

Dentist Faces Fine Over AIDS Patient

By GWEN IFILL

An administrative law judge has recommended that the New York City Commission on Human Rights fine a Manhattan dentist for refusing to treat a patient who had AIDS.

The judge, Rosemarie Maldonado, ruled that Dr. William Hurwitz violated public-accommodations laws that guarantee equal access when he refused in 1987 to perform a root canal on John Campanella, who had been diagnosed with AIDS the year before.

The $7,500 fine would be turned over to the estate of Mr. Campanella, who died in 1988.

According to the complaint filed with the commission, Mr. Campanella sought treatment from Dr. Hurwitz on the advice of a friend. He told Dr. Hurwitz he had AIDS before the dentist took X-rays and examined him.

'The Nature of Your Illness'

Dr. Hurwitz decided Mr. Campanella needed a root canal, but sent the patient a letter later that day saying he would not treat him "due to the nature of your illness" and because his office lacked the proper sterilization equipment. He suggested that Mr. Campanella seek treatment at Lenox Hill Hospital instead.

Judge Maldonado's recommendation, dated July 31, now goes to the 14-member Human Rights Commission. Mitchell Karp, the commission lawyer who argued the case, said yesterday that the judge's recommendation was likely to be upheld by the panel, which has until next Wednesday to act.

The commission has made similar decisions before, but state courts have issued conflicting rulings on the issue. In 1988, the commission fined Northern Dispensary, a Greenwich Village dental clinic, $47,000 for turning away two patients infected with HIV, the virus that causes AIDS.

Two other cases, involving a dentist and an orthopedic surgeon who refused to treat AIDS patients, are still being appealed in New York State courts.

Mr. Karp said the decision would strike a blow for the rights of patients who are faced with fewer health-care options as the national debate over health workers and AIDS intensifies.

"In the wake of all this, what often gets lost in the discussion is the ability of an HIV-infected person to obtain needed care," Mr. Karp said.

At issue in a New York City case: equal access to medical care.

But a lawyer for Dr. Hurwitz, Arnold Weiss, said the judge's action would "equate professional doctors' offices with newsstands" by forcing dentists to treat everyone who walked in.

Dr. Hurwitz, reached by telephone yesterday, said publicity about the Campanella case had had no effect on his Fifth Avenue dental practice. He referred other questions to his lawyer.

The case of a Florida dentist who is believed to have infected five of his patients before he died of AIDS has attracted widespread attention, but it is the only documented instance of a doctor-patient transmission of the AIDS virus.

The Federal Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta have issued guidelines for infected health-care workers, and the United States Senate passed a bill last month that would impose criminal penalties on health workers who perform invasive procedures while knowingly carrying the virus.

The latest New York case is different because it involves the question of access for infected patients rather than protection against doctors or dentists who carry the virus.

Mr. Weiss said Dr. Hurwitz's decision not to treat Mr. Campanella was a medical determination made at a time when it was unclear how AIDS patients could be safely treated. "The situation back then was, everybody was unclear about what was dangerous and what was and was not in the best interest of the patient," he said.

No Decision on Appeal

He said Dr. Hurwitz, who was then teaching at the New York University Medical Center, was simply doing his best to abide by the standards of isolation and sterilization in dealing with AIDS that he said were common practice at the hospital where he taught.

"Everybody was coming out with different regulations and different guidelines," Mr. Weiss said. "He was trying to understand them, reconcile them and make a quick decision."

Mr. Weiss said he and his client have not yet decided whether to appeal the commission's decision if it accepts Judge Maldonado's recommendation.

The Americans with Disabilities Act, a Federal law that takes effect in January, will include private medical offices on a list of places that must guarantee access under public-accommodations law. And New York City's human rights law was amended in June to specifically define a public accommodation as any place that provides goods and services.

"From our point of view, the law has always been clear that this is discrimination, illegal as well as unethical," said Mr. Campanella's lawyer, Evan Wolfson. "The experience of people with HIV across the country is that discrimination against them is pervasive."

Ron Christopher

AIDS Educator, 53

Ron Christopher, an AIDS educator died on Sunday at Roosevelt Hospital. He was 53 years old and lived in Manhattan.

He died of lymphoma, said his companion, Philip Williams.

Mr. Christopher helped develop the curriculum at the AIDS Training Institute of the New York City Health Department, where he worked for almost four years. He started his AIDS work in 1983, helping patients as an early volunteer in the Gay Men's Health Crisis "buddy" program. He was also a volunteer AIDS educator for the American Red Cross.

His earlier career was in advertising and public relations, working with the Brooklyn Academy of Music, the Chelsea Theater Center in Brooklyn, Ballet Hispanico in Manhattan, the Houston Ballet, the Chicago Art Institute and the Goodman Theater in Chicago.

Minneapolis councilor dies of AIDS

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Minneapolis City Council Vice President Brian Coyle, one of the city's first openly gay politicians, died at his home of heart failure and other complications of AIDS. He was 47.

Coyle in April publicly disclosed his six-year battle with the Human Immunodeficiency Virus [HIV], saying he wanted "to show people with the virus that it is possible to be HIV-positive and remain productive."

Technically, Coyle didn't have full-blown AIDS, but was HIV positive, his sister said.

He championed causes ranging from neighborhood improvements to a domestic-partners ordinance in more than eight years on the City Council.

Coyle had represented the Sixth Ward in south Minneapolis since 1983, riding into office after a campaign that relied heavily on a coalition of gays and community activists.

In February, after a long battle, Brian Coyle the council approved his proposal to extend sick and bereavement leave to unmarried domestic partners of gay, lesbian and heterosexual city workers.

"Brian Coyle was a strong advocate for the gay and lesbian and low-income communities of the city of Minneapolis," Council President Sharon Sayles Belton said after his death August 23. "His death is a deep loss for everyone."

Coyle had long championed progressive, liberal causes, from a successful plan to create a civilian board to review charges of police misconduct to a stalled plan to create a downtown youth center.

Friends had maintained an around-the-clock vigil for him over the past three weeks as it became clear the end was near, said his sister, Kathy Coyle, of Fargo, North Dakota.

Coyle's politics changed dramatically over the years. He grew up in Moorhead, and followed his parents' conservative ways, organizing "125 Students for Nixon."

But as a student at the University of Minnesota in the 1960s, he joined groups protesting the growing U.S. involvement in Vietnam. He was an officer and spokesman in the Student Peace Union at the university when the group was accused of consorting with the enemy after it invited a communist to speak on campus.

He faced two federal indictments that accused him of dodging the draft during the Vietnam War, but both were dismissed by judges who ruled that there was substantial evidence that Coyle qualified as a conscientious objector.

After he graduated in 1967, he became a community activist.

In the late 1970s, he became involved in the controversy over a high-voltage power line from western Minnesota to the Twin Cities area, and was arrested as he protested alongside farmers who didn't want the lines strung across their land. He fought to keep snowmobiles and motorboats out of the Boundary Waters Canoe Area Wilderness and fought to keep a domed stadium out of downtown Minneapolis.

Coyle ran for a U.S. Senate seat in 1978 but never made it to the general election. In 1981 he lost by a narrow margin in his first bid for a seat on the City Council. He won a seat two years later despite a last-minute effort to discredit him because he was gay. He had only token opposition in his two reelection campaigns.

"Brian Coyle brought to city government a keen sense of justice and an ability to get things done," said Mayor Don Fraser. "He was an intelligent, articulate advocate on behalf of fairness and decency. Residents of the Sixth Ward and the entire city benefited from his dedication to the public interest. Brian will be remembered as a thoughtful, caring public servant."

The Minneapolis City Charter calls for a special election within 75 days to fill Coyle's seat.

A funeral service for Coyle was held August 27. The flag at the Minneapolis City Hall was flown at half-staff for one week in remembrance of Coyle.

SGT GREGG COMLEY, US Marine Corps, 2/21/53-12/9/91. DIED OF AIDS

Tony Caporaletti, Jr. 1989

former Boston resident, GCN staff member

Tony Caporaletti, Jr. of Silver Lake in Los Angeles died Thursday, December 14, 1989 after a long illness at Miriam Hospital, Providence, RI. He was a regular book reviewer and freelance feature writer for Edge magazine. He is survived by his mother, father, ten brothers and sisters, a paternal grandmother, two nieces and one nephew.

Tony was born on November 17, 1952, in Philadelphia, PA, where he spent the first seven years of his life. His family later moved to Seekonk, Massachusetts. He grew up in Seekonk and Providence, Rhode Island. He attended the University of Rhode Island

At the University of Rhode Island (1970-1973), Tony became active in political movements including the anti-war movement, abortion rights and gay liberation. He was a member of Kingston Gay Liberation, the student group at the university.

After leaving URI, Tony became a typesetter for the student newspaper. At this time along with other students at URI and friends in Providence, he became the publisher of a gay newspaper, Morning Glory, which had a circulation of around 3,000 and was distributed around New England. It was the first gay newspaper in Rhode Island. Caporaletti also wrote for an underground newspaper, The Point.

In 1973, Caporaletti moved to Boston, where he worked at various typesetting jobs until he joined the staff of Gay Community News. He began as a fundraiser and also served as a columnist of their "Did You See?" column, classified ad manager, feature writer and office manager at different times. Caporaletti was a prominent figure in gay liberation organizations in Providence and Boston.

He moved to Los Angeles in 1979 with his lover at the time, George Dimsey. During most of that time Tony was a typesetter for various publishing houses around the city. In 1983 he joined the staff of AIDS Project Los Angeles as a receptionist.

Tony left APLA and worked for a year at the Gay and Lesbian Community Services of Los Angeles as Administrative Assistant to the Deputy Director. He left the position to continue his studies at Cal State L.A. in psychology.

He published book reviews as a regular columnist for Edge magazine and began to write a series of articles based on his experiences being diagnosed and living with AIDS.

His body was cremated and distributed in the ocean by his family and friends. A private memorial service was held December 18, 1989 in Providence, and a public memorial service will be held in Los Angeles at the Northern Lights Alternative House on Sunday, January 14, 1990.

In lieu of flowers donations are suggested to be made to Amnesty International, Save the Children or the Necessities of Life Program at APLA. □

Gary's world revolved around new dance music. He was part of a breed of people when dance music was coming into its own, searching for new, exciting dance beats long before they would ever reach the airwaves. After the rock and rollers turned disco into a dirty name, Gary equated the term with the height of twentieth century dance music.

When we remember Gary, we think of him working the midnight shift. Gary—Thank God It's Friday.

Randy Cottrill

Randy Cottrill died of AIDS on November 19, 1990. He was 40 years old.

Randy will be deeply missed. His sincerity, kindness and concern for other people touched the lives of many and brought him many friends. He grew up in Bremen, Ohio, a small town south of Columbus. He graduated from Fairfield Union High School and attended Ohio University. He lived for a time in Santa Monica, California, and moved to Boston in 1974. He worked as a printer for Star Market, and was a floor coordinator for Beth Israel Hospital. It was in that hospital that he died.

After being diagnosed with AIDS, he became active in support groups and brought comfort and hope to other people with the disease. He raised over $1400 for the AIDS ACTION Committee in 1988. Friends fondly remember him as a collector of vintage cars. His companion for many years was Bean, a shaggy dog. He lived on Hano Street in one of the great funky-kitsch households of Allston. His roommates, friends, and family were at a

ROBERT EDMUND COREY

Robert E. Corey, 31

Art therapist; teacher in Milton

Robert Edmund Corey, therapeutic art director at St. Coletta's School in Braintree from 1982 to 1988 and an art teacher at Milton High School from 1988 until September, died of AIDS yesterday at his home in Milton. He was 31.

A native of Milton, Mr. Corey graduated from Braintree High School in 1978 and the Massachusetts College of Art in 1982. He received the college trustees' award as the outstanding graduate.

Mr. Corey had been a volunteer tutor at St. Coletta's while an art student. During his teaching tenure, he coached in the Special Olympics program and served as school photographer.

His paintings and collages have been exhibited at the Fuller Museum in Brockton, South Shore Art Center in Cohasset and the Yezerski Howard Gallery in Boston.

He leaves his parents, Edmund and Laurel (McGibbon) Corey of Braintree; a sister, Donna Umlauf of Quincy; and his companion, Thomas N. Wallace.

A funeral Mass will be said at 11 a.m. Monday in St. John the Baptist Church, Quincy.

AIDS Photos Brew Controversy at HIV Center

LOS ANGELES (Nov. 29 GayNet) — Three photographs made with the cremated remains of Robert Christensen, 39, a Long Beach man who died of AIDS, have stirred a controversy at the Valley HIV/AIDS Center in Van Nuys, Calif., where they will be on display through December. The photos, which are printed on glass using Christensen's ashes, are haunting, ghost-like images, and patients at the center strongly disagree about whether they should be shown or not. "The reactions are very extreme," says Veronica Matos, who works at the AIDS health facility. Some people with AIDS at the center called the photographs "an insult" and consider them ghoulish. Others say anything that draws attention to the grim reality of the epidemic is badly needed. Christensen made arrangements for the specially-printed photo display before his death last year.

Lauro Corona, Brazilian TV star, at age 32

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil — Television star Lauro Corona, best known for his role in the Brazilian soap opera "Dancin' Days," died Thursday from complications apparently caused by AIDS, a hospital worker said. He was 32.

The Globo television network, Brazil's largest, said Corona died of "respiratory insufficiency and generalized infection."

A worker at the Sao Vicente Clinic in Rio said on condition of anonymity the cause of death was "almost certainly complications arising from AIDS."

The actor's family instructed the clinic not to release any information about Corona's death to journalists, she said.

Earlier this year, Corona dropped out of a TV Globo soap opera, saying he was suffering from fatigue. The press at that time reported the actor was suffering from acquired immune deficiency syndrome.

Corona's biggest success came in 1980 in the prime-time soap opera "Dancin' Days," which also featured actress Sonia Braga. The show later was broadcast in 35 countries, including the United States, France, Portugal, Spain, Italy and Poland.

Corona was buried Thursday at Rio's Sao Joao Batista cemetery. The burial was attended by more than 200 people, including actors, musicians and family members.

John V. Caturano, 38

Was fashion coordinator

John V. Caturano, 38, of Melrose, formerly of West Haven, Conn., died of pneumonia Thursday at his home.

At the time of his death, Mr. Caturano had been employed as a fashion coordinator for Jordan Marsh Co. in Boston for eight years.

Born in New Haven, he was a 1975 graduate of the Pater Art School in Hamden, Conn., with an associate degree in interior design.

He had previously been employed as a designer for the H.L. Jays Home Fashion Center in Norwalk, Conn., Bloomingdales in Stamford, Conn., Ethan Allen and the Carriage House Gallery, both in Danbury, Conn.

Mr. Caturano leaves his parents, John and Betty Caturano, and a brother, Ronald A., all of West Haven; and two nephews.

Frederick Combs, An Actor, Director And Playwright, 57

By LEE A. DANIELS

Frederick Combs, an actor, playwright, director and teacher, died on Sept. 19 at his home in Los Angeles. He was 57 years old.

He died of AIDS, said a friend, Jane Richmond.

Mr. Combs created the role of Donald in the 1968 play "The Boys in the Band." Its blunt, provocative and sympathetic examination of homosexuality drew extensive notice and critical praise. One reviewer described Mr. Combs's character as "the all-American man-about-analysis who can't figure out why he prefers boys to girls and books to both." Mr. Combs continued in the role during the play's London tour, and repeated it for the 1970 film version of the play.

A Broadway Debut

Mr. Combs was born in Virginia Beach, Va., and trained at the Barter Theater in Abingdon, Va. He made his Broadway debut in the 1961 play "A Taste of Honey." He was a member of the cast for both the Broadway production and the play's national tour.

Mr. Combs later appeared in Franco Zeffirelli's production of "The Lady of the Camellias" and several productions of the New York Shakespeare Festival, including "A Midsummer Night's Dream, and "The Knack."

He was a writer in residence at the Edward Albee Playwriting Foundation in Montauk, L.I., and his first play, "The Children's Mass," was produced at The Theatre de Lys in New York City in 1973. He had several of his one-act plays produced in Los Angeles, and he also directed several plays, including Harvey Fierstein's "International Stud," a part of Mr. Fierstein's Torch Song Trilogy.

In 1979, Mr. Combs founded the L.A./Actor's Lab, where he taught privately and conducted classes. He was also active in a pilot program headed by Jacques d'Amboise, the dancer and founder of the National Dance Institute, under the auspices of the Los Angeles Unified School District introducing theater to grammar school students in Los Angeles.

He is survived by a sister, Sandra Flanigan.

Albert G. Columbro, 41

Interior designer from Boston

Albert G. Columbro, an interior designer from Boston whose austere style was called Euro-Japanese, minimalist, postmodern, or simply "spare," died Tuesday in his parents' home in Revere from complications due to AIDS. He was 41.

Mr. Columbro was the owner of Albert Columbro Interiors in Boston. From that base, he created interiors for private clients and decorated showhouses for the Junior League of Boston, the Northshore Jewish Community Center, the Society of Arts and Crafts in Boston, and the March of Dimes.

He was also on the design committee for the new Fenway Community Health Center.

He was born in Revere and graduated from Don Savio High School there. He graduated from the Massachusetts College of Art in 1972.

Mr. Columbro had also been teaching interior design at the New England School of Art and Design since 1979, gathering a following of students who considered him an inspiration and a role model.

He created the decor of the conference room for the Hospice at Mission Hill, a home for those suffering from AIDS-related illnesses. The room contains a mural that includes fragments of poems and quotations. Among the quotations are two selected by Mr. Columbro: "Our lives are shaped by those who love us and by those who refuse to love us," and "You are what you are committed to."

Mr. Columbro leaves his parents, Gerald and Anna (Rossi) Columbro of Revere; and several aunts and uncles.

Funeral services and burial will be private. A memorial service will be announced later.

Steve Callahan, one of the founders and the current Executive Co-Director of New Friends of San Francisco, died on January 21st, 1989 of AIDS. He was thirty-five years old.

Steve was first diagnosed in 1982 with GRID (Gay Related Immune Deficiency). This diagnosis was later changed to KS related AIDS. At this time, Steven had the distinction of being one of the nation's first 100 PWAs.

In 1982, San Francisco was fighting to come to terms with AIDS. Fear and ignorance were the norm. Steven was forced to experience firsthand the discrimination that went hand in hand with an AIDS diagnosis. He lost his job, was locked out of his apartment, found his possessions burned, and found himself living on the streets.

Steve decided to fight back and become an activist and an advocate. He became one of the founding volunteers of the San Francisco AIDS Foundation, the Stop AIDS Project, and the first chapter of People With Aids (PWA-SF). He was one of the first PWAs to become involved with the Shanti Project emotional support program. He later helped to establish the Pacific Presbyterian Medical Center AIDS Volunteer Program. In 1983, Steve traveled to Colorado where he helped to write the "Denver Principles" which soon became the PWA

Bill of Rights.

In 1986, Steven and other PWAs worked to establish New Friends, the first all volunteer agency to be managed and staffed by unpaid PWAs working to educate and advocate for expanded services. New Friends quickly changed the old term of PWA to People LIVING with AIDS (PLWA). During this period, Steven was living life to its fullest. As the number of cases grew, so did Steven's involvement. He became an outspoken advocate for national health care, expanded social security benefits, a national policy banning discrimination on the basis of a diagnosis, and a more intense national model of educational programs.

Through New Friends, Steve began to work on several committees at the San Francisco Department of Public Health. It was here that Steven was at his best. He still considered education as the primary tool to be used in combating AIDS. When New Friends was asked by the San Francisco Department of Public Health to co-sponsor the 2nd National AIDS Conference, Steven used this unique opportunity to confront care givers with his plans and ideas for truly aggressive educational programs.

Steve credited his long term survival to his continued involvement and activism. He often had to force himself to keep up with his schedule but he was always there when needed.

Steven G. Cavalieri

Visual merchandiser at Jordan Marsh

Steven G. Cavalieri, 29, of 140 Clarendon St., Boston, died Tuesday, March 20, 1990 in the company of family and friends at the New England Deaconess Hospital.

For the past five years, he worked in visual merchandising at Jordan Marsh. Both in his work and his life, Steven generously shared his creative imagination, his sensitivity to beauty, and his flair for the presentation of any moment or event.

His friends remember his light-heartedness, his childlike sense of fun, and his ability to take pleasure in what he had.

Steven's strength and quiet courage during his illness set an example for those close to him.

He was happy in the last two years of his life and devoted to his friend and companion, David King.

The family Steven leaves behind includes his parents, George and Gertrude Cavalieri, his brother and sister-in-law Mark and Cindy Cavalieri, his sister Linda Marie Cavalieri, his grandmother Mrs. Mary Cavalieri and many dear friends.

A memorial service will be held April

Michael E. Clark

May 7, 1993

Michael Clark, 39, passed away on Friday, May 7, 1993, of an AIDS-related illness at Davies Medical Center, where he was employed as a nurse.

Mike was a Wisconsin native and U.W. graduate. He moved from Chicago to San Francisco over a year ago to fulfill a life-long goal. Mike was actively involved in Chicago softball, which he would discuss endlessly.

He will be remembered for his spunky determination and wicked sense of humor. Not many of us escaped without one of his nicknames. Mike taught us to "go for it," and to live life to the fullest.

Robert Scott Chase

July 26, 1954 - October 16, 1991

Robert Scott Chase died suddenly Oct. 16 of complications resulting from chronic liver illness. He had also been diagnosed with AIDS since August, 1989. Scott was 37 years old. He is survived and remembered by Jim Ferreira, his lover of ten years, and by many close friends and "family." Jim, their friends Vinny and "The Johns," and Scott's physician, Peggy Roberts of Fenway Community Health Center, were with him at the time of his death.

Scott was born in Massachusetts and later moved and grew up in the Midwest. He attended the University of Michigan, where he graduated with high honors and a degree in History. During college, Scott was a cheerleader with the Michigan Wolverines, and sang with the Young Americans, traveling both nationally and abroad.

In the mid-1970s, Scott returned to the Boston area to live. He worked in managerial and accounting capacities, and later became a professional clothing model. More recently, Scott managed a private cleaning business. When Scott became disabled due to AIDS, he found new and rewarding work as an AIDS educator/speaker with the AIDS Action Committee of Boston.

He met Jim in 1982. Together, they became challenged to deal with their shared histories of child abuse, and finally, AIDS. Both Scott and Jim have been visible, outspoken educators concerning all of these issues, positively affecting thousands of others through their speaking engagements, and in the larger media. Scott was a valued member of the AAC Speaker's Bureau and Buddy Program, and had performed more than 100 speaking assignments while a volunteer there. He was also a member of the Mainely Men organization of West Gardiner, Maine.

Scott was known and respected for his integrity, openness and perseverance. He approached living as something to experience fully, and he faced his mortality with graceful honesty. His courage and sense of humor will be always remembered and appreciated by his friends. Scott's spirit will continue on the lives of all whom he touched. He will be missed very much.

There will be a quilt panel made for Scott by his lover, and any friends who wish to take part. The panel will be created in the Portland, Maine area sometime this winter. It will be added to the Names Project Memorial AIDS Quilt, honoring those who struggled and lived with AIDS.

Scott was cremated and a memorial service was held Nov. 3 at First Church in Cambridge, Congregational. Donations can be made to: Boston Self-Help Center, 18 Williston Road, Brookline, 02146. Per his wishes, Scott's ashes will be delivered to Arizona's Grand Canyon by his lover.

A spring, 1992, memorial service is planned for Scott at his request. It will be held at Cathedral of The Pines, Rindge, NH.

The Cadwells Were Living in Pittsfield 12 Years Before There Was a Pittsfield

By ARTHUR MYERS

Pittsfield seems to be getting all excited about being 200 years old, but there's a family here who has been living on the same tract for longer than that, and they're quite matter-of-fact about it.

Out on South Mountain Road stands a house, sandwiched between new ranch houses, that has sheltered this family since 1810, when even then they were old settlers. The house is a deep, rectangular, white building, so tastefully designed that it hardly stands out in the landscape at all.

Current residents are Mrs. Dan K. Cadwell, a widow, and her two sons, Francis C., 20, and Calvin T., 25. The boys are direct descendants of a Dan Cadwell who came here in 1749 with his bride, to build a log cabin on the site where the house is now.

Deed From King George II

Dan's father, Abel, was a Connecticut man who had received a deed to the land from King George II. As a wedding gift, he sent two sons, Dan and Timothy, the latter also newly married, up to the wilds of Pontoosuck Province, as this neck of the woods was then called. Timothy also built a cabin, but he seems to have dropped out of the picture somewhere along the way.

Dan's progeny, however, stayed close to home. In begetting order, the heads of the family were William, Ambrose, William, and the modern Dan, who died two years ago. They were farmers, mostly, specializing until recent years in the raising of sheep. The tract still covers some 70 acres, although a couple of lots have been sold.

The Cadwell men had a predilection for wives whose names began with the letter "A." These include two Abigails, two Annas, one Annie and an Achsah. The current Mrs. Cadwell, the former Miss Elizabeth Codey of Pittsfield, was the first to break the tradition. She is the sister of J. Donald Codey, president of the Union Federal Savings and Loan Association.

The Cadwell tradition seems safe in the hands of the younger son, Francis. A student at the University of Massachusetts, he hopes to become a museum specialist, and eventually settle on his ancestral acres. "I hope to keep the house," he says, "and see how many more generations I can push it."

Francis started out at the U. of M. to be a geologist, but it was almost inevitable that he should switch from rocks to artifacts. For all his life he's been inhabiting a living museum.

Mrs. Dan K. Cadwell and Francis C. Cadwell with their 151-year-old house.

Relics abound throughout the house. There are four bedrooms, a living room, parlor, den, dining room, bathroom and kitchen. The present Cadwells have done a lot of tasteful papering and painting, and the house may well now be in its best shape since it was put up. They've saved some of the original wall paper, which was still clinging in the 1930s.

Scattered thickly throughout the house are items to make reel the mind of any devotee of antiquity. Candle molds, old glassware, a steelyard (for weighing), a flax wheel, handblown flasks (one has Zachary Taylor on one side and George Washington on the other, apparently an election campaign flask for Taylor) toleware (painted tin containers), old framed poems (including one uncomplimentary one about British taxation "composed during the late war").

Francis has filled a bookcase with books the newest of which dates from 1877, and some going back 200 years. They are mostly school books and Bibles.

Some of these relics were on display at the Athenaeum last month. Others will be shown at the Berkshire Museum, starting July 5, as part of the Bicentennial display.

The Cadwells can stand on their back porch and see a beautiful vista of Pittsfield. They can look out their front window and watch skiers sliding down the man-made snow at Bousquet's. And in their house they are firmly rooted in tradition. They don't seem to be thinking about moving.

Like a Museum

A trip through the Cadwell house is like visiting an unusually interesting museum, except that the myriad of antique items weren't brought in for show — they were used there.

Francis has fixed up a show case in the parlor that contains such as the following:

Apple peeler, cobbler's tools, tailor's goose, foot warmer, sheep brand, wool cards, flax hetchels, sap sprouts, powder horns, snuff boxes.

On an old cobbler's bench in the middle of the room is the sword of Dan Cadwell, who had Loyalist sympathies but still rose to major in the Revolutionary Army. Also, one of his epaulettes. Also a wolf trap.

Around the room is arranged a cheese press, a whey basket, reels for winding yarn, models of barques, hand-made shoes, aged clocks that still run.

