The distinguished United States senator from New Hampshire, H. Styles Bridges (R), will be the principal speaker at the commencement exercises of Suffolk University's Class of 1958 at the Sheraton Plaza hotel on June 15. The program will run from 2 to 4 p.m.

The location of this year's exercises ends a decade of memorable graduation programs held at the now demolished Boston Opera House. The Sheraton Plaza's Main Ballroom, with the use of the foyer, will mark the finish for nearly 200 who have completed their degree requirements. The facilities can accommodate 1,400 persons, and parking provisions also are ample.

Precedent Set

McCarthy Elected Government Head

Jeanne McCarthy, a junior and an English major, defeated Reece Malfitano for Student Government president by a vote of 7 to 5 during the May 13th elections.

In the balloting for the three secondary positions, Malfitano was elected vice-president; Maryn Goldberg captured the vote for treasurer, and Hazel Grenham won the job of secretary.

Candidates Under Fire

Both McCarthy and Malfitano carried their reform programs to the electorate, as well as a representative group of the student body. The contesting candidates answered a barrage of direct questions as to their plans and ideas concerning the future of the Student Government. The questions came from government-elect students and outsiders, who flocked into the hall during the open meeting.

First Female Ever
McCarthy's victory marked a precedent in the Student Government. It was the first time a female had ever been elected president.

It was feared that a prejudice concerning female leadership might prevail in the voting, but as things turned out, it failed to change the course of events leading to McCarthy's triumph.

The fact that Miss Kinn Krepel, who was present as an impartial observer, submitted a letter to chairman Jim Kelly, asking for a liberal attitude regarding the candidate's sex, might have affected the outcome of the election.

Dramatic Letter Provided
In her letter, which incidentally carried a copy of the Student Government and the faculty in selecting students for various awards. When it was suggested that the faculty might evolve into the sole voice in these programs McCarthy said, "I don't think this will happen. I believe that a fair and discriminate policy can be maintained in the welfare for the student body by closer coordination between the Student Government and the faculty in selecting students for various awards."

McCarthy demanded a "closer coordination between the Student Government and the faculty in selecting students for various awards."

by, lost a dramatic effect to a colorful and spirited election. Krepel reminded the pattering that "Although females are a definite minority at Suffolk, it is no indication that they cannot exercise the effective leadership in college functions." What influence the letter had on the voting is a moot question. However, it did receive a healthy applause.

5 Speech Winners Share $12,000

Associate Dean Joseph H. Strain was general Chairman of the Massachusetts High School Speech Contest held at Suffolk. Over 200 contestants representing more than 55 high schools from the state of Massachusetts participated in the Saturday, May 10 affair.

Assisting Dean Strain in presenting the medals, trophies and points. John Foley and Paul Up five $200 scholarships was Miss Hazel Grenham, last year's winner and presently attending the University with a full scholarship for dramatic reading.

Limit Foreign Aid
The Debate Tournament was won by St. Mary's Boys' High School of Lynn, who also received the Rotating Plaque for compiling the largest number of points. John Foley and Paul Up five $200 scholarships was Miss Hazel Grenham, last year's winner and presently attending the University with a full scholarship for dramatic reading.

New Year Book Chief Appeals For Student Cooperation
Ed McDonnell, Sr., class president and editor elect of the Suffolk Beacon, urges all interested students, underclassmen included, to submit their names and phone numbers to him if they have the time and inclination to plan the 1959 Yearbook.

With the cooperation of the student body, we can make this edition one of the most inclusive and informative books Suffolk faculty and students have published was the opinion of McDonnell.

"There are many people capable and willing to contribute to the success of school activities but feel that unless asked personally, they are slighted and their contributions are not wanted," he stressed. "We cannot contact each of you individually, but the University needs unified participation in all activities."

Junior Elections Keen
In the junior class campaign of five votes, however, much enthusiasm was shown. Of the four incumbent major office holders, three were rejected by the voters, and the fourth, Joe O'Hara, running for his third term as president, missed defeat by the narrow margin of one vote.

Senior and Sophomore classes generated little enthusiasm in their campaigns and the voter turnout was proportionately light.

Edmondson Keen
Edmondson and Tony Fe Spera were easy winners for two seats in Student Government. The third seat was captured by Jerry Cohen, who was elected Ed Corum for the office of treasurer.

McDonald, Chambers, O'Hara Voted Class Presidents

By MAUREE SUGRUE
Both unusual interest and voter apathy were features of the recent class elections held at Suffolk.

The Senior and Sophomore classes generated little enthusiasm in their campaigns and the voter turnout was proportionately light.

Edmondson and Tony Fe Spera were easy winners for two seats in Student Government. The third seat was captured by Jerry Cohen, who was elected Ed Corum for the office of treasurer.

Jeanne Seeks Reform

Jeanne McCarthy selected "They'll Be Some Changes Made" as her campaign song during the Student Government's presidential race and sang herself into a victory. Her rival, Rocco Malfitano, failed to hit the high keys and finished on the short end of a 7 to 5 vote.

The dark, raven-haired Roxbury gal spoke frankly of sacrificing some of the Government's power to the faculty in order that a more equitable system be formed in deciding Recognition Day and Who's Who awards.

