REMARKS BY TEACHERS FROM OLD SCHOOL REGISTERS

EXTRACTS FROM SCHOOL COMMITTEE REPORTS TO THE SUPERINTENDENT
OF PUBLIC INSTRUCTION IN 1868

EXTRACTS FROM THE PROCEEDINGS AT ANNUAL SCHOOL DISTRICT
MEETINGS IN RURAL SCHOOL DISTRICTS.

Selected by Charles W. T. Willson, 1953

Remarks by George Edgerley, Principal of Farmington, N. H. High School to the Superintending School Committee in the School Register for 1861.

There has been an unusual number of absences this term. This may in part have been the fault of the teacher, though he is disposed to ascribe it to the season of the year. (May 20-Aug. 2, 1861) as much as to anything else. Most of the boys were large enough to be of some use to their parents, and, therefore, during haying were needed in the field; while some of the girls, rendered uneasy in the school room by the extremely hot weather, chose rather to spend their afternoons berrying in the hills!

The difficulties encountered by teachers during what was called "The Summer School" are told by the Principal of the High School for the Summer Term beginning May 20, 1867 and ending July 5, 1867. Remarks are by the Principal, Rev. Roger H. Sargent:

There are too few visits by parents, & impatience at restraints & unwillingness to submit to necessary discipline & to be present during the time of school is also too much sanctioned by their parents. There were only seven weeks of school in this term, & out of that was to be deducted the Fourth of July, & one other day when the State Board of Education met, leaving in all only 33 days of schooling. These were all faithfully improved by some of the pupils & the teacher tried to do more than is usually done, but so great a multiplicity of work pressed upon him that he could not accomplish all that he wished to do. Yet, he feels satisfied that decided progress was made by many of the scholars. The heat of summer is, however, not the most favorable time for a school.

Remarks by Cynthia Varney, teacher in District No. 5 (Hornetown School) for the term ending April 3, 1872:
Rev. Geo. H. Park: (Superintending Committee)

Sir,

In making these remarks I would say, that I have endeavored to perform all the duties devolving upon me, faithfully and impartially towards those who have been under any instruction, during the term of school now closing. I have labored, not only for their advancement but also for their thoroughness in those studies to which they have attended; and, though I have not, perhaps, met with as good success as could be desired, yet, I have the satisfaction of knowing that most of the scholars who have attended regularly, have made good improvement in their studies.

I wish neither to boast of my school nor to underrate it, but merely to give a truthful statement, and, having done this last, there is no use in multiplying words.

Respectfully,
Cynthia Varney.

Remarks by A. W. Shackford, teacher at the Pearl District School on New Durham Ridge Road for the term ending March 4, 1873:

This school has made good proficiency in their studies during the present term and the scholars have been orderly and I have not punished a scholar this term. Both scholars and parents have treated me with great respect for which many thanks and may they all live to a good old age and go to heaven at last.

A. W. Shackford, Teacher.

Remarks by Stella C. Chamberlain teacher at the Place School 9 District No. 8, at the end of the spring term April 3-June 19, 1891.

The schoolhouse is situated in a pleasant location but it is in such a delapidated condition it is a disgrace to any community, It is impossible for the teacher to accomplish proper work where there are so very few conveniences to do with, The pupils have some parts of geography well illustrated to them by the floor as it is filled with hills and valley. Such buildings should be in better condition in these enlightened times, in a town like this.

Remarks by W. T. Chase teacher at Merrill's Corner School (District No. 1) at the close of the Winter Term, Dec. 3, 1860 - Feb. 16, 1861.

The efficiency or inefficiency of every public school depends primarily on the action of parents and citizens. They provide and keep in motion the machinery.

I have been pleased during the past term of my instruction with the kind of interest manifested by parents. A good degree of effort, even in the worst state of the weather was made to get the children to school, an effort encouraging to the teacher and indispensable to the success of the pupil. I think the interest among the pupils would have been much enhanced by an occasional visit from the parents.

The moral habits of the scholars, with a few exceptions, were good. I made no rules of government of the school until after I had placed before the scholars the necessity of the same; the reason and judgment of the scholars being thus exercised, I found little disposition to disobey.

Owing, principally to the loose method of instruction which has been previously pursued, I found mental discipline poor. I took an analytical course, drilling much upon principals of the several studies, repeating each lesson until fixed. Hence there was a visible progress to the close of school.

The schoolhouse is of recent building and well located commanding an extensive view of the surrounding country. The grounds around the schoolhouse admit of much improvement by the way of planting trees and shrubs which would add greatly to the beauty of the location. It is constructed externally entirely upon the improved plan. Seats, desks, ventilation, etc. are all that is needed. A clock, thermometer, charts, maps, especially of the United States, mathematical blocks, etc. would add much to the progress of the school.