The Cadwells rarely threw anything away, and documents that go back generations tell a story that parallels the history of the nation. The oldest is a deed dated 1742. All the Cadwell men kept accounts, and in one such book — the first William's — is recorded a safari to Albany with two teams of oxen, and back with one team of oxen and a barrel of whisky. Probably medicinal, say the present Cadwells.

They have a complete set of Farmers' Almanacs, dating back before 1800.

Bruce Curll Psychiatrist, 28

July 18-1991
Bruce Curll, a former psychiatrist on the staff of St. Vincent's Hospital and Medical Center in Manhattan, died on Sunday at Brackenridge Hospital in Austin, Tex. He was 28 years old and lived in Manhattan.

Dr. Curll died of complications arising from AIDS, said a spokeswoman for the Columbia University College of Physicians and Surgeons, where Dr. Curll received his medical degree in 1989.

A native of Philadelphia, Dr. Curll joined the staff of St. Vincent's as a resident in psychiatry in July 1989. In 1985, he graduated magna cum laude from Texas A & M University, where he was chosen a Presidential Scholar.

His companion was Lawrence Smith. He is survived by his parents, Allan and Frances Curll of Austin; three sisters, Dr. Cynthia Brinson and Adrienne Milloy, both of Austin, and Dr. Madelyn Curll of Bainbridge Island, Wash., and a brother, Brian Curll of Maui, Hawaii.

Willard Ching, 50, A National Leader Of Interior Designers

By BRUCE LAMBERT

Willard Ching, a noted interior designer of commercial buildings and a leader in professional societies in his industry, died Tuesday at New York University Hospital. He was 50 years old and lived in Manhattan.

He died of respiratory failure complicated by AIDS, said Charles Bell, a business partner and painter who was his companion for 22 years.

Among the interiors Mr. Ching designed were New York City's police headquarters, Time magazine's executive offices, Chubb & Son's 85,000-square-foot office in Manhattan and the New Rochelle Hospital Medical Center. Many of his projects were featured in design publications.

Mr. Ching had served as the national director of the Institute of Business Design and president of the National Council for Interior Design Qualification. He was also a member of the National Examiners Committee of the American Society of Interior Designers, vice president of the Governing Board of Contract Interior Design Standards and vice chairman of the National Legislative Coalition for Interior Design.

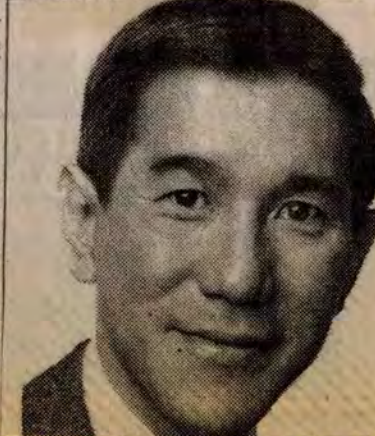

He was also on the advisory boards of A&D Business and Design Source magazines, New York University's Real Estate Institute and Interior Designer for Licensing in New York. He served on the American Arbitration Association as an expert on interior design disputes.

He was born in Honolulu and came to New York to study at Pratt Institute, where he graduated in 1964. He then began working for designers in New York and New Jersey, becoming a senior project designer at ISD and director of interior design at Kuhn, Drake & Hessberger.

In 1978 he founded his own firm, Will Ching Planning and Design, based in SoHo, and was its president.

He also taught part time at Pratt and the Real Estate Institute.

Surviving are his mother, Katherine, and a sister, Janice Ching Yee, both of Honolulu, and four brothers, Norman and Clinton, both of Honolulu, Franklin of Los Gatos, Calif., and Wallace of Silver Spring, Md.

KENNETH E. CIERPIAL

Kenneth E. Cierpial, 41

Ran ministry for AIDS patients

Kenneth Emil Cierpial, who ran a Catholic ministry that served people who have HIV or AIDS, died Monday in his Boston home of secondary infection due to AIDS. He was 41.

Mr. Cierpial's ministry was based at the Jesuit Urban Center. He worked both as a chaplain at Boston City Hospital and as a licensed practitioner of certain techniques of oriental medicine.

He was recently awarded the 1992 Schweitzer Urban Fellowship by the Schweitzer Foundation of America.

Mr. Cierpial was born in Chicopee and attended Chicopee High School and Westfield State College. In 1971 at age 18, he was elected to the Chicopee School Committee, one of the youngest persons in the nation ever to serve on a school board.

He went on to earn a graduate degree in education from Harvard's graduate school of education and then a master's degree from Harvard's divinity school. His master's thesis dealt with a holistic model for dealing with people infected with the AIDS virus.

Mr. Cierpial worked as a teacher and administrator at Bay State Junior College in Newburyport for several years after graduating from the divinity school. In 1986, he studied Polish literature at the Jagellonian University in Krakow, Poland. While in Poland, he became familiar with artists and poets who had been active in the Solidarity movement when it was an underground organization opposing the ruling Communist Party.

Mr. Cierpial leaves his parents, Emily (Kopaczek) and Emil Cierpial of Chicopee; a sister, Nancy Rudek of Stafford Springs, Conn.; and his partner, Robert Canavello of Boston.

A funeral Mass will be said at 9:30 a.m. Friday in the Jesuit Urban Center. His ashes will be strewn in the ocean off Eastern Point Retreat

CERNY—Frank, 42, of home in New York City on July 15, 1991, after a lengthy illness. He is survived by his parents, Frank and Libby, in Eureka, CA; his devoted brother, Tony, and his sister-in-law, Janice, in Pleasanton, CA; and by several aunts, uncles and cousins. He is also survived by his loving friends, Raoul Genoud and Victoria Olan, in Buenos Aires, Argentina; Elizabeth Browne, Raymond Renslow, Thomas Reynolds, David Ricketts, and Rocco Spota, all in New York City; and John Braun and Jay Stone in San Francisco. COHEN—N. Robert, 34. Died peacefully at home on January 12, 1992. Friend and companion of Peter Upton, son of Jerome and Janice Cohen, brother of Barbara Litman, Peter Cohen and Missy Pirinea, and uncle of Adam Litman. Robert met the challenge of his illness with courage, intelligence and humor and inspired all who knew him. Donations in Robert's memory may be made to God's Love We Deliver or Project Inform. Robert will be remembered by family and friends at the Friends Meeting House, 15 Rutherford Place, Manhattan, at 11 A.M., on Saturday, Jan. 18th.

GODY—Jimmy Ray, of Manhattan, NY, passed away on Sept. 18, 1992 from complications of AIDS. He was 45 years of age. He was born in Alamosa, CO where he received his early education. He studied at the University of Madrid in Spain and received his B.A. from the University of New Mexico. He moved to New York where he received his M.A. from New York University and taught bilingual education in public schools. He worked in Tokyo as Corporate Language Trainer from 1984 to 1991. He is survived by his parents, a brother and two sisters, and his friends, Jiro Ueno and Chika Sato. He is also survived by his longtime companion Dan Burnette. In lieu of flowers, contributions may be made to Gay Men's Health Crisis.

GROTTY—Richard M., 31, of NYC, formerly of Middletown, NY, died Wed., April 9, 1992 after a prolonged illness. His friends and family hope that those who knew him will share a moment to reflect not on the sorrow but on the joy he brought to those he touched. His unique sense of humor, devoted friendship and reverencing love will continue to live within us all. A New York memorial will be announced at a later date.

JOE—Joseph A. III, on August 3, 1991. Loving father of Elizabeth, Christopher, Carol and Cassie; brother of Peggy Clarke. Also survived by Peggy Coleman. Services at Frank E. Campbell, 1076 Madison Avenue at 81st, on Tuesday, at 12 noon, Interment Wednesday, Norristown, PA. In lieu of flowers, contributions in his memory to GMHC appreciated.

Miss Me - But Let Me Go

When I came to the end of the road,
And the sun has set for me,
I want no rites in a gloom-filled room.
Why cry for a soul set free!

Miss me a little, but not too long,
And not with your head bowed low.
Remember the love that we once shared.
Miss me - but let me go.

For this is a journey that we all must take
And each must go alone.
It's all part of the Master's plan,
A step on the road to home.

When you are lonely and sick of heart
Go to the friends we know
And bury your sorrows in doing good deeds.
Miss me - but let me go.

Angelo Cesario of Braintree, 58, a school teacher

Angelo Louis Cesario of Braintree, a high school teacher, died Friday at New England Sinai Hospital. He was 58.

Born in Boston, Mr. Cesario graduated from Somerville High School in 1951.

He earned a bachelor's degree from Utah University and a master's degree in education from Ball State University in Indiana.

Besides teaching in Utah and Arizona, Mr. Cesario also taught in several Bay State schools, including Waltham High School, Waltham JFK School, Jamaica Plain High School and Hyde Park High School.

Mr. Cesario was appointed Harvard Education Associate in 1968 and 1969. He served on the Boston Council For Drug Abuse in 1971, and was a volunteer for the Boston Harbor Cleanup Program.

He was also involved in community and university repertory companies in Utah, Ohio, Arizona and Massachusetts and was a tour guide and lecturer for the Senior Citizen Theater Group.

He is survived by his mother, Josephine (Lepore); four sisters, Rose Reynolds of Mexico City, Arlene Peters of Needham, Sandra Caliri of Bedford and Lorraine Hartnett of Revere; and several nieces, nephews and cousins.

Kevin Caggiano of Winthrop, 37, was a salesman

Kevin J. Caggiano of Winthrop, formerly of Winchester, a salesman, died Thursday at Mission Hill Hospice after a lengthy illness. He was 37.

Born in Winthrop, he graduated from Malden Catholic High School and Graham Junior College. He attended Northeastern University and Emerson College.

Mr. Caggiano is survived by his parents, Arthur W. and Dorothy (Thornton) of Winthrop and Pompano Beach, Fla.; three brothers, Arthur W. Jr. of Restigouche, Quebec; Paul of Centerville and Lynnfield; and Robert of Mission Viejo, Calif.; three sisters, Mary Libby of Stoneham, Ann Marie of Malden and his twin, Karen Erwin of Wakefield; and 11 nieces and nephews.

Scott W. Callan Landscape Architect was So. End Resident

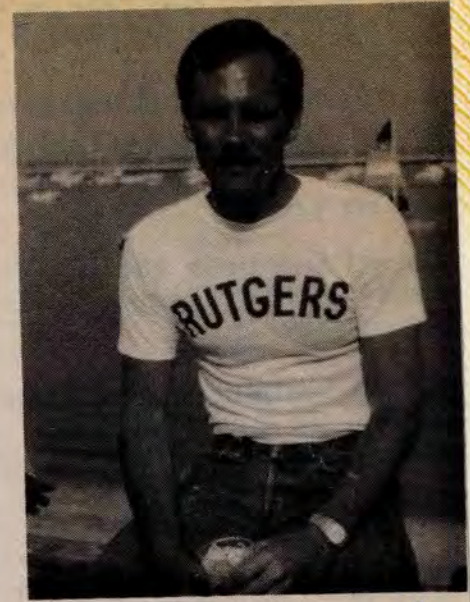

Scott W. Callan, 33, died peacefully Thursday, October 26 at his home in the South End, after a valiant two and one-half year battle with AIDS. He was a well-known and energetic registered landscape architect in the Boston area, having been most recently involved in the historic Olmstead plantings in the Harvard Medical complex.

Scott was born in New York City and attended school in Willingboro, New Jersey, that perfect example of post-war suburbia which no doubt gave Scott some of his taste for deco-modern design. While at Rutgers University for his BS degree in 1978 he was the recipient of the American Society of Landscape Architects Award of Honor.

Scott came to Boston and earned his MLA degree at the Harvard University Graduate School of Design in 1980. Although he lived briefly in New York after graduation, he settled in Boston with John Callahan in a loving relationship that lasted until his death.

Scott had worked at the planning firm of Camp Dresser & McKee since 1985, managing a number of important Boston-area public projects including the Shattuck Street Mall and the rehabilitation of Avenue Louis Pasteur. But he will surely be remembered most for the personalized care he gave to residential projects around the Boston area and as far away as Kennebunkport and Provincetown.

We will all miss Scott, and the sense of order and design with which he approached all things in life. Most of all we'll miss his enthusiasm and zest for life, which kept him fighting until the end.

Scott is survived by his life partner John Callahan, his parents Martin and Donna Callan of Katy, Texas and brothers Jeffrey, Christopher and Martin, all of Texas. His entire family and hundreds of others who were touched by Scott were privileged to be present at a Mass for him at the Franciscan Friary in Brookline on October 30. From that peaceful ceremony we echo his lover's moving "May the road rise before you."

Jonathan B. Chandler North End Resident

Jonathan Chandler passed away on April 28, 1990 at Mass General Hospital, after a very short and sudden bout of PCP. Jonathan was originally from Duxbury, and leaves his mother Blance (Arruda) and brothers Raymond, Gregory, Peter and Jeffrey. Also, his beloved sisters Paula, Julie and Amy.

After honor role graduation from Duxbury High School, Jonathan attended Lowell University and the Hartt School of Music in Hartford, CT. Even though his love of music and theater surpassed all, he went on to become a banker. Jonathan worked at State Street Bank and was a member of the New England Banking Institute.

Jonathan's friend and lover, Dominick Boyle, invites you to attend a memorial service for Jonathan on Sunday, July 8, at 5:00 p.m. at 131 Cambridge St., Boston, at the corners of Cambridge and Staniford St. Please come and celebrate!

CARR—Douglas G. Age 40. On March 12, 1992. Beloved friend of Robert Hazzon, loving son of James and Joanne Carr, devoted brother of James Jr. and Donald Carr. Interment in Harbor Springs, MI. Memorial service to be announced at a later date.

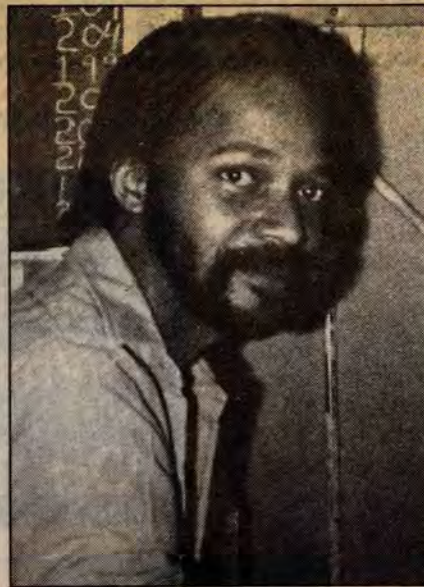

Anthony Calloway

At 9:30 p.m. on Sept. 21 we lost Tony Calloway. He died as he lived: quietly, with dignity and without complaint. The people he loved were with him holding his beautiful, creative hands to the edge where we all say goodbye.

Tony was an artist. He painted beautiful women draped in fabulous gowns against fabulous backgrounds. His biggest influence was Erté, and if anything could be said about Tony's work, it was an improvement on Erté. He loved fantasy — from Disney animation to science fiction — and had an extensive collection of memorabilia and books. But he took a lot of teasing about his first love: Petula Clark. He had all her records and she was the face in many of his paintings.

Tony lived and worked for many years in the South End, first at New Boston Liquors and then at Boston Detox. As with everything he did, he was efficient and unassuming. He cared about everything he did and did those things to the best of his abilities. His co-workers remember him as part of the team, never seeking recognition, always pulling his weight.

We miss you already Tony. No one deserves a long and painful death, but no one deserved it less than you. We can't even remember hearing an unkind word from you; your patience and empathy will continue to inspire us. Your whole life revolved around things that made the world pretty, your pleasure came from the innocent and child-like that was a reflection of your soul. Now you've reached the ultimate fantasy. Wait for us, Tony. Look over our lives every day and remind us of the things that are really important: loving each other, kindness, and never forgetting the sweet and innocent beings we were born to be.

Goodbye dear friend. Your place in our lives will never be filled, your memory always fresh, your smile always bright and happy, your love everlasting. We loved you.

Bruce Combs

April 5, 1947–April 12, 1993

Bruce died peacefully at home with the loving and supportive presence of his parents and lover. His three brothers, two from Oklahoma, and one from Kansas, visited with him and shared a very special time with him on his recent birthday.

A native of Oklahoma, Bruce moved to California in 1972, first to Los Angeles and then San Francisco and the Bay Area. He worked as a real estate resale specialist for Chevron for many years and most recently with PHH Home Equity.

Bruce is survived by his lover and life companion, Paul Schleicher; his parents Dr. and Mrs. Leon Combs of Oklahoma; numerous aunts, uncles and cousins, including a very loving, supportive and helpful uncle and aunt in San Francisco, Harold and Joanna Combs.

Bruce anticipated his death as he had planned and organized his life and the parties he loved to host with love, dignity and a sense of humor. He wanted to pass quickly, without inconveniencing his friends and family, at home and sleeping, his lover by his side. He achieved his goal.

A celebration of his life will be held at a later date. In keeping with his wishes in this life as well as the other, and what he loved to do most, it will be a party! ▼

Paramount Pictures' chairwoman Sherry Lansing has purchased the rights to Stephen Fried's devastating book, "Thing of Beauty: The Tragedy of Supermodel Gia," for $250,000 — and already those Tinseltown types are trying to figure out how to polish the darker aspects of Gia Carangi's brief life.

In the late 1970s and early 1980s, Carangi was a $100,000-a-year fashion model, a dark-haired beauty who graced the covers of Vogue and Cosmopolitan. But Gia lost everything to a heroin addiction so fierce photographers had to airbrush her arms to hide the needle marks. Her fall from grace led to homelessness, arrests and destitution. By 1986, she was dead of AIDS at 26.

AIDS HAPPENED TO US ALL

With her son dying of AIDS, a mother describes how her whole family struggled together to overcome social stigma, suffering and fear with unyielding faith, compassion and love for one another. By Virginia M. Conlon

MICHAEL CONLON was a good son. He died of AIDS on April 28, 1989, peacefully, at home. His father and I, along with his three brothers, five sisters and a priest, were at his bedside.

Two years and eight months earlier, Michael had tested positive for the Human Immunodeficiency Virus (HIV). After his diagnosis and initial hospitalization with pneumocystis pneumonia, he came home to us—with AIDS. At 39 years of age, Michael resigned his position with the American Council on Education, and gave up his apartment and life in Washington, D.C. After 20 years of living independently and successfully, he came to Rutherford to live with his 60-year-old parents. This is how Mike chose to end his days.

Our whole family began the process of assimilating Mike, his illness, numerous hospitalizations and all the crises of AIDS into our lives. Our oldest son, Jim, is the only one of our nine who lives some distance away—in Milwaukee—with his wife and our two oldest granddaughters. Our married daughters, Mary and Kate, live locally with their husbands, and each has a boy and a girl. Gina, Terry, Joe, Jean and Tom, the unmarried ones, all have apartments close by. So in this very personal real-life drama Mike would not be alone.

As Michael prepared to move home, he knew better than we did what he was asking of us. Though burdened about asking, he wanted to be where he could be close to—and rely on—his family. The implications of that request gradually became apparent as we watched the relentless progress of the disease and were drawn more and more into Mike's caretaking. My husband and I wondered if we were physically up to this. Mike was infected with the virus, but AIDS was happening to us all. I began keeping a daily account of our involvement

Filling 'Grand Hotel'

By David Patrick Stearns
USA TODAY

NEW YORK — Though there weren't enough places for the 31 cast members of the Broadway musical Grand Hotel to sit at RCA's Studio A, a large leather sofa was conspicuously vacant.

That was where the show's handsome, charismatic leading man, David Carroll, had rested before collapsing and dying in the studio. It happened during a recording session scheduled especially for Carroll, who had AIDS and was slipping fast.

He never made it to the microphones, and three weeks later, when the rest of the cast did, nobody sat on the sofa out of respect. "It's a very odd situation," says Brett Barrett, who is recording Carroll's role as Baron Felix Von Gaigern. "It took them so long to get the recording together, and it's sad that David wasn't able to do it."

No recent show as successful as Grand Hotel has made such a belated — and troubled — original-cast recording.

When Hotel opened 2½ years ago, Tommy Tune's direction was unanimously praised, but the score was not. Many speculated the show wouldn't last and no recording was made. Instead, it won five Tony Awards, and recently survived a move to a larger theater.

"It's a lesson in how Broadway has changed," says co-composer Maury Yeston. "The fact that there's even a question about doing a cast album shows how commercialized Broadway has become."

At first, the recording was delayed because of legal complications resulting from dual authorship. Some of the songs were written by the veteran songwriting team Robert Wright and George Forrest. Others were written by Yeston, brought in during the out-of-town tryout.

When an agreement was hammered out, numerous recording dates were scheduled with three different labels, but the finances never seemed to come together. Finally, a number of key parties sacrificed royalties so that it could be done inexpensively. It may prove to be too late from a commercial standpoint, since the marketing interest in the show probably has peaked.

"But every time you think Grand Hotel is down, it comes back," says Bill Rosenfield of RCA. "The show has a great deal of staying power, and it has generated so much interest over the past 2½ years."

One major catch: The recording had to be done at breakneck speed in a single day. And somehow, all the original cast members (except for Carroll) were able to make it.

Jane Krakowski, who played the seductive stenographer Flaemmchen, still had a few weeks before starting the Alex Haley miniseries Queen. Michael Jeter had a week's break from taping TV's Evening Shade to fly back to New York and reprise his Tony Award-winning performance of the dying bookkeeper.

Some cast members had gone on to the touring production, which was in nearby Scranton, Pa. Because some had been out of the show so long, impromptu rehearsals were held in the hallways of the RCA executive offices.

"I had a flutter of nerves in my system because so much time had passed," Krakowski says. "But once we all started singing together again, it all snapped back. You remember the reason you said every sentence, clear as day."

Oddly enough, there were no ego clashes. Everyone seemed grateful to be there at last — and determined not to mess it up. Also, Carroll's memorial service had been the day before, and their grief was fresh.

"I never thought that at age 23, I'd have to deal with the death of my colleagues," Krakowski says.

But Carroll will be heard on the album. His voice was the one part of him spared by the disease, and he had made isolated concert appearances until three weeks before his death. Tapes of some appearances have surfaced, and as a result, his version of Love Can't Happen will appear as an appendix on the album.

"It was one of those ideas that everybody had," Rosenfield says. "A lot of the reason why I wanted to do the album was to get David Carroll on tape. Years from now, people will understand what a wonderful Broadway leading man was lost to AIDS."

"His voice was like a bird that flies around the room and can't help but light on you," Jeter said at Carroll's memorial. "I envied him a lot."

CARTER—Simon A.J. on Oct 12, 1992. A memorial service will be held on Friday, Oct 16 at 11:30AM Frank E. Campbell, 1076 Madison Ave at 81 St. Contributions in his memory may be made to Design Industries Foundation for AIDS, 150 W 26 St, NYC 10001.

Robert Caviano, 42;
Founded AIDS Group
1992

Robert C. Caviano, a founder of Lifebeat, the music industry's organization to fight AIDS, died on Sept. 22 at St. Luke's-Roosevelt Hospital Center in Manhattan. He was 42 years old and lived in Manhattan.

Mr. Caviano died of AIDS complications, said Frances Pennington, a spokeswoman for Lifebeat.

Mr. Caviano was involved with AIDS relief efforts since the early 1980's and helped to raise more than $1 million for community-based AIDS organizations including Gay Men's Health Crisis and Bailey House.

Lifebeat directly assists entertainment-industry figures afflicted with AIDS, in part by staging musical benefits around the country to raise money for local organizations. The first such concert was held in June at the Roseland ballroom in Manhattan.

In the 1970's and early 1980's Mr. Caviano, a native of Manhattan, managed pop music stars including Grace Jones, the Village People, and K. C. & the Sunshine Band. Later he was a talent agent for a number of agencies, including Famous Artists.

Vincent Chalk, 45

Won job ruling for AIDS patients

ASSOCIATED PRESS

LONG BEACH, Calif. - Vincent Chalk, the teacher who won a landmark ruling guaranteeing job security for public employees with AIDS, has died. He was 45.

Mr. Chalk died Tuesday at St. Mary Medical Center after a three-year bout with AIDS, said his attorney, Marjorie Rushforth.

Mr. Chalk taught hearing-impaired students at Venado Middle School and University High School in Irvine.

"Vincent settled for every person with AIDS who had a federally related paycheck their right to maintain their employment in spite of an AIDS diagnosis," Rushforth said.

When Mr. Chalk reported to his superiors in 1987 that he had AIDS, he was removed from the classroom and given an office job.

Mr. Chalk sued the Orange County Department of Education to be reinstated to teaching. In November 1987, the 9th US Circuit Court of Appeals overturned a lower court ruling and allowed Mr. Chalk to resume teaching.

Mr. Chalk leaves his parents, two sisters and his companion, John Woensner.

Jimmy Conway

James Martin Conway, also known by his African name Kuji Kofi, died on Monday, November 2, 1992, at the Seventh Day Adventist Hospital in Takoma Park, Maryland, at the age of 32. He died of complications associated with AIDS, according to his cousin, Frances Whiting of D.C.

Born in New York City, Conway came to D.C. when he was eight years old, according to Whiting, and graduated from Gonzaga High School in Northwest.

He worked for the D.C. Fire Department as a paramedic with the emergency medical service. According to a friend, Larry Tyler of D.C., Conway was a member of the Black Progressive Fire Fighters and served as shop steward of a local division of the American Federation of Government Employees union.

Conway was involved with several community organizations. He was a founding member of Us Helping Us, an organization that helps people with HIV and AIDS use natural therapies. Tyler said Conway also was active with Best Friends of D.C., a group that provides assistance to people living with AIDS, and was a member of the D.C. Coalition of Black Lesbians and Gay Men.

Since 1984, Tyler said, Conway served as a buddy to many in the black community living with AIDS. Tyler described Conway as an avid reader of books and poetry, and said Conway tried his hand at writing poetry.

In addition to Whiting and Tyler, Conway is survived by his father, John Conway of North Carolina; and Wilson Jerman, whom Jimmy Conway considered his parent; five sisters, Barbara Prince; Judith Sackeyio-Douglass; Elaine Garrett; Linda Taylor; and Angela Davis; three brothers, John Conway Jr.; Dennis Jerman; and Christopher Jerman; two aunts, Gerogiabelle Coates; and Marion Coates, all of D.C.; two cousins, Povented Taylor of Cleveland, Ohio; and Shirley Taylor of D.C.; and many other relatives and friends. Conway is predeceased by his mother, Helen Conway Jerman.

A memorial service is planned for Saturday, Nov. 7, at Jones Memorial United Methodist Church, 4625 G St., SE at 10 a.m. Conway's remains will be interred at the Harmony Memorial Park in Landover, Md.

Contributions in Conway's name may be sent to the Imani Temple Pro-Cathedral Building Fund, 1015 I St., NE, Washington, DC 20002 or the Coalition Trust Fund for Natural Healing, 1631 13th St., NW, Suite 3, Washington, DC 20009. Contributions to the trust fund will be distributed to local natural healing organizations.

Ralph "Tony" Conti, of Boston, passed away March 25 from complications of AIDS. He will be remembered for his devotion to family and friends, and his ability to set aside his own needs to comfort those who needed support. He will be greatly missed by his lover and companion, Randy Fields, of Boston.

Tom Cassidy, 41

REUTERS S/KRI

NEW YORK - Tom Cassidy, a Cable News Network correspondent whose struggle with AIDS was chronicled in detail in television reports on the disease, died on Sunday, colleagues said. He was 41.

