 formulate reasonable solutions."

The final answer of what to do will Perlman. "Most of us find that we make

Perlman also said it was his concern that

It is the concern, Perlman said, that Suffolk equip its graduates not just with time practical skills which will help you get your first job but also with the most general learning that will provide the light of flexibility and the capacity to learn new materials and techniques which will ser-their careers.

Perlman emphasized that the well-being of Suffolk University is a responsibility we all share. He said Suffolk University is dependent upon the scholarship and energies of its students but as much as upon the sound and prudent management by its administration, the dedication and commitment of its

Evening students and SGA fight for funds

by Gina Russell

The President of the United States Association of Evening Students, Tony Fama, urged Student Government Association (SGA) members, during their meeting this week to join forces with the Evening Division Students Association (EDSA) on April 23 to write letters to congressional protesting budget cuts in federal aid to colleges proposed by the Reagan Administration.

"Half of the evening school will be in trouble as well as 750,000 day collegians and 60 percent of the evening division students across the country, over the proposed cuts," said Fama.

Fama, a member of the Suffolk Evening Division Students Association said that he came to the SGA meeting after seeing information about their basket ball team's "check" involving committee on financial aid in a recent issue of the Journal.

Fama invited SGA members and their constituents to take 15 minutes on April 23, possibly in the cafeteria, to write handwritten letters which he says are more effective to elected officials of their individual plethras regarding how the funds will be cut.

"If an elected official gets 20 handwritten letters, he'll know that it's a hot issue and his constituents are really shaking up Fama, who added that any kind of protest helps."

In order to try to stimulate proposed cuts, that Fama explained these groups over the past five years have formed a coalition. The United States Association of Evening Students, the United States Student Association and the Association of Independent Colleges and Universities.

Students who are freshmen now will really feel the cuts, or to mention those high school students who won't be able to go to college, said Fama, who remarked that middle income people especially will be affected.

"The United States Constitution does provide for equal opportunity but doesn't require the federal government to provide financial aid to students," said Fama.

Following a lengthy discussion, the SGA members voted 11 to two in favor of allocating $400, for hotel and travel expenses for two students from the Public Administration Department so they could attend a convention on Public Administration in Detroit, Michigan on April 12-15.

The Suffolk students are the only ones to attend the convention.

Rats may return to caf this semester

by Nancy Rezendes

Final approval has been given for Rathskeller to return to Suffolk but it is uncertain if the event will be back this semester because of scheduling problems. According to Rathskeller, Clampus Thomas Lenox, "there is a problem with available time." Lenox said, after the guidelines were given final approval, Lenox's "rough time" for the committee to set up a "Rat" for April 10. When the committee decided to hold the event on April 17, Vice President and Treasurer Francis X. Flannery found no open liquor permit. According to Lenox, Flannery had "strong objections" to a Rathskeller being held on Good Friday. Flannery could not be reached for comment.

The committee could not schedule an informal Friday afternoon gathering for April 24, since it would conflict with Suffolk's Springfest program.

Lenox said he didn't want to schedule a Rathskeller for the following week since it is the last week of classes. "It would be risky," said Lenox. "The last time trouble occurred was during the week of finals."

The Rathskeller was held in the Suffolk cafeteria up until last December when a fight ensued causing former president Thomas Fulham to cancel the event for the rest of the year. Since then, the gatherings have been held at Riley's Beef and Bacon New Chardon St.

Lenox, along with the committee, has been working since August to reconstitute the the Rathskeller who took six attendees the results were "no more people" rather than to drink.

After presenting the vice's results along with the proposal to Perlman in December, Perlman requested that Lenox obtain recommendations from the Student Life Committee and Dean of Students (D).

In its survey, the committee found that Rathskeller will return to the cafeteria this semester if new Program Board and Council (PBC) plans approved last Wednesday are approved by the administration.

