ARARE OLD VIOLIN.

What is Said to he a Genuine Sminer is Possessian of a Farmington Mas.

blention was, made last week of a violin played, in the Congregational church, by George A. Davis, which was repaired by Ita White in 1859. The violin in question merits more than passing note. It is not the property of Mr. Davis, but of Stephen H. Foss of this town. It is believed by experts to be a genuine Stainer, a printed all pup-on it, recording that it was made by Stainer at Tyrol in or about 1650. Though this printing does not guarantee its genuineness, it is believed by connois-eurs to be a genuine instrument of Stainer's make. The most prized viclins were made during the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries in Italy by the Amatis, Stradivari, the Guarneirs and Stainers. The late Ole Bull played upon an instrument made by Stradivari, for which he paid $10,000.

The violin in possession of Mr. Foss has an exquisitely inlaid back, and its scroll is a finaly carved lion's head. Its tone has wonderful strength and puritye

In 1865, the violin came to Mr. Stephen H. Foes. It was owned by Leonard Whitney of Dover, who sold it to a man named Hoyt in Barrington. -Bargains in ladies, misses and Hoyt played it at kitchen dances. was a soldier in the Rebellion and his tinue until odd lots are sold. If you family were in very destitute circumwant to buy shoes at one-half price, stances when he sold his well-loved violin. Mr. Davis will play upon the instrument at the symphony concert this Thursday evening. It may be of interest to note that the violin upon which Mr. Davis plays ordinarily, cost him $450.00. If the other is a Stainer as it doubtless is, its value is very great.