Mr. Cassidy, an anchor and senior business news correspondent for the network since 1981, was one of CNN's first reporters.

He was first diagnosed as having acquired immune deficiency syndrome in October 1987, according to Bill Tucker, a deputy news editor at CNN who worked with Cassidy.

Mr. Cassidy was the subject of a number of magazine articles and became well-known through a series of television reports in which he spoke of his condition.

A Boston native, he attended Bowdoin College in Maine and earned a master's degree in 1978 from Columbia University's School of Journalism.

In 1984, three years after joining CNN, Mr. Cassidy became host of CNN's "Pinnacle" program, which focused on the professional and private lives of prominent figures in the business world. He held that position until 1988.

This year, Mr. Cassidy himself became the subject of the show, and in a final interview with WCBS television in February, said: "I'm still going to fight it. I'm not going to give up."

Lou Dobbs, vice president and managing editor of CNN business news, said in a statement yesterday: "Tom was one of the country's best business journalists, and his courage and dignity were inspirational to all of us fortunate enough to have known him."

Tim

Chitwood, 44, a past president of the San Francisco Pool Association who served as billiards cochair of Gay Games II, and won bronze medals at Gay Games III, died Jan. 11 of AIDS complications. Place of death was not reported.

Mitch

Cory, 30, an Arkansas AIDS advocate and volunteer who last year cofounded the Arkansas Association of People with AIDS, died Dec. 12 of AIDS complications. Place of death was not reported. His partner was Joe Terry CHABERNAUD - Leonce M. on September 8, 1993 of AIDS in Washington, DC. Survive by life partner, Andrew Krul, Willy, a niece, nephews, and friends. A celebration of Leu. life will be held at Bailey House.

Mary Crowley passed away after an all too quick struggle with cancer. She was 78 but had the energy of a 40 year old as she made her way to the Jesuit Urban Center where she was a Minister of the Altar, to Last Tuesdays where she was one of the mothers who faithfully greeted and socialized. Her son Michael had AIDS and passed away five years ago. She searched for support around the city and met George Albert who was at the Jesuit Urban Center and started Last Tuesdays. They clicked and she found a home where she could find support and peace, where she could be with others who were struggling and looking for answers. Mary became a friend of everyone at the JUC and Last Tuesdays.

Her illness caught us all by surprise but thank God many of us had a chance to say good-bye. She left this world in peace and much loved. She helped give courage to many PWA's as well as parents. As she spent her last days in bed, she was visited by many people who were important to her, and they let her know how much she was valued and how much she meant to them. Mary, you were a saint that walked among us. We miss you so much. 11-17-93

Thomas Randall Carter
May 8, 1958-June 19, 1993

...now being served; fried chicken and collard greens every day for supper in God's trailer park.

Our friend Randy Carter went to dinner the evening of Saturday, June 19 in the comfort of the Maitri Hospice. Before he left, he made sure to enjoy for the time he had the good things that he and the world had to share. Randy was well known for the carrying and love he gave to the patients at the Conant Medical Group where he worked, as well as the lacerating wit by request, for the music he loved and surrounded himself with, and the unforgettable drag that made even the sturdiest queens re-think their outfits.

He leaves behind the friends and co-workers who shared in his life and his struggle against HIV; he leaves with us an indissoluble spirit that no illness could touch, and this is how we will know him from now on.

A celebration of Randy's life will be held on August 1. For the time and location please call (415) 923-1333. At Randy's request, any donations may be made to the Glide Memorial Church in San Francisco. ▼

Bittersweet Legacy For Victim Of AIDS

Special to The New York Times

FAYETTE, Mo. — When a young man dying of AIDS wanted to talk, the people of Fayette, Mo., listened. He asked to meet with local teen-agers so that he might impress on them the very real risks of the incurable disease about to claim his own life. And he wanted those students to spread the word to as many others as possible. He said he wanted to "give something back" to the world he would soon leave. And the townspeople made that final wish come true.

With a population of 3,000, Fayette is a town with slow-moving traffic trickling through the broad streets framing the village square, where a gazebo in the shadow of the courthouse is the site of summer band concerts and ice cream socials.

"When you live in a little town like this, you don't think you're going to meet someone with AIDS," said Matthew Donnelly, who has lived here for all of his 14 years. "Now it seems more real to me, and I know anybody can get it."

AIDS became the disease-next-door when Randy Clark came to town from San Francisco to spend his final months with his family. In 1986 he told his widowed mother, Jean Coulter Clark, that he was homosexual. Two years later, at the age of 31, he told her he had been diagnosed as having acquired immune deficiency syndrome. "I'm not ashamed of it," Mrs. Clark said recently in an interview in her home. "He was a wonderful person."

Mrs. Clark pleaded with her son to move to Fayette, where she and her 95-year-old mother had lived for a few years. In May 1990, with his health and money diminished, Mr. Clark moved in. Mrs. Clark said that her son grew preoccupied with the need to accomplish something of lasting value before he died.

In September he approached Calvin Skipper, a local psychotherapist who is president of the Parent-Teacher Association, and offered to participate in an educational program about AIDS. With the approval of the school board, the high school and middle school joined forces with the Missouri School Boards Association's Education Satellite Network, which produces and broadcasts educational video programs. The network offered to send a mobile production unit without charge to tape the meeting between Mr. Clark and the teen-agers.

On Oct. 12, in the solarium of Fayette's Keller Memorial Hospital, 20 students in the 6th through the 12th grades met Mr. Clark.

Mr. Clark, the video shows, began by giving a brief account of his life. He told the students he was homosexual and said he had contracted the human immunodeficiency virus that causes AIDS through unprotected sexual contact in the early 1980's, before most people had heard of AIDS. He talked about common misperceptions about the disease and he answered all their questions.

Mr. Clark emphasized that the virus's long incubation period means many people unwittingly spread the virus. "It's a hideous disease — I mean, look," he said, gesturing toward the spots scattered across his face, from Kaposi's sarcoma, a cancer that strikes many people with AIDS. "Your peers could have it and not show any signs of it for 7 to 10 years."

He spoke of the sense of immortality common to teen-agers. "I'm not advocating sex," he told them. "But as you form the habits of a lifetime, you should start by making safe sex as natural as buckling your seat belt when you climb into a car."

On Dec. 12, the day before his 34th birthday, Mr. Clark died in his sleep. Coincidentally, the students started editing the tape the same day, compress a two-and-a-half-hour session into a 72-minute presentation. The video, along with a live panel discussion with some of the students, is to be broadcast by ESN on Oct. 24, said Frank Finley, the network's operations manager. The broadcast will be available by satellite and to view it or to obtain a video, those interested can call 800-243-3376.

"I think the session puts AIDS on a more personal level," offers Stephanie McClure, 15, a student who met with Mr. Clark. "The whole thing makes you realize it can happen to people you know and care about."

Mrs. Clark said her son was surprised at how much more accepted he felt in Fayette than in San Francisco. "I think he thought people would pull away, walk on the other side of the street," she said. "But before he died, people would call and say, 'I'm bringing supper over tonight.' This is a close community. In a small town, they see beyond the disease to the person."

Richard Carper, an activist who worked to influence public AIDS policy toward intravenous drug users, died of complications from AIDS Feb. 18 in Grants Pass, Ore. He was 40.

Gay Cop Won't Get On "Wall of Honor"

by Dennis Conkin

A gay cop who died last month of complications from AIDS will not have his name placed on the roster of SFPD officers killed in the line of duty, even though an official investigation determined his cause of death was directly caused by a bloody altercation with a suspect.

Former San Francisco Police Inspector F. Thomas Cady, who died in January of complications from AIDS, contracted HIV in 1989 during a violent scuffle in which he was attempting to subdue a suspect. The suspect, who resisted the arrest, bit Cady hard enough to leave an open wound. The suspect's own HIV-positive blood then came in contact with Cady's bite wounds.

An administrative law judge ruled in 1991 that Cady's illness was incurred in the line of duty, and the officer was granted disability retirement pay after several years of bureaucratic wrangling.

"He died from AIDS as a direct result of contaminated blood from an AIDS-infected [sic] suspect. Any officer who dies in the line of duty while serving the city should be honored on the Wall without reservation," said Sergeant Paul Click, president of the Golden State Peace Officers Association, a lesbian and gay law enforcement professionals group.

The Wall of Honor to which Click referred is a roster located inside the entrance of the Hall of Justice, at 850 Bryant Street.

"Inspector Cady is the first known SFPD officer to be infected with AIDS while on duty performing his duties as a peace officer. The ensuing suffering and slow death greatly surpasses any suddenly violent death incident which will place other officers' names on the Wall," said Click, who is a sergeant in the San Francisco Sheriff's Department.

Chief of Police Anthony Ribera told the Bay Area Reporter that although an administrative law judge did rule that Cady contracted the diseases in the line of duty, inclusion on the Wall is reserved for officers who have been killed "right on the spot" in the line of duty.

Ribera said that other officers have contracted and died of other disease in the line of duty — such as lead poisoning, heart disease, and tuberculosis — have not been included on the the roster.

Click is critical of the Police Department's decision; the GSPOA membership is urging the Department to change the policy, and has started lobbying Mayor Jordan and the Police Commission for a policy change. ▼

Joshua celebrated release from his physical body at 5:30 am on December 13, 1992 after recently arriving at the Zen Hospice in San Francisco. Thirteen is his favorite number.

He is survived by his mother, father, three sisters, brother, five nieces and two nephews of Andrews, NC; his family of friends worldwide; and his cat, Burdel, of San Francisco. A warm thanks to his beautiful friends and caretakers, Chris White and Fran Rozewicz of San Francisco.

Joshua, Oh Joshua

Joshua, oh Joshua, we know you loved life so much for this plague.
So much to take medicine and lie in bed.

A perfect Southern gentleman who could tell you a tale, smoke a Dunhill and vigorously swirl a brimming glass of ruby port without ever spilling a drop.

Tales of Charleston, Paris, San Francisco, Andrews and Montreal.

Tales of love and friends and decadence.

Of hot steamy nights and cool cobblestone streets.

Of families, and architecture and art.

Of Pac Bell, grave shift pastries and Orpheum seats.

Of searching, and finding, and throwing away.

Tales of Brian and Sammy; smoked salmon and Mary Ruff.

The music was always there, sometimes in the background, sometimes in the foreground. Sometimes he'd just call you and start an album and that was it.

You listened. To the whole album.

On the phone.

Truffles, truffles and more truffles.

Beautiful clothes and lush green plants.

He redecorated his apartment as often as the full moon howled.

I always wondered how he did that.

His cat peed under the seat of his truck.

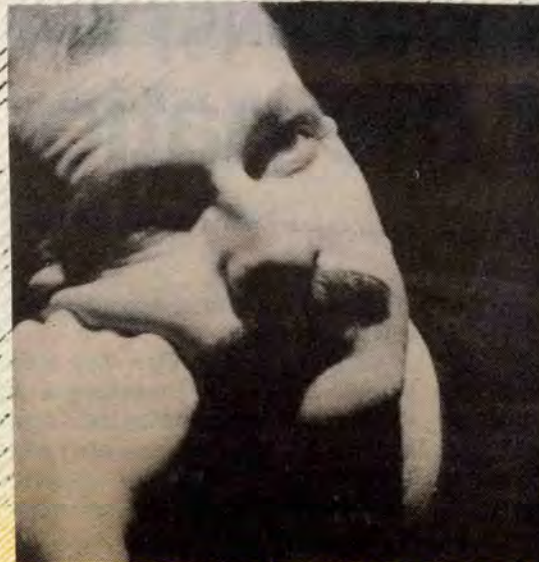

Years later everytime you opened the door, you could always tell.

A smile, a laugh, a scream of delight.

A cry. A tear. The spiritual quest of a darkened knight.

In Loving Memory Of Warren Chamberlain December 10, 1991

Forgive me if you are not living

If you, my love, have died

All the leaves will fall on my breast

It will rain on my soul all night, all day

My feet will want to march to where you are sleeping

Always, Ken

Donald Edwin Cover, 36, of Washington, D.C., a founding member of the local chapter of ACT UP, died on Saturday, November 28, 1992, at the Rainbow Home in Wernersville, Pennsylvania. He died of complications associated with AIDS, according to his friend, Margaret Cantrell of D.C.

Cover helped establish the D.C. chapter of ACT UP, and attended numerous AIDS and Gay-related demonstrations, Cantrell said. ACT UP/D.C. member Michael Petrelis said Cover was at the group's first meeting in January 1990.

While living in D.C., Cover worked as a caterer and a legal secretary. Most recently he was employed at The Leather Rack in Northwest.

Cover was raised in McConnellsberg, Pa., where he graduated from McConnellsberg High School. After studying at the University of West Virginia in Morgantown for one semester, he moved to D.C.

In addition to Cantrell and Petrelis, Cover is survived by his mother and stepfather, Dolly and Ed Peffer of High Top, Pa.; father, P. Rodney Cover; sister, Paula Peck; both of McConnellsberg; stepsister, Pat Umstedder of Lancaster, Pa.; and other relatives.

Contributions in Cover's name may be made to the Rainbow Home, P.O. Box 300, Wernersville, PA 19565 or ACT UP/D.C., P.O. Box 9318, Washington, DC 20005.

Brian Coady

Brian Joseph Coady, of Alexandria, Virginia, a deputy sheriff of the Alexandria Sheriff's Office, died on Sunday, November 29, 1992, at Mount Vernon Hospital in Alexandria of complications associated with AIDS, according to his close friend, Michael Hancock of Alexandria. He was 30 years old.

At the time of his death, Coady was surrounded by his family and closest friends, Hancock said.

Originally from Syracuse, N.Y., Coady moved to Alexandria in March 1989 when he joined the Alexandria Sheriff's Office as a deputy sheriff. Coady held the position until his death.

According to Sheriff Jim Dunning, Coady was an exemplary member of the Sheriff's Office and was loved by all who worked closely with him.

Before he moved to Alexandria, Coady worked in Syracuse as a corrections officer and then, for four years, with the Syracuse police department as a community service officer. In 1989 he left the police department to come to Alexandria.

"In spite of his illness, Brian was always upbeat and jovial, even the days before his passing. He will be greatly missed by all he touched," Hancock said.

In addition to Hancock, Coady is survived by his mother, Nancy Coady of St. Petersburg, Fla.; father, Thomas Coady of Syracuse; brother, Thomas of Tampa, Fla.; close friends, Chris Hoven; and Kevin Rock, his care minister, both of Arlington; and many other friends in the D.C. area.

A requiem mass was held at Blessed Sacrament Catholic Church in Alexandria on Dec. 1. Coady's remains were passed with full police honors. A memorial service will be held at a later date, which will be announced.

Donations in Coady's name may be sent to Whitman-Walker Clinic, 1407 S St., NW, Washington, D.C. 20009 or to the Names Project of the National Capital Area, P.O. Box 65693, Washington, DC 20035.

John R. Connolly, 53, Charity Fund-Raiser

12-4-92

John R. Connolly, a professional fund-raiser for charitable causes and educational institutions, died on Friday at Tisch Hospital in Manhattan. He was 53 and lived in Manhattan.

He died of complications of AIDS, said his companion, Richard Clausen.

Mr. Connolly was a consultant to the Melanoma Vaccine Project at New York University Medical Center. In 1989-90 he was the development director of God's Love We Deliver, an AIDS service organization, when its fundraising doubled to $1.5 million a year.

Earlier he was the development director of the Skin Cancer Foundation from 1987-89, associate director of foundation and corporate relations at Rockefeller University from 1983-86, associate director of development at Yale Medical School in 1983 and director of corporate relations and senior development officer at New York University from 1979-83.

Mr. Connolly was born in Bronxville, N.Y., and grew up there and in Yonkers and Kent, Conn. He was a graduate of Illinois Wesleyan University. A conscientious objector, he fulfilled his military service as a volunteer for the World Health Organization working on contraceptive programs in China.

Besides his companion, Mr. Connolly's survivors include his mother, Grace of Boynton Beach, Fla., and two sisters, Maureen Connolly of Boynton

Kelvin Coe, 45, Dies; An Australian Dancer

7-9-92

Kelvin Coe, a former principal dancer with the Australian Ballet, died on Thursday at his home in Melbourne, Australia. He was 45 years old.

He died of AIDS, said a spokesman for the company.

A silver medalist in the 1973 International Ballet Competition in Moscow, Mr. Coe was a strong technician who danced with a bluff vigor. Early in his career he was singled out as an extremely promising young dancer, and he became one of his country's leading ballet stars.

Born in Melbourne, Mr. Coe joined the Australian Ballet in 1962 at the age of 15, after training in tap and in ballet. He became a soloist in 1966 and a principal dancer two years later, and was named to the honorary position of premier danseur in 1974. He danced as a guest artist with the Bolshoi Ballet, American Ballet Theater and European companies that included the London Festival Ballet and served as partner to Margot Fonteyn on a tour of the Far East in 1973. Mr. Coe was awarded the Order of the British Empire in 1980.

He was noted for his portrayals of Albrecht in "Giselle" and Basilio in Rudolf Nureyev's production of "Don Quixote." He also starred in "Beyond 12," a dance created about and for him in the early 1980's by Graeme Murphy of the Sydney Dance Company. Mr. Coe retired from the stage in 1990 but was asked to return the following year to dance one of the stepsisters in "Cinderella." He continued to teach at the company school until a few months before his death.

Victor Cox

Victor Evan Cox, 44, of Indianapolis, Indiana, and formerly of D.C., died of complications associated with AIDS on University Medical Center in Indianapolis, according to his friend, Don Chamblee of Arlington, Virginia.

Born in Indianapolis, Cox graduated in 1970 with a bachelor's degree from Baylor University in Waco, Texas. Moving then to D.C., he attended the Episcopal Theological Seminary in Alexandria, Va., and later Georgetown University's School of Business Administration in D.C.

During the late 1970s, Cox was employed by Georgetown University as an accountant and financial management officer. After a brief employment with the University of Southern California in Los Angeles, he returned to Georgetown University where he served as the director of sponsored affairs from 1980 until 1984.

Except for two years, Cox worked as a financial administrator and business manager from 1985 until 1990 with a number of other universities and medical centers, including the Emory University School of Medicine in Atlanta, Ga., and the Medical Research Institute in San Francisco, Calif.

In 1986, he moved to St. Croix, U.S. Virgin Islands where he owned and managed the La Grange Beach & Tennis Club for two years.

Chamblee said that after his retirement in June 1990 from Medical Research Institute, Cox volunteered his professional services to D.C.-area institutions that serve the Gay community.

Remembering Cox as a loving friend

Father Juniper Connelly

The Reverend Juniper Michael Connelly, 41, died Sunday, July 4, 1993, of complications associated with AIDS at the Blessed Kateri Friary in Fonda, New York, according to his friend, Jim Deely of Washington, D.C.

Father Connelly was director of pastoral care at Damien Ministries in Washington, D.C. from 1990 to 1991. He was also rector of the National Shrine Kateri Tekawitha in Fonda.

Connelly devoted much of his time to caring for people with AIDS. He established the first educational program for children with AIDS in the regional diocese of St. Augustine, Fla. He was a co-founder of Pastors Engaged in AIDS Care Ecumenically (PEACE) in Albany, N.Y. Connelly was a member of the Fulton Montgomery County AIDS Task Force in N.Y.

Connelly was born in Atlantic City, N.J. He graduated from the Holy Spirit High School in Absecon, N.J. In 1973, he received a bachelor's degree in philosophy from Mount St. Mary's College in Emmitsburg, Md. After college, he pronounced his first vows on Aug. 13, 1974.

Connelly studied for the priesthood at St. Anthony-On-Hudson in Rensselaer, N.Y. He was an intern at St. Peter's parish in Port Pleasant, N.J., in 1977 and took his solemn profession vows on June 4, 1978. Connelly completed his studies at St. Anthony-On-Hudson receiving a master's degree in divinity.

On May 5, 1979, Connelly was ordained a Roman Catholic priest by the Rev. Howard J. Hubbard, bishop of Albany at the Cathedral of the Immaculate Conception in Albany.

In addition to Deely, Connelly is survived by his father, Joseph Connelly of Egg Harbor, N.J.; and two brothers, John Connelly of Atlantic City, and Joseph Connelly of Absecon.

His remains were buried in the Friar's plot at Our Lady of Angels Cemetery in Colonie in Albany.

A joint memorial service for Father Connelly and Father Jeff LaRouere, who died June 9, 1993, both former presiders for Dignity/Washington, will be held by Dignity/Washington on Tuesday, July 27, 1993, at 7:30 p.m., at St. Margaret's Episcopal Church, 1820 Connecticut Ave., NW.

Contributions in their names can be made to Damien Ministries, P.O. 10202, Washington, DC 20036

Michael Colgan

Michael Kevin Colgan, 33, of San Francisco, California, an accomplished artist who lived for many years in Washington, D.C., died on Friday, January 15, 1993 at his home of suicide. According to his friend, Len Brown of D.C., Colgan was suffering from AIDS.

A native of California, Colgan moved to the D.C. area in the late 1970s to attend George Mason University in Fairfax, Va. After receiving a bachelor's degree, Brown said, Colgan studied at the Corcoran School of Art in D.C., developing his style of cubism and surrealism.

Colgan's paintings were displayed in 1991 at the Tretyakov Gallery in Moscow as part of the Washington/Moscow Art Exchange, according to Brown. His work also was exhibited at the Washington Project for the Arts and the O Street Studio in Georgetown. His work most recently was featured at the Untitled Gallery in San Francisco.

Colgan was one of the cofounders of the Capitol Hill HIV support group, according to Brown. He also volunteered at Grandma's House, an organization that cares for babies and children with AIDS. In San Francisco, Colgan volunteered for the Clinton campaign, Brown said, and appeared with Hillary Rodham Clinton at several rallies.

Colgan will be remembered for his unique sense of humor and the support and care he offered to friends and family, Brown said.

Colgan is predeceased by his brother and mother. In addition to Brown, he is survived by his father and stepmother, James and Catherine Colgan of Virginia Beach, Va.; brother, James of New York, N.Y.; close friends, Hampton Smith of Charles M. Crowley III of Boston, known to his family and many friends as "Chuck," died at Boston's Beth Israel Hospital on March 19, of respiratory failure due to complications from AIDS. Five days later, on March 24, his family and friends gathered at the Lindsey Chapel of Emmanuel Church, Boston, for a service of celebration and thanksgiving for his life.

Chuck was born in Methuen, and was raised in Lawrence, where his parents and a sister still live. He received a B.A. in Speech and Drama from Catholic University in Washington, D.C. in 1975, and did post-graduate work in speech and language pathology at the University of North Carolina in Chapel Hill, and at North Carolina Central University in Durham.

From 1975 to 1978, Chuck was a research assistant in the Division of Disorders for Development and Learning at UNC, Chapel Hill, and later taught speech and language at Pearsontown School in Durham County, North Carolina. He interspersed his professional career with restaurant work, both in North Carolina and in Boston.

San Francisco; Tom Richie of New York; Dan Murray; David Sansone; and Jon Szumigala, all of D.C.; his agent, Karen Martin of D.C.; and colleagues in the art community.

A memorial service to celebrate Colgan's life will be held on March 20, at 4 p.m., at Metropolitan Community Church of Washington, 474 Ridge St., NW. Friends will be invited to complete an unfinished project of Colgan's and to sign a panel to be added to the NAMES Project AIDS Memorial Quilt.

Contributions in Colgan's name may be made to Project Open Hand, 2720 17th St., San Francisco, CA 94110; or Grandma's House, 1222 T St., NW, Washington, DC 20009.

Returning to Boston in late 1979, Chuck worked at the Top of the Hub Restaurant, Jacob Wirth's, the Cafe Fleuri, and was assistant manager at Nine Knox Street Restaurant.

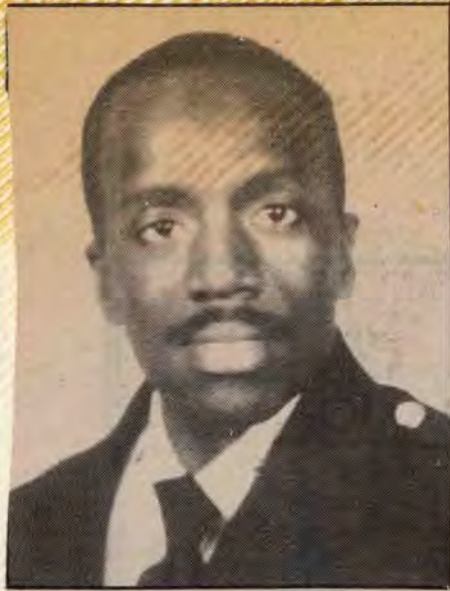

An avid movie buff and amateur actor, Chuck had a number of stage and entertainment experiences, working on tech crews, acting and directing. He appeared as an extra in several major movie productions, including "The Exorcist" and "Rollercoaster." He is best remembered for his ability to relate movie and stage dialogue to perfection, including hilarious portions of "Mildred Pierce."

In the last few years, Chuck was a volunteer for the AIDS Action Committee, and was a member of the AAC's speakers' bureau, something of which he was enormously proud.

Chuck is survived by his parents, Charles and Eileen Crowley of Lawrence, five sisters, Eileen LeFebre, Sharon Crowley, Carol Ann Crowley, Andrea DeMuth and Cynthia Crowley, and his companion, Guy Backlund.

Chuck will be dearly missed.

Ronald Joseph Cruse

Sept. 19, 1955 - March 17, 1993

Ronnie was an Army veteran and graduated from Pasadena City College, School of Nursing. He worked at the UCLA operating room prior to transferring to UCSF, where he also worked in OR.

After receiving his third major opportunistic infection diagnosis in a five month period, Ronnie returned home after a month in the hospital, to spend the last week and a half of his life surrounded by a large gathering of family and close friends. His mother, six of eight siblings, seven nieces and nephews, and his closest friends provided amazing support and came 24 hours a day and witnessed his passing.

Those who were fortunate enough to have known Ronnie, who lived in SF for 4 1/2 years prior to returning to LA, knew him to be a kind and gentle soul. Ronnie was the kind of person who would neglect to set limits to protect himself while offering support to someone else. He will be truly missed! ▼

David Lee Charlson

April 5, 1960 — Feb. 8, 1993

Did the parade pass him by? Hell no, David was out there leading the parade every step of the way. If leading meant black leather, boots and chains — he fit right in. In tasteful fashion was the uniform of the day, he'd be right in line. On the other hand, if it called for six-inch pumps, so be it.

Oh what a life we've lost! From hi home, Portland, to Laguna, San Diego and finally Los Angeles, David didn't just exist, he lived every single day. Yes, perhaps he was found by a few bartenders while sweeping up at closing, but he enjoyed. What was equally important, his friends enjoyed too.

David watched his life through astrology. He was an Aries: the beginning, full of creative abilities; an individualist first, last and always. Many people experienced beginnings when David came into their lives, and they know who they are.

There are those who will remember David Lee the party animal: a tray of shots and a stagger or two. Others will remember how he loved nature and dedicated himself to the best tan in town. Then there are the most lucky of all, a few who experienced his love. When his final day came, be happy in knowing David was involved in a true, complete and unconditional love.

David's favorite quote, by Robert Southey:

No distance of place or lapse of time can lessen the friendship of those who are Thoroughly persuaded of each other's worth.