McCarthy complained that too often the intellectual, or let us say, the more serious student, is avoided when the time comes to hand out prizes. The Journal agrees and adds that not only are the brainier students avoided but are rarely mentioned.

However, it might aid the new 20 year-old president to know that perhaps the system of selecting is a mistake. We think it is.

For example, a Dean's list student receives the same rating as a class officer, point wise, when seeking credit for Who's Who. This is a fault since the former is a mark of real merit, whereas the latter is quite often a mark of dubious popularity.

We suggest that a much higher consideration, point wise, be given to studies than is given to the spurious contributions of dance committees, clubs, and outside activities. Perhaps five points for studies and one point for other things be allotted to that justice might be attained.

Then there's the practice of having trophy contending students, or a near kin, submit their applications for attention. Now, what self-respecting and self-effacing young man or lady is going to beseege an arrogant publicity hound for the sake of a monstrous gold trower. We feel that a restraining self-pride, a mark of a thinking individual, discourages this sort of thing.

It is no secret that a good professor recognizes a good student, and if bad one for that matter. Let people like these recommend, or study other recommendations in the light of the knowledge they have for the student in question. Also, the Government could evaluate the findings in the light of its knowledge of the student in question, and then decide whether a student deserves recognition.

If the president can make these essential and constructive reforms in the system then she will have justified her platform. We think, with the cooperation of her staff, faculty, and administration, she can.

The Fall From Democracy

The class elections of a month ago showed up many things, none of which indicated that democracy had attained a stage of perfection. Actually, they proved that the path to the ideal is marred with twigs and branches which slap at us causing despair and frustration.

The Student Government, which is responsible for the conduct of elections, failed to provide adequate voting facilities. It also failed to manage an orderly, smooth, and fair event.

Voters, who expect a secluded booth to form and compose an opinion, were denied this vital convenience. Instead, they were forced to lean against a wall and mark their ballots. It was not unusual to see two voters studying a single ballot. This wide open procedure invited influence and negated free and independent judgement by the voter.

One entire week had been allotted to candidates for advertising, and many of them took full advantage of the time. However, to some, it was not enough time, so it was only natural that they spread their name among students right up until the voter's ballot dropped into the irrevocable darkness of the ballot boxes.

It was a common sight to see aspirants parading to and fro before the boxes with all sorts of signs, names, and pictures draped about their frames. Since the election committee refused to discourage this 11th hour practice we certainly do.

We ask the new Student Government to correct these faults, and it is not as difficult as some people make out. The only requirement is that responsible leaders adhere to a principle in carrying out its work. One principle is that voters be at least supplied with a private booth. Another is the controlling of elections with the power vested in the leaders. An exertion of this power would be helpful in discouraging the presence of candidates at the polls.

A manifestation of power can be helpful if it is administered at a proper time, so we advise the new Government to use its power firmly but justly. That's all.

DEAR EDITOR Recognition O. K. ! But What About Academic Work ?

After listening to Erwin Canham, editor of the Christian Science Monitor speak faithfully during Recognition Day, I sat back and watched the presentation of awards. All of these were for "extra effort" for excellence in extra-curricular activity. Each recipient of an award had distinguished himself by going "all out" in his or her spare time. Each award was well deserved.

Then it hit me — like the sudden realization of unlearning Dr. Socrates's European history — this writer could not recall any one being "recognized" for showing excellence in his or her studies.

When it was announced that Suffolk would host a forum on scientific evolution, it seemed natural that this would be followed by an award to a student in the Science department for high academic achievement.

Perhaps the level of intelligence is so high at Suffolk, that the added incentive of an award would be wasted, or, maybe the students lack such an interest in those specimens who achieve high academic standing. I don't believe either of these statements is true.

Some consistently raise their voices "the standards must be raised" — introduce entrance examinations, screen applicants more closely. But how can these goals be reached without placing extra emphasis on scholastic achievement?

Any suggestions? What about an award for the top man in each of the departments: Philosophy, English, Science, Psychology, etc. This would at least be a start.

Flesh And Spirit Locked In Battle

By DICK BOOKER

Four years of college fill the mind with many thoughts. Some leg expression; others get tucked away in secret recesses to remain forever in stimulating but moot silence.

I remember the prose of Wordsworth caressing my soul. "Thoughts recollected in tranquillity, make that thought live again." I recall the events of the past year with facility of mind and sadness of heart.

The Parade Of The Students that's all. Some people are heroes before me, students parade and other people are thin across a huge stage. Now they move off the stage making a deeper impression on the flesh as their weight has increased from the gold trophies under their arms. The boards meet with pathos but the faces glow with pleasure.

Work, action in life, and now praise, recognition, award, and now criticism. The most often used words in our modern dictionary are here. Are they necessary? Do they answer the old question of life, love, and immortality? Do they glut and sate the mysterious inner cavity that we only know by feeling and only fed by knowing?

The Inner Self I ask my skeptical friend who must be skeptical in order to be amiable. "Friend, do you label with the hose of reasoning, I tangible symbol for it?" He replies, "If I label it is for text."

He further told for money or lead assistance for self satisfaction. The former I detest but the latter I bless.

"You are a selfish idealist!" "What? I am an unselfish idealist!" "You don't approve of abstract rewards for services rendered? I take it?"