Number of scholars during the above term 37; 21 boys, 16 girls. Youngest pupil 7 years old; oldest pupil 21 years old. Wages of the teacher including board $26.75 per month. In addition to the 3 R's, Algebra, Latin, and Astronomy were taught.

Remarks by Mary E. Chamberlain, teacher in the Hornetown School, District No. 5, at the close of the Winter Term, Dec. 21, 1860 to Feb. 13, 1861.

The parents and citizens were interested to have the children obey the rules of the school and make improvement but there was not that heart-felt cooperation on the part of the parents by visiting the schoolroom and looking after the moral deportment of their children.

This district has been without a school for two years and the moral habits of the children have been neglected. Card playing and profanity with all their attending evils are practiced by most of their parents and friends. Their bodily wants have been indulged but the heart, the soul that never dies has been left to surrounding influences.

My manner of teaching has been to get the pupils interested in their studies, making explanations, and practical application of the lessons. The pupils have made good improvement in their studies. My discipline has been moral suasion, pupils being large and old enough to govern themselves, if so disposed, while force has been employed to compel submission.

The house is pleasantly located, being new, and of fashionable style. The lot contains $\frac{1}{8}$ of an acre, which gives a very small playground. The house is well-ventilated and warmed by two stoves. The schoolroom is about 24 by 33 feet and is furnished; but is not furnished with maps or charts for reference. The seats are easy and well adapted to the age and convenience of the teacher. A new building like the one in this district has a tendency to check the evils of the young but it needs the assistance of the parents with the teacher to accomplish so arduous a task, and no better way to effect this can be adopted than to have parents visit the schools and look after the moral deportment of their children.

REMARKS BY TEACHERS

Remarks by Horace P. Downs, teacher at Merrill's Corner School, second or Winter Term, Jan. 17-Feb. 16, 1860. No. pupils in school 37.

The attendance of the pupils in this school is very irregular, consequently their progress is very much retarded; the multiplicity of classes the teacher is obliged to teach is another disadvantage, more classes than he can possibly do justice to. I think the parents do not-as a general rule-take that interest in the school they should; and I consider it a great impediment to the advancement of the pupils to have so many visitors--out of 34 visits recorded by me, no more than five or six were made by persons belonging to the district, but were few exceptions scholars from adjoining districts!

If the parents of those immediately concerned in the school would visit it more and the unconcerned less, I think the improvement of the pupils would be far greater. It is very evident that the value of the school will be "below par" until the feud which exists between the citizens is settled!

The school is very poorly furnished with textbooks. Some of the scholars have no books of their own, but depend upon the charity of others in their classes for the privilege of getting their lessons.

I think this deficiency is occasioned not so much by the poverty of the parents as by indifference with which they treat all subjects (quarrels excepted) pertaining to the school.

Remarks by Emily R. Bennett, teacher at Merrill's Corner School, May 23 to July 10, 1859 in answer to the following questions in the school register:

How many and what Books of Reference, belong to the school? "No books except a broom and a water pail and the last mentioned the pupils are inclined often to refer to."

How many sessions of school has the teacher taught before this term? "None of your business."

Remarks by Olive M. Pickering, teacher at the Ten Rod Road School in 1871. (June 5-Aug 4, The Summer School):

I have enjoyed a very pleasant term of school and have tried to have it not only pleasant but profitable for the scholars. The attendance was very good until the haying season commenced. Some of the older boys were obliged to leave school. The district is very much in need of a new schoolhouse and were the parents more interested in visiting school and making the house comfortable for their little ones, I trust they would find a greater improvement than can be made without their sympathy.

Remarks by T. T. Morrell, teacher at Place School, 1859-1860

As will be seen by the record, there has been some irregularity of attendance, owing in part, to a rash having been in school, and I think it may be added with justice that as every scholar between the ages of four and eighteen years, has attended, some of them would unavoidably be needed at home a part of the time; and such would frequently be in at recitation hours, but absent when school commenced in the morning and dismissal before it closed at night.

My regulations in the school have been somewhat strict but generally have been well obeyed. Some of the scholars did not whisper once during the term without permission nor in any way disturb the school.

REMARKS BY TEACHERS

Remarks by E. Frank Locke, teacher at Merrill's Corner School, Nov: 19, 1866 to Feb. 12, 1867. 43 scholars; wages $32 per month.

Believing that brevity is the soul of wit, by that I shall be actuated in making my remarks, not expecting of course, to say anything either witty or original.