In 1983, Portland, Oregon voted David "Mr. Hunky 10," probably the most exciting moment in his life. "A, happy, tired, ever-smiling, laughing guy is David Lee Charlson ... He's 23 and ever so full of life." * * * this wonderful man David Lee, who charmed his way to the judges and audience" (Portland newspaper).

David was in the cast of "The West Street Gang," raised money for Gay Men's Resource Center, CAP, P.A.C. and Right to Privacy, and helped establish the Chester Esther Medical Fund.

At the end of his reign, the community paper wrote: "This year has been an exciting one for David Lee and he has been a working and visible and viable person in our community, one which we can all be proud (of) and look toward as a leader."

An exhibit is being planned this spring.

Michael J. Chartier

Michael J. Chartier, 39, died at his home in Bistol, Connecticut, Mar. 12 due to complications from AIDS. He had been chairman of Bristol's Mayor's Task Force on AIDS/HIV since its inception in 1991. He was also a member of the Board of Directors of the AIDS Project of Greater New Britain.

Mr. Chartier was instrumental in organizing AIDS vigils, expanding the task force and helping the Salvaton Army establish AIDS Project/Bristol.

He once said, "It sounds strange, but a lot of people say AIDS was the best thing that ever happened to them. They found a new focus in life. They cut out the petty things in their lives."

Thomas Carter

Thomas Donald Carter, 35, of Toronto, Ontario, and formerly of Washington, D.C., died on Friday, March 5, 1993 at Bowmanville Memorial Hospital in Bowmanville, Ontario, of pneumonia, according to his friend, Ron Hopper of D.C.

Carter came to Washington in the late 1970s to attend St. Paul's Seminary. During his eight years in the seminary, Carter worked in crisis counseling in the emergency and intensive care units of Georgetown University Hospital, offering support for dying patients and their families.

Carter was raised in Bingham, Maine. In 1988, after receiving his master's in religious studies from St. Paul's, he moved to Toronto. There, he worked as a secretary for the Workers Compensation Board.

"Tom had that great ability to make one feel better just by having a conversation with him," Hopper said. "His presence will be greatly missed by all whose lives he touched."

In addition to Hopper, Carter is survived by his parents, Don and Helen Carter of Bowmanville; brother and sister-in-law, Tim and Lorraine Carter and

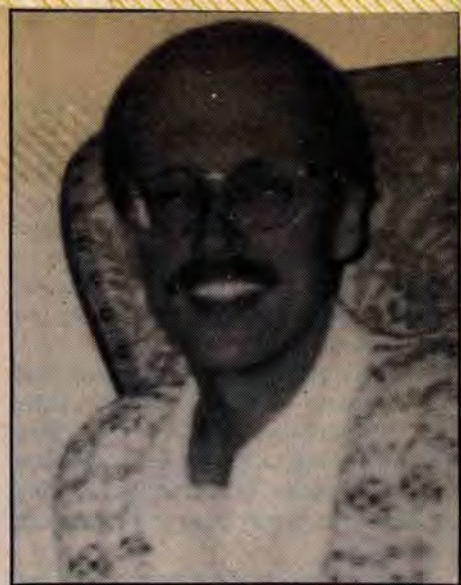

Mickey Cutshell

Mickey Cutshell, 28, died on Friday, March 12, 1993 at his home in Washington, D.C., of complications associated with AIDS, according to his companion, Leslie Francisco.

Cutshell was born and raised in Mosheim, Tenn., where he graduated from high school. In April 1988, he moved to Washington and began working as a bartender for Rascals. Cutshell worked at the bar until last year.

According to Francisco, Cutshell enjoyed having breakfast at Bob and Edith's Diner in Arlington, Va., listening to Patsy Cline, spending time with his dogs, Tamus and Giggles, and taking long walks in the rain.

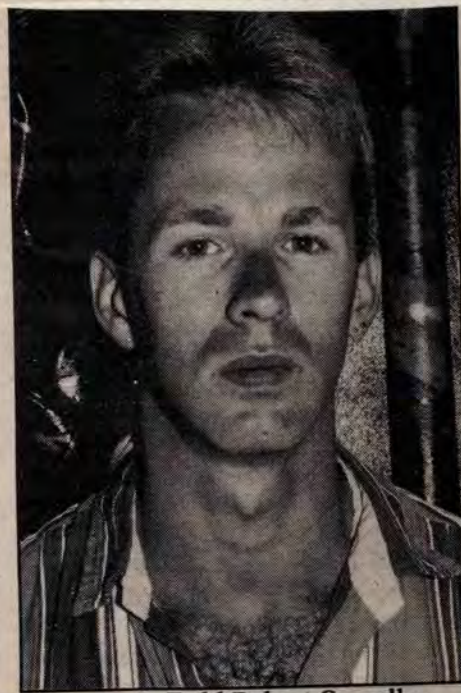

In addition to Francisco, Cutshell is survived by his mother, Abby Cutshell; sisters, Kelly Knight, Cathleen, and Lynn; brothers, John and Darryl; and nephew, Daniel Greg, all of Mosheim.

their children, Lindsey and Danielle, of Canada.

Carter's remains were interred in Bowmanville.

Carter, according to Hopper, said he received exceptional care at Bowmanville Memorial Hospital. Contributions in Carter's name may be made to the hospital, at 47 Liberty St., Bowmanville, Ontario, Canada L1C-1W7.

Sando Counts

Oct. 18, 1954 – April 10, 1993

Bay Area Reporter arts and entertainment writer Sando Counts died in his sleep Saturday night while visiting his mother, Irene Counts, in San Diego. For the last year, Sando shouldered the burden of AIDS with quiet dignity, in spite of increasing physical difficulties. An actor, writer, critic, and blithe spirit, Sando was a longtime resident of the artistic community at Project Artaud.

Sando received his B.A. in theatre arts from Antioch College West. For several years he toured with the Pickle Family Circus, an experience which ultimately led to the creation of the play Sideshow, which he wrote and starred in at Theatre Artaud in 1987. Local audiences will remember his many appearances on Bay Area stages, which include starring opposite Helen Schumaker in Performance Hell at Marines Memorial Theatre, under the direction of author Philip Galas.

For almost two years (1989-1991) Sando lived and worked in Los Angeles. In addition to appearing frequently in television and print commercials, he authored several screenplays, two of which are still in development with his literary agent. At the time of his death, Sando was a member of the American Federation of Television and Radio Actors and he was local president of the Screen Actors Guild. His many friends and colleagues, in both Northern and Southern California, will miss Sando's gentle spirit and wonderful sense of humor.

Sando is survived by his parents Robert and Irene Counts and his sister Lori Counts, all of San Diego. A memorial gathering is planned for Sunday, April 18, from 2 to 4 p.m. at 366 15th Avenue in San Francisco. For information, call 648-0884.

The family requests no floral offerings. Instead, contributions may be made in memory of Sando Counts to Theatre Bay Area's Lemonade Fund, 657 Mission St., San Francisco, CA 94103 or the Screen Actor's Guild Emergency Assistance Fund, 7065 Hollywood Blvd., Hollywood, CA 90028. ▼

Matt Carper

Matthew Hartke Carper, 29, of San Francisco, California, died on Monday, April 26, 1993, at Davies Hospital in San Francisco, of complications associated with AIDS, according to his sister, Margo Carper, of Washington, D.C.

Carper lived in D.C. from 1982 to 1987 during which time he obtained a bachelor's degree from Catholic University. Carper moved in 1987 to San Francisco to pursue a career in theater and dance and to be near his older brother Michael, who died from AIDS complications in 1989.

"Matthew will be remembered for his beguiling sense of humor, his immeasurable capacity to have everyone love him, and the sheer joy he brought to all who knew him," said Margo Carper.

In addition to sister Margo, Matthew Carper is survived by his parents, Mary-Lou and Bill Carper of Midland, Ga.; three sisters, Madeline of Stone Mountain, Ga.; and Molly, of Columbus, Ga.; and Monique of Northern Virginia. Margo said he also is survived by his extended family of friends in San Francisco, who rarely left his bedside in the last four months of his life.

Funeral arrangements are being planned. A celebration of his life will be held Sunday, May 2, from 2-6 p.m. at the D.C. home of Margo Carper and Karen Bowie. Call (202) 723-7769 for further details.

Donations may be made in his name to the National Gay and Lesbian Task Force, 1734 14th St., NW, Washington, DC 20009.

CANDILL Entered into rest, Mar. 22, 1994. William of New York, NY, age 49, in NY. Was co-owner of William Elliot Florist; NYC, partner of the late Elliot Arthur Kawadler. Survived by his sister, Martha Prichard, brother-in-law Ken, and 3 nieces, the loving Kawadler family, and many caring friends. A member of Temple Emanuel in NY. Andres "Bobby" Colon

1944-1993 7-4-93

Never complaining, Andres faced each new indignity of AIDS with courage and hope. He passed away calmly, with a grin and a sigh, at home with his soul-mate, Wink.

Andres was seven when his family left Puerto Rico and settled in San Francisco. He attended Galileo High but was forced to quit when he was 17 to care for his family upon his father's death. He graduated from Mission High night school at 24.

At a young age, Andres worked for C&C of San Francisco until his 1990 disability retirement. He worked for the Water Dept. and Hetch Hetchy before taking over supervision of the PUC/MUNI Reproduction Dept, which he developed into one of the most efficient city departments. He was awarded many commendations, and, upon retirement, was honored with an Andres Colon Day proclaimed by the Mayor of San Francisco, the office of Sen. Milton Marks and the combined departments of P.U.C. and Municipal Railway.

Bobby was a natural in sports, playing 11 years with the Gay Softball League, primarily with Pilsner Inn teams. His bowling teams placed first several times in the Tavern Guild League. Tennis became his new love. He had a wicked serve.

Though short in stature, he never lacked desire, determination or accomplishment. His first softball team earned the nickname of "The Mighty Midgets," due to the average height of 5'4" in the infield.

He was active in AIDS charity programs as a financial supporter and volunteer with the Godfather Service Fund. For his efforts, he was awarded the Bobby Docca Humanitarian Award by the Gay Softball League.

Bobby is survived by his companion of 25 years, Allan Winkle; mother, Miguelina; brothers Jose, James, Frankie and Edwin; sisters Mary Ramos, Carmen Rosa and Rafaela Colon, plus many nieces and nephews. All reside in the Bay Area.

Family thanks go to those responsible for his care — Dr. Kern at So. SF Kaiser, Dr. Fong and Dr. Wilkie at SF Kaiser and the many other doctors, nurses and health care workers. You will be remembered in our prayers.

A memorial service was held on May 26th in the Chapel at Woodlawn Cemetery and his ashes were interred in the Sanctuary of Peace at Woodlawn.

My Baby: The days will be long and my heart heavy until we are reunited in the hereafter. Please wait for me, my love — Your Winkie Baby. ▼ died of complications from AIDS Dec. 5 in San Francisco. He was 47.

Robert Chesley

Roberto Colón, health education coordinator at the Fenway Community Health Center, died on March 26 in Brigham and Women's Hospital in Boston. He was 33.

Born in New York City and raised in New York and Las Piedras, Puerto Rico, Roberto was a bright and enthusiastic educator and loyal friend to many. He received his undergraduate degree from Harvard University and studied for a Master's in Public Health from Boston University.

He dedicated his career to creating awareness of health issues of young people of color, particularly in the lesbian and gay community. Extremely prolific, Roberto leaves behind an outstanding legacy of social change. He pioneered educational programs with the Massachusetts Department of Public Health, the AIDS Action Committee of Massachusetts as the liaison to the Latino community, and the Fenway Community Health Center. Co-founder of Club Antorcha, Roberto gave much of his time and energy to various groups for the Latino and African-American lesbian and gay communities through work with the Latino Health Institute, the Multicultural AIDS Coalition, Men of Color Combating AIDS, and others.

Most recently he worked under a grant from the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, and co-developed the Color Me Healthy program to raise awareness of issues of AIDS, drug use and safer sex in communities of color. He co-developed community events such as the Bayard Rustin Breakfast.

An avid conversationalist, Roberto was captivating by his wonderful combination of varied interests and down-to-earth sense of style and humor. He inspired confidence in those around him and emphasized the importance of enjoying life.

Roberto's creativity was magnetic. He supported and created art and loved to dance.

He is survived by his parents; his sisters Evelyn, Lillian, and Inez; his aunts, uncles, cousins, and his close friends who extended his family.

To many of us who knew him closely, his death will remain in our memory as an abrupt termination to the life of a dynamic and loving individual. Roberto gave us so much we became spoiled by his friendship and dedication.

Please join friends and family at a potluck memorial to celebrate Roberto's life and creative spirit at the Fenway Community Health Center on Saturday, May 7 at 6 p.m. Bring food and memories to share with the community.

Ebbe Carlsson, Who Investigated Olof Palme's Killing, Dies at 44

STOCKHOLM, Aug. 3 (AP) — Ebbe Carlsson, a Swedish journalist and publisher who was sharply criticized for his secret investigation of Prime Minister Olof Palme's assassination, died today. He was 44 years old.

He had been suffering from AIDS.

Mr. Carlsson, a former confidant of Mr. Palme, felt that the police had inadequately pursued suggestions that a Kurdish rebel group was responsible for the slaying of the Prime Minister in 1986. He approached top Swedish law enforcement officials, who authorized him to begin a secret inquiry.

Part of Mr. Carlsson's investigation involved tapping the phones of Kurdish immigrants and refugees. His freelance effort came to a halt in June 1988, when his bodyguard was caught smuggling illegal bugging devices into Sweden from Denmark to be used in his inquiry.

3 High Officials Resigned

Revelations about his investigation led to an uproar, bringing the resignations of the Justice Minister, Anna-Greta Leijon; the head of national police, Nils-Erik Ahmanson, and the head of the secret police, Sune Sandstrom. The three officials admitted that they had approved Mr. Carlsson's investigation, which was independent of the police inquiry.

Mr. Carlsson was indicted on charges of illegally importing the bugging equipment, but a district court acquitted him.

The slaying of Mr. Palme remains unsolved. He was shot dead on a Stockholm street on Feb. 28, 1986.

During the 1970's, Mr. Carlsson worked as a spokesman for the Ministry of Justice and later as editor of a regional newspaper, Vastgota-Demokraten. He entered the publishing business in 1979 and worked in a top post at the respected Bonniers house.

Mr. Carlsson discussed his homosexuality and disclosed that he was suffering from AIDS on a nationally televised talk show in November 1991. His action was praised by groups and doctors campaigning to prevent the spread of the AIDS virus in Sweden.

Information on survivors was not immediately available.

CASSIANI

In Brighton, February 14, 1992. Beloved son of Ely (Schuff) Cassiani of Brighton and the late Dante Cassiani. Tremont St., Douglas Park, Boston, MA. 02118.

CASTELLANI—John A., of Brooklyn Heights, died on March 19th, 1993, of cancer. He was born in Troy, NY in 1944. Mr. Castellani was the former Director of the Mount Vernon Ladies Association of the Union, George Washington's residence in Virginia; and he was the Curator of the Mount Lebanon Shaker Village in Mount Lebanon, N.Y. Since 1984 he was associated with Raines International, an executive search firm in Manhattan. Mr. Castellani was a graduate of Boston University and he was a passionate student of the arts and of American history. He served on the Board of Directors of the David Library of the American Revolution in Washington Crossing, PA, and on the Board of the Darrow School in Mount Lebanon, NY. Mr. Castellani was a leader of the AIDS Task Force of the Unitarian Church of All Souls. He leaves behind his beloved wife of 27 years, Jerilyn Byrne Castellani, and their two children, Jonathan (26) of Burlington, Vt, and Anna (21), currently residing in Brooklyn Heights; his mother, Virginia Castellani of Albany, NY, his two brothers, Joseph of Fitchburg, MA and Robert of Boston, MA, and sister Barbara Marsh of Long Meadow, MA. A memorial service will be held on Wednesday, March 24, at 2 PM at the Unitarian Church of All Souls on Lexington Ave. at 80th Street in Manhattan. Morris C. Costa

May 19, 1960-April 7, 1993

Born and raised in Webster,

Massachusetts, Morris graduated in '78 from Bartlett High School and attended Johnson-Wales College in Providence, Rhode Island. In 1982 he received his B.A. in Culinary Arts and moved to San Francisco with his life-long friend Donald Harris. He began working in 1986 for City Eats, the catering division of Marriott, where he became the sous-chef in charge of catering for the board of directors of Pacific Telesis, a position he held until 1992. He also ran his own successful catering service.

He loved roller skating, and took first place in freestyle at the Regional Junior Olympics in '87, and third place in novice dance in the AARC competition in '89, going to nationals both times. In 1988, he bought his motorcycle and soon joined Pegasus Motorcycle Owners Club, where he made many dear friends and prepared gourmet meals on "runs." At the Satyr's Badger Flats statewide competition in motorcycle maneuvering, he took third and then first prize in the last two years.

After testing HIV positive in the late '80s, he became very active in the Healing Circle, which became a major part of his life and the source of numerous friendships. Until last fall, he supplied music for the Circle's meetings. He also coordinated alternative oxygen therapy for PWAs. Quiet and retiring though he was, his spiritual life was strong. Morris was universally liked and made a real difference in the lives of many people. Thank you, Mo, for bringing gentleness and joy into our lives!

James J. Coffey

April 7, 1950-March 18, 1994

Born in Brooklyn, Jim received a B.A. at York College and an M.P.A. degree at New York University before beginning a career in health care administration in the New York state hospital system. Shortly after arriving in San Francisco in 1980, Jim joined Bank of America, where he became an assistant vice president. He moved to Wells Fargo Bank, becoming a key player on the marketing team that supported the Asset Management Group. Successfully transferring his excellent marketing skills to the sales arena, Jim's last title at the bank was vice president. Everyone who knew Jim through his work and through his community activities will remember his enthusiasms, his intelligence, his capacity for friendship, and his laughter.

Jim, who died after a valiant battle with AIDS, is survived by his parents, Ann and Walter Coffey; his brothers,

Girard and Robert; and his sister, Therese. Friends are invited to gather at 5 p.m. on Saturday, April 9, to remember him at the home of Allan Gold, 424 Central, San Francisco. It was Jim's wish that donations be made in his memory to Project Open Hand, the AIDS Emergency Fund, the Shanti Project, or Visiting Nurses and Hospice. For more information about the memorial gathering, please call (415) 929-9524. ▼

3/5/93 Cyril Collard

Actor and Director, 35

PARIS, March 5 (AP) — Cyril Collard, a writer who made his directing and acting debut in a highly acclaimed film about coping with AIDS, died today in Versailles. He was 35.

His agent, Claude Davy, said the cause was AIDS.

Mr. Collard's movie, "Savage Nights," was released in October last year. Adapted from his semi-autobiographical book of the same name, published in 1989, the movie is about a young bisexual and the choices forced on him after he learns he is H.I.V. positive.

Mr. Collard directed the film and took on the starring role after it was refused by actors.

"Savage Nights" has received seven nominations for the César Awards, France's Academy Awards, which are to be presented on Monday.

Mr. Collard was born in Paris on Dec. 19, 1957, and studied math and physics before taking up writing. His first novel, "Love Condemned," was published in 1987.

Robert Currie, an internationally known designer of commercial and residential interiors, sets for television and print advertisements, died on Wednesday at New York University Hospital in Manhattan. He was 45.

A friend, Marjorie Rosen, said the cause was complications from AIDS.

Mr. Currie was known for his bold, trend-setting ideas, room settings and shop interiors for both fashion and home-furnishings clients, including Yves St. Laurent, Giorgio Armani, Calvin Klein, Didier Aaron and Doris Blau.

Mr. Currie had no formal training but was widely recognized as one of the most gifted among a generation of talented designers. He was a master of the unexpected, using unusual textures and creating dramatic effects by contrasting simple objects with extravagant ones.

Born in Paterson, N.J., on June 26, 1948, Mr. Currie was a classical studies major at Syracuse University and worked in the Peace Corps.

In the early 1970's, a shop window he put together for a friend was noticed by Geraldine Stutz, the president of the Henri Bendel store. He became display director for the store in 1975, a position he held until 1979, and his dramatic, often humorous and always clever windows became must-see design stops in Manhattan.

Mr. Currie elevated the medium of store window display to what became known around town as "street theater." Mr. Currie went on to do window displays for such fashion stores as Hanae Mori, Chanel, Martha and Clarence House, a designer fabrics company.

Portrayed Obsession

Mr. Currie directed the first thematic fashion video for Norma Kamali, entitled Fall Fantasy, and worked with the photographer Richard Avedon on television and print advertising campaigns for Christian Dior, Gianni Versace and Calvin Klein.

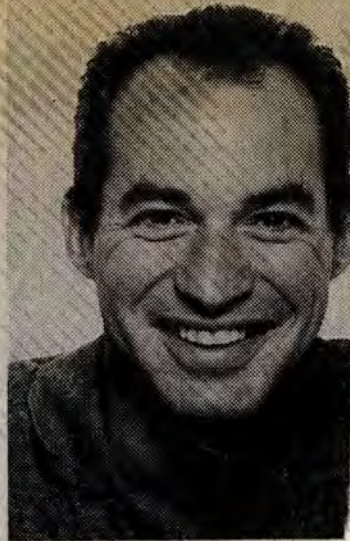

Most memorable were the sets for television commercials for Mr. Klein's Obsession perfume broadcast in 1985 and 1986: stark, nearly surreal, black and white dramatizations of abstract situations involving obsessive relationships.

Throughout the 80's, Mr. Currie designed a series of exhibitions that included a show at the Metropolitan Museum of Art on Valentino, the Italian fashion designer; a 100th anniversary party for Sotheby's, and fashion exhibitions on Hanae Mori in Tokyo.

Mr. Currie's work was widely published in magazines like Architectural Digest, Interior Design and The New York Times.

Mr. Currie is survived by his companion, Michael Halpern, of Hollywood, Calif.; his mother, Annette Currie, of Providence, R.I., and his brother, Jack Currie, also of Providence.

A service will be held today at 11 A.M. at St. Vincent Ferrer Church, Lexington Avenue at 66th Street in Manhattan.

Ja'nes Cuthbertson

Ja'nes Cuthbertson passed over on Thursday, May 13, 1993. Ja'nes came to San Francisco in 1966 and fell in love! He fell in love with this city! Before that, his love had been Paris, but his move here relegated the City of Light to second place, even though Paris always managed to shape many beautiful memories for him as he moved through San Francisco.

Those of us who knew him will remember Ja'nes as Lover or Friend or Teacher. He had a special ability to broaden our viewpoints on any number of things with a philosophy grounded in the teachings of Gandhi and Unitarianism. His goal was ever Peace.

Ja'nes is survived by his sister, Jane Curtis; his nieces, Diana and her husband, Greg of Florida and Judy Powell, of Ohio; and his San Francisco Family, Bill, Darrel, Gene, Jim and Jon. Ja'nes also leaves behind a Tribe of Friends who have witnessed and shared his long, valiant struggle and who hope he has now found the elusive peace.

We wish to express our thanks to Shanti for allowing Marty, Ramon and Richard to share and enhance Ja'nes' life. We would also like to thank Project Open hand for their services and to thank the Nursing Services at Davies Hospital for their care and effort to make Ja'nes as comfortable as possible while he was hospitalized.

Tears have fallen all around San Francisco and in Florida. And, hopefully, somewhere in a small Paris cafe, a tear is also being wiped away. Love and Light, Dear Friend!

Plans for a service celebrating Ja'nes' life are pending. For those who wish, contributions can be made to PAWS, P.O. Box 460489, SF, CA 94146, or to the charity of your choice. ▼

Donald R. Cox

June 11, 1952-March 19, 1994

On March 19, surrounded by his lover

Ray, mother Marie and good friend John, Donnie died peacefully due to an AIDS-related illness.

Born and raised in and around Plainview, Texas, Don left at 16 to attend college, eventually receiving his BA in architecture from the University of Chicago. He worked at Skidmore, Owings & Merrill for four years.

Leaving Chicago, he settled in Washington, DC, and together with his lover, the late Ted Huffcut, co-owned and operated the Nosegay Flower Shop. Don attended the Shelton School of Floral Design, the European Masters Design School in Vienna and the American Institute of Floral Design. Their clients included then Vice President and Mrs. Bush, the Reagans, the Smithsonian and the Corcoran Gallery, besides many other heads of state and embassies.

Don lived in New York City and Greenwich, Conn., before moving to San Francisco in 1991. I had the great pleasure of meeting and falling in love with him in April of that year.

Don is survived by his parents, Vonnie and Marie Cox; his brother, Dick; many relative in Texas and Oklahoma; his "babies," Tigger and Tish; and many friends here in San Francisco and in New York.

Donnie, I love you with all my heart, and I miss you terribly. Love, Ray. ▼

Steve Colip

February 28, 1993

You were a friend of many fellow spiritual seekers, playfully sharing your searching mind, heart and soul.

Teaching children brought you closer to your own child-self and to a more deftly grounded presence.

Your life search brought you to the realization of love — from your intimate knowledge of simple beauty to the ecstasy of spiritual union. We all received the benefit of your special gifts: an intensely questioning mind and your beautiful musical talent.

Steve was a graduate in composition and piano from California State University, Sacramento, and a Master of Fine Arts, North Texas State University, Denton. He returned to Sacramento in August after living and teaching in Los Angeles the last few years. He died peacefully in the home of his parents on the morning of the last day of February of complications related to HIV-infection. ▼

Todd Steven Craig

May 3, 1993

On May 3, Todd Steven Craig passed away peacefully after a nine-month bout with lymphoma. Todd was a humanist, vegetarian and pacifist. He was active in gay rights and animal rights and was unswerving in his convictions. Todd loved ethereal music like the Cocteau Twins, Enya and Dead Can Dance. In many of the used CD stores, he was so well known that clerks would greet him by name and save CDs especially for him. He also composed his own music, including many promising pieces influenced by his favorite artists. In all the creative and intellectual arts, Todd showed a spark and met his studies and projects with enthusiasm. Like so many gay men, he had a wonderful sense of humor and would disarm stress with a ready joke. He was a powerful force who lived his life striving for harmony among his friends.

Todd will be missed by his lover and domestic partner, Ben Templin; his mother, Kay Flint; sister, Joey; brother, Jeff; the Peace and Conflict Studies Department at UC Berkeley and his many friends.

In lieu of flowers, please send donations to LYRIC, (Lavender Youth Recreation & Info Center), the Todd Steven Craig Fund at 3543 18th Street, #31, SF, CA 94110. A celebration of Todd's life is planned for this weekend. Please call (415) 285-5095 for details. ▼

Joseph Henry Copeland

March 16, 1952-May 6, 1993

Joe passed away on the evening of May 6, after a long courageous battle with AIDS-related illnesses.

After serving in the U.S. Navy during the Viet Nam War, he moved to the Bay Area, where he lived for many years.

Joe is survived by his lover and friend of 10 years, Roy; and his loving cat, Boom Boom. Included in his S.F. family are Nancy, Dennis and Edie, who were also by his side during his passing, Raymond and Cliff, Robert and Grover, and Suzie Q of the Hob Nob were also close friends.

Joe leaves three sisters and a brother in Delaware and his father and step-mother in North Carolina.

As a credit to his strength, "Little Joe" had a neverending sense of humor and love of life.

He had many friends in the S.F. Area. Bye for now, Joe, we all really miss you! Many thanks to Visiting Nurses Hospice of S.F. and Project Open Hand.