An Empire unto Myself "I am not a joiner. I am an organization. In itself. If I am honest to myself I cannot be but honest with others. If I work for myself I work for others. I have any pride? That inner cannot help it. It is my nature, it is nature. When I do not work for myself then I do not work for others. I know this and others know it."

"But you are a selfish egoist!" "No Sir, I am a moral altruist."

My friend wears the art of peace, serious thinking. His mind meets with the clouds while his feet hover over the sea. I cannot waste my time on such a word person.

Friendly Enemies Ah, here comes a friendly enemy. He smiles and smiles and seems openly confident and calm. He stumbles much more neatly than my stumbles. He laughs and speaks first. He knows he must play, did you see the trophy I got?"

"What did you get it for?" "Don't get smart. You know all the things I did for the school this year. I helped organize every major function we had this year — dances, proms, parties. I earned it."

"You did all that for the school?" How come the school gave you something for it?"

"Look, supposing I wasn't around to do these things — just saw 'The whole world with them who would do them?' Who its values, its morals, its looms, would do all the work I did?" It's only natural I got something for it, no one does something better me in the past 10 minutes for nothing. You're just jealous I wondered.

"I was amazed, nearly stupefied, the sentence of the breath by this year. I helped organize every major function we had this year — dances, proms, parties. I earned it."

PLACEMENT HEAD WOODROW OUTLINES JOB PROSPECTS

By IOT BELL

Employment placement in Greater Boston colleges at present are generally running behind that of last year, according to Donald P. Woodrow, Suffolk placement director. However, he points out, there are hopes of an upturn, and in some areas there are currently some good job opportunities.

Mr. Woodrow is corresponding with each student to arrange for a personal interview in some instances, and to determine their present and expected activities in regard to employment. He will use this information, if practical, to guide the student to his ultimate selection of a position.

Active Student Best Bet

"The person who is placed this year will be the one who is most active. The one who seeks out openings and talks to personnel men of the companies and areas in which he would like to be employed," advises Woodrow.

Specifically Woodrow cited the following conditions: In ACCOUNTING there are "good" openings for "good" men. There are also positions available for LAW graduates, particularly in several governmental agencies.

In the field of EDUCATION, generally, Suffolk has been "swamped" with requests for graduates. Also, in the latter, salary scales have been increased.

Industry Hardest Hit
By far, the hardest hit area this year appears to be in the area of industrial MANAGEMENT training programs. In this area the present picture is bleak, but an upturn is expected in the Fall.

Mr. Woodrow told the Journal that in a check with other local university placement directors, recruiting on campus has been quite similar to that being experienced at Suffolk. Hiring has been highly selective, while a smaller number of companies have engaged in recruiting this year.

A multiple listing of employment opportunities available to Greater Boston college students is now being organized, with Mr. Woodrow representing Suffolk. When and if in operation, the effect of the new plan will be to exchange amongst the schools those jobs that have not been filled by the school which originally received the request.

Miss Sarah Amin, assistant to Mr. Woodrow, was lauded by the latter for her efforts to obtain part time and Summer positions for Suffolk students, and for her procurement of many job opportunities near to Suffolk.

Placement Cooperation
Placement directors of Greater Boston colleges have also been helpful to our office," said Woodrow.

Mr. Woodrow is chairman of the Contact Committee of the Publicity Club of Boston. In recently and it is not unusual for that capacity it has also been revealed to him that at present

Mellace Returns To Revere As Hoop Mentor

Archie Mellace, captain of the 1937-38 team which returns to his old stomping grounds, Revere High, next fall to take up the basketball coaching chores.

The rangy hoopster, who for four years has been a valuable member of Charlie Law's cagers, hopes to secure a teaching spot at Revere in general science as well.

As a senior at Revere in 1932, Mellace shattered numerous records. Against Lowell, he hoisted 38 points through the strings. He was also instrumental in leading Revere to the Tech Tourney of that year. It was the school's first appearance in the Garden in 32 years.

When the final tabulations were appraised, Archie had been voted Greater Boston's Most Valuable Player for 1934. In addition, he was named on the All-Scholastic schoolboy team.

To play a team into the exciting Tech Tourney is one achievement, but to coach a team the same club at that, into it seems a tall but certainly challenging proposition.

There, is little opportunity for placement in the field of public relations health even for some experienced persons.

A multiple listing of employment opportunities available to Greater Boston college students is now being organized, with Mr. Woodrow representing Suffolk. When and if in operation, the effect of the new plan will be to exchange amongst the schools those jobs that have not been filled by the school which originally received the request.

"Ten Little Indians" Neatly Executed By Drama Club

By PAUL BENEDET

A crowd of 300 applauded the Drama Club's production of "Ten Little Indians" on May 9 and 10 in the Auditorium.

The players did full justice to the Agatha Christie thriller, and the club received many favorable comments from faculty and student body alike.

Overcame Worst
The two performances were plagued by mishaps that would have shaken the most seasoned professionals, but the Suffolk troupe was up to it. Flaws were expertly covered by spot taneous adlib.

The moment of truth on opening night occurred when after a fine first two acts, the revolve, so diligently aimed by Hazel Gresham at George Brown, fell out to fire. For a split second the action froze, then George, in a burst of true genius, dived at his breast and gasped "My heart!"