In regard to the progress made in school, a sense of propriety suggests that I should leave that to your judgment. (ie. The school committee)

The evil of giving too much prominence to arithmetic prevails to a great extent in this school. Not, indeed, that arithmetic is studied too much-but other branches too little. It is indeed studied too much by the smaller scholars. As regards the larger scholars the loss is in the manner of studying. Not only in this school, but in most all schools, the pupils highest ambition is to get through the book, a spirit which demands attention even though the teacher encounters "a sea of troubles," as is often the case. Every effort was made to force the truth home to the scholars mind, that the elements should be thoroughly mastered. To some extent I was successful.

Efforts were made to create a love for our language, believing that the study of language is one of the greatest means by which the mind is trained and developed. Composition was stately required, in which, exercise, all were much interested.

This being my second term in school, I know something of the interest manifested by parents. Only two, having scholars in the school have visited the school the past term. When I was here before it was about the same. A lamentable fact it seems to me. Parents should show by their presence, their interest in the school and their cooperation with the teacher.

Finally, the term has been as pleasant perhaps, as schools generally are.

Remarks by Frank Emerson, teacher at Hornetown School, Nov. 18, 1861 to Feb. 15, 1862. 13 weeks at $19.80 a month.

The term of school recently closed has been longer than any previous term taught in this district for many years, and I believe parents as well as scholars have manifested an interest in the progress of the school, commendable in any community. A new and commodious schoolhouse has been built within a year or two and located in a pleasant and accesible part of the district, affording a favorable contrast with the former dilapidated shanty which preceeded it, though dignified by the name of schoolhouse.

I was pleased to discover on the part of the scholars a respect for moral conduct and on the part of the majority proper regard for religious principles in others.

Remarks by Eliza A. Twombly, teacher in the Intermediate School, District NO.9 in 1866:

Some parents say they have no time to visit the schoolroom. It is difficult for me to appreciate this excuse. It is the duty of every parent to show both teacher and scholar, by his frequent presence in school, that he is deeply interested in the welfare of the school. Much credit is due to those parents who have visited the school during the year. May others follow their example. Indeed the greatest question whether our schools shall accomplish the good they ought and might, rests in a great degree if not mainly with parents to decide. The teacher may have the ability of a Socrates, the firmness of a Luther, tempered with the mildness of a Melanethon, and every other qualification, and yet if the parents do not cooperate with the teacher, it will be a marvel if he succeeds. And in this connection I will add that, in pleading for school discipline, and for its support by parents, I have no reference to brutal, unkind treatment of pupils, not at all. There are cases where corporal punishment may be necessary. But these cases are rare. I often find children troublesome in school, the most troublesome of all are the children who have been petted at home and allowed their own way. I will say in all kindness to parents that if they wish to see their children good scholars, they must lay the foundation thereof in obedience.

SCHOOL COMMITTEE REPORTS 1868

Abstracts from School Committees' Reports to the State Superintendent of Public Instruction for New Hampshire, Amos Hadley, from the twenty-second report upon the common schools of New Hampshire to the State Board of Education, June, 1868.

ALTON: Five or six weeks schooling in a year is about as satisfactory to a mind craving knowledge as to hang up a chicken's wing in the sun, boil the shadow, and give the broth to a hungry man. The term commenced the first of June and ended in November, embracing nearly all the warm weather we had, and some more; for it is only in warm weather that a school can be kept in this district on account of the school-house. It is no more fit for a school-house than for a hotel. When I visit the school-house on a cold day, it reminds me of Dante's description of the infernal regions, where while one part is roasting, the other is freezing. One man has been to me and wanted I should 'blow up' the school-house. I know of no more effectual way of doing this than to put a few pounds of powder under it and touch it off; and it would be advisable at the same time to blow out a few rocks in the yard before the door, so that a person can get in without endangering his limbs.-----
John W. Currier, School Committee.

CONCORD: District No. 20; We encourage the practice of daily singing, and of calisthenics exercises in the schools; both of which contribute to good order, and to the health and mental vigor of the pupils, besides improving the voice and organs of speech. An old German teacher is said to have made this remark, that, "whenever his school began to sing, the Devil always went out of doors and began to growl."

HOOKSET: It is very proper for pupils to recite in the language of their text-books, but it is not sufficient for them to do this without a definite understanding of every word which is employed. The object of teaching is not to impart unintelligible words or sounds but ideas. They are also taught to find the poles of the earth, yet in many instances they get no definite idea of what is meant by the word "poles," and they would be unable to tell the difference between the north-pole, or the liberty pole, or a bean pole.