Curt Culhane

Curtis Charles Culhane, 31, of Arlington, Virginia, died Friday, March 19, 1993, at his home of PML, a neurological disease related to AIDS, according to his friend, Elliot Hudson of Arlington.

Culhane's life revolved around his work and his friends, said Hudson. He "loved people and a challenge."

Born in Fairvault, Minn., Culhane graduated from the University of Wisconsin in 1983 and moved to Washington D.C., in the summer of the same year and worked for the State Department. Culhane in 1988 earned a master's degree in public administration from George Washington University. He was admitted into the Presidential Management Intern program and entered service with the Department of Health and Human Services as a programs analyst. He remained with HHS until his death.

According to Hudson, Culhane enjoyed travel, bicycling, refinishing furniture, gardening, his friends, and his dog, Dakota.

Culhane was a member of the codependency group CODA, and was instrumental in setting up a peer and employment counseling group that counseled Gays on career changes and employment.

A celebration of the life of Culhane was held in Fairfax, Va., on March 24. A large group of his friends and co-workers attended and shared stories about their experiences with Culhane, according to Hudson. A funeral mass was held on March 27 in Waterville, Minn. His remains were cremated and the ashes were returned to his family.

In addition to Hudson, Culhane is survived by his parents, Gladis and John Culhane of Morristown, Minn.; a sister, Jean Walz of Morristown; a brother, Roger Culhane of Northfield, Minn.; and a niece and three nephews.

Stuart Challender

Led Sydney symphony orchestra

ASSOCIATED PRESS

SYDNEY - Stuart Challender, chief conductor and artistic director of the Sydney Symphony Orchestra since 1987, died of AIDS-related complications today at age 44.

Mr. Challender had conducted all the major Australian symphony, chamber and opera orchestras in recent years. He announced in September he had AIDS and would be unable to work as vigorously as in the past.

Mr. Challender went to Europe in 1968 as a boy and spent 12 years studying conducting in Hamburg and Vienna. In Switzerland, he was resident conductor at the Municipal Theatre in Lucerne and opera houses in Basel and Zurich before returning to Australia in 1980.

In 1987, he made his British debut with the Royal Philharmonic, BBC Scottish and Royal Liverpool Philharmonic orchestras.

In 1988, he toured the United States with the Sydney Symphony.

He conducted the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Hong Kong in 1989 and in 1990 conducted four concerts with the Chicago Symphony Orchestra. 12-12-91

Scott Coviello 1963 - 1990

Scott once said "Nobody remembers anyone who's nice, so I'll just make you all miserable." in a Scott matter of fact way. Of course, we're not sure whether he intended to be remembered or if it was just his way to get away with being a prick. Getting on everybodys case was a specialty. In between nagging there was much laughter and coy humor that we learned to realize was the real Scott. He was just as good a guy as he could be. Thoughtful, always knowing, remembering what was right or appropriate for the the person, situation or moment. Often noticed as the little guy with the handlebar moustache, the big bike and making the most noise. Scott was a charter member of Riders M.C., an officer and a jolt of electricity that will be missed forever. Scott was very much an influence in Riders M.C. helping with every event and cause.

Lawyer Says Client Got AIDS From Patient

SYDNEY, Australia, Feb. 4 (Reuters) - A lawyer says that a 79-year-old Australian woman has died after becoming infected with the AIDS virus in what the lawyer said was the world's first case of H.I.V. transmission between patients.

The woman, known as Case B, died recently at a hospital here, the lawyer, Anne Farrell, said this week. The victim was among four women who contracted the virus at a Sydney doctor's office in 1989 after undergoing minor skin operations. Earlier that day, the doctor had treated a man who was infected with H.I.V.

It was the first patient-to-patient H.I.V. transmission on record, Ms. Farrell said.

Australian health officials say there was a failure in infection control.

The woman began legal action against the doctor in December, asserting that the virus had been transmitted to her because he had used unsterilized instruments or syringes or a multidose vial of anesthetic. The doctor, who has voluntarily stopped practicing, has said the only equipment he re-used was a scalpel handle. The lawyer, whose firm is representing two of the other women, said the legal action for Case B would continue.

More than 2,800 people have died of AIDS in Australia since the disease was first detected here in 1980.

Dorian Corey 8-29-93

Dorian Corey Is Dead; A Drag Film Star, 56

Dorian Corey, a star of the documentary "Paris Is Burning," the award-winning film about female impersonators, died on Sunday at Columbia Presbyterian Medical Center in Manhattan. He was 56 and lived in Manhattan.

The cause was AIDS, said Jennie Livingston, the director of the 1991 film.

After "Paris Is Burning," Mr. Corey established himself as an older, wiser and wryly unflappable observer of drag life as well as a carefully put-together participant in it. "I didn't do it for the money," he said of the film in an interview this year in The New York Times. "I did it for fun. Always have. You see I was in show business for years, so when my 15 minutes finally came, it was gravy."

Mr. Corey grew up in Buffalo. After study at the Parsons School of Design, he toured the United States in the 1960's in the Pearl Box Revue, a cabaret drag act. He performed regularly at Sally's Hideaway and at Sally's II on West 43d Street and also had a clothing business, Corey Design.

Executive, 34

Philip Carlson, a New York advertising executive, died yesterday at Lenox Hill Hospital in Manhattan. He was 34.

The cause was complications from AIDS, his family said.

Mr. Carlson and Karen Hochman founded Ad Hoc Marketing Resources in 1983, and the firm became a leading independent direct response advertising agency. In 1991, Ad Hoc was acquired by Jordan, McGrath & Taylor. Mr. Carlson then joined the advertising firm of Biederman, Kelly & Shaffer as senior vice president and chief financial officer, positions he held until last April.

Before Ad Hoc was founded, he had marketing jobs at General Foods and Citicorp.

John Crawley

John Crawley, 41, of Washington, D.C., died Sunday, July 4, 1993, at Georgetown University Hospital of complications associated with AIDS, according to his high school friend, Michael Ferrara of D.C.

Crawley was born in Fort Belvoir, Va., and lived in D.C. since 1986. He attended the all boys St. Stephen's School of Alexandria, Va., now the co-ed St. Stephen's and St. Agnes School, from 1964-1970, where he met Ferrara. From 1970-1974, Crawley attended Bridgewater College of Bridgewater, Va.

Crawley was head waiter at The Adams Restaurant in the Hay-Adams Hotel from 1986 until 1993. "He was quite fond of relating the time he served Dixie Carter" — the actress who plays Julia Sugarbaker on Designing Women, Ferrara said. Crawley would describe Carter as "A true southern belle."

Crawley's interests included architecture, landscaping, and photography. He especially liked to take photos of his favorite sites in D.C. He also liked to visit Montreal, Canada, and spent many summers frequenting Rehoboth Beach, Del.

In addition to Ferrara, Crawley is survived by his mother, Peggy Crawley of Clearwater, Fla.; friends, Don Gay, Richard Molnar, Jeffrey Peterson, all of D.C.; and many more.

Crawley's remains were cremated. According to Ferrara, his ashes were spread in a special ceremony among five Yoshino cherry trees at the Tidal Basin near the Jefferson Memorial, at Crawley's request. Crawley's mother has donated some of Crawley's furniture to Food and Friends of D.C. and the Salvation Army of D.C.

A memorial service for Crawley will be held Sunday, July 25, from 6 to 8 p.m., at Mr. P's in the video lounge, 1247 P St. NW.

James Paul Carhart 93

James Paul Carhart died Saturday, June 19, at St. Barnabus Medical Center in Livingston, NJ, from complications from AIDS. He was 32 years old.

Jim lived in Boston for 14 years. He graduated from the School of Fine Arts at Boston University in 1983. He worked for the Department of Public Welfare in the Healthy Start program in the mid-80s, and in 1990 and 1991. As an actor, Jim was featured in works by Theater S. and with Performer's Ensemble. Jim adapted the classic 1939 film "M" for the stage. With the collaboration of many people, particularly Kathleen Marsh, he directed the show through a three-week run in May 1990, one week after being diagnosed with AIDS.

Jim participated in the Speaker's Bureau at AIDS Action Committee. He loved sharing his experiences as a person with AIDS, especially with students. He was also involved with the Mind/Body and

Jim's love for life, expressed in his courage, sense of humor, humility and unflinching positive attitude, created an indomitable spirit which gave him much more dignity than the disease could take away.

Jim will live on in the memories and hearts of his countless friends throughout the country. He is survived by his parents, Bart and Mary Lou Carhart of Annandale, NJ; his brothers, Scott and Bart, Jr.; the O'Neil sisters, Tyrell, Siobhan and Bronwyn; and his lover of the last four years, Terry Bockhorn.

In lieu of flowers, donations should be sent to the AIDS Action Committee in Jim's name, in remembrance of his work with the Speaker's Bureau.

A memorial service will be held at the Black Box Theatre at the Boston Center for the Arts on July 3, at 2 p.m. All are welcome.

Michael E. Carney
March 26, 1945-June 28, 1993
Surrounded by loving friends and his dog, Casey, Mike ended his battle with AIDS at home June 28. Courageous to the end, Mike laughed about how he might beat AIDS as he had beaten polio as a child and survived the Vietnam conflict with distinguished service.

Born in Waterloo, Iowa, graduated from Lorcas College in Dubuque, for many years he worked at SF Social Services, with his great friend the late Gary Starlipper, then in travel arrangements, allowing him to enjoy world travel. Michael worked for Siemer & Hand Travel and Premier US Travel.

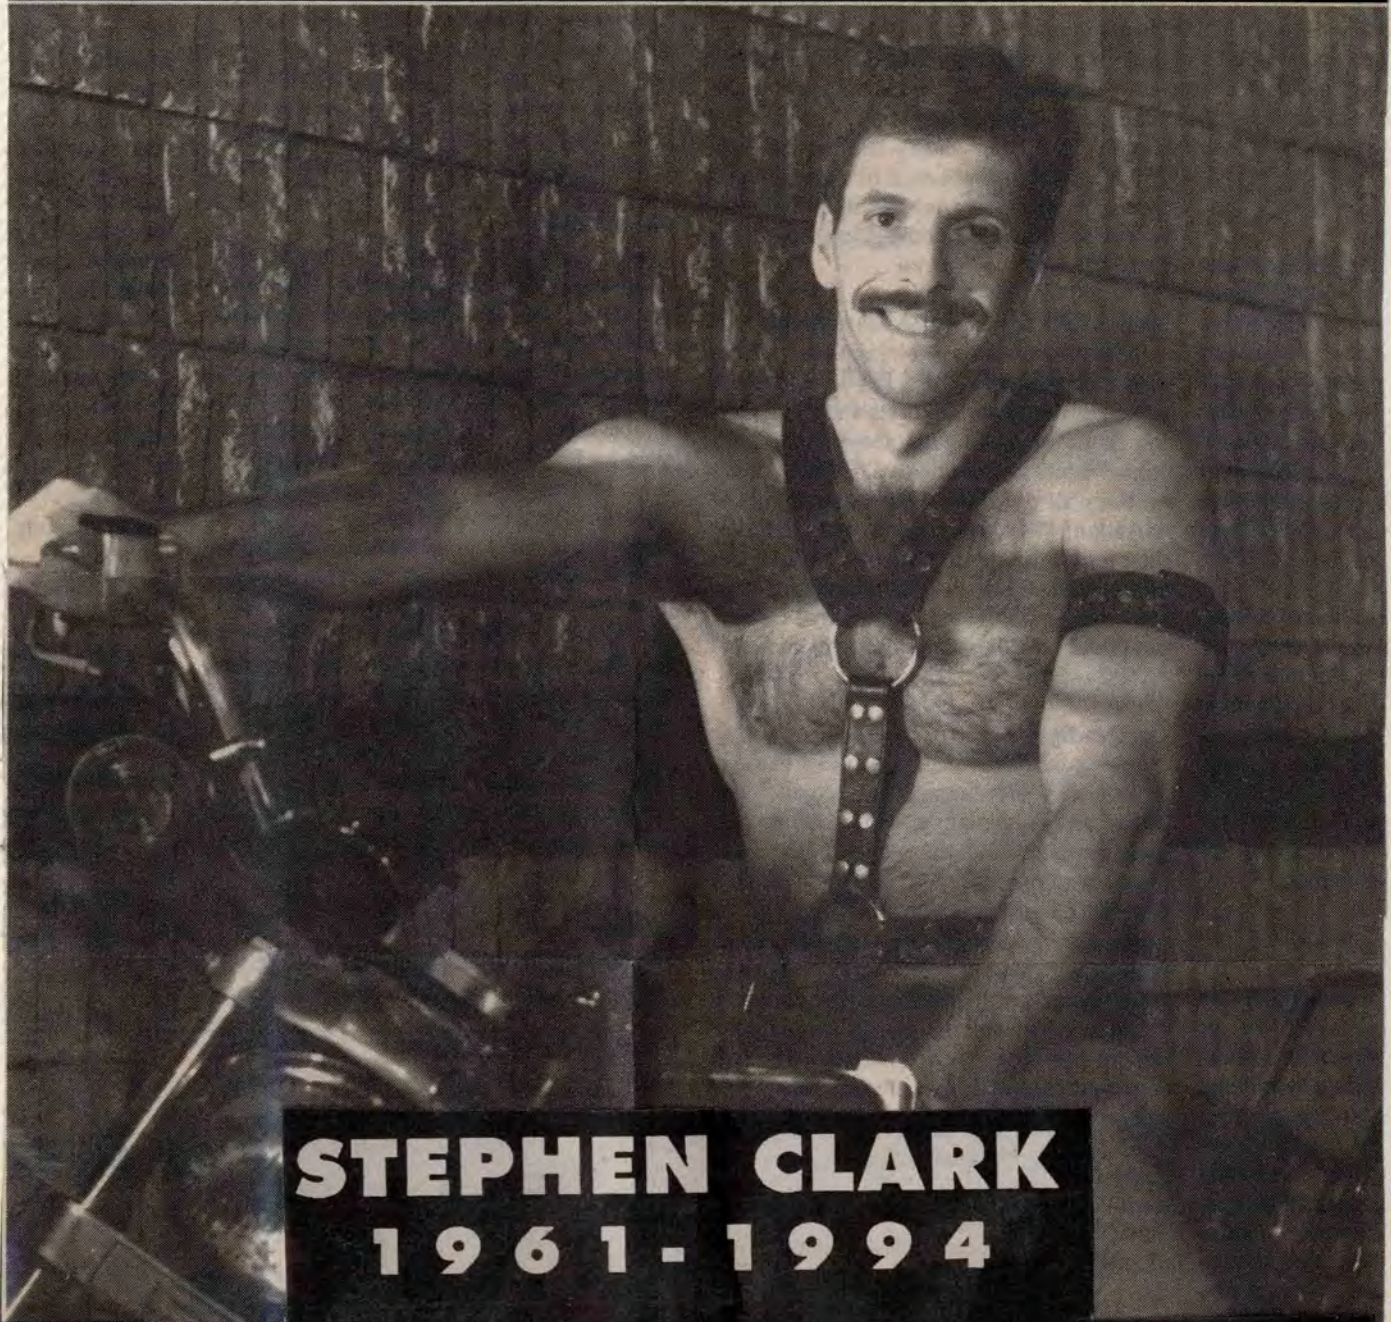

In 1985 Michael joined AA, accumulating more than seven years sobriety. Michael's path to recovery led him to Co-Dependents Anonymous, and he was a prime mover bringing CODA to SF.

As Michael's battle with AIDS progressed, he was first cared for and then care-giver to his friend, the late Steve Graham. Michael's final wish to die at home peacefully with his little dog Casey was made possible by Visiting Nurses and friends, especially friend and co-worker Lisa Scarsella and dear friend Jeffery Hyatt. At his bedside with Jeff were Sandy, Steve, Dean, and Frank.

A Mass of the Resurrection will be at Most Holy Redeemer Church, 100 Diamond Street on Tuesday, July 13, 1993 at 7 p.m.

PAWS, Open Hand, Shanti and Visiting Nurses gave peace and dignity to Mike's final days, in lieu of flowers, donations to these organizations are preferred. ▼

Stephen Paul Clark, of Boston, died of complications from AIDS on March 23 at the New England Deaconess Hospital. He was surrounded by his loving partner Timothy Roberts, his father and stepmother, Don and Carmen Clark, and close friends.

Steve was born in Beth Page, New York, and raised on Long Island. He attended the University of Massachusetts at Amherst where he received his B.S. in Exercise Science in 1984. Steve moved to Boston in 1985.

An avid sports enthusiast and competitor, he competed in the 1986 San Francisco Gay Games and the 1990 Vancouver Gay Games as a team member representing Boston's volleyball team. He was also an excellent gymnast and tennis player.

Steve's insightful sense of style and humor brought many smiles and moments of laughter to those close to him. As an employee of the Boston Ramrod, his engaging personality and warmth, made regulars and strangers alike feel welcome and at ease.

Steve will be dearly missed by his countless friends and acquaintances who had the privilege and pleasure of knowing him and who now keep special memories of him close to their hearts.

He is survived by his loving partner, Timothy Roberts of Boston; his father and stepmother, Don and Carmen Clark of Yarmouthport, MA; his mother and stepfather, Emily and James Smikiel of North Myrtle Beach, SC; and many caring friends and relatives.

A memorial service to celebrate Steve's life will be held on Sunday, May 15 at The Jesuit Urban Center, 775 Harrison Avenue, Boston. Remembrances may be sent to Community Servings, 1353 Dorchester Avenue, Dorchester, MA, 02122.

Nicholas Carter

Sept. 20, 1948-July 9, 1993 44

Nicholas Carter died peacefully at home on July 9, 1993, with his lover and his mother at his side. He lived his life with compassion, commitment, love, and integrity, and worked tirelessly in support of people with AIDS.

Nicholas and his lover of 12 years, Alan Emery, were the foster parents of Neil Rasmussen.

He worked at the San Francisco Art Institute and he loved writing, music, reading, and body building. He was a fine pianist and the author of a novel, short stories, and poetry.

His lover and his mother, Bettylou Carter, lovingly cared for him during his last weeks of his long struggle with AIDS, and his five brothers and sisters, and father, visited to share their love. Support was provided 24 hours a day during his last week by our dear friends Venetia Porter, Jean Swallow, Susan Sanford, and Ellen Shapiro.

His Memorial Service will be at 7 p.m. on Thursday, July 15, 1993 at the MCC-SF Church, 150 Eureka Street, followed by a reception at the MCC-SF Community Center, 4035 18th Street. Nicholas asked that donations in his name be sent to "MCC AIDS Ministries" c/o the MCC-SF Church.

We mourn the loss but rejoice that Nicholas is now with God. ▼

CARON—Christopher Roland, 35, died suddenly on Tuesday, April 19 following a remarkably courageous battle against AIDS. A resident of Manhattan, Christopher was born in Quebec City, Canada, and raised in Worcester, MA. Christopher was graduated from Worcester Academy with honors in 1976 and McGill University, Montreal, Canada with honors in 1980. Jerald D. Crist

Jerry died of AIDS on Monday, June 28, at the Kaiser Hospital in Hayward.

He generously and thoughtfully — as usual — gave his family permission to let him go. He was grateful to leave so much pain and eagerly went on to join his son, Mark; his lover of 19 years, Bill; and his sister, Corky; and the many friends who he felt were waiting for him with open arms.

He was one of the most valued elementary teachers in Hayward for 29 years, but he will be remembered by those of us left behind as the ideal family man. His happiest times were with his children and grandchildren and surrounded by his family.

Jerry's memorial will be at the MCC Church in Hayward at 8 p.m. on July 9. From 880, go East of A. St. to Hathaway. Turn left (at Price Club); Hathaway becomes Hacienda. MCC-Lutheran Church is at 100 Hacienda.

His ashes now rest above the coffin of his son, and they share a common tombstone in the Lodi cemetery. ▼

William F. Chafin, 35; Started Gay Magazine 10-16-92

William F. Chafin, a record producer and founder of a national magazine for homosexuals and lesbians, died on Friday at his home in Manhattan. He was 35 years old.

He died of AIDS-related lymphoma, his family said.

The president of Chafin Communications, he founded and financed NYQ magazine last year, which has since been renamed QW. Before his magazine venture, he produced rap records as the owner of Acme Music.

Mr. Chafin contributed to various causes for homosexuals and people with AIDS, including including Act Up, Community Research Initiative on AIDS, Lambda Legal Defense and Education Fund and the television series "In the Life."

He was born in Chestertown, Md. His original family name was Fletcher; he later adopted his stepfather's name.

Mr. Chafin was educated at Georgetown University.

Surviving are his mother, Mary Rue Chafin of Boynton Beach, Fla.; three sisters, Debra Anne Vila of Boca Raton, Fla., and Sara Chafin and Pamela Spencer, both of Washington, and a brother, Rodney Chafin of Orange Park, Fla.

William Coombs

William "SWIMMMM" Coombs died peacefully on Tuesday, February 23,

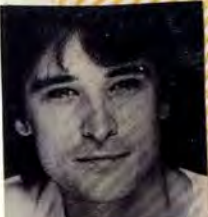

1993 at Garden Sullivan Hospital. Born in 1955 in San Diego, raised in California and North Carolina, William had been a resident of San Francisco for 11 years. A former product manager for Bank of America, SWIMMMM was active in the San Francisco Gay Softball League and the S.F. Tavern Guild Bowling League. He also served on the board of the S.F.B.E.A.R., an AIDS relief organization.

Gathered around William during the last weeks of his life were his lover Richard Moll, and many friends who spent hours making his stay in the hospital comfortable.

William is survived by his parents, Lavola Whisenhunt and Bradford S. Coombs; five brothers, Stanley Coombs, Woodrow Coombs, Philip Coombs, Michael Fisk, Gene Fisk; two sisters, Faye Coombs and Leslie Butler and his dog, Spike.

Rest in peace, Princess, you'll be missed! ▼

Federal jury awards $512,000 in AIDS bias case

TOLEDO, Ohio—A federal jury ruled June 14 that a doctor and hospital violated the Federal Rehabilitation Act in refusing medical care to a man with AIDS. Dr. Charles Hull and Fremont Memorial Hospital in Fremont, Ohio, were found liable for $512,000 in compensation and punitive fees for refusing to treat Fred Charon, who came to the hospital for treatment for a non-AIDS related allergic reaction in 1992. Charon died in 1993; the suit was continued by his companion with the help of the American Civil Liberties Union. 94

WORTH WARREN CLEGG

Worth W. Clegg, 46

Was USAir flight attendant

A memorial service will be held tomorrow for Worth Warren (T.C.) Clegg, a flight attendant for USAir, who died of complications from AIDS Saturday in his home in Boston. He was 46.

Mr. Clegg was born in Toledo, Ohio. He graduated from Bowling Green State University and received a master's degree at the University of Maryland.

He had been a flight attendant for USAir for 18 years. He previously had been a teacher at Andover High School in Linthicum, Md., and Towson High School in Towson, Md.

He leaves his mother, Rosemary (Brooks) Clegg of Oregon, Ohio.

Bob Catano

July 9, 1960—Feb. 14, 1993

The eldest of three children, Bob was born and raised in the East and South

Bay areas. He enjoyed self-expression through artistic and literary endeavors. He developed a passion for dancing at the Trocadero and the Endup, and playing in the South of Market in '83. On July 17, 1987,

Bob turned his life around by entering into recovery. He then devoted his life to helping others at 18th Street Services and within the NA fellowship. He enjoyed several trips to Europe, and spent his last weeks in the comfort of favorite friends, flowers, food, music and movies. There will be a memorial service for Bob at 18th Street Services/The Meeting Place (2185 Market at 15th St.) on Saturday, February 27 at 10 a.m. in room A. Bob requested everyone attending the memorial to wear a red ribbon. Donations in Bob's memory may be made to 18th Street Services, 217 Church Street, SF, CA 94114. ▼

IN MEMORIAM

KEITH J. CURTIS

MAY 11, 1956

JULY 4, 1993

“So Long.”

- Your beloved friends.

I miss you, my love.

Nicholas Demetrios Chigos II, a co-manager of Sanctuary in Hartford, died on September 14 at Hartford Hospital. Born in Queens, New York, Chigos lived in Hartford before moving to Windsor Locks six years ago. He was 34. Nicholas was Promotional Director at Hartford's Backstreet prior to co-managing Sanctuary with his longtime friend and Backstreet Manager Mark Pember, who predeceased Nicholas in the spring of 1993. In addition to his work in Hartford area nightclubs, he was a color technician at "Studio" of West Hartford. He was formerly employed by Lé Coupe in New York City and was a contributor to Shambhala Project in Hartford.

"In the six years I knew Nicholas, I found him to be a man true to himself and his convictions. He was dedicated, committed, energetic and extremely talented. But above all, he was honest and a true gentleman," said INNewsweekly Associate Publisher Michele Piccolo. "I always listened hard when Nick spoke to me because he was wise and always right. He taught me that the way to really help others is to listen to them and to keep the focus on being the best person you can be."

He is survived by his life partner, Daniel S. Brewer of Windsor; his mother Barbara Chigos; his grandmother Alice Bolio; and a brother, John Chigos, all of Hudson, Florida. He also leaves several aunts and uncles, among them, Peter and Jinny Argiros of Marlborough, and godchildren Jessica and Peter Argiros. He was predeceased by his father, Demetrios Nicholas Chigos, and a brother, William Chigos. The funeral was held on September 16 at All Saints Orthodox Church in Hartford, and the burial was in Palisado Cemetery in Windsor. 1993

Raymond Love Clark, Jr.
Nov. 24, 1951–Aug. 6, 1993

Ray ended his courageous battle against the devastation of AIDS at the California Campus of the California-Pacific Medical Center with his companion in love and his wonderful parents at his side. He had returned to the love and support of the nurses and staff of One East, who had cared for him so often, after receiving excellent care in the ICU.

A native of Texas, Ray earned his B.A. in English and Theatre at Texas A&I University before moving to the Bay Area in 1980. Ray began a distinguished career at Chevron with its Public Affairs Department before moving to Chevron International and establishing a highly-regarded Graphics Unit there.

Ray is survived by his companion of seven years, Brian Well, of San Francisco; his parents, Joyce and Raymond, of Killeen, Texas; his brother Tracy and sister Linda, both of Houston, Texas; his precious cocker spaniel, Rupert; and many friends worldwide in his Chevron family.

Brian is grateful for the wonderful love and support given by Bruce, Charles, Herb, Jane, Mark, Nancy, and all the others who held Ray in their thoughts and prayers.

A memorial service was held in San Francisco on Tuesday, August 10, and burial services are scheduled in Houston on Friday, August 13. Donations to Project Open Hand, 2720 17th St., San Francisco, 94110, are requested in lieu of other remembrances. ▼

Barney A. Carroll, Jr.

July 12, 1943–July 14, 1993

Barney departed this life late on the afternoon of Bastille Day after a four year struggle with AIDS.

At his bedside at home were his lover of fifteen years Tom Hamilton, and Mitzi, their dog.

Barney was born in Virginia and lived in Japan, Germany, Vietnam and Canada. He arrived in San Francisco in 1977 and worked in sales at Determined Productions, Bright Ideas and Winslow/Maxwell at the Gift Center. He is remembered for his love, generosity and laughter. He loved his family, work, classical music, games, history, jokes, cigarettes, and bourbon/ginger.

He brightened so many lives, none ever to be the same. Much appreciation to dear friends in Canada and this country.