Although Vice President and Treasurer Francis X. Flannery would not appear at April 17 Rathskeller, Rathskeller as he felt it was not appropriate to hold the event on Good Friday, the PBC has made tentative plans to hold a Rat in the Cafeteria on May 2, Thursday of final week.

President Vincent Lonie promised the plan, which also includes holding a Rat on May 8, the last day of finals, at Riley's Beef and Pub. Lonie said he would like to be able to have a Rat in the cafeteria or this year, but since the cafeteria is not available until 2 p.m. and that day's only scheduled final is over before noon, he did not think students would "hang around for a couple of hours."

Mount Vernon fire causes minor damage

by John Altabe

A late night fire in the Mount Vernon Street building caused "less than $1000" damage, according to Vice President and Treasurer Francis X. Flannery.

Assistant Physical Plant Director Edward Farnen speculated that the fire was caused by a "carelessly disposed cigarette" and that it could have been "smoldering for a long time."

Farnen said that Patrolman Michael Benson discovered the fire at 12:05 a.m. Sunday while making the regular two hour check. Benson smelled smoke saw an orange glow under the door, and then felt the door which was hot. He then immediately called the fire department.

The fire department dispatched Engines 10, four and six including ladders 21 and 17. Also at the scene were Rescue and Trenching Divisions two and three.

Before television journalism, she started in print journalism, having worked as a reporter for the Palm Beach News Herald in Florida and The Mercury Daily Journal in Georgia. She made the transition into television at a time when women were in demand for newscasting.

Harris commented that it is a fun business. Reporting gives one the opportunity to see things happening first hand. It is a non-stop high pressured career.

When Harris was asked about the astronomical salaries the television reporters make she said, "The salaries are based on what the station thinks a reporter is worth and how good an anchor or reporter. Having been on television for year. They received funds from the State Administrative Department of Suffolk.

"We feel the up and coming Public Administration program should be continued," says Repsold. He also explained that he and Ribick had a "discussion with the program that they wanted to know if they were actively working in their field. Repsold said that the program may be terminated in four years.

If this occurred it was in Boston or New York, he said. He is coming to see and Ribick had it in Detroit.

"I feel the body (SGA) should give their money to further their cause," said Junior Class President Barry Fitzgerald, who remarked that it was an honor for these students and a worthwhile cause.

Kenneth Blush, vice chairman of the Program Board and member of Phi Kappa Phi Honor Society, also informed SGA members that the committee was thinking of financing a meeting in the Amherst building rather than in the auditorium, which contains a stage addition that violates Boston's building code.

The FAC has formed a "Senior Committee" though still in the formative stages, that will back into the auditorium problem more closely said Blush.

In substitution the SGA discussed a possible raffle of money and gifts from local stores, for the Freshman Sophomore weekend May 12 at Pleasant Hill.

He also discussed questionnaires distributed to them by Philip Sullivan and the questionnaires, which started a withdrawal of the accreditation of Suffolk University, which is deans' 10 years.

Bradley Sullivan After attending approval from both parties, Perlman then requested that the committee make further revisions in its proposal. Perlman said that he and Sullivan were "in a bit of a bind" and that he was "in a bit of a bind" and that he was "in a bit of a bind".

Sullivan said he felt the proposal was "good" and that he was "happy" with the proposal. He also said that he was "happy" with the proposal.

Also included in the revision was a statement that the deans would be set and communication would be maintained between the law school and the cafeteria committee to avoid the programming of conflicting votes. Perlman then requested that the committee review final approval of the proposal from both parties.

Sullivan said he felt the proposal was "good" and that he was "happy" with the proposal. He also said that he was "happy" with the proposal.

Perlman said that there was "nothing" about the plan he had seen for the new building. Perlman said that the services of the building would have to be considered if and when the building would be built. Perlman said that he "didn't" believe that new guidelines would be necessary when the Rats will be held in the Amherst cafeteria. These guidelines will be used to allocate the scheduling problem, Lenox said. "We're looking into all possibilities," Lenox said. The committee is considering having a rat on Thursday instead of Friday.

