Financial aid cuts: will they affect you?

Aid form School Year 1982-83

by Karen Y. Corbin

With cuts in financial aid, and hikes in tuition, the cost of an education at Suffolk University will not be within the means of every student who occupies a desk this semester, and intends to return in the fall. Pressure put on by the Reagan Administration and institutions of higher learning may be too much for some students to bear.

Harrington new SGA president

by Joanna Mattison

Ann Harrington, a sophomore from the South West, has been elected president of the Suffolk Student Government (SSG) for the 1982-83 year. She defeated 11 other candidates in the election held on April 12.

Harrington, who is currently a member of the Phi Kappa Phi Honor Society, was elected to the position of president of the SSG. She is the first woman to hold this position since the organization was founded in 1961.

During her campaign, Harrington focused on issues such as the need for more student input in university decisions, the importance of financial aid, and the need for better communication between students and faculty.

She was elected to a two-year term and will be working closely with the SSG executive board and the university administration.

Harrington's first act as president was to call a meeting of the SSG executive board on April 14. She also announced that she would be holding regular office hours for students to come and talk to her about their concerns.

She said that she would be working to improve the SSG's image on campus and to make it a more effective voice for the student body.

Harrington was the last candidate to be interviewed for the position. She was interviewed by Joanna Mattison, a staff writer for the Suffolk Journal.

Debaters off to nationals

by Tim Downs

The Suffolk University debate team, coached by Prof. Ed Harris, has been selected to represent the university at the National Debate Tournament in Washington, D.C. This year's tournament will be held from November 11-13 at the University of Maryland.

The Suffolk team, which is coached by Harris and assisted by Maureen Coughlin, Patty Lyons, Julie Beers, Jay Morton, Ray Pasciuto, Lisa Bander, Pam Indeck, Ellen Dowling, Lisa Wye, Bill Shanahan, Rick Sherburne, Patty Johnson, John Christopher, Steve Bragg, Dan Bartlett, Richard Aulley, Tim Downs, and Tom Coen, has a strong chance of winning the tournament.

The team has been selected based on their performance at the Suffolk University Debate Tournament, which was held on April 12. They defeated all of their opponents in the tournament.

The National Debate Tournament is one of the most prestigious events in the world of college debate. It attracts teams from all over the United States and is held annually at a different university.

The Suffolk team is excited about the opportunity to represent their university at this national level. They will be working hard to win the tournament and bring home the championship trophy.

Teacher certification now more difficult

by Carol O'Connor

With another 300 teachers being laid off this week in Boston being certified to teach may be one of the last ways anyone would think to chop away at the teacher's market. But the state is doing just that, and the economy falling apart, students have to do more and more before to secure an income. Having the option of going into more than one career is one way to accomplish this.

Now a student can be certified in one summer by taking two education courses, and student teaching part time for six weeks. After September certification will include a larger quantity of required subject matter, including 3 pre-practicum and student teaching full time for 12 weeks.

Professor C. Thomas Stelaney of the education department said the new standards are literally tripled in some areas.

Student teaching will be extended from 120 hours to 300 hours in the classroom. The 3 prepracticums will require work done in the public schools. An example of a prepracticum is Methods of Education. A minimum of three hours a week in a public school is required. Another prepracticum is Foundation of Education, where the student visits five schools and reports their findings. In addition to this outside work, the quantity of subject matter required has increased.

Future undergraduates majoring in education will not be affected by the changes because they will know what is required of them when they enroll as freshmen. Students caught in the middle who are not seniors in education majors, and want to teach, will be forced to complete a masters program which will take 45-60 hours to complete instead of the usual 36 hours.

Those who have degrees will by May have one more chance for certification in one summer.

Stelaney said, "In the past, people out in the field who decided to change to a teaching career were able to. Now they can't do this so easily. This is sad because many who would benefit by our summer program are mature. They have work and life experience, and sometimes make the best teachers. They are wonderful qualified people who know what they want. All over the nation, schools are closing their education programs said Stelaney. Fifty-four teacher training institutions are being cut back. The East has been hit with 2 1/2 declining enrollment in secondary schools, and Federal cuts in education loans. There's an overkill and in five years teachers will be needed. But he says because of the baby boom of 1978-79, an increase in the number of children in elementary schools is anticipated for 1984-85. Ten years after that, there will be a need for teachers in the secondary schools.