Special thanks to all at Ward 86 of S.F. General, the staff and volunteers at Visiting Nurses and Hospice of San Francisco, and to Victoria, Frank, Lois, Gretchen, David, Ray, and Dorothy and Father Armand Kreft of Holy Innocents Church.

Timothy C. Callas
September 4, 1993

Timothy Callas died on Sept. 4, 1993 in Los Angeles. Mr. Callas was born in Kittanning, Pa., and was a graduate of Hamilton College. He was 45.

After college he worked at the AFS and traveled around the world working with foreign exchange students. He moved to San Francisco in the early '70s and was co-owner of Hot Flash of America on Market Street. At Hot Flash he was responsible for launching the careers of many local artists and was involved in organizing many of the event parties of the 1970s. In 1978, Mr. Callas met his lifelong companion, Gary Tighe, who was the DJ at Trocadero Transfer. The first night Mr. Callas danced on the Trocadero dance floor while Mr. Tighe played, he was serenaded the entire night with songs of love.

In 1980 they moved to Los Angeles, and in 1983 opened a wholesale showroom called Callas/Tighe that specialized in trend clothing, accessories, and gift items. In 1988 Mr. Callas left the wholesale business in Mr. Tighe's hands and began a career in the antiques business working with Charles Pollock Antiques.

During their years together Mr. Callas and Mr. Tighe travelled extensively, collected art and antiques, and had many warm friendships.

Mr. Tighe and his faithful dalmatian Buster were at his side at the time of his death, as was his longtime friend Charles Sinclair. There will be a birthday party on Nov. 6th to celebrate his glorious life. ▼

Curt A. Chavez
January 28, 1994

Curt A. Chavez passed away at the age of 31 on January 28, 1994. Curt was a design draftsman for the store planning department at the GAP. He graduated with a bachelor of science degree in design from the College of Environmental Design at the University of California at Davis.

Curt was liked by everyone who met him — the consummate nice guy. He loved days in the outdoors and most especially sharing them with his Chesapeake Bay retriever, Samantha. Last but not least, Curt loved to dance.

He is survived by his longtime companion, Stephen Jackson of Orlando, Florida; his parents, Ralph and Gloria Chavez of Oakland, California; sister, Allison Brown of Hayward, California; brother, Gary Brown of Antioch, California; maternal grandmother, Clara Faber of Oakland, California; and many friends.

Robert ("Chris") Lewis Christian, Jr.

Our adventurous, vivacious and outrageous friend died of AIDS while undergoing experimental treatment for the disease in Seattle. Chris was originally from Jackson, Michigan and moved to San Francisco in 1985 from Tampa, Florida after receiving an honorable discharge from the Army. Although he considered San Francisco his home, Chris also lived in Sedona, Prescott, Maui, Calistoga and San Diego where he was residing at the time of his death. His ashes were scattered near his father's grave overlooking Puget Sound in Washington.

Chris loved to travel and because of his charm and charisma, had close friends everywhere. He had a talent for singing, creating stained glass art, taking up the whole dance floor, and throwing the most wild theme parties imaginable. Had he not been so inept in marketing skills, he would have been rich and famous for his 12-pound, 6,000 calorie "Chris" Sugar Coma Cherry Cheesecake.

Chris is survived by his mother, Judith; sister, Carole; a niece and a nephew. His stepmother, Judie; step-sister, Lynn; and his many friends, including Karla, Peter, Jim, Chris, Tony, Tom, Patty, and Rhonda will remember him most for his generosity and immense capacity to love and care for others. Go in love and light, Christian!

Tom Cmolik

Dec. 28, 1954–June 5, 1993

Tom passed away at 6 a.m. on June 5, 1993 while a patient in Kaiser Hospital in San Francisco. It was his first and only hospitalization related to AIDS. He suffered physically only in the last few months. Emotionally, he was scared and devastated by the illness from the beginning.

Originally from Cleveland, Tom worked for years as a reservations supervisor for United Airlines. This enabled him to travel extensively in this and many other countries. He also went out of his way to help many of his friends to get the best deal they could while flying the friendly skies.

Tom loved '50s record players, '60s convertibles, old rock and roll, and bodybuilding. He won the Physique Body Building Championship in about 1986 and worked out every morning at Gold's Gym. A deeply religious and spiritual man, he attended church regularly and struggled with the inconsistencies of his religion and his spiritual beliefs. He longed for the intimate adult relationship he never had.

Howard Cohen

Howard Cohen died of AIDS in San Francisco on May 27, 1993. A native of Pittsburgh, Howard moved to San Francisco in 1981. He worked for five years as an Employment and Training Specialist at Arriba Juntos Center and for four years as Training Manager at the American Academy of Ophthalmology. He spent the last three years developing his considerable talent as a sculptor.

After his HIV diagnosis, Howard volunteered many hours as an advocate for HIV awareness for the Jewish Children & Family Services AIDS Education Project. His own failing strength could not keep him from this important mission — he spoke to his last group of students just ten days before his death.

Howard is survived by an extended family of relatives and loving friends, from Amsterdam to Pittsburgh. He will be missed by everyone for his optimism, his openness, his laughter, his honesty, his integrity, and most of all for his daily exemplification of the phrase "gay pride."

A memorial service was held at Sinai Memorial Chapel on May 30. A second memorial is being planned for later in the year in Golden Gate Park, where a tree will be planted in Howard's memory. To be notified of the date and time, please send your name and phone number to: "Howard's Tree," c/o J.M., 1995 Turk #2, SF 94115. ▼

David Roy Custead

May 24, 1951–July 6, 1993

David Custead, 42 years old, a former aide to Mayors Feinstein and Agnos, died July 6, 1993, from complications with AIDS. He was buried July 9 with friends, co-workers and family present.

Born in Pennsylvania and raised in Phoenix, he moved to San Francisco in 1978. David became active on the Gay Freedom Day Parade Committee and in various gay political circles. He became a budget analyst for the Mayor's Office of Criminal Justice, serving as liaison between community groups and the mayor.

David, a religious man, was a member of the World Wide Church of God. After a falling out with the church over homosexuality, he converted to Judaism and joined Congregation Sha'ar Zahav.

David was a generous, caring person who helped everyone he met or touched. He gave time and money to anyone who needed it from hustlers to political figures.

Custead is survived by his father, Mr. Custead, of Florida; Paul, of Arizona; and sister, Crystal Black of Utah.

John Marshall Chidester, aka Sister X-plosion!, later Sister X-tasy Marie Colette

John Marshall Chidester, aka Sister

X-plosion!, later Sister X-tasy Marie Colette, was taken from the queer/AIDS activist community by AIDS on the morning of Thursday, September 23, 1993. A memorial service and demonstration were held at the intersection of Castro and Market streets on Saturday, September 25, 1993. Her life and her great works were celebrated, and outrage was expressed at the senseless loss of yet another creative, passionate spirit in our struggle against ignorance, bigotry, and political inaction.

Sister X, as she is known to all, was a guiding spiritual and political force in the activist community both here and internationally. Sister X was responsible for establishing international orders of the Sisters of Perpetual Indulgence in Paris, London, Berlin, and other European cities. She penned the sacred and irreverent "Condom Savior Mass and Vow" as part of the Sisters of Perpetual Indulgence Inc.'s Safer Sex campaign, and also created "The Virtue of Trust," a wedding vow and ceremony for gays and lesbians. As AIDS began to rob John of his physical energy, Sister X-plosion! retired, and Sister X-tasy Marie Colette was born when the dynamic Parisian Chapter of the Order of Perpetual Indulgence honored her as "Great Godmother" and fully professed member of the Couvent de Paris. Shortly before she was taken from us, Sister X was notified that the Shanti Project will be honoring her for her leadership as an AIDS activist, educator and fundraiser on Thursday, October 7, 1993. At the time of her death, she was seeking publication of her autobiography, Wish in One Hand: The Story of a Man Who Was a Nun.

Through the Sisters of Perpetual Indulgence Inc., a California nonprofit organization comprised of social and political activists who use theatre and illusion to educate the public-at-large about AIDS, gay and lesbian freedom and other contemporary social issues, John Marshall Chidester was able to realize and develop his virtues as a nun, educator and AIDS activist. ▼

Thomas "Tommy" Clark Jr.

28, died peacefully in his lover's arms May 19 after a hard struggle due to AIDS-related complications. Well-known as a bartender at 94 Cheeks and Cesar's, he was loved dearly by many and will be missed by all. Let us remember him best as a person with zest for life and a compassion for others. He was preceded in death by his father and survived by his lover Jose, his mother, sisters and many dear friends. "Now it is time to rest in peace—we love you and will always keep you in our hearts."

Shanti to Honor PWAs, But Chidester Dies Before Ceremony

by Dennis Conkin

Shanti Project will honor the contributions of five people with HIV disease, two volunteers, and three foundations at its fifth annual "Making Every Day Count" dinner at the Grand Hyatt Hotel on Thursday, October 7.

Proceeds from the event support the agency's practical, emotional, and other support services for clients.

Although the event had planned to honor five people living with HIV disease, including AIDS activist John Marshall Chidester, Chidester tragically succumbed to the disease last week.

A Native American and member of the Sisters of Perpetual Indulgence, Chidester was well-known in San Francisco and Los Angeles as Sister X-Plosion!. He produced numerous fundraisers for many AIDS service groups and was active in educating high school students about AIDS and safe sex. With B.A.R. news editor Mike Salinas, Chidester co-wrote Dimanche d'Indulgence, a live educational spectacular in Paris that, at one point, had 3,000 Frenchmen kneeling and ejaculating (in the Catholic sense) along to a "Condom Savior Mass." Shortly thereafter, the Catholic Bishops who convened in Lourdes denounced him as a heretic and blasphemer.

Art Cruz

1957-1994

Art was lost to his many friends and family after a valiant, prolonged fight.

Well-known at the Giraffe and Aunt Charlie's, he was welcome everywhere. Art is survived by his lover and best friend of six years, Bill Tolan.

Also surviving are good friends, DJ, Robert and many others, and his mother, Delia Cruz of Salinas.

A celebration of Art's life will be held at the Kokpit on April 28 at 7 p.m. ▼ was accepted into the Paris order of the Sisters, and finished his novel, Wish in One Hand: The Story of a Man Who Was a Nun. His obituary appears on page 25.

Other individuals who will be honored for their contributions include Wayne Corbitt, a leading black gay poet and playwright; Phillip Denney, a Shanti emotional support volunteer and group facilitator; Marta Rosales, a client in Shanti's Crossing program, who is a member of the Instituto de la Raza Speaker's Bureau; and Wyndham Young, a Crossings volunteer who provides emotional support to clients living in the Tenderloin.

Three groups will be recognized for their fundraising for Shanti, including the Design Industries Foundation for AIDS.

The annual banquet begins at 6 p.m. at Club 36 in the Sister X-Plosion!

Grand Hyatt, with the awards ceremony at 7 p.m. Individual tickets are $150, with tables of 10 beginning at $1500.

Richard James Cianciolo

Dec. 2, 1946-Aug. 13, 1993

Richard passed away peacefully at Veterans Hospital August 13, due to AIDS complications. He is survived by his lover of 11 years, Giancarlo; his mother, Beatrice Cianciolo of Torrington, CT.; brother, Joseph and family of Torrington, CT.

sisters Annette Di Lullo and family of Baltimore, Maryland, and Patra Dowling of San Francisco.

Family and friends are invited to participate in a Memorial Mass at Most Holy Redeemer Support Group, 4321 18th St., San Francisco, CA 94114.

A sincere thanks to the loving staff at Veterans Hospital, Fort Miley for the special care given to Richard, and the consideration extended to family and friends. Thanks also to the many friends for their generosity, support and love.

Christmas, and the spirit of, were treasured by Richard. He lived the true spirit of Christmas all year long.

Good night, sweet prince. You will be deeply missed by Giancarlo, family and friends too numerous to mention. You touched many lives during your short, but meaningful life. Your smile and memory live on in our hearts. ▼

James T. Clarke, 49,

A Fashion Designer

10-15-93

James T. Clarke, a fashion designer whose clothing store, James T's, on Lexington Avenue near East 70th Street offered simply cut, classic clothing that was easy to wear, died on Friday at Cabrini Medical Center in Manhattan. He was 49.

His associates said he died of AIDS.

Mr. Clarke started out as an architectural student at Howard University. But he transferred after two years to the Fashion Institute of Technology in Manhattan, where he was graduated with honors and where one of his sketches won a fashion industry prize in 1967.

He opened his boutique at 979 Lexington Avenue in 1974. His customers included Brooke Astor, Gloria Swanson, Teresa Wright, Geraldine Fitzgerald, Joan Fontaine, Anne Slater, Kathryn Crosby, Cindra Ladd, the wife of Alan Ladd, and Barbara Grant, the wife of Cary Grant.

His reversible skirts and pants were among his most popular designs because they were easy to travel with and gave the wearers a leaner look.

Mr. Clarke did all of the creative process himself, including selecting and cutting fabric, and sewing each piece of clothing. In addition to his store, he had wholesale distribution centers in Southampton, L.I., New York, Boston, Palm Beach, Fla., and Santa Barbara, Calif.

Dr. Joseph C. Cremone Jr., at 43; plastic and reconstructive surgeon

12-2-93

A funeral Mass will be said tomorrow for Joseph C. Cremone Jr., a plastic and reconstructive surgeon, hand surgeon and art historian, who died Thursday of respiratory failure at his home in Wakefield. He was 43.

Born in Stoneham, Dr. Cremone was a 1967 graduate of Malden High School. He received his undergraduate degree, magna cum laude, from the University of Massachusetts at Amherst and his medical degree in 1975 from Tufts University School of Medicine.

Dr. Cremone served as chief resident in surgery at Temple University Hospital in Philadelphia and did a Kleinert Fellowship in Hand Surgery at the University of Louisville in Kentucky.

He completed his plastic surgery training at Harvard Medical School, where he was a resident at Cambridge Hospital and chief resident at Beth Israel Hospital. Dr. Cremone also served as a clinical instructor in plastic surgery at Harvard Medical School.

He received many awards, including the outstanding resident award from the American Medical Association for hand surgery and the CIBA Community Medicine Award for his significant contributions in community medicine.

Dr. Cremone practiced in Wakefield for several years and was a member of the medical staffs of Lawrence Memorial Hospital of Medford, Malden Hospital, New England Memorial Hospital, Whidden Memorial Hospital and Cambridge Hospital.

A renowned educator and writer in the areas of art and medicine, Dr. Cremone authored numerous articles and lectured internationally on the relationship between art and medicine.

He leaves his life partner, Richard P. Doherty of Wakefield; his mother, Eleanor (Clivio) of Malden; his sister, Janet Schweitzer of Andover; two brothers, Robert of Woburn and Richard of Wakefield; and several nieces and nephews.

The funeral Mass will be said at 10 a.m. in St. Peter's Parish in Malden. Burial will be in Holy Cross Mausoleum, Malden.

Vincent Paul Crowley

Nov. 20, 1957 - Feb. 3, 1994

Vincent Crowley died of AIDS. He was surrounded by his lover, Allen Lindsley, and his dear friends, Don Watkins, Christine Ahbolin, George Aguiar, Anne Rhein and Mark Smith. Vincent chose to spend his final months in a warm and loving home in Guerneville, Calif.

Allen and Christine would like to thank Martin and Liesa Crowley for their constant and unconditional support during Vincent's illness. We could not have made it through without you.

Vincent devoted the last six years of his life to the participants at RCH, SF, in the Aquatics Department. Vincent loved to dance and was more often than not the center of attention on the dance floor. He lived his life to the fullest and had more fun than anyone we have ever known. Those of us who are close to Vincent can never express how much we love him. He will be with us in spirit forever.

One of Vincent's favorite lines is, "Life is a banquet and most poor suckers are starving to death." We all know that Vincent was never the slightest bit hungry; he was the host of our banquet. A celebration of his life will be held at Most Holy Redeemer in SF on Saturday, February 12, at 1 p.m. In lieu of flowers, donations can be sent to The Names Project Foundation, SF.

James P. Casey ("Casey")

June 30, 1956 - July 1, 1993

Casey left this world after a long and courageous battle with AIDS on July 1, 1993, just a day after his 37th birthday. Casey was very determined to live and tried everything possible to survive, right up until the end. Casey, a resident of San Francisco since 1980, was a well-loved, vivacious and dramatic character. He was active in many local theatre groups and was especially known for his Wizard of Oz. His friends will remember his vocal renditions at the piano at the P.S. and JJ's.

Casey is survived by his father, James P. Casey; his brothers, Colin, Darren and Patrick; and his twin sister, Margie; all of New Jersey. Also his very special aunt, Joan Yockel, of Ohio. And, of course, his beloved dog, Bo.

Casey wished a special thanks to his doctors, Gifford Leoung, Gary Chan and John Mendelson, and their office staff, Laurie, Marisa and Carly, and his home care nurses, Laurie and Bobbie. Also, a special thanks to Gerry Patterson for his generosity.

Casey, your determination and courage was an inspiration for us and your friendship and love will be in our hearts forever. Rest in peace. Love, Jerry and Neil. ▼

11-28-91

Bill Cosby — one of America's richest and most powerful entertainers — chose Thanksgiving to dip into a little conspiracy thinking. On the CNN show "Showbiz Today," Cosby — in the midst of talking about Magic Johnson and AIDS — said that Johnson's contraction of the virus "will aid this world in finding a cure for something I think was started by human beings to get after certain people they didn't like."

In short, in a roundabout, thinking-out-loud sort of way, Cosby is helping fuel the AIDS conspiracy theory.

The theory isn't new: The Soviet KGB used to plant stories in the African press depicting AIDS as the invention of American military scientists (Gorbachev put a stop to the practice shortly after he came to power).

In the United States, the fantasy that AIDS (or, in another variation, crack) are part of a genocidal government campaign against blacks crops up from time to time among fringe activists. (Leonard Jeffries played with the notion on the "Geraldo" show several years ago.)

A Chicago agitator named Steve Cokely (a former city bureaucrat) blames the spread of the virus not on the U.S. government per se, but on "Jewish doctors" who, according to him, inject black babies with the disease. Conspiracy theories are ugly stuff. The people who disseminate them do not necessarily believe them to be true. But such theories are very useful to those who want to inflame group hatreds and incite violence. In various guises they have appeared and reappeared throughout the ages. (Hitler and his followers were past masters.) So it's a serious matter when the AIDS conspiracy is given a little boost by someone as prominent as Bill Cosby.

We don't know what version of this particular conspiracy theory Cosby embraces. He doesn't seem sure, either. Through his publicist, he allows: "I have no proof, period. I just have a feeling."

That kind of copout is fine for most people, who can say whatever they want and pay no heed to implications and consequences. Bill Cosby, however, is too big a star. He is a powerful role-model for young Americans — for young blacks especially, but not only for young blacks. And unlike a great many entertainers, what he says on social issues gets a respectful hearing.

So it's no small matter when Bill Cosby casually promotes explosive allegations of this sort, even if he then endeavors to disclaim responsibility for doing so.

Bryce Dean Carver

Dec. 14, 1950 - Sept. 3, 1993

Our dear friend Bryce passed away quietly on September 3, 1993, at Davies Hospital.

Bryce, owner of the Flower Peddler of San Anselmo for 15 years, left this life knowing he was loved by many. His great flower works and pleasant smile and keen wit will be a great loss to us all.

He touched many peoples lives in his short time on earth, whether it was by dancing at the Rawhide or Devil's Herd, or giving a helping hand to friends in need.

Bryce leaves behind his mother Joyce Shaw (who was by his side till the end), his loving grandmother Gwen Smith, his brother and sister-in-law Stanley & Sharon Carver, a nephew Kenny and niece Kristi. All of Bryce's family are from Onyx, California (a small town northeast of Bakersfield). Bryce was born in Bakersfield and was a fifth generation rancher to the Onyx Valley, his great-great grandmother being the first white lady to the valley. Bryce loved the fact he was a country boy and had such a long heritage to California ranching.

PHASE Philip R. Beloved twenty year companion of James Beecher; cherished twenty two year friend of Kathleen Sullivan; devoted son of Gale Chase and the late Alice Chase; happy co-father of the faithful Tippy. Died of complications from HIV infection on Friday, August 19, at the age of 43. A very long term survivor, he put up a courageous and intelligent fight against AIDS and the glaucoma that left him almost blind at the end of his life. His calm and strength of personality were a consolation to all who knew him. His sense of humor and clear ironic grasp of reality brought many people through difficult crises. A wonderful listener and advisor, Phil was a consistent source of wisdom and hope. His visual sensitivity, even as his sight dimmed, enriched his world and that of his friends. Philip grew up on a farm in Sun Prairie, Wisconsin, trained as a microbiologist at the University of Wisconsin in Madison, and left many friends there when he came to work in the labs of Standard Brands and moved to the East Village in NYC, where he has lived since 1976. He received an MBA in accounting from Baruch College and worked for more than ten years as a bank auditor for the state of New York, having become a supervisor before his disability forced him to retire three years ago. Phil and his companion, Jim, and their dog, Tippy, shared many happy hours of peace during the last seven years in their house in Potter's Hollow, in upstate New York, which Phil made a showcase of warm style and comfort amidst Jim's beautiful gardens. A champion of gay rights since his youth, he was devoted to gay culture and brought his own unique quiet dignity to the community. After his mother passed away two years ago, he was glad to be able to help the mothers of other HIV infected people through the PWA Hotline. He is also survived by his brother, Gary, his sister-in-law, Carol, and his two nieces, Pam and Jennifer, who were a source of strength to him. A private memorial service for his friends and family will be held at the home of Kathleen Sullivan on Monday at 7 PM.

Arch Connelly, 43, East Village Sculptor

Arch Connelly, a sculptor prominent in the East Village art scene of the early 1980's, died last Thursday at Beth Israel Hospital in Manhattan. He was 43 years old and lived in Manhattan.

He died of AIDS, said his brother, Michael, of Blacksburg, Va.

Mr. Connelly was born on May 12, 1950, in Chicago and received a bachelor's degree in 1973 from Southern Illinois University, where he majored in ceramics. He lived in San Francisco until 1980, when he moved to New York City. His first solo show was at Artists Space in TriBeCa in 1980. In 1981, he had the first of four solo shows at the Fun Gallery on East 10th Street, one of the best-known showplaces of the East Village art scene.

While many Fun Gallery artists specialized in graffiti painting, Mr. Connelly evolved his own brand of visual excess, covering found objects and pieces of furniture with pennies, pearls and bits of mirror. He often displayed these glittery encrusted forms, many of which could be used for everyday purposes, in eerie surrealistic environments.

Mr. Connelly had a two-gallery show at the Charles Cowles Gallery and the Holly Solomon Gallery in 1986. His most recent solo show was held last summer at the Galerie Oz in Paris.

In addition to his brother Michael, Mr. Connelly is survived by his parents, Arch and Roslyn, of Zion, Ill.; two sisters, Kimberly Gabbert of Crystal Lake, Ill., and Lisa Strong of Bloomington, Ill.; and five other brothers, Daniel, of Amboy, Ill.; Steve, of Katlin, Ill.; Kevin, of Indianapolis, and Philip and John, of Waukegan, Ill.

Roxanne Chartier, 30, AIDS Activist and Artist

Roxanne Chartier died at her home in Bristol, Connecticut on Thursday morning, October 28. She was 30 years-old. Her death has been ruled a suicide by police investigators. An AIDS activist and talented ceramic artist, Roxanne's death came as a shock to many of her friends and her family. Roxanne had cared for her older brother Michael for a number of years and eventually took over her brother's position as AIDS spokesperson for the Bristol Mayor's Task Force on HIV and AIDS after his death in March of this year. Michael died from complications of AIDS at the age of 39.

Roxanne had just been named the Salvation Army's first ever AIDS educator in late September and was employed as education coordinator for AIDS Project Bristol. Roxanne was also in-involved in the buddy/support program of AIDS Project Greater New Britain.

Roxanne's involvement in AIDS activism stemmed from her outrage and anger at the loss of friends and acquaintances to the epidemic in the mid-1980s.

"I think it came out of the panic of the epidemic in 1985, when I started losing friends and had to put my nervous energy into productive use and try to do something that would be beneficial to others," she said in an interview with the Bristol Press upon her appointment as AIDS educator.

As a student while attending Central Connecticut State University, Roxanne's artistic abilities and AIDS activism seemed to merge, as was evident in some of the ceramic pieces she created at that time. Roxanne went on to earn a bachelor of science degree in art education and was taking post-graduate classes at the time of her death.

She was an assistant to ceramic artist

Elizabeth MacDonald of Bridgewater and sculptor Philip Gausman of Washington, Conn. She was also assistant to the director of the Charter Oak Temple Gallery of Hartford and helped form and participated in the critically acclaimed Emerging Artists group gallery shows in 1988-1991.

Fellow Emerging Artist, former classmate and friend of Roxanne's, Jon Eastman told INewsweek, "You could call her up to do anything for you, and she'd do it in a split second...she was really, really compassionate...I hope she's reunited with her brother in the next realm."

Roxanne was pre-deceased by her brother Michael and is survived by her parents, Emile and Elizabeth, as well as her sister Celeste. Friends and family attended services held November 1. Donations can be made to Phillip Gausman in care of the Washington Art Association, Washington, Conn. 06794.

Cesar Chavez, advocate for farm workers, dies at 66

by Sheila Walsh

Cesar Chavez, 66, who dedicated his life to empowering the powerless, especially migrant farm workers, died in his sleep on April 23 in San Luis, Arizona.

At least 20,000 people attended his funeral on April 29 in Delano, Calif., according to the New York Times. The Times said the cause of death was identified as "natural causes." An autopsy is planned.

During his lifetime, Chavez also provided support to the Gay civil rights movement.

Because of his support for Gays, the Human Rights Campaign Fund named Chavez a member of its advisory committee in 1982.

"He was willing to lend his name in the early days when the Gay movement began to mobilize as a political force in national politics," said Gregory King, HRCF's communications director. "Cesar Chavez was there for us."

In 1958, Chavez founded the National Farm Workers Association. This union, the first successful farm workers' union in America, helped bring pay increases, medical insurance, and other benefits to many farm workers.

In 1965, Chavez helped to organize a strike against grape growers in Delano that lasted for five years. His 1968 grape boycott received national attention. After suffering major financial losses from the boycott, growers met union demands in 1970.

Largely because of Chavez's efforts, an act establishing collective bargaining for Californian farm workers was passed in 1974.

Chavez continued to fight for the rights of farm workers until his death. He also formed coalitions with other progressive causes, including the Gay civil rights movement.

Chavez brought a contingent of farm workers to the 1987 March on Washington for Gay civil rights. He also addressed the several hundred thousand marchers attending the rally.

"He was a pioneer at building coalitions and expanding his vision of inclusivity," said Mario Solis-Marich, co-chairperson of the Latino Lesbian and Gay Organization (LLEGO). "He knew that the vision included Gays, farm workers, and all people in general."

"As a Gay Latino, I draw from his example," said Solis-Marich. "People like Chavez don't just talk the talk, they walk the walk."

Obituary Cruising

by Michael C. Botkin

Back in the old days B.D. ("Before Diagnosis"), before the plague transformed my community and my life, I never read the obituaries. Nor, I might add, did the gay press even publish them, except in very rare and extraordinary circumstances. Nowadays the queer world is full of slightly obsessive "obituary cruisers."