Asked if additional guidelines would have to be implemented for the Rats when Suffolk's cafeteria will be renovated to Amherst Plaza in September, Lenox said, "We haven't gotten into that yet." Last year, the Campus Expansion Committee worked on a proposal to bring a public bus to Amherst building.

Suffolk in Coors competition

By Joe Pat

The American Advertising Federation (AAF) college chapter at Suffolk will compete this weekend against 11 other schools in an attempt to best promote Coors beer.

The chapter which is under the guidance of Professor Joseph Vasarotto, AAF's college chapter at Suffolk, has completed a 30 page booklet and a 30 minute presentation on Coors Premium Beer which will be judged upon their competition.

The booklet consists of the following sections: Campaign Planning, Media Recommendations, Creative Recommendations and Sales Promotion and it will be presented by the team of David Lewis, Nicholas DeVine, Denise Meyer, Donald Lewis and Maurice Rosenzweig.

Lewis promises to have with the party atmosphere as the teams slogan is, "signifying the targeted male market (which is 18 to 24) is available to you in the necessary medium to advertise through to that large enough percentage of the target market could be reached."

According to Lewis, "we wanted to stress the building image of Coors Premium while still associating it with the Coors name."

Accreditation team set for 1982

Suffolk University was last accredited by N.E.A.S.C. in the Spring of 1972 and presently preparing for a post visitation in the Fall of 1982 by the New England Association of Schools and Colleges and the American Association of Colleges and Schools of Business.

The timing of the post visitation roughly coincides with the celebration of the Seventy-Fifth Anniversary of Suffolk University. The completion of a five year cycle. Facilities Development Project (an investment of $2,735,000) Campaign of Activities and the initial application of the School of Management for membership in the American Association of Colleges of Business.

It is proposed that Suffolk University adopt the option of visiting a General Evaluation With Areas of Special Emphasis. The option will enable the University to focus attention on areas and issues which have particular relevance for advancing institutional objectives and improving performance. The general evaluation aspect of the study will enable the University to conduct a broad review of the major areas normally included in a traditional comprehensive evaluation.

A post visitation would be most efficient in terms of both time and staff utilization than separate visits during either the sixth year or the seventh year. The single visit would create less disruption in the normal work routine and minimize the cost. A post visitation would save approximately Follows of Liberal Arts and Sciences, Law School and School of Management in a common session of creative methods (throughout separate studies) and visits. The point in the interest of N.E.A.S.C. and A.A.C.B. is a multidimensional approach of imagination and novelty that would generate greater mobility and vitality among participating faculties serving a unifying function within the University.

A joint study would further the interest of N.E.A.S.C. in developing new models of self studies thereby performing a service to the higher academic community.

In Brief New Irish Society officers

by Debbie Viera and John Alabasso

The Irish Cultural Society elected its officers for the coming year last Thursday. Ann Ellis was elected president. The new vice president will be sophomore Eileen O'Malley, sophomore Maurice Ryle will be the new treasurer and sophomore Ann Harrington was chosen to be secretary. Kathy O'Brien, a junior, will be the Society's delegate to the Council of Presidents.

A four week program which gives students the opportunity to live and work in Ireland was also discussed during the meeting.

Forensic team finishes ninth

The Suffolk University Forensic Team tied for ninth place at the University of Kansas at the recent National Championship Tournament held at Missouri State College in Minnesota.

The tournament, which was sponsored by the national debate fraternity Delta Sigma Rho Iota Kappa Alpha involved some 40 schools.

The winner of the tournament was the University of Kansas. Though each school can enter more than one team, the number of teams and the number of schools attending could vary.

Suffolk students entered in that tournament were Jay Marton (communications) and Joseph Ryan (art history) (communications and speech '84).

Communications and Speech Department chairman Robert Harris said that they are now preparing for the national debate championships and the individual events championships.