As he slipped to the floor, Miss Gresham took the situation in hand and smacked him soundly on the snail with the desert gun. It took some doing to revive George after the final curtain.

Saturday's unexpected moment came when a cigarette tossed on the set rang to Paul Benedict refused to be extinguished despite Mr. Benedict's application of a heavy foot.

Audience On Toes
The audience remained on the edge of their seats for the duration, held spellbound by the spl

Dean Goodrich described the play as "well paced, well rehearsed". And Nancy Pierce, board's representative, said, "I was completely enthralled by the plot and the performances. I never would have guessed the marvelous answer to the murder."

The members of the club give every credit for their success to director William Hook of Emerson College for his patience, skill, and understanding; and to the help and counseling rendered by their faculty advisor, Dr. Ella Murphy.

The behind-the-scenes people who deserve to certain calls themselves were stage manager Kathy Flower, prop mistress Candy Krenzel, and crew members Tony and Jerry Bruno, Bob Learson, and Clark Dwinell.

Devlin Fought Gandy

Jerry Devlin, a comparative political unknown, waged an aggressive campaign to unseat President O'Hara, who had to go all out to maintain his office. Paul Fedi, the third candidate, trailed far behind the leaders.

Bob Love, in a startling show of strength, defeated the incumbent vice-president, Don Drouin. The margin of victory for Bob was a surprising 71 votes.

LONG SCORES UPSET
Jim Long, active Suffolk junior, was a successful candidate for secretary in what was perhaps the biggest upset of the election. He defeated Paula de la Flor who was running for her third term as secretary.

Ann Picardi captured the office of Treasurer, defeating the incumbent treasurer, Gerry McKinley, by a wide margin.

Jeanne McCarthy, Bob Goodrich and Mylin Goldberg ran unopposed for the three seats in Student Government. Harold Covensham, Roland Chuput, and Bob Learson were elected to Student Government.

SUFFOLK MERITS LISTED IN CONGRESSIONAL RECORD

By HOW VINCENT

Suffolk University reached another landmark this month when its merits were extolled in the Congressional Record.

Floyd Lee Bell, the university's publicity director, wrote an article entitled "The School on Beacon Hill" for the April edition of Industrial magazine. Congressman Thomas J. Lane of Lawrence read it and had it entered into the Congressional Record, much to Bell's delight and surprise.

Bell Outlines School History
Bell, who just returned from a brief stay in the hospital, described the many features and the history of the University and Law School. For example, Suffolk has graduated more Law students into high places in the courts of Greater Boston and the Commonwealth than any other school of colleges.

Suffolk is the last university to offer low tuition rates so that the boy or girl seeking an education and a degree may not be prevented by sky high rates from achieving his or her ambition.

Working Student's School
Suffolk probably presents more opportunity for the young man or woman desiring of work while through college, or at least in no part-time work, than do most institutions of higher learning.

Many business men seek Suffolk graduates because of the unusual training given in business administration just as law officers are happy to receive for further training or as associates attorneys and at least eight of those who have been graduated from Suffolk.

The Board of Trustees of the Suffolk Alumni Association of University " . . . is made up of some of the leading professional and businessmen of the Commonwealth, and is headed by Hon. George B. Rowell, former Assistant Attorney General, as Chairman.

First To Aid Night Student
Suffolk, although primarily a day institution, was the first college in New England at which a student might earn a Bachelor of Arts degree through evening study.

Suffolk's . . . standards of scholarship are regarded as rank as high as those of any university in the nation.

The Attorney General of Massachusetts and at least eight judges of the higher courts are members of the Suffolk Law School Alumni Association of which Judge Frank J. Donahue, one of the best known judicial minds in the East, has long been president."

Bell also lauded President Munnice as " . . . a topnotch educator but above all else he is human, he is understanding and his kindly attitude does much to make Suffolk so highly regarded among schools and colleges of this territory."

SENIOR PROM CONSIDERED YEAR'S BEST EVENT

By CELIA LESTONENY

One of the most successful proms given by Suffolk was held on Friday, May 16, at the beautiful Commonwealth Country Club in Newton.

About 300 students, lavishly attired, enjoyed the music of Leon Merian and his fine troupe of musicians. Leon's "Magic Horn" brought comments of praise from all.

The Grand March was led by everyone in a prom mood!
Senior Class Officers: Robert Cheever, Henry Seljella, Anthony Cozzino, and Celia Lester, all around job well done and everyone joined in to make this a highlight of the affair.

Administrative and Faculty members had a good representation in Dean Goodrich, Dean Strain, Mr. Woodrow, Dr. Hartman, Dr. McKee, Dr. Archon, Dr. Lieberman and Senior Class Advisor, Mr. Rand, and their lovely ladies.

Dick Joseph, junior, said, "I've been to a few proms, but none to have been the final event of could surpass this one. Leon Merian is, no doubt, a fine horn player."

Mrs. Teresa Crugnola, senior, who was elated with the whole affair, said, "My husband and I had a wonderful time. The place had a lot to do with it . . . really put

Student Apathy Forces Newman Cancellation

The Newman Club Annual Communion Breakfast, scheduled for May 18, was cancelled because of the lack of interest on the part of the members. This was the year for the club. Despite this apparent apathy of the students, the new officers hope to offer a program next year that will appeal to all of the members. One of the first events to be scheduled will be a mixer dance for the new members.