I find that I read the obits in the mainstream press with a different eye than I use with the gay papers. Obituaries are a strange thing, further complicated by the arcane customs associated with them. The New York Times, for example, publishes them daily but always at the end of a section. They are just about equally likely to show up at the end of the important news section, or the more frivolous Arts & Sciences section that comes after, or the technically oriented Business section that comes last. But they are always there, and always last.

(And at least one open HIV death is listed virtually every day in the Times, by the way; sometimes a third or even half of all the obits concern PWAs. So much for the National Research Council's pious hopes and beliefs that AIDS will have little impact on American society.)

Most other U.S. mainstream dailies publish obits only every few days, and on a much more limited basis. They are likely to be tucked in at any odd spot that happens to present itself, usually in the third quarter of the paper, a kind of dead spot for most periodicals typically populated by minor local stories.

CAYENAUGH—Kenny, on Sept. 19. Adored colleague at Revlon, witty friend, beloved son of Joanna and brother of Debra and Michael, devoted companion of Kerry Moyer. Received Sunday, 2-5, Redden's Funeral Home, 325 W. 14th St. Contributions: God's Love or Body Positive. We laughed 'til we cried.

dictionary testimonials help their case? These bizarre depths of denial have made Obituary Cruising a more complicated process. It used to be that most obits fell easily into one of three categories: the obviously PWA, the obviously not PWA, and a narrow grey zone somewhere between the two. That grey zone has swelled up enormously. In response, most sophisticated Obituary Cruisers now use a ten-point scale to estimate likely probability of closeted AIDS.

Depths of denial

A good benchmark is the media's handling of Nureyev's recent death. Even before his actual demise, during his terminal illness, the press avoided the issue as much as possible but usually admitted that "many friends" of his considered him a PWA.

But they also made sure to mention that he himself denied this, or at least refused to comment on it (which is supposed to be sort of denial, though in fact it generally serves to confirm the rumor). Three years ago they wouldn't even have mentioned his friends' honest and accurate assessment until after his death. As to how the internationally famous ballet dancer acquired this disreputable virus, there is absolutely no hint of speculation, even from his friends, in the mainstream media.

"Ballet dancer" is one the queerest professions on the globe, ranking right up there with church organists and figure skaters, so you would think this possibility would at least be mentioned. But no; the more they acknowledge AIDS, the more they deny homosexuality.

Thus the recent sad spectacle of implausible yet hard-spun denials following the sudden AIDS deaths of two out of three of Canada's male Olympic medalist skaters. The cheesy, USA Today wing of American journalism trotted out the far-from-butch Brian Boitano to scoff at the notion of widespread queerness on the Olympic ice! This is like citing J. Edgar Hoover on the absence of homosexuals in the Secret Service. Do they really think such contraditional testimonials help their case?

For example, the information that "Lester Wilson, a choreographer, director and dancer, [who] died Sunday of a heart attack at 51" (SF Chronicle and NYT — the former often reprints from the latter) easily scores at least an "8" on the scale, suggesting an 80 percent probability that the "heart attack" was in fact HIV-related. Reading beyond the first line of the obit tends to push even that up.

But what are seasoned Obituary Cruisers to make of Barbara E. Brooks, 39, "Editor at three major women's magazines [who] died yesterday at her sister's house... of lymphoma, said the sister." Lymphoma — in someone under 50 years old — pretty much scores at least four points all by itself. Her heavy association with suspiciously queer types like decorators and gardeners — at Home Beautiful and Family Circle, as well as other magazines — scores another point. Most Cruisers won't allow a point for having "no survivors" on the principle that too many closeted HIVers DO have kids and surviving opposite-gender spouses. But many would find that NYT-ish waffle phrase "said the sister" suspicious enough to warrant an extra point.

Even so, we're only up to six on the ten point scale, which isn't really enough to boost it clearly up above that "grey" zone.

The perennial cry of the pessimist

This is rarely a problem in the gay papers, where an obit's mere presence carries an assumption of queerness and HIV is considered the obvious cause of death unless otherwise specified. I read the queer obits reluctantly, almost as a penance. About once a month, I can be sure, I'll discover a "zapper:" a listing for a friend, once close but long since lost track of in the course of several mutual moves and changes; now dead.

Most of the time such zappers are headed off by a call from an informal Early Warning Network. But some still slip through, a constant reminder of the increasing toll. Sometimes it seems impossible that anyone can be left after so many have died.

I sigh and wade through them; better depressed than ignorant, I tell myself, the perennial cry of the pessimist.

There are never any pleasant surprises in the queer obituaries, and rarely any in mainstream ones. Maybe once a year you run across an obit you feel really good about, like Roy Cohn's. At best they're strangers; at worst it's a valued friend, a respected if distant acquaintance, a major ex.

When variations do occur in the routine patterns, it's rarely any comfort. One week I couldn't help but notice that a large number of the reported deaths were attributed to queer-bashing rather than AIDS. This is hardly encouraging. Ditto for the increasingly common obituaries of lesbians who've died from breast cancer. This silent epidemic has certainly been going for decades, but it remained invisible until the queer press began routinely publishing obits.

In some ways the presence of obituaries in gay papers, although depressing, makes them more complete, a better mirror of the community. Back in the old disco days our papers were considered glorified (or not) bar rags, and as such weren't expected to focus on anything beyond partying and an occasional protest. Now they reflect the broader concerns of a community matured — and, alas, aged — by a decade of crisis, plague and persecution. ▼

JEANNE COTTER'S STORY

She's a gifted composer and performer who inspires her holiday audiences with music and more—the story of her family's faith and love in the face of AIDS.

BY JOHN BOOKSER FEISTER

of AIDS'

Jeanne Cotter's fingers fly across the grand piano keyboard. Every inch of her seems absorbed in the effort; she prays her notes become "little droplets of grace" to the 600 people listening in her audience. This could be any of the concerts in her current 25-city holiday concert tour, or the hundreds she has performed around the nation during the past few years. After a while, she stops her music and begins to tell a story, one about faith. Her husband, the renowned composer and performer David Haas, comes closer and places a comforting hand on her shoulder: Jeanne is going to tell how Richard Cotter, her brother, died of AIDS.

As 29-year-old Jeanne relates the story of AIDS coming to a Catholic family, in this case striking down the parish accompanist, some in the audience weep quietly. Now finished, she plays the keys more softly. She pours her heart and lilting voice into a song she wrote: "After the rain comes a cool breeze, blowing across the field. After the rain let that cool breeze blow softly over you." Now come thunderous applause and standing ovation from the crowd filling this Kentucky church, turned concert hall for the evening.

A few months after seeing her perform, I caught up with Jeanne Cotter for a St. Anthony Messenger interview in Anaheim, California. She was performing there for the annual Religious Education Congress sponsored by the Archdiocese of Los Angeles.

It would have been interesting to hear Cotter's opinions about music in liturgy. That would have been a story all in itself. She is part of the close-knit group of Twin Cities, Minnesota, musicians who are creating songs that prove Catholics can sing. "On Eagles' Wings," "Gather Us In" and "Blest Are They" are examples. Jeanne sings, performs and records with the composers of these songs.

Now, though, in a quiet room in Anaheim, it is the time to talk about life and death, the meaning of Christian faith, about how the Cotter family gathered at her brother's bedside one Easter and found reconciliation. "I think catastrophic things have the power to transform," Cotter says. "Our Church needs to wake up to this: We're being asked to change, to reach out to persons with AIDS and their families." She says, "There is something magic in retelling our stories." In the telling, the stories can open our hearts to one another.

Nurture and Nature

Jeanne Cotter's story starts in her childhood home in Austin, Minnesota, hometown of Hormel Meats and Spam, she brags with a laugh. Her family's was a "hobby farm." Milking the family cow, Bossy, gardening and tending a few pigs was the only farming the Cotters did. They rented out their fields.

There was a grand piano in her living room and an upright in the kitchen, she recalls. It was at the piano that she and her brother Richard forged a close relationship. Brother urging sister along, together they filled the house with music.

Jeanne grew up to become a composer of melodies and arrangements heard in Catholic churches and households throughout the United States and beyond. Richard Cotter, a year older than Jeanne, grew up to become a pastoral musician, too, working in parishes in the Twin Cities. He was the oldest of the Cotter children.

Jeanne describes Richard as the more talented of the pair, a child prodigy. "Richie kept me going on the piano," she explains. "He constantly made up music games and demanded I play them with him." She admits she hated piano lessons when she was a child.

Jeanne's father, Richard Cotter, Sr., is a lawyer; it was Beverly Cotter, an English and theater teacher, singer and pianist, who taught her children to play piano. All told, there were 10 Cotter children, five of them adopted from Native American, African-American and Indian families.

Young Jeanne was in a youth choral group at her parish. "That's where I first knew that I just had to sing!" she exclaims. The group sang the early songs of Catholic folk-music hero Joe Wise, who remains an inspiration to Jeanne to this day.

Jeanne spent much of her teen years as accompanist at Mass while her mother was cantor. Filling in with music depending on how fast the offertory procession went, how many people came up for Communion—or whatever—was how she learned piano improvisation so well, she explains. Then she moved to St. Paul to study music. Richard went off to Notre Dame to study French, history and music.

While in St. Paul, Jeanne fell in love with and eventually married the budding performer David Haas, in October 1988. Richard became a close part of Jeanne's new family when he moved to St. Paul from Notre Dame.

He became accompanist for several parishes and a computer programmer for a major financial company in Minneapolis.

Jeanne had been aware since the time Richard finished college that he was homosexual. "I could accept it without too much trouble for a lot of reasons," she explains. "For one, I'm part of this generation." (She was born in 1964.) Some of her friends in the performing arts are gay, so "it wasn't a shock to me." She loved her brother and wanted him to be happy, Jeanne says. "I feel people jump to conclusions quickly," she adds. "I did not want to pass judgment on him."

It was harder for her parents, says Jeanne. The Church teaches that homosexual orientation is no sin, but that homosexual behavior is. "Our lives really did revolve incredibly around the Church," explains Jeanne. "Having a gay son challenged my parents' understanding about sexual morality, to say nothing of their alienation from friends, neighbors and Church. I think the cultural alienation was much easier for them to accept than the alienation from the Church—one priest told my parents the 'demons of homosexuality' could be exorcised out of Richie."

Ultimately, though, Jeanne says her father would credit his namesake son as his "redemption."

AIDS Strikes

In 1989 Richard caught a cold that he couldn't get rid of. It got so bad he thought he had walking pneumonia. He went to a hospital, was admitted and found out he had AIDS. That was Thanksgiving week. During the next two years he and his family coped with his condition, "hoping against hope" that it would not be fatal.

"What was awkward was the inability to talk about it and wanting to respect Richie's need for privacy," Jeanne bemoans. The entire family feared the consequences that could come from a public disclosure of Richie's illness: He could have lost both of his jobs and become an outcast. "God knows he was suffering enough, but that he was afraid of consequences made it far more difficult," says Cotter.

"I remember standing in a field and just screaming at Rich, 'Say something! Tell me something! Don't shut me out!'" Although Jeanne says she will never know everything he went through, she suspects her brother was filled with shame. She remembers one painful night when she heard him crying alone in his room (he stayed with her sometimes when he was sick). "It tore me apart to hear him crying because I knew he was wrestling and not real vocal about it."

As time went on, though, the Cotter family decided to keep silent no longer. "We as a family slowly came to be able to talk about it, to be able to acknowledge and to express our frustrations."

Richard was especially afraid he would lose his job as accompanist. "There are so many horror stories. It was a big risk as to how the parish was going to respond if they found out....Such an important part of his life was his parish and his music ministry there. He was very afraid to put that in jeopardy."

Richard and his family kept his secret for as long as they could. During the summer of 1991 he began treatment for CMV, a virus that attacks the retina. His mother heard of an experimental treatment in Milan, Italy, and took her son there late in the year. The virus prevailed, though: When he returned home he was blind.

"The reality hit that he probably was not going to live to see a cure," tells Jeanne. Up to that time Richard had never seemed very ill and the family had kept up hope. He had hidden his pain from family and co-workers. Now he became frail, and without vision he could no longer keep up with his computer work. He quit his office job, and Jeanne began to play alongside him at Masses. "I ended up being his eyes for him," she there was more put things into a different perspective."

A Dream Realized

Now Richard was dying, continues Jeanne, and everyone knew it. When he became blind, people in his parish, St. John Neumann in Eagan, Minnesota, caught on. "Richie, thank God, had a parish that ended up standing behind him and supporting him 100 percent," recalls Jeanne. "It took a long time for him to be able to trust that...There is still such incredible hysteria that happens." She calls to mind a Twin Cities parish that was in an uproar because a former convent was converted to an AIDS hospice. "I was infuriated!" she says—embarrassed for her Church. "But I know I watched a community living the gospel at St. John Neumann."

Rather than shun Richard, their accompanist, the parish embraced him. Parishioners provided emotional and physical support for him so that he could keep working with dignity until he became too sick to work. It was the children, Richard's greatest fans, who urged their parents toward compassion. The parents allowed their children to remain close to Richard. When Jeanne was unavailable as accompanist, they hired an assistant to help him provide their music for three months after he became blind.

"The parish was very up-front about Richard's AIDS," remembers Jeanne. They began an adult education program around AIDS to foster understanding. Parishioners volunteered to drive Richard says, now on the edge of tears herself as she tells the story.

She would tell him what key to play in or would play the pieces that required sight reading. It was very important to Richard that he keep playing music, says Jeanne. One gets a sense of Jeanne's inner joy as she describes those days: "It was wonderful for me, because I felt needed for something that was so meaningful."

Brother and sister also spent many hours talking. Jeanne describes Richard as very faith-filled: "When we would talk or argue, Rich was able to let go of things where I would want to fight it out...One of his lines was, 'Bess [his nickname for her], it's going to be all right.'"

"Richie knew that there was something more than just this life as we know it, especially as death became more of a reality. He fought like a dog to stay alive. But his acceptance that where he needed to go, and invited him to their homes for dinner. "As lots of doors closed for Richard, it was his parish family who gave to Richard a sense of normalcy and of being loved," recalls Jeanne. Parishioners even carried a banner, "We Love You, Richard" in a 1992 AIDS walk in Minneapolis.

The clock was ticking for Jeanne and Richard. They had planned to record an album together one day; now the idea became urgent. "Two weeks after he went blind [January 1992] we went into the recording studio and recorded Coming Home," a collection of prayerful piano music published by G.I.A. on cassette and compact disc.

The album is a collection of traditional favorites and contemporaries, from "Pange Lingua Gloriosi," "Were You There?" and "Panis Angelicus" to David Haas's songs from the Gather hymnal and originals that Jeanne composed. Brother and sister take turns playing delicate piano arrangements on the album.

"Richie was running a fever and sick while we were recording; it became very important not to put it off," recalls Jeanne. Recording gave Jeanne and Richard a chance to share once again in the way they had while growing up together. "There's a lot of sadness and love packed into it," says Jeanne.

After such serious recording sessions, there was nothing to do but laugh, she recalls. "We got to sharing childhood stories and remembered how we used to fight over who had to milk the cow." Out of that "side-splitting laughter" came the album's dedication: "To the memory of Bossy, our wonder cow."

The Cotter family got together that Easter 1992, for the first time since Jeanne's wedding four years earlier. Jeanne's and Richard's album was recorded, and the two of them had even joined their sister Anne and David Haas to perform a Minneapolis concert. Now Richard was deathly ill.

Richard could no longer go to church, so the family decided to have a prayer service at home Easter afternoon. The experience gave Jeanne "a new understanding of Easter." The family gathered around Richard's bed. David led them in singing. No one knew what would happen next.

"My father had struggled so much with knowing how to love this son who broke all the rules of what a man was supposed to be," explains Jeanne. She describes her father as an "Irish Catholic" man who did not easily express emotion. But it was Richard, Sr., who opened the floodgates for the family to say their good-byes to his oldest son. "My dad started to cry. He went up to Richie, who wrapped his arms around my dad and let him cry. Dad asked Richie to forgive him. For all of us kids to watch that—that's what love and healing are all about."

The rest of the family then, in turn, talked with Richard, tells Cotter. "Each one of us had an issue to clear with Rich, something to talk about with him." Jeanne's was her anger and resentment at being left behind, now with the role of oldest child, she says. Her older brother put her at ease, promising he would live on in spirit as the oldest. "He wasn't sure what exactly it would be like, but he would still be with us—as the oldest!" Jeanne laughs.

A teenage brother who is part Ojibwa said a Native American blessing, praying Richard would be blessed on his journey, as he went ahead into the life beyond this world.

Toward the end of Richard's life, St. John Neumann Parish did what they could to help the entire Cotter family. "We had more food than we could handle for three months!" Jeanne gratefully remembers. There were volunteer housecleaners and prayer vigils. A parishioner who is a chiropractor gave Richard regular massage treatments to ease his pain.

Brother and sister listened to their album together when it came out in May 1992. One week later, May 20, Richard passed away.

Faith's Calling

After going through such a painful experience, Jeanne has new eyes: "I desperately needed my faith," she says. She desperately needed her Church, too, she adds, and it was there for her. The Church's many imperfections might continue to bother her but, "when something so personal and so important happens, everything else falls into a different perspective," she says. But she has a message for her fellow Catholics about AIDS. She uses her concerts as an opportunity to share her story.

As Christmas 1993 approaches, Jeanne is crisscrossing the country on a concert tour promoting her newest album of solo piano music, Many Snows. The album includes Christmas music and other traditional favorites.

"One thing I learned from Richard is that birth and death are wrapped together in one mystery," says Jeanne. "I'm hoping on this concert tour to help people celebrate the whole of Christmas." By bringing people together for music, by sharing her story, she hopes she can help people find the things they have in common with each other.

"There are so many people who are in so much pain," Jeanne laments. "There are people hungry to be given permission to cry, to hear, to have the hope that the pain will subside." At every weekend concert, people come up to her. "They know someone who is dying of AIDS and they don't know how to talk about it."

A typical example is a Detroit mother who told Jeanne about the pain of accepting a lesbian daughter. Jeanne says it was important for that mother to find someone within the Church, like Jeanne, who would accept her and talk about it. The music Jeanne creates sets the stage for that kind of interaction.

"I always wanted to be part of the medical profession," she reveals. She tries to draw people into their inner space, "where they can encounter God or their inner voice." People are starved for that, she says. "Music can open rusted doors. That's grace. I've seen it happen."

She is aware that some people in her audiences are not compassionate about homosexuality and AIDS. "If ever there was an example of the modern-day leper, like in the Gospels, it's a person with AIDS," counters Jeanne. "The Church has a lot to learn," she insists, pointing her index finger into the table for emphasis. "It's not much different than the individual struggle of the parent to accept the son," she says, referring to her father and brother. "We need to throw ourselves into the encounter."

Jeanne doesn't have a one-track mind, though. Watching her in concert one sees a woman thrilled with music, with love, with bringing cheer and happiness to her audience. "I just want to bring a little sweetness to peoples' lives," she humbly says. "You know? It's to partake in a little grace." ■

The Franciscan Life: A Passion for the Gospel

Franciscans strive to live Jesus' "Good News" in the simple, joyful and passionate spirit of St. Francis of Assisi.

Today the Franciscan Order focuses on three gospel values: first, an attention to the contemplative dimension of life—the inner life of the spirit; second, an option for the poor and for justice and peace; and third, formation in evangelization and mission.

and ambitions that they sometimes got in each other's way. Music was his first love, but it often got shoved aside to accommodate a ferocious activism that led to the founding of critically important organizations like New York's PWA Health Group, a pioneering AIDS buyers club, Community Research Initiative and the PWA Coalition. Somewhere along the way he found time to write "Surviving AIDS," still one of the best books ever written about the epidemic, and dozens of articles that crackle with intelligence and wit.

Legends aren't supposed to die. Michael Callen hated being a legend—partly, no doubt, because he knew his astonishing 12 years of survival with AIDS (not HIV infection, full blown AIDS) had to come to an end sometime, and when that time came he wanted to be able to leave in peace. Mike finally left us December 27.

I met him about two and a half years ago, at an L.A. club. I didn't recognize him at first, but he recognized me from the photo that accompanied a column I wrote at the time for a local gay rag. So we stood there for a good hour among the writhing bodies, discussing sex, politics, AIDS and heaven knows what else in a venue not generally known for intellectual discourse.

We must have seemed utterly out of place, but Mike never worried about being different from the pack—or even alienating it altogether. He helped invent and publicize the concept of safe sex back when the gay community desperately wanted not to believe this terrible plague was sexually transmitted, and made himself lots of enemies in the process. He made yet more enemies by arguing until the very end that HIV, commonly known as the "AIDS virus," isn't the actual cause of the disease.

The best conversations I ever had with Mike were arguments. Even when I was sure he was wrong, he could engage you with such spirit, such wisdom, such conviction and such humor that a verbal joust with him was nearly as good as sex (a thought he would no doubt find appalling, enthusiastically sex-positive person that he was).

He was a man of so many talents

And he could sing. God, could he sing, with a razor-sharp tenor that just naturally seemed to grab the emotional heart of any song, whether it was his deliriously campy version of "Where the Boys Are," his own exquisite "Love Doesn't Need a Reason," or "Living in Wartime," Mike's fierce anthem for the war against AIDS.

Relocating from New York to L.A. about three years ago, he put his music on the front burner again as a member of the Flirtations, an all-gay a cappella quintet that had to be heard to be believed. This past summer, his health already in desperate decline, he plunged himself into recording a final solo album that should be released this spring (assuming his heirs can scrape together the money needed to finish the project) under the title "Legacy." Last April in Washington during his final concerts with the Flirtations, Mike and Holly Near sang a song from the album called "They Are Falling All Around Me" and reduced this writer—and most of the audience—to a sobbing wreck.

He was a fabulous cook. Late one afternoon about a year ago he telephoned me: "I just put a turkey in the oven—wanna come over for dinner?" By then I'd learned that planning social activities with him was nearly impossible; you just had to wait for the impulse to strike. It was without question the best dinner I've ever had, and my only regret is that I never talked him into cooking for me again.

Goodbye, Mike, and thanks. It was fun, even though it was too fucking short. I know you don't believe in an afterlife, but if there is one, give 'em hell.

And save a drumstick for me. ☐

ASSOCIATED PRESS

STRATFORD-UPON-AVON, England - Former Olympic and world champion figure skater John Curry died yesterday from an AIDS-related illness, his agent said. He was 44.

Agent Jean Diamond said Mr. Curry suffered a heart attack yesterday morning at his home near Stratford-upon-Avon.

The English skater, who won the World Championships and the gold medal at the 1976 Olympics in Innsbruck, Austria, was diagnosed HIV-positive in 1987.

Mr. Curry returned home in July 1991 from New York after being told he had developed AIDS. He moved in with his widowed mother Rita and received regular treatment at St. Mary's Hospital in London.

"New York when you are ill is no place to be and I wanted to be here, around people who I knew and loved when things got really bad," he said.

In the last years of his life, he spoke openly about his disease and acknowledged that he was gay.

Mr. Curry was renowned for his artistry on ice, mixing classical ballet with acrobatics. His gold medal performance in 1976 revolutionized the sport and captivated fans around the world.

Born in Birmingham in 1949, Mr. Curry's first ambition was to become a ballet dancer - a wish that was rejected by his father.

Karen Peers Clifford

Was child care director; at 46

A memorial service will be held Saturday at noon in St. Peter's church in Gloucester for Karen A. Peers Clifford, 46, of Gloucester, who died June 30 from complications of AIDS. 94

Ms. Peers Clifford was a past director of Equal Employment Opportunity Commission Pre-school Child Care of Somerville and Cambridge.

Born in Medford, Ms. Peers Clifford was the daughter of Mrs. Robert Peers of Gloucester and William J. Shields of Arlington.

In addition to her parents and her stepfather, Robert Peers of Gloucester, she leaves two daughters, Danon Clifford of Weymouth and Kara DuBois of Somerville; and a brother, John L. Shields of Medford.

JOHN CURRY

He won the British junior championship in 1967 and his first British senior title in 1970.

It was in the United States where Mr. Curry's talent was groomed. He was sponsored by millionaire American banker Ed Moseler and coached in Colorado by Italian Carlo Fassi.

In 1975, Mr. Curry finished second in the European Championships and third in the Worlds. The next year, he swept the European, Olympic and World titles.

Afterwards, he turned professional and produced and starred in an ice show - the John Curry Theatre of Skating in London's West End.

Mr. Curry was awarded the Order of the British Empire in 1976.

Clemente M. Castro

(Love you to high, never come down)

June 17, 1994

Clemente, 34, passed away in the arms of his lover of 10-1/2 years on Friday, June 17. He was well-known in San Francisco in the Trocadero days.

He loved life and his children: Max, Roscoe and Marylyn. Services were held June 24. Clemente is buried in Gilroy, Calif., where he and his lover

CHILDS—Anthony Thomas, a Palm Beach resident passed from this earth Saturday, June 16th of his Georgetown home in Washington, D.C. Mr. Childs was a graduate of Boston University's School of Fine Arts and a member of the American Society of Interior Designers. From the beginning of his career, Mr. Childs pursued the arts seriously, earning his college tuition solely through exhibitions of his own paintings. Arriving in Washington D.C. in 1967, Mr. Childs began his career in the Home Design boutique of Lord and Taylor. Immediately, he began to establish a reputation as a man with a keen eye for excellence. By the 1970's, Mr. Childs had formed Anthony Childs and Associates Interior Design firm. Specializing in understated luxury, the firm quickly became sought out for its distinctive individuality. The Anthony Childs' look has now become synonymous with refined style, and the highest quality. Over the years, clients have included eminent families and dignitaries in this nation and abroad. However, always a man of discretion, Mr. Childs never divulged any of the celebrated and familiar names on his client list. Meeting Mr. Childs for the first time, people felt an immediate affinity with him. Everyone seems to have a favorite Anthony Childs story to tell. Tales of light hearted fun, naughty jokes, and an infectious ability for good times. Always Tony to his many friends and clients, he epitomized the lavish host with his dash and sparkle. Both his professional and private life were distinguished by his perfection of refinement. Simplicity and quality were the hallmarks of Mr. Childs' design philosophy, the ideals by which he lived. Anthony will be painfully missed in the lives he touched with his inimitable style, wit and abundant generosity of spirit. Anthony Childs is survived by his parents, brother, three sisters and his amative companion, David Brown Kaminsky. A Memorial service will be held Wednesday, June 22nd, 11:00 A.M., Christ Church, Georgetown, 3116 O Street N.W., Washington, D.C., 20007. In Mr. Childs' memory, any contributions to The Design Institute Foundation for AIDS or The Boys and Girls Clubs of Palm Beach County would be greatly appreciated. Duane "D.J." Curtis

Feb. 6, 1957 — June 3, 1993

West Hollywood resident Duane Curtis, known affectionately all his life to his family and friends as "D.J.," died June 3 at his mother's home in Loveland, Colo. He spent the final six-and-a-half months of his life there struggling with the complications of AIDS in the care of his family and neighbors. He was 36 at the time of his death.

Curtis is survived by his mother Patti and her husband Lee Steele; his father Duane Curtis and his wife Betty; two natural brothers; one natural sister; six stepbrothers and sisters; two nephews; and a large extended family of friends who will miss him deeply.