-IN BRIEFS-

Suffolk enters ad campaign

The Suffolk chapter of the American Advertising Federation (AAF) has been working throughout the year preparing a complete advertising campaign for Corning glass works.

The group composed of Marketing Club members directed by Nick Souris will compete against several other schools in the New England region at the annual AAF competition at Quimpcap College in Hamden, Conn. April 17.

Last year Suffolk finished second to the University of Rhode Island. This year group coordinator, Donald Fritz is confident that Suffolk has an excellent shot to pull it off. Souris noted the efforts of Steven Bragg, who worked very hard to bring things together.

Faculty advisor Joseph Vaccaro said, "I wish the best of luck to these kids. They've really worked hard."

Possible Mass. tuition hike

A coalition of key state legislators and education leaders held a joint news conference April 13 to announce support of legislation (S 1833) to create a 28 million dollar scholarship and loan fund for Massachusetts higher education students.

The Tuition Assistance Fund is to be funded by revenues generated by changes in the state's taxation of cigarettes.

If the bill passes the size of Massachusetts State Scholarships will be increased.

Currently the highest award a Suffolk student can receive is $900 per year. Under the Tuition Assistance Fund proposal, there would be awards as high as $1,250. Also under this program as many as 300 additional students would be provided with awards.

History Society and witches

by Linda Huchins

Women are more carnal than men because they were made from a bent rib.

Sixteenth century sentiments such as this led to the torture murder of women all over Europe. Carol Levin, Director of the Institute of Women's Studies at the University of Wisconsin at LaCrosse, and a former Suffolk professor, led a discussion on Witchescraft at the April 1 History Club meeting.

Levin said there were many ways to detect witches. One of the methods called "Floating a Witch" involved binding the witch's hands and feet and throwing her into water, which they considered a symbol of purity. If the water rejected her, that proved that she was a witch. If it accepted her and she sunk to the bottom, she was exonerated. Unfortunately, rescue attempts were rarely successful.

A slide presentation was shown during the discussion and refreshments were served.

Marketing club speakers

The American Marketing Association (AMA) recently held a marketing symposium featuring speakers from three different fields who spoke of the importance of marketing in their work.

Stan Porter of Previews TV, Katherine Bari of Bari Advertising, and Frank Pender of AT&T all said that successful marketing is a necessity in order for a business to prosper.

Nick Souris, president of the AMA, said he was very pleased with the high turnout. Vice President Don Leone said, "There were over 70 people that attended and enjoyed the event."

The presentation concluded with refreshments and gifts for the speakers, presented by Souris, who said, "Everyone enjoyed and I'm sure benefited from the events of the evening."

Cross-Country runners to run in Marathon

Suffolk athletes in action—

by Marjorie Maida

Rains are supposed to be detrimental on hills. But the three Suffolk runners who are running in the Boston Marathon this Sunday will show this talent, especially around Hingham.

Watch a fusion of English, Irish, Italian, and Greek. The three Suffolk runners who are running in the marathon this year: Fallon and Callahan are both of Italian descent, while Grealish is of Irish descent.

Both qualified this year by running the 1000 m. Fallon, Brian Callahan, and Rick Grealish. The qualified time to run the Boston is at 2 hours and 50 minutes. Fallon ran the 1000 m in two hours and 48 minutes, and Callahan finished in two hours and 50 minutes.

Grealish is running unofficial. He probably would have run official if he had finished the Ots. Marathon, but more than three-fourths of the way through the Ots Marathon he injured his leg.

The three have been training the last six months. According to Fallon, every Sunday they would run 20 miles along the coast, doing headbreak hill at the end.

They would do a weekly track work out of quarter and half mile pace work. Other days they would run about 10 miles. Freshman Scott Salinas and Penny Coyne also would many times accompany them on these long mile runs.

Callahan, Fallon, and Grealish would like to run the race in two hours and 40 minutes, keeping together and averaging 10 miles. Fallon and Callahan both have different philosophies about marathons. Fallon said: After I ran the Boston last year, and the Ots, I said: I'll never ever do that to myself again.

Callahan on the other hand, was shocked. After the Ots he had a hard time talking about Boston.

When asked what he would be looking for when he crossed the finish line, Callahan replied: A case of Absolut.