The national debate championships will be held at Johnson State College in Plattsburgh from April 9 to 14 and the national individual events championships will be held at West Kentucky University from April 21 to 27.

Hopefully a precedent for years to come — Parents Program at Kennedy Library a success

This year's Parents Program at the Kennedy Library was a fine example of something which all schools at Suffolk should emulate. Not only was the event a success in terms of attendance, more than 100 people were present, but participants provided an opportunity for parents and students to meet with faculty and administrators in a relaxed atmosphere.

The chaos of the Kennedy Library was averted and the Parents Program held on campus was a most satisfactory success. Student Activities Director Thomas Anderson said he thought it was a success because the library was being used for the first time and the staff agreed. After all, it's rather hard to be excited about attending a school going to the cafeteria.

The Journal congratulates the coordinators of the program, Anderson, Sophomore Class President Ann Harrington, and Gold Key Society President Thomas Anderson. For a job well done. This year's Parents Program was the most successful in Suffolk history and has set the standard for future years.

The plight of the trivia buff

by Amy Scarborough

Who really cares what Richa Petra's middle name is? Well, it's Rosebud. You know, like Charles Foster Kane, don't I bet you didn't know that and you could probably care less. But the life of a trivia buff is not so care free.

The trivia buff's head is full of all sorts of useless information. They seem to know minutely that Lingo, the cartoon character, is named "Lingo" and not "Frank Bank" or that Howard Douthett had 19 brothers for each state.

Who else but an avid trivia buff would know that Nancy's car on "Nancy" is a 1965 Buick Wildcat or the name of Clark Gable's five wives (Josephine, Della, Viola, Aileen, and Ruby) or even that there are probably not that many people who know that Bobbie Hartwick, who played the Baxter's wife on "The Mary Tyler Moore Show," died in a car accident in 1974. But a true trivia buff would know.

A trivia buff is content with a memory for silly things. They might not be able to tell you the difference between a neuritis or a polyneuritis but ask them who sang in "I Got It From My Dad" and they'll probably tell you Ann Southern, Jeanne Tripplehorn, and Linda Darnay. With a trivia buff's warped sense of priorities, the name of Johnny Quest's dog (Hank) becomes more important than remembering the Pythagorean theorem (2² + 2² = 4²).

Sometimes useless information can come in quite handy, though. When trivia contests with shots of peppermint schnapps as prizes for correct answers are held in nightclubs, the trivia buff is usually the first one sloshed quite inexpensively. When the MC asks what town the Ghost and Mrs. Muir live in, who else would know it was Schwenen Hay but a trivia buff.

But being a trivia buff has its drawbacks, too. It tends to anger friends who are less fortunate and do not possess a head full of frivolous facts and do not seem to be set up in a hypothetical situation. A trivia buff is relaxing with a friend on a Saturday night, watching "Love Boat." The friend asks who the blonde with the hats for together is. The trivia buff says back that it looks like Joanna Petrel. The friend starts to sneeze, almost as if being struck by a blow. The friend is annoyed that the name of Joanna Petrel is casually rolled off the tongue of the trivia buff. But the trivia buff can't help it. He knows the information and wants to be sharp with the facts. But the friend says he has been deflated by a sudden burst of snarkiness. Sometimes it is better for the trivia buff to keep some information to himself. Watching "Love Boat" is one of the times.

So we see that being a trivia buff can be quite a burden sometimes. They have knowledge in their heads that is not wanting to burst forth, but the right opportunities are few and far between. So seize the opportunity when knowing.

agent a broadcaster may have. One of the difficult things about television is that there are enormous rewards, but there are also enormous insecurities. No matter how good a job you do, it could all end tomorrow. If new management comes in and doesn't like something as gutsy as how you comb your hair, one could be out of a job," she stated.

When she came from Atlanta, where her parents still reside, she did not have a southern accent. Her father was an English professor who taught her not to speak with a drawl, but her southern hospitality was perceptible as she spoke with a natural friendliness to the overflowing student audience.