RAMS BOAST 5-3 MARK DESPITE TOUGH FOES

By RUD ORRICK

The S.U.C. baseball squad has racked up a 5-3 record against strong opposition. The Rams slugged Clark and dropped games to EC and Bates in their latest outings. The club pounded out 21 hits to rout the Scarlets, 10-7, at Worcester. George Lathrop pitched the entire game and coasted to an easy win.

Phoebe Hires Hires

B. C. staged a late rally to tip Suffolk 5-1. A base hit with two out in the last of the eighth sent the Rams and George Lathrop down to a heart-breaking defeat. The Rams did everything, but win as they outfit EC 11-7. EC Coach Edna Pollock praised Lathrop, a distinguished job on the mound and trained him one of the finest collegiate pitchers he has seen.

Bates came up with a grand third inning to bury the Rams 12-4. Bates had allowed the game with two down in the Bates third, but the Bobcats returned to score six times before the Rams could get the final out.

Les Farrell Joe Leifer, George Caratus, and Joe D'Angelo have been pacing the Rams at the plate. Coach Charlie East named Pete Wedlock the hard luck hit for of the year. Charlie explained that Pete has been trying to hit hard all season, but always right at someone.

Wig And Robe Society Hears Judge Donahue At 10th Anniversary

Suffolk Superior Court Judge Frank J. Donahue, president of the law school alumni and a life member of Suffolk, was principal speaker recently at the 10th Anniversary Banquet of the Wig and Robe Society.

He spoke on the practice of law, particularly on trial practice. Judge Donahue emphasized that the congestion of cases before the Superior Court is vastly overrated, and that attorneys can secure speedy trials merely by waiting claim to a jury trial. The waiting period for non jury cases is usually a matter of months, he said.

Bell, Kreutel Named Journal Co-Editors

Low Bell, a business major with a flair for journalism, and Candy Kreutel, a journalism major with an interest in the business, have been named co-editors of the 1958-59 Journal.

Bell merited the appointment from Dick Booker, this year's editor, on the strength of his ability to report and write news of quality and quantity. Also, his unflinching interest, desire, and cooperation in meeting the Journal's deadline were considered prior to the appointment. Bell received an A plus in all departments.

Bell's Editor
Bell travels back and forth from Malden, which is his home. He is employed by the Boston Globe as a reporter and it was here that Bell gained a considerable background in newspaper work.

SOCIOLGISTS TOUR NORFOLK
Miss Kreutel began her third year on the Journal in September. In the past three years she has handled, with increasing competence and ability, features, news, columns, editorials, and files.

It is not only her ability as a reporter and editor that has won her continuous interest and devotion to the welfare of the Journal that was instrumental in deciding her selection as co-editor.

Drama Club Merits Unlimited Applause

After devoting space to criticism, we feel it only proper to balance the paper with a little praise.

And so we aim a few flowery paragraphs at a group of artists and workers who deserve them more than any single group within the university, the school's Drama Club.

The Journal toasts this group for its unremitting efforts in bringing entertainment, humor, and dramatic achievement into this institution. The paper stands fast in its praises on not only what has been done but what shall be done in the future.

Creative and enjoyable bodies like the Drama Club are worthwhile because life, art, beauty, ability, truth, and talent are worthwhile. These Clubs exist on and for those values. They should "... never pass into nothingness." So as long as man kills, exploits, insults, corrupts, steals, lies, pretends, loves, hopes, prays, laughs, thinks, dies, and sees, lives, the stage will also live.

However, one might have doubts as to the longevity of Suffolk's stage. Fully a few years ago it passed into emeral. But somewhere, somehow, a spark flickered with restlessness. Perhaps in a mind, a heart, a soul, either of one or many, the spark became a flame and burned its obstacle toward ramp back to the school's stage where it belongs, and where we sincerely hope it will stay for a long time to come. We hope it burns brighter with the flames of Booth, O'Casey, O'Neill, and Anderson until it brightens all of Boston with its unextinguishable beacon of dramatic attainment.

We cannot wish, unfortunately, these things into being. We must rather work at them, and wholeheartedly encourage them. And by encouragement we mean a practical policy to see them. It does not seem too far-fetched that the Club should be allowed an expansive budget, practically unlimited, to develop and maintain an activity for the administration. It should be done now when the group is fresh from a series of successful productions.

There would be nothing more pitiable than seeing this organization slip into obscurity again. Conversely, there would be nothing more refreshing than watching it grow into a great enterprise of collegiate achievement.

Tunisians Learn English From '52 Graduate

While American prestige is being dragged through the mud of many foreign lands, its educational program in the Tunisian capital of Tunis, under the direction of a 1952 Suffolk graduate, is receiving, instead of stones and pains, words of praise from a foreign government.

Alan A. Alexander was graduated from here six years ago as a psychology major and an education minor. Unable after four years of seeking to find a suitable statewide teaching job, he submitted his application to the U.S. government for an overseas assignment.

Appointed in 1956
In January of 1956 Alexander, under said "Then we give into a former Swampscott resident, dense 200 hours in grammar. At was appointed head of the language school together the period of instruction was 13 months."