Varsity games rescheduled

in-pated for the 1982-83 school year. Lashus, a Dorchester resident, has been receiving the Basic Educational Opportunity Grant (BEOG) for as long as she has been a student at Suffolk. The BEOG covered most of Lashus' tuition costs and she paid the remaining amount. This summer Lashus will pay for courses out of her pocket, but for the fall she must take out a loan. Lashus says she has never borrowed for her education before and she hopes the loan will be approved so she can continue her studies.

Thomas Bagarella, a Journalism major, has a feeling he won't be getting the BEOG this year either. During his freshman year, the grant provided him with less than half of his tuition, and it has gone down every year since. Bagarella, who lives in Wakefield, says his father has recently retired and receives a pension, so he doesn't think his chances of receiving financial aid for September are good.

Elleen O'Malley, a Management

major from Dorchester, is hopeful that she'll have the money to return to Suffolk in the fall. O'Malley, who has received a Trustee Scholarship and the Agnes Driscoll Scholarship all three years, says: "My grade and financial need are probable key factors." O'Malley has a 3.5 grade point average. She has a brother who is also in college but he does not receive financial aid.

Alan Ives, a Journalism major, was notified that he will receive a Journalism Student Loan in September, but he would rather not use the money at Suffolk. Ives now receives the Pell Grant and a small scholarship from the University, but the liberal arts student intends to transfer to the University of Maryland in the fall, because the campus school will cost seven less. Ives, who is a member of the Guaranteed Student Loan is unable at any college or university. Ives doesn't know how much more he'll get, but he is thankful because: "With Reagan to get anything a good."

Suffolk takes to the stage

Springfest directors Carmen Fulchini, Barbara Boulay, and Larry Buckley gearing up for this year's show.

by Alice I. Whooley

Barbara Boulay, the Economics major who could have been a Rockette if only her legs had been longer, can tell you more about the selection of leotards in Tally's of Kenmore Square than almost anyone else. On one of her recent whirlwind excursions through the store, led by a host of employees, she opened almost every package of them to find just the right shade for a number; she was choreographing. Such is a day in the life of a Springfest director.

The Springfest director is a strange breed. They seem to thrive on lack of sleep, long rehearsals, and massive quantities of pizza. But the thread that seems to truly keep them alive is their love for the performance. If that sounds a little corny, that's show biz.

Led by Springfest faculty coordinator and the Chairman of the Springfest Committee Dr. Alberto Mendez, the show will break tradition this year and be totally dedicated to one theme: Broadway musicals. The show will also incorporate acting and the entire second act will consist of a mini-play. Although Mendez admits that performing ten production numbers consequently with the facilities Suffolk has to offer is madness, he and his crew have chosen their mission. The five directors of the show are Springfest Director Laurie Cook, Music Director David Leo, Dance Director Barbara Boulay, and Associate Directors Larry Buckley and Carmen Fulchini.

As the veteran of the Springfest directors Cook has seen the progression toward a theme show like the one being done this year. Her first year there was one production number; for last year's 75th show there were more, and this year according to Cook, "We decided to go for it." Cook said. Running the show this way is challenging. It is also giving a lot of people the chance to be in the show.

Mendez said, "As long as someone has the discipline they can now be a part of the Springfest show." According to Mendez, this year's production will consist of approximately 44 performers and 12 crew members as well as various other participants. According to him close to 80 students will be involved in the one night festivities.

The tryouts were judged this year by the directors and the participants of the auditions, Cook said. "It just made more sense running the auditions this way. In the past student leaders and other members of the Suffolk community have voted in evaluating her qualifications as director Cook said. I have a pretty good sense of how to make people look good and bringing out what talent they have and developing it. Cook also stresses that she is a motivator. Anyone who has ever watched her at a rehearsal would agree.

Cook also contrasted her role this year from her two previous ones. "This year I haven't been able to have any babies (i.e. pet act). I am equally involved in the creation of each number. She also contrasted performing in Springfest to being the director. "It's kind of pleasant to just do it. There is almost a pure pleasure in just performing. She stresses that it is essential that her entire concentration be on the number she is presently rehearsing.

As the only Theater Arts major among the directors, Cook has a vested interest in the addition of extensive acting to the Springfest extravaganza, Cook said. "It's so nice to have an opportunity to use the
