marketing industry.

Assistant Placement Director Ann Guilbert

The team has continued its winning ways in a recent competition. The team's success is a result of their hard work and dedication. The team is proud to represent the university and to have achieved such a high level of success.

The team's success is a testament to their teamwork and leadership. The team's members have worked hard to prepare for the competition and to perform at their best. The team is looking forward to continuing their winning ways in future competitions.

CURRICULUM CHAIRMAN Donna Lombardi would like to see computer added to the curriculum.

ROTC hanging from talks break

by Donna Lombardi

A serious communication breakdown between former President Thomas A. Sullivan, the Curriculum Committee, and possibly the U.S. Government, has left a proposed ROTC exchange program in an uncertain position, according to the Curriculum Committee's Assistant Historian Professor David Robbins.

Last spring, the Committee approved a program which would allow ROTC students from Northeastern University to take courses at Suffolk. It differs from a cross-enrollment program, within Suffolk, which would mean military courses would be taught here.

"We agreed to a cross-enrollment arrangement which would last two years. Then we would look at the idea of an extension program," Robbins said.

But last Friday Robbins was informed that the Federal Government had approved a student aid and not an exchange program. It was also told that the University has until October 9, 1980 to make a decision on whether it wants the program.

Robbins says that Major James Holmes, a Suffolk Law Student and ROTC instructor at Northeastern, was

by Donna Lombardi

A proposal has been made to add a computer science major to the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences curriculum.

A significant increase in student enrollment of computer science courses moved Suffolk Mathematics Professor Les Morsagnos to suggest that the university offer a major in computer science. "Computer science is a high intellectual endeavor," Morsagnos explained to members of the Curriculum Committee this week. "There are a large number of students who are very much interested in this program."

Presently, the university offers courses in computer science as part of interdisciplinary programs. There are combined major programs in Biology, Computer Science, Chemistry, Computer Science, Mathematics, Computer Science, and Physics. Computer Science.

The program now being proposed would introduce a Bachelor of Science Degree Program in Computer Science under the Mathematics Department.

The program is similar to a new one in the School of Management (SMH) which was recently approved by the Board of Trustees. Within SMH, students who study Computer Science received a B.S. Degree in Computer Systems. However, it differs from the program which would be introduced in the Mathematics Department in that it is a business-oriented program.

Although the committee members responded favorably to the proposal one faculty member pointed out that only a B.S. degree in computer science, and not a B.A. degree in the program, would be offered. This contradicts a statement in the University catalog which says that students have the option of B.S. or B.A. degrees in their major.

But Physics Department Chairman Walter Johnson, who along with several other faculty members, helped create the Computer Science proposal, said it would be difficult to design a B.A. program in Computer Science. Johnson added that the catalog statement has been inaccurate. For some time, some other majors do not offer both B.A. and B.S. programs.

He suggested that the statement should be removed from the catalog. "My opinion is that if the statement should not be there,"

"I'm definitely in favor of it," he says, Johnson later said, and added that the University definitely has a commitment to the importance of considering the University. Particularly with the recent purchase of the Prime-750 computer. "We have the capabilities of adding it to our curriculum."

Associate Historian Professor David Robbins, Chairman of the Curriculum Committee, also responded favorably to the computer science proposal. "I think it's a very solid program," he pointed out that the additional would probably increase enrollment at Suffolk. "It will probably bring in computer science majors."

Although favorably received by Curriculum Committee members, the VOTE OF APPROVAL The Curriculum Committee is interested in Computer Science.

The proposal must still be voted on by the committee and sent to the Educational Policy Committee (EPC). If approved, the program request will be presented to the main faculty and to the university trustees for final approval.

Other reasons given in support of the proposal included optimum job prospects for the future; a need for Suffolk to keep competitive in the next decade; and that Suffolk has faculty with many years of computer experience in government, industry, teaching and scientific research.

Pressed with deadline Journal faces guidelines

by Anna Heger

Guidelines for the Suffolk Journal may be drawn up and approved by the Board of Trustees by the latter to keep the newspaper alive.

A meeting called by the Publications Committee discussed who should be delegated to the Journal committee last week. The committee does not have much time to operate because of deadline.

On the Board of Trustees to review the Journal's performance in December.

College of Liberal Arts and Sciences Dean Michael Blomson and Vice President David LeFevre, Journalism Chairman Mahlon Baruch, Journalism Instructor Richard Pharis, Assistant Professor Richard Hines, Assistant Editor Michael Gosselin, and Editor Amy Gosselin were present at the meeting last Friday.

The Publications Committee advised Dr. Blomson because of the time pressure involved and because the college committee had discussed what was being done with the Journal question. Blomson outlined what the Trustees called for additional guidelines for the publication review by the student Affairs Committee. In addition, faculty involvement in the paper and opinion by the Trustees.

The meeting drew up names and departments that should be involved in the guidelines. "We have to get more students involved and there has to be a balance of students and faculty administration on this committee," said Blomson.

The members discussed in detail at the Evening Division Student Association with student activities and proposals. The Board reserved its decision with the stipulation the Journal review funding process would be approved until the Board could review the paper's performance this December.

Leon S. Edinger and Mrs. Wholes proposed additional faculty support in the form of advisors and agreed to look into the future status of the paper. The Board then set guidelines that must be set for the Journal to follow.

Baruch, Dean of Students, Dr. Bradley Sullivan, Assistant Professor, Professor Deborah LeFevre, Journalism Chairman Mahlon Baruch, Journalism Instructor Richard Pharis, Assistant Professor Richard Hines, Assistant Editor Michael Gosselin, and Editor Amy Gosselin were present at the meeting last Friday.

SAC - who, what, when?

by John Alabuso

Currently, the Student Affairs Committee (SAC) is in a state of confusion. No one knows what four trustees with whom the committee, what issues will come up, and when the first meeting will be.

A meeting called when a proposal is presented concerning the students but so far no one has been set for their first meeting.

Student Government Association (S.G.A.) President Stan Singson said that issues to be brought up this year are: space for student activities, new guidelines for the Journal, and a second open meeting proposal.

Last year SAC only had two meetings which contained a handful of proposals. They included a drinking age alcohol policy idea to the drinking age change under the Kinsley administration,

NEWS ANALYSIS

Singson remarked that they are basically the same issues as last year, and citing student activity as a problem. "If students don't come to us and say something, what can we do," he replied. Although "it's still a matter of communication."

SAC evolved from an idea in January, 1979 after a rally was held by the S.G.A. in November, 1978. A strike was then set up for Jan. 30, 1979 and Feb. 1, 1979 which united students in a cause for more input.

Then on Feb. 11, 1979 the trustees voted unanimously to create SAC.

The funding question was held in faculty who student organizations, some faculty members, and a few trustees, outlined support for the Journal in the form of