When she isn't doing the 12 noon and 4:30 p.m. Live on Line casts, in her spare time, she plays tennis, goes to an occasional symphony or tries to catch up on stacks of reading.

Harris majored in political science at Georgia State University, where she attended night classes. She commented on how reporters have to know a little bit about everything and a broad based education is best. She said that it doesn't matter what you major in, as long as you are using techniques well come from on the experiences.

The experience is a crucial aspect for getting into the market. A degree is taken for granted. It would be out of the question to start a place like Boston, the fifth largest market in the U.S. The behind the scenes jobs are just as hard to get. To get the experience one would have to enter a smaller station and cities like Bangor or Burlington. Don't despair, there are networks around looking for people from smaller markets," said Harris.

NBC offered Harris a job but she decided to turn it down. "The life style is spending time in airplanes and hotel rooms living out of a suitcase. If you love Boston as much as I do it is tough to go elsewhere," she commented.

Harris was on the scene for a week at the Three Mile Island nuclear accident in Harrisburg, Pennsylvania. "It is probably my most memorable story. Getting the Three Mile Island story to cover gave me a lot of knowledge about the use and abuse of nuclear power. While in Pennsylvania, my first priority was getting the story back to the station. Safety came second. The anchor's job is to remain calm. It is very easy to touch off messy stories."

She explained that it takes a lot of physical stamina to be a reporter. "At the New Hampshire primary, and the GOP Delegates Convention, we were going non-stop from 8 a.m. to midnight, for two weeks doing stories for each newscast in Boston. It's tough doing a newscast. Sometimes we don't get handed a script until five minutes before we go on the air." She called the newscast "organized chaos" before each newscast. "It is amazing how it gets on the air."

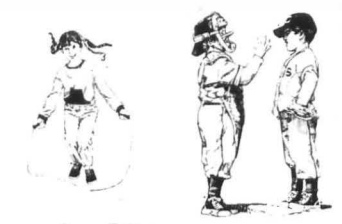

She mentioned how the rating system is absurd. It would be just fine if we could be judged on merit rather than ratings. Until then, you can come up with a better system. We'll have to live with it.

There is obvious competition among the three local stations. Harris explained that the competition usually deals with who can get to the scene of a story first to get the most newsworthy facts, who can present it in the most unique way and who can ask questions the other guy might not even have thought of.

She doesn't object to the notoriety she gets when she is out in public. For those who go up to her to say hello, she is always delighted to talk with them. "You always want somebody to feel that they know you. It was strange at first for people to come up to you, and they feel that they know you. I guess I would do the same thing."

It takes a lot of experience to be a broadcaster in Boston. Gail Harris has proven she has the experience as a journalist. "I love the city, they'll have to get a radio bar to get me out of here."

Suffolk's Soccer Club - on the move

by Jim Carrol
The sport of soccer is establishing itself as a legitimate activity in the Suffolk community.

The newly formed Soccer Club was started last fall when a group of students approached Spanish instructor Mr. Mendez with the idea of having a soccer day. The response to the idea was good enough to warrant formal organization into a club. Now recognized by the Student Government and the Faculty of Process, the club plans to continue to grow and to play matches with other clubs in the area.

Men's Tennis: playing under the bubble

by Herb Nivner

The S.U.A.I. season is in full swing down in the Charles River tennis courts. Suffolk men's tennis had its first match against Bentley College, a possible Division III champion, according to Coach Bob Ford. A final box score would simply say who played who and whether they won or lost. I guess that's one of the aims of sports reporting: the muckraker's job is to report the numbers, not the names. But in the case of tennis, the numbers are the names, and the names are the numbers. It's not the names of the players that are important, but the names of the matches. It should be known that the Suffolk team has lost the match.