The school has received many words of praise and encouragement from both the American and Tunisian governments, and 2000 more applicants being placed on a waiting list.

The purpose of this Tunisian school is to teach Tunisia's 200,000 American university in Tunis, from 18 to 65 years in age, the English language.

Taught By Talking
"We use strictly conversation methods of teaching for the first 200 hours of instruction," Alex Alexander concluded.

Editor Canham Guest Speaker At Recognition Day Event

By BOB VINCENT

Suffolk honored its deserving son and daughter, May 19th during the annual Recognition Day ceremonies, held in the Auditorium. Edwin D. Canham, editor of the Christian Science Monitor and moderator of "Starring the Editors", a weekly TV discussion program, was guest speaker.

Professor John V. Colburn presented the welcoming speech and related the purpose of Recognition Day. Fr. Archard, Newman Club Chaplain, then offered the invocation, returning later to present a Newman Club Award to Dorothy M. "Miss Mac" McNamara, honor, for her work in the University.

Hoopsters Get Sweaters

Coach Charlie Law praised his basketball team for their outstanding record of 12 wins against only 5 setbacks. In honoring a new policy at Suffolk, he awarded sweaters to the entire squad. Art Mullins was pleased in being the first player from the University to be chosen for the New England All-Scholastic Team.

Canham took over the rostrum, after being introduced by Jim Kelley, student government president. The editor brought out that college students in America do not have the grace, the wit, or the necessity to set up large scale demonstrations such as are found in numerous countries. That not all student demonstrations are prejudicial to the cause of the European, Soviet, or Communist, he pointed out. He pointed out that students who have been exposed to prejudicial lies most of their lives, is adequate proof of this, Canham explained.

Plan For Humility

We must act with humility toward lesser nations, for the United States is an enormously privileged land where its citizens can live in mansions amidst a world of shims," the editor said.

He demonstrated that this high standard of living can and has created international problems, for Russia has probed that we are looking out only for ourselves, and for this reason, we have to show the communist industrial countries that our foreign policy is honorable, not selfish and demagogic. He concluded by stating that "... we have to express ourselves by both word and deed."

Each student received small trophies, as well as 1000 words of praise and encouragement from the University. This was followed by the presentation of keys to the members of the Student

Donald J. Winstone, director of the Student Government, introduced Canham to sing "Make Believe" as a graduation activity. He was followed by vocal recitations of "Make Believe" and "Oh What A Beautiful Morning" by Harold Lorenz.

Phi Beta Chi Awards
Distribution of the Phi Beta Chi Awards, under the supervision of Donald Collette, president of the Honorary Society, was succeeded by the news from Joseph Gervais, president of the science club, that the 13th Annual Eastern College Science Conference will be held at Suffolk in 1959 with 500 convention delegates scheduled to attend.

President Robert Stone concluded with the strong arms of the Phi Beta Chi Awards, presented to the selected students. Being successful in this struggle is important, but extra-curricular activities are equally necessary. Music and sports are also important.

Alumni Honor President Munce

President Robert J. Munce was recently honored at a testimonial dinner on the occasion of his 10th year at Suffolk by the board of trustees of the General Alumni Association of Suffolk University. The event took place at the Court of St. James Ballroom of The Beacon Club, with approximately 175 persons in attendance.

The President was presented with a sterling silver Paul Revere bowl inscribed: To Robert J. Munce, President, 10th Year of Suffolk University, 1948-1958, General Alumni Association of S.U., 125-58.

Impressive Head Table
At the head table were Col. Lawrence Butler who has been for a personal aide to Gen. Douglas MacArthur; Marie Houlahan, president of the Boston Publishers Club and public relations director of Radio Station WEEI; President and Mrs. S. Justin McKeen of Emerson College and Master's Degree from the School of Law Science of Simmons College. From 1888 to 1956, he was the librarian of the Lawrence Public Library, and did much to develop the library during these years.

Paul Experience
Mr. Sullivan also served as Document Librarian for the Manufacturing Corp., Research and Advanced Development Division, located in Lawrence, Mass. He also commented on the efficiency and competency of the library staff, and he hopes that the library will be able to keep his McNamara, busfar, and pace with the development of Mrs. Frederick McHermott, and Judge William Henley, Suffolk.

Mr. Sullivan, an Air Force vet trustee, representing the board, cran, presently lives in Lawrence and his wife.

Also in attendance were most of the faculty members, representatives of the student body and its organizations, members of the alumni association, and office staff members.

A highlight of the evening, and perhaps the most impressionistic event for the President was a playback of a recording of the voice of his daughter and her family who are living in California. President Munce was presented with the right unexpected tape.

Donald Woodrow, placement director, in summing up the evening, termed it "A fine tribute to our president."

Business Club Elects New Officers
The Business Club met last week and elected its officers for next year. The new leaders are: Lou Galvin, president; Don Dreyer, vice-president; Don Atkins, secretary; and Dick Wheeler, treasurer.

The Club will meet its class representatives at the initial meeting in September.

Veterans Sponsor Outing June 8
Phil Doherty, president of the Veterans Club announced that Sunday June 8 has been set for the University outing. It will begin at 1:00 p.m. and will include softball games, pie eating contests, music, liquid refreshments, and a picnic.