TUFTONBOROUGH: The matter of corporal punishment is at present attracting much attention in some quarters. Some favor its total abolition in the common schools. Your committee cannot coincide with this view. No doubt it may sometimes be used to advantage if it be made the last resort previous to expulsion, and if it is judiciously administered. But let the teacher be free from passion when correcting the pupil. No one who cannot govern himself is fit to govern others.

ANDOVER; Many parents appear to have the idea that, if they pay their taxes and send their children to school, it is all that is required of them. They shun the school-house and avoid the teacher. Will you avoid, will you neglect them? Should this be so? The school-house is your property. You have a right to enter. There is free admission. Here are your children, your dearest treasure. Here, too, is your servant, the teacher. Will you manifest no interest in the work being performed there, and in the manner of its performance? Would you entrust the care of your cattle or horses even to anyone, without looking after him and learning how he is discharging his duties? And do you take less interest in your children than in your cattle and horses? It should be borne in mind that, if the maxim is true, "As is the master, so is the school," so it is equally true, "As are the parents, so will be the teacher and the school."-----Elbridge Emery.

STEWARTSTOWN: I know of but one district in town in which the action taken by parents speaks that they realize that the success of the school depends upon them; and, were you to visit this school, you would find the majority of the scholars farther advanced than those of the same age and of the same mental capacity in the other districts. And it is not because they have longer schools, or employ better teachers, but is owing to home influence.

PIERMONT: Still further we notice ---what is a good lesson out of school--- that, among the larger boys, we have seen no tobacco chewing or smoking. We have seen such things in school. May their mouths always be clean, and their breath be pure.

LIBSON: Nothing can be more pernicious than the practice of constantly changing teachers. No pecuniary consideration should induce you to part with the services of a faithful and laborious teacher who has gained the confidence and affection of her pupils and is successful in imparting knowledge to them, for she cannot be easily replaced.

BEDFORD: The practice of breaking in raw recruits in our schools for the benefit of other towns is a poor policy. We can well afford to have some patience with the inexperience of one whom we may hope to retain in our schools, if the first term does not quite come up to standard. Let us then, as far as possible, employ those teachers in our town, and pay them so liberally that they will not feel compelled to seek employment elsewhere.

DERRY: If we consider what we want to accomplish by our schools, we may say that the leading object, from the beginning to end of school life, is to enable the young to think, --- to think correctly and consecutively, so that they may be able to grapple strongly, survey rightly, and decide justly, the thousand questions which come up in every department of life. In the family and in the field, in the shop and in the office, as well as in the higher walks of business and public station, the men and women of our time need to think, to consider, to decide, each for one's self, and often on matters intimately connected with personal happiness, domestic comfort, and the public welfare.--- E. C. Parsons

SEABROOK: Ought we to expect schools with good order when scholars are not taught at home that they are to be obedient in school? We may have the best teachers that natural ability and experience can make; but until parents will learn to do their duty our schools will fail in many important respects and be no credit to the town.

SOUTH-HAMPTON: The principle obstacle to progress in our schools is the trifling value placed upon education by too many parents; with them the education of their children is of secondary importance, while the acquisition of riches occupied their undivided attention.

SOUTH-NEWMARKET: Your committee would recommend that more attention be given to the study and practice of vocal music in our schools. That all children with very rare exceptions, can be taught to sing, is now admitted by all. It has a refining influence which we can ill afford to lose. Let anyone who doubts it go into our primary schools and listen to forty or fifty happy voices ringing with some spirited song, such as "John Brown's Little Indian," and "I Have a Father in the Promised Land," &c., while every face is radiant with enthusiasm. Such an exercise, consuming little time, wasting none, has undoubted influence for good.

FARMINGTON: We should make our schools so good and long continued that our youth would not need to go to other institutions to fit them for the common business and usual stations in life. Till this end is attained, our schools do not fully answer their design. But, to do this, they should reach a higher standard of studies and attainments.

Too much aid in performing examples is often expected of teachers. There is not time in school hours for this; and mental discipline and full mastery of the subjects are best gained by personal efforts, and conquest of difficulties by the pupils themselves. Parents should be cautious about listening to pupils' complaints that the teacher does not aid them enough.

Either of two objects may be made prominent; viz., advancement in studies or government. But the first is the chief and only ultimate object; the last is only a means absolutely necessary to that end. And only so much attention should be expended on government as will best secure improvement. Some rude scholars need strict and severe government, but most of our youth should be first interested in studies, and then they will give little difficulty.

Rev. Roger M. Sargent, Dr. Daniel W. Edgerley, Elder Samuel N. Tufts.