Ed Lewis has a record of 10 wins and 10 losses. He is the best player on Suffolk. In the match, Lewis often frustrated his opponent with his studs, and his strong game gives an idea of the depth of the other team. Bob Howe played a tough match, but his opponent was wearing thick-soled shoes around putting on a pretty good display for the fans. I've never seen someone measure the height of the net in a tennis racket, but it happened at this match. This Bentley player is the type you might see on the breakdown lane on I-295, in need of a tennis man. You don't want to see him just when you want to see him. He eventually came back and won the match, but it was an impressive showing. He came from someone who knows as much about tennis as he does about filling out tax forms. I think the Bentley player would have attempted to stop the college bubble. The last

The first three matches for the team should be the toughest, the most taxing ones. Tennis is taken very seriously by Suffolk, as the team has been practicing for two months, and all of them seemed to be enjoying the game. The team still has openings. Anyone interested should come down to the outdoor courts, near the sailboats on the bank of the Charles River, weekdays afternoons at 2 p.m. April 21 is the date for a home match against U. Mass Boston. Come early and watch the match, and get some nice exercises in without even realizing it. This was the first match. By then we will see a match with an equally competitive team.

TKE buries PAT

by Greg Spino

Two rival fraternities kicked off the 1981 intramural softball season. P.A.T. and T.K.E. PAT whipped TKE in the season opener, 29-2, scoring 28 runs in the top of the second inning. TKE jumped out to an early 2-1 lead in the bottom of the 7th. Neil Lynch started the rally off with a single, followed by John Patterson's triple into the gap scored Lynch. Kevin Connal sacrificed Patterson with a fly ball to center. This was all it took for TKE to tie the game.

In the top of the second inning when PAT would hit around the corner three times the game would be very much over. After being retired in the first inning, Frank Sears began the onslaught with a single. TKE pitcher Mike Otero walked Paul Pastano and Tim Henson, then headed the bases up with a single. Otero walked Joe Ford forcing in Sears. Nine successive hits built the PAT lead to 7-2. With a combination of TK errors and a PAT hitting assault almost all the game to be over.

Hit hard by taxes? Visit the tax man

by Gail Stine

Taxes hitting you hard? Then what you need is a trip to the tax man. You as you can afford. Well, your accountant can't afford not to go. David Lynch tax attorney was a Suffolk County...

The most important question to ask yourself is where do you want to go from here? and will it make you happy working at this job? Lynch feels this is important because 90 percent of the work force is unhappy in their jobs...

For those interested in business, he suggests getting all the tax breaks you can take.

Learn all you can about small business. In Massachusetts there are 75,000 small businesses so there will be plenty of opportunity for work. He also suggests specializing in one specific field with a particular product. Know always can about the one specific subject and people will come to you for advice. He doesn't recommend going into personal tax returns though because there are only a few working tax returns that don't pay much during his talk. Lynch gave many examples of how he has helped his clients...

will be tolerated if necessary," said Sullivan. Levin has not met with the Campus Equilibrium Committee this year to discuss the situation.

Under the approved guidelines, Ratskollars will impose extra security measures which include a staff of 14 Ratskollars Committee members who will work on preventing any disruptions and will see that attendees at the Rat does not miss out.

Also included in the proposed are alcohol regulations while students must present a Massachusetts license and will only be allowed to purchase two drinks over a time (in addition, students can only get one drink at a time).

As for disciplinary action, a student who has been notified for causing a disturbance will not be able to attend Ratskollars for the remainder of the year. According to the proposal, the name of the student will also be given to both the Dean of Students, O'Neil, and the Student Activities Office for possible disciplinary action.

Admissions policies stress that students present a Suffolk id and no outside guests will be allowed to attend.

Asksidhow students will feel about the possibility of the Rats not returning this semester, Levin said. "They won't be favorable about it. A lot have approached me when the progress for the Rats was looking good," said Levin. "Kids were excited about it. Yet with the possibility of the Rats not returning this semester, Levin said that students "are not going to be surprised by it."