This final activity of the Spring semester will be held at Houghs Park in Milton, off of 120 in the Blue Hills. Tickets may be purchased for $1.00 from members of the Club.

Science Conference Scheduled Here For Next Year

Suffolk University has been named host college for the 1959 annual Eastern College Science Conference according to Joseph Geraci, president of the Science Club.

Mr. West, biology instructor, Edward Corbett, vice chairman of the Conference, and Geraci, executive chairman, submitted the bid for Suffolk to be host for the 13th annual conference scheduled for next April. All three represented Suffolk at the 12th annual conference which was held at Wilkes College, Wilkes-Barre, Pa. Seventy colleges were represented at the April 19-19th conference. The main function of the meeting is to promote student scientific research.

Advisors Due June 4
Mr. Barry Miller and Dr. Hal of Wilkes College are scheduled to arrive at Suffolk University on June 4. They will come here to make plans and give all needed data to carry on the conference.

All science students at S.U. will be advised, under the supervision of Dr. Friedman or Dr. Anderson, to participate in all undergraduate research work.

The executive committee of the Eastern College Science Conference for 1959, under the direction of Mr. Arthur Wood, faculty advisor, consists of the following members:

1. Joseph Geraci, executive chairman
2. Edward Corbett, vice chairman
3. Alfred Lett, vice chairman
4. Donald Corbett, vice chairman
5. Revo Malfitano, corresponding secretary
6. Kathleen Whelan, recording secretary
7. Carl Waltham, treasurer

These students will be working during the summer in preparation for the conference to be held April, 1959.

The committee is interested in any student, regardless of his major, who would like to contribute his help toward the success of the conference. The committee would like to suggest that this conference is not only for the benefit of science majors, but for the entire university.

Success Depends On Students
The success of the conference will depend upon the cooperation of each student in the university. Several chairman vacancies are still to be filled. Anyone desiring to participate should leave his name, address and telephone number at the Suffolk Journal of the House, 50 to be before June 5, 1958.

AD LIBS COVER GOOFS IN INDIAN MASSACRE

"And then there were none..." And it almost materialized at the Suffolk Players' May 10th Saturday p.m. performance. Paul Benedict, as the catfence Mr. Blare in "Ten Little Indians" dropped a lighted cigarette on the rug prior to his death plunge over a neatly strung wire.

With an added curl of smoke from the charring rug, the judge (Bill Halpin) and Vera (Hazel Greenham) watched the hysterical and tragic closing of the play.

Backstage there were frantic charades to nonchalantly stamp out the erratic embers. The thin line of smoke rolled almost symbolically through the final five minutes, until it was crushed (with applause) by the Honorable Justice Warshaw.

That was Saturday night... on Friday the gun forgot to emit, and as George Doucet clutched his lower rib cage and muttered something about "heart attack", resolute Harold missed. He tragically sank to the floor "and then there were none." Beauty and the Beast, if you will. There was one problem left to solve... Vera had to shoot the judge with the reluctant fireman!

Backstage someone banged a briefcase on the prop table as Hazel pointed the gun at the judge... she almost said "Bang! You're dead..." Even if the whole cast literally died, competent ad libbing kept the play alive.

The Suffolk University Alumni Association, and his wife, John Clements, toastmaster of the event and an Alumni director. Mrs. Donald W. Goodrich; Dean Mrs. Joseph L. Strain; Dean Mrs. McNamara, busfar; Dean Mrs. Frederick McHermott, and Judge William Henley, Suffolk. Mr. Sullivan, an Air Force vet trustee, representing the board, cran, presently lives in Lawrence and his wife.

Suffolk Participates At Interfaith Dinner; Co-eds Act As Usherettes

A key of five Suffolk co-eds met on May 27th served as usherettes at the Annual Interfaith Dinner. Fifty students from each of several Greater Boston colleges, including the Northeastern Region of the National Conference of Christians and Jews held at the Louis zom, were invited. Guests chosen by the Administration, were Nancy Pierre, Robert Cheever, Sarah Anson, Richard Novak, and Louis Bell.

The attractive usherettes were Kuni Kreutel, Celia Letourney, Hazel Greenham, Simone Axel, and Maureen Sugrue. Miss Suffolk of 1958.

At the head table was President of the University of Massachusetts, Dr. J. Paul Mather, president of the National Conference of Christians and Jews, a civic organization engaged in a nationwide program of intergroup education, and Mr. Norman Knight, both earned distinction for their work in promoting different faiths and groups.

DUAL EDITORS REVEAL POLICIES

The final edition of the Suffolk Journal, Vol. 14, No. 8 concludes Richard Booker's career as a college journalist. He steps, from here, into the field of practical experience, leaving two to fill his shoes.

Booker has capably led the Journal staff through deadline crises, and successfully molded the 1958 editions into informative, entertaining and provocative publications.

The old order changes and yields to the new, but constant is the task of continued effort and the attainment of our goal — encouraging potential into actuality. We need a business manager and a cartoonist and urge all interested students to aid and contribute their talents.

Journal Editors of 1959

The University is expanding and its reputation is gaining momentum. Individuality and completeness are the keys to the continued growth of this enterprise. The Journal, through the efforts of past editors and staff accepted a challenge. The staff of the 1958-1959 Suffolk Journal is eager to assume its responsibility. We have an example to follow. Max our incentive and enthusiasm enable us to do justice to the tradition set up by our predecessors.

For Readers Who Find Cynicism Interesting

The man who made up the clever little phrase that goes "Once upon a time there were two brothers. One went away to sea; the other became vice-president, and neither has been heard from since," certainly never heard of Nixon and Venezuela.

Justice is a matter of occupational position. If you are an emperer you serve your term at St. Helena. If you are a mayor you go to the Danbury rest home. If you are like most of us you'll study life through Walpole's bars, because you don't hold a position.

The most difficult words to say to people are usually the truest. For instance, when a person commits a foul deed, we do not say that person is foul, rather we utter words of praise for his capriciousness. When a person cheats on an exam, we don't condemn him, rather we regret the time we studied. And when graft and corruption are discovered in government, we pass it off by saying we might have done the same thing if we had the chance. So, why should it amaze people to learn that the world is not a bowl of cherries.

Morality is not a blessing; nor is immorality an evil. It is merely a temptation which can be either accepted or rejected depending on the individual's grasp.

College does not train men for jobs any more than it trains them for war. It simply teaches people to be intelligent human beings.

A FAREWELL TO SENIORS

In saying goodbye to warm friends, one pauses to reflect on the pleasant relationships of the past four years. During your University years, I have come to know you very favorably and having formed a warm affection for you, I shall miss your faces and personalities.

The regret in parting is lessened when I realize that, soon, I shall be greeting you as Alumni at the various Alumni Association gatherings. This is something, then, that we can pleasantly anticipate.

As you "commence" and continue your future careers, please remember that we of the Suffolk Family will be proud of your worthy achievements.

HUMANITIES CLUB TOURS SALEM

By NANCY PIERCE

Members of the Suffolk Humanities Club made a tour of the historic houses of Salem recently. They were accompanied by three faculty members: Dr. Ella Murphy, Mr. Russell Howland, and Dr. Florence Petherick, the club adviser.

Hawthorne's "Gable" Visited
The group visited the House of Seven Gables, an excellent example of the seventeenth-century architecture, which they are studying in their Humanities classes. Nathaniel Hawthorne used the house as a setting and as a title for his famous novel.

Niarchos Collection Seen
The club's first trip was to the Museum of Fine Arts to see the Niarchos Collection of paintings. Twenty-five students saw the work of El Greco, Rembrandt, Caravaggio, Gogh, and Picasso. They also visited other sections of the museum to see examples of the periods of art about which they have been studying.

Derby House
The next stop was the Derby House. This house, built in the eighteenth century by a wealthy ship owner, looks over Salem Harbor. Some of the students felt that the Derby House is a more interesting example of its period; it contains many carvings, paintings and pieces of furniture used by its first owners.

Humanities Club was Organized
The Humanities Club was organized by Bob Marinak, an English major. He wants to broaden the student's interest in the past.

New Journal Co-Chief Beseet, Perplexed By Many Problems

It is hoped that the new Journal co-editor, Lou Bell, has a bit of the better luck in mastering the paper than he does with his car after the series of humiliating abuses he suffered on Recognition Day.

Bell realized that his presence was necessary in the formal transaction of acquiring a paper from the outgoing editor. He was expected to be on the Auditorium stage at 11:00 a.m. Friday. Unfortunately, the car did not start, and he decided to quit on his half way between Boston and Malden. Lou managed to arrive for the coffee and at 1:00 p.m.

Away It Went
To make up for his tardiness Lou jaunted down to the Room for confirmation of his appointment from Dick Booker. He talked to Booker alright, but during the conversation the police dragged his cantankerous car, via the hook, off to a garage. It was an unusual incident to say the least. "I joined to further my interest in art," says Roland Chaput, "and I also feel that the club is a fine idea for students who are not Liberal Arts majors." "The course material has become more important to me since I have seen the original paintings, costumes, and furniture of a particular age."

The interest and activity of the members was praised by Tami Etkins. "I think that the students learn more by doing research themselves, and by talking about the results of their research."

Tami is one of several students who have spoken to the club. At a recent meeting she discussed seventeenth-century French literature, while Thomas Doherty criticized Milton's "Aeropagica." The study of the Renaissance was aided by Ann Picardi and Bob Martin, who spoke about Leonardo da Vinci and Michelangelo. Another time, the students were enlightened on Spanish and Italian folk music by Bob Barakat and Howie Zizza.

"You see," excited Bob Martin, "Ephusiasm!" On Friday afternoon, May 18, the Humanities Club met for the final time in the 1957-1958 season at a tea given by Dr. Petherick in the Gilbert House. The House is a restored Victorian mansion owned by Dr. Petherick and located on Beacon Street, Boston.

Profiles Seen At A Banquet

It is indeed a pleasure to write that the 10th Annual Wig and Robe Banquet was an immense success. Masses of alumni and students maddled about the cocktail bar.

The now digesting audience warmed to the after dinner speakers when toastmaster, Rep. Theodore Vattais said, upon discussing his favorite subject, "The only bar I ever passed was the law bar." Quite plausible . . . Upon his introduction Dean F. McDermott commented that unlike most guests who when called upon to say a "few words" are usually totally unprepared, he had come prepared.