His remains were cremated and a ceremony for the family was held in the Seventh Day Adventist Church in Loveland. A memorial gathering is currently being planned by his many friends in the Los Angeles area for July 17. Additionally, volunteers are being sought to participate in the creation of a memorial quilt panel for addition to the national NAMES Project AIDS Memorial Quilt. This was one of his last wishes.

Born Feb. 6, 1957 in Memphis, Tenn., his family soon moved to Worland, Wyo. They relocated five years later to their current home town of Loveland.

Curtis moved to Palm Springs in the early 1980's and to Los Angeles in 1983, where he quickly became involved in the local music scene, joining the Hollywood Chorale that spring. He was featured there in many solo and small group numbers, both serious and comedic.

According to his friends, music was always his first love. In 1987, Curtis appeared with the Burbank Civic Light Orchestra in the musical revue Showbiz in a variety of roles, distinguishing himself with his deep bass-baritone solo rendition of "The Clown Who Cried." Curtis followed this by singing with the Van Bloem Singers at the Calabasas western park, then toured for several Christmases with the Dickens-style Merrie Olde Christmas Carolers.

He earned his accounting degree from the National Educational Institute and worked as an accountant in several Southland hotels.

Curtis loved his West Hollywood apartment and neighborhood, say friends, and was equally fond of his collection of carousel horse and hot air balloon artifacts.

Diagnosed with AIDS in April 1990, Curtis was intermittently hospitalized at Harbor UCLA Medical Center and later, Cedars-Sinai, where he formed many warm friendships. During his illness, he spoke on behalf of AIDS Project Los Angeles, benefited from the Buddy Program and never lost the love and support of his family who, on at least one occasion, flew en masse from various cross-country points to be at his bedside and rally him through one of the many crises he faced.

Near the end of his life Curtis reaffirmed his strong religious beliefs. Friends say he never lost his gentleness, generosity of spirit, warm Southwestern charm or antic sense of humor.

Gene Cresci

A friend of the community, Gene Cresci, born in San Francisco, passed away February 27 at Stanford Medical Center due to complications from an emergency operation on his aorta. He spent the last seven weeks in intensive care and making a spectacular recovery from a combination of complicated medical and surgical procedures. Then, an undetected infection penetrated his graft aorta, resulting in his death within minutes.

Gene was very gentle, but his emotions were easily aroused; he was both a sensitive poet and a hard-nosed professional journalist; he was interested in a multitude of things and ideas but became more and more centered on his own garden as he observed the way the rest of the world was going; he was opinionated but respectful of the opinions of others if they were humane and defensible. He loved to debate, and if out of facts, would depend upon his fancy — which was usually more persuasive than reality, and more fun. Gene was sweet and loving, if he felt safe in being so — and never a bore. What better combination of virtues! A fine chef and conversationalist, being invited to his table was always a delight. In short, Gene was complex and full of contradictions but the positives in his personality and character were compelling and unforgettable.

He is at rest now at St. Francis Solano cemetery in the town of Sonoma where he lived for the last 20 years. He volunteered with Face to Face for some while and remembrances in his name may be sent there. His dog, Garibaldi, now resides in SF with friends of Gene's who wish Gene resided here again, too. He left his entire estate to the SF Symphony Orchestra — so think of him when you hear the music of the spheres. ▼

CARLSON—Jack (John) Louis, (Age 41). Resident of Manhattan and Andes, NY, died November 16, 1995 in New York City of complications from AIDS. He was co-owner of C & S Confections (formerly known as Neuchatel Chocolates) for eight years. He was a backup singer touring with country legend Eddie Arnold and toured with The Wing Victory Singers. He performed in productions with The Light Opera of Manhattan and Theater Works USA, as well as many stock and dinner theaters. He was a print model with Funny Face, (NY) and McGraw Hill Publications. He was a volunteer for the deaf community working with Deaf Contact and New York Center for Law and the Deaf, receiving his training from New York Society for the Deaf. He was born in Palmer, MA and was a graduate of the American Musical and Dramatic Academy of New York City. He is survived by his life and business partner Robert Marlon Carlson (Palmer, MA), brother and sister-in-law Mike and Donna Carlson (Jacksonville, FL) and three nephews, Jeffrey and Benjamin (Westfield, MA), and Todd (Jacksonville, FL). A memorial service will be held in January, for information call 212-757-0042. He will be greatly missed by his family and friends.

Richard Cutting

5-18-94

Chances are, if you spent any time at all in the area around the Saint Cloud between 1974 and 1994, you crossed paths with Richard Cutting. You'd see him helping a homeless woman at 9 a.m., he'd rent an apartment at 2 p.m., serve you dinner at 9 p.m. and maybe see you out for a smart cocktail at 11. The South End was his home in every sense, it nurtured him and gave him a sense of place. He knew everyone and everyone knew him. Full of piss and vinegar, the bane of honking cabbies, he had a heart as big as the Cyclorama. He made the South End fun.

Richard was born in 1951 and graduated from Somerville High School. He worked as an EMT at Cape Cod Hospital, then at Betty Gibson's Real Estate Office. He was everyone's favorite waiter at Cafe Calypso and Hammersly's Bistro. He leaves his father, Richard Sr., eight wonderful caring sisters, his best buddy of 20 years, John Crosby of Marblehead, and friends too numerous to count.

A memorial service will be held at the Jesuit Center, 775 Harrison Ave., Boston on Sunday, May 29 at 3 p.m. Donations in Richard's memory can be sent to the AIDS Clinic at Boston City Hospital.

A memorial service for Bob Crowder has been rescheduled for Friday, Sept. 23, at 5 p.m., at the Friends Meeting House, 2111 Florida Ave., NW. A reception will follow at 1838 Belmont Rd., NW.

Crowder, 45, of Washington, D.C. died Aug. 26 of AIDS related complications. His obituary appeared in the Sept. 9 Blade.

DIED: Daniel Calder, university administrator, 55, of complications from AIDS Aug. 2 in Los Angeles. As head of the English department at the University of California, Los Angeles, in the '80s, Calder added gay studies courses to the department's curriculum. 94

CHAIKEN—Stephen J., 47, On January 2 after a long illness. Remembered as loving father of Jessica of Washington, DC, Jennifer of Lemoyne, PA, and of Joel residing with Birgitta Chaiken in NYC. Surviving is his sister Edith Chaiken Welty of Thurmont, MD. Brother Paul of Bangor, ME and his parents Marvin and Frances Chaiken of Cape Elizabeth, ME. Commemorative acknowledgments on behalf of Steve should be directed to Broadway Cares/Equity Fights AIDS, 165 West 46th Street, New York, N.Y. 10036. P-5

Rev. William Cummings, 52; pastor who founded the 'Singing Priests'

By Tom Long
GLOBE STAFF

Rev. William John Cummings, pastor of St. John the Evangelist Church in Cambridge and the founder of a pop vocal group called the Singing Priests, died Saturday in St. John of God Hospital in Boston. He was 52.

Father Cummings, an exuberant performer with a quick wit and a brilliant voice who was known to many as "Broadway Bill," in April 1993 informed his congregation that he was infected with the AIDS virus.

Born in Boston, he graduated from Christopher Columbus High School, and attended St. Anselm College before entering Cardinal O'Connell Seminary in Jamaica Plain.

After graduating from St. John's Seminary, he was ordained in 1968.

Father Cummings served at Immaculate Conception Church in Revere, where he was athletic director of the high school. He was later assigned to Immaculate Conception Church in Winchester where he revived the Queensmen Drum and Bugle Corps and could often be seen striding along with the corps when it marched in parades.

In order to raise money for the band, Father Cummings founded the Singing Priests in 1973. The eight-man singing group has since performed before thousands in the Greater Boston area and has raised more than $200,000 for charitable causes.

Father Cummings was also the chaplain of Marian High School in Framingham for ten years and served at St. Catherine's Church in Somerville and Our Lady Help of Christians Church in Newton, before becoming the pastor of St. John the Evangelist Church in 1990.

In April of 1993, through a letter

A memorial service for John Anthony Carter will be held from noon to 1 p.m. on Saturday, October 8 at the Friends Meeting House, located at 2111 Florida Ave., NW. A reception will follow the service.

Carter, 36, died Tuesday, September 13, 1994 of lung cancer at his D.C. home, according to his friend Theodore Kirkland of D.C. A full obituary will appear in a future issue.

REV. WILLIAM JOHN CUMMINGS

read at the altar by Bishop John Boles, Father Cummings informed his flock that he had AIDS. After the announcement, parishioners showered him with more than 1,000 cards and letters of support.

Father Cummings was unable to attend the church's centennial Mass on May 8 of that year. According to the Pilot, the archdiocesan newspaper, during the ceremony Cardinal Bernard Law paid tribute to the ailing priest and his parishioners by saying "I have to say how profoundly happy I am of the statement that he made to you and to the church... the statement of a man of faith, of a man willing to rely, as all of us must, on the mercy and love of a God who had revealed Himself as love."

He leaves his mother, Agnes A. (Davis) of Reading; a sister, Maureen Trodden of Belmont; and a brother, Timothy of Stoneham.

A funeral Mass will be said at 11 a.m. tomorrow in St. John the Evangelist Church in Cambridge. Burial will be in Oak Grove Cemetery in Medford.

COSTLEY—James H., on October 28, 1994. Loving companion of Jacob Culbert. Beloved brother of Mary Mover of California, Katherine Griggs and John Costley, both of Utah. Loving uncle of many nieces and nephews. James was active in the retired community of Brooklyn. He taught art to the senior citizens at Brooklyn College and was associated with the New York Historical Society. He was dossier of the Brooklyn Museum. He was also a special feature writer for the Hudson Register Star in Columbia County. Mr. Costley surrounded himself with his art, his garden and his music. He had an enthusiasm for life that never wavered. James was an inspiration to his community and will be sorely missed by all. Friends may visit at M.J. Smith Sons Inc, 248 Prospect Park W. at Prospect Ave, Brooklyn, on Sunday 10AM-1PM. Interment will be Friday in Idaho.

Donald Crimmings

December 1, 1954 -
April 15, 1994

On April 15, Donald Crimmings had a massive heart attack while behind the wheel of his Ford Probe. The result of this was a car crash that took his life.

Donald was born in Reading, Mass. He moved to Boston in 1975 and lived there until he moved to Dana Point, CA in 1987. He was part owner of Just Graphics in Corona Del Mar and one of the co-founders of the Gay & Lesbian Nation newspaper.

He is survived by his sister in Indiana and his mother in Dana Point. Donations can be made in his name to Auntie Helen's Fluff and Fold.

David Alan Castagna

Jan. 9, 1944 - May 8, 1994

A native of Spokane, Washington, and a longtime resident of San Francisco, David passed quietly in his sleep after a vigorous and lengthy fight with AIDS.

He is survived by a daughter, Dawn Marie, and sister, Margaret E. (Sargie). He was greatly loved by his adoring companion, Richard McMullen; and their baby, Smokie the cat.

A longtime, faithful member of Metropolitan Community Church of San Francisco, he was a regular participant in weekly deliveries of hot meals from Project Open Hand to people with AIDS. His AIDS Food Bank card, which today number in the thousands, bore number 29.

Memorial services will be held at MCC/SF, 150 Eureka Street, San Francisco, on Saturday, May 28, at 1 p.m. Donations may be made to MCC/SF in David's name.

I love and miss you very much, David. Daily hugs and kisses — Richard. ▼

DIED: Bill Costa, 51, photographer, of a heart attack in Oxford, N.Y. Costa was known for his classical male nude imagery. 95

Sarah Craig, 39, a longtime Chicago writer and activist, died of a brain aneurysm May 25. Craig graduated from Steinmetz High School and attended both Vassar College and the University of Illinois. She won awards for her writing, and was former co-owner of Tangible Type, with fellow gay activist Chris Cothran, in the mid-1980s. Craig was also active in the now-defunct Metropolitan Business Association, and former president of the National Association of Business Councils (a gay/lesbian group). Craig was also the spark behind the founding of ACTION (A Committee to Impel the Ordinance Now), a key group in mid-1980s pressure for passage of a gay-rights ordinance in Chicago. Craig was not someone who sought out the limelight—mostly preferring to stay behind the headlines. She wrote for GAYLIFE in the late 1970s and early 1980s. She, along with Cothran and Steve Jones, founded the Independent Voters of Illinois-Independent Precinct Organization Gay and Lesbian Caucus, and she helped found that group's annual Glynn Sudberry Awards for gay/lesbian activism. She was also the token lesbian representative on former Mayor Harold Washington's Women's Commission. She did a lot of work with Chicago Filmmakers (producers of the annual gay/lesbian film festival) and Filmmakers is accepting donations in Craig's name. Candlelight Memorial Sunday night ⁹⁴

by BEN CARLSON

Lost lives will be remembered, heroes and heroines will be honored, May 22 at the 11th annual International Candlelight Memorial here.

San Francisco is one of 243 participating cities worldwide.

Caring people in major cities in 45 nations will remember those who have died of AIDS and demonstrate support for those living with HIV and AIDS. For the first time, the event will be observed in all 50 states in the U. S.

The event began in San Francisco in 1983, and the San Francisco observance is traditionally the largest in the U. S. An expected 10,000 people will gather at 8 p.m. at the corner of Castro and Market streets, then will walk in a candlelight procession to City Hall. There, a ceremony will be held from about 9 p.m. to about 9:45 p.m.

Openly gay former San Mateo County Supervisor Tom Nolan will emcee the ceremony. Nolan is a member of the board of directors of Mobilization Against AIDS (MAA), the San Francisco-based non-profit AIDS advocacy organization that coordinates the AIDS Candlelight Memorials worldwide.

The keynote speakers will be Rev. Cecil Williams of Glide Memorial Church and his wife, Japanese-American poet, choreographer, teacher and community organizer Janice Mirikitani. Cabaret diva Connie Champagne will sing a gospel song called "Is There Any Way." The Wise Fool Puppet Intervention, a non-profit theater arts project, will use its giant puppets and stilt characters to perform part of its outdoor theater piece "Touch/Prayer." The Rev. Jim Mitulski will lead the assembly in speaking aloud the names and memories of those who have died of AIDS. And MAA Board President Ted Fang will present "AIDS Hero and Heroine" awards to several of the many San Franciscans who have made invaluable contributions to the fight against HIV and AIDS.

Candlelight observances outside of San Francisco are coordinated by local groups, such as AIDS service organizations and churches, which are supplied by MAA with coordination kits. Observances range in character from small gatherings in houses of worship to huge marches through city centers.

In some cases, participation in the International leaders an opportunity to demonstrate their support for the cause. For the tenth anniversary of the event in 1993, President and Mrs. Clinton participated by lighting candles in the windows of the White House; South African President Nelson

Remembering those who are gone and offering hope to those who remain

AIDS Candlelight Memorial and Mobilization marks a community's first acknowledgement that AIDS is a local issue, as well as a national and global issue. In addition to raising awareness, the event offers a public demonstration of compassion and solidarity to people whose illness often makes them the target of fear, hatred and discrimination.

The event also offers

Mandela and Diana, Princess of Wales each issued statements of support; President Mary Robinson of Ireland spoke at the Dublin observance; and Bishop Desmond Tutu addressed event participants in Cape Town, South Africa.

Angela Alioto, president of the San Francisco Board of Supervisors, sponsored a resolution "supporting the 11th International AIDS Candlelight Memorial and Mobilization, and commending Mobilization Against AIDS for its outstanding work in coordinating the International AIDS Candlelight Memorial and Mobilization." The resolution was passed Monday, May 16 and co-signed by all supervisors.

The principal sponsor of the San Francisco observance is the City and County of San Francisco, and its major sponsor is Chevron. Significant sponsorship was also provided by Gene Boomer/Mason McDuffie, Assembly Speaker Willie L. Brown, Jr., Ted Fang, Gay Asian Pacific Alliance (GAPA) Community HIV/AIDS Project, Grant Printing, James C. Hormel, Hospice by the Bay, Lamda Legal Defense and Education Fund, George Millirons, Project Inform, Project Open Hand, San Francisco AIDS Foundation, Samuel L. Storer, and The Cafe. Mobilization Against AIDS is deeply grateful to these and other sponsors and volunteers, without whom the event would be impossible.

Event participants are urged to bring their own candles and protective cups, although some will be available at the beginning of the event.

The Global AIDS Action Network, a new global AIDS advocacy organization, coordinates the non-U. S. observances of the event under contract to MAA. ■

Porter H. Cutler

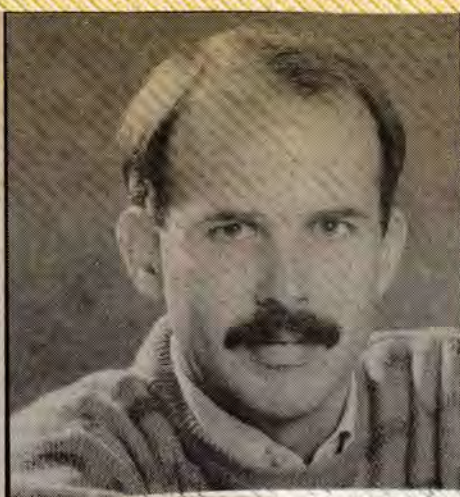

Porter H. Cutler, 41, longtime Atlanta resident and realtor, departed peacefully on May 2, 1994, due to complications from AIDS.

He leaves behind him a caring and supportive family, plus a multitude of loving friends. We will all miss him dearly.

He was buried in Matthews, Virginia, on May 4 and his memorial service in Atlanta was held on Sunday, May 15 at his home in Midtown.

Porter requested that any donations in his honor be made to Project Open Hand or a favorite cause.

Good-bye dear friend, you will always be with us.

Artifacts of Mass Culture

Mr. Cohen and the other museum founders, Ms. Weis and Jeff Errick, said they thought that the ever-present emblems of marketing and advertising were modern myths that reflected both a product's designer and its user. Their aim was to document and preserve the artifacts of mass culture, especially the pantheon of characters that have sprung from American advertising.

As one of the museum's directors, Mr. Cohen gave conceptual direction, collected pieces and designed exhibitions, imbuing the museum with many of his ideas about the study of signs and symbols, semiotics. Joseph Campbell, the scholar of classic myths and folklore, was on the museum's advisory board until his death in 1987.

A native of Manhattan, Mr. Cohen grew up in suburban Philadelphia and trained at the Tyler School of Art at Temple University. He worked in Philadelphia designing covers for jazz albums, industrial graphics and commercial displays until he moved to San Francisco in 1982.

Matthew S. Cohen

Matthew Cohen, 41; Founded a Museum Of U.S. Culture Icons

By WOLFGANG SAXON

Matthew S. Cohen, an artist, graphic designer and a founder of the Museum of Modern Mythology in San Francisco, died on June 2 at his home in Berkeley, Calif. He was 41. 1994

The cause was non-Hodgkin's lymphoma, said Ellen Havre Weis, the museum's executive director.

The Museum of Modern Mythology was founded in 1982 to display the trademarks and other images of commerce that have become icons of American culture through advertising on television and in print. Its permanent collection of more than 3,000 items includes models of Bibendum, the Michelin Tire Man; Poppin' Fresh, the Pillsbury Doughboy; the Jolly Green Giant; Mister Clean; Mister Peanut; Charlie the Tuna, and Ronald McDonald.

The nonprofit museum was damaged by the 1989 Loma Prieta earthquake, which rendered its gallery unsafe. Ms. Weis said that only a few pieces had been lost. The rest are in storage while the museum searches for a new home. Among the requirements is a space large enough to display its 22-foot-high Chicken Boy. Several cities have expressed interest, she said.

OSSIE CLARK, 54, a fashion designer whose work and life epitomized the "Swinging London" of the 1960s, was stabbed to death Aug. 6 in his London apartment. His former companion, Diego Cogolato, 28, was charged with the murder.

Lawrence J. Chiano

Lawrence J. Chiano of Arlington died on June 23 at Symmes Hospital following a lengthy illness. He was 41.

Born in Quincy, he lived in Arlington since 1989. He attended Quincy schools and attended Mellon University in Pennsylvania. He had been employed for 15 years as a systems analyst for LeMessurier Consultants in Cambridge.

He was the son of the late Joseph L. and Grace M. (DiFilippo) Chiano and is survived by his longtime companion, Thomas Dudley of Arlington.

A funeral service was held on June 25 at the Berglund, Williams, Wilson and Fudge Funeral Home. Interment was at Milton Cemetery in Milton.

Memorial donations may be made to the charity of your choice.

Marck R. Chedister

Dec. 18, 1953-July 4, 1994

Marck gently and peacefully moved on at dawn on the Fourth of July, cradled by the love of his soulmate of 17 years, Dr. Tom Volenik. Marck moved to San Francisco in 1974 to attend the Art Institute, working briefly for the Mitchell Brothers, where he met Tom. A writer above all else, he also worked as a supervisor for the National Research Group in Los Angeles, as well as a manager for the Hollywood Museum, the Cinerama Dome Theatre and the Guinness Museum in Los Angeles.

Acutely sensitive to the psyches and needs of his friends, Marck lived for "the moments," bringing his unique spark into their lives and transforming them. He also leaves behind his greatly loved friends, Michael Flodin, Matt Shearer, and Candy Burbridge, as well as his mother, Eileen; his sisters, Sara and Lisa; and his brothers, Jeffrey and Adam.

Stephen John Clute

Oct. 14, 1961 - Jan. 29, 1995

Stephen died Sunday after a long battle with AIDS. A native of Vallejo, Stephen graduated from Hogan High School in 1978. He moved to San Francisco and worked at UCSF in the Radiology Department for several years. He is survived by his family in Vallejo.

Stephen will be missed by his friends for his sardonic humor and love of partying.

In lieu of flowers donations may be made to Project Open Hand. Memorial services will be held at St. Mary's Hospital Chapel (Hayes and Stanyan), 6th floor, south wing, on Sunday, Feb. 5, at 1 p.m. ▼

Tom Clark

Nov. 10, 1947 - June 4, 1994

Tom has departed a little ahead of us. As a gifted and handsome young man, he emerged from his rural Midwestern home town for a "Grand Tour" of life, which unfolded throughout the world and ended in Los Angeles with his sister Jane, his family and his friends.

Mike S., Brian, Eugene, Dennis, Marcella, Alan, Linda, Marcie, Michael W., Bob, myself, and countless others are left not quite intact after our loss. We will miss his friendship, intelligence, irreverence and noble perversity, which imbued his life and recent passage with such style and humor. ▼

Ron Candelaria

Dec. 15, 1946 - Aug. 4, 1994

With his loving and devoted sister Patricia at his side, Ron departed this life after a short struggle with AIDS. For many years a resident of San Francisco, he sang with the choir of Most Holy Redeemer Parish before moving to Newport Beach in 1990, where he was a benefits administrator.

Ron will be sadly missed by many friends in Northern and Southern California, and by his childhood friend, Morgan, in Denver. Ron is survived by his sister in Huntington Beach; father, Emilio; brother, Edward; aunt, Natalie; and many caring family members in Albuquerque, N.M., where a funeral mass was celebrated August 8. A memorial service in San Francisco will be held at a later date. His goodness and kindness shall follow us all the days of our lives. ▼

Curt T. Charles Sr.

March 31, 1952 - Aug. 13, 1994

Curt peacefully passed away on August 13 following a long, valiantly fought battle against AIDS. Curt, 42, was born in Troy, New York, and moved to San Francisco in 1985 with his lover and friend, Michael Smith.

His first job in San Francisco was with the SPCA, where he enjoyed his position as a customer service rep. Curt was hired by the City and County of San Francisco, and assisted in building the Department of Animal Care and Control, where he was employed as an animal control officer at the time of his death.

Curt is survived by Michael Smith, his lover of many years; his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Charles; son, Curt Jr.; daughter, Leslie, all of Troy; and a great many loving friends and extended family members.

A life celebration is scheduled for a future date. ▼

Richard Cianci, 48

Teacher, actor and director

Richard Toma-Cianci of Boston, a teacher, director and actor, died of complications from AIDS July 28 at the Hospice at Mission Hill. He was 48.

Mr. Cianci, who performed under the name Richard Toma, was born in New York. He attended Bard College and studied at the Living Theatre in New York. He also studied dance with Merce Cunningham and acted with Stella Adler.

After a seven-year stay in France where he was artistic director of his own theater company, he moved to Boston and was employed by Emerson College in Boston and the Trinity Repertory Company in Providence. He also taught at Walnut Hill School for Performing Arts in Natick, the New England Theater Company and the Boston Center for the Arts.

Alex Captanian

June 29, 1994

Alex passed on at his home on June 29 surrounded by his family and friends.

Alex was never at a loss for the perfect humorous comment or advice. After a career teaching piano, he went into real estate. He worked for Great City Realtors for several years before starting his own successful company, DMB Properties. He was preceded in death by his companion of 15 years, Robert Baird. Alex and Rob shared an appreciation of the arts, traveling to a tropical paradise, good food, dancing and great humor.

Alex is survived by his 104-year-old grandfather, Hugh; his father, Gilbert; his twin brother, Ted; Ted's wife, Connie; their children, Alexis and Nicole; brother, Barry; Barry's wife, Jacqueline; their daughter, Leah; and many aunts, uncles and cousins. His countless friends and family will forever remember his wit, wisdom and boundless energy.

David Cole Is Dead; Record Producer, 32

By The Associated Press

David Cole, a Grammy-winning record producer who was half the creative team behind C&C Music Factory and an acclaimed remixer for Natalie Cole and others, died on Tuesday at Lenox Hill Hospital in Manhattan. He was 32 and lived in Manhattan.

The cause was complications from spinal meningitis, said his partner, Robert Clivilles.

Mr. Cole won a Grammy for the soundtrack for the film "The Bodyguard," which starred Kevin Costner and Whitney Houston, but he made his name while helping pump up the dance music resurgence of the late 1980's. C&C Music Factory's "Gonna Make You Sweat" became a dance anthem, eventually crossing over to become a radio and MTV staple.

The work of Mr. Cole and Mr. Clivilles — they were the C and C of the Music Factory — helped to turn producers into stars. The team brought in musicians like Freedom Williams, a rapper, and such singers as Zelma Davis and Martha Wash.

Mr. Cole worked as a session musician for Fleetwood Mac and Janet Jackson. As a producer, he and Mr. Clivilles handled dance remixes of tracks by Ms. Cole, Luther Vandross, Grace Jones and Seduction.

He was a well-known disk jockey in New York City clubs before he and Mr. Clivilles formed C&C.

He is survived by his mother, Sandra Turner; his grandmother, Louise Odell, and three sisters, Etta Cole, Angie Turner and Michelle Turner, all of Passaic, N.J.

May 2, 1953 —
July 25, 1994

Roger Costello, 41, formerly of San Diego, succumbed to complication of AIDS on Monday, July 25, 1994 in Oakland, New Jersey, ending a twelve-year struggle with the virus. He died in the arms of his daughter Suzanne and his long-time friend John Connolly. He was preceded in death by his companion of eleven years, Walter Abel, also a former San Diego resident.

Roger originally came to San Diego in 1975 as a member of the U.S. Navy. He later served as a legal secretary to Attorney Robert Lynn, worked as Assistant Manager of the Nautilus Restaurant, and then returned to school, earning a bachelor degree in Theatre from UCSD. In addition to his work at UCSD, he designed productions for several community theaters in San Diego and worked both with the Old Globe and San Diego Repertory theaters. In 1983 he returned to the east coast as a graduate student in the master's degree theater design program at NYU.

An activist, Roger was involved in the creation of San Diego's Stepping Stone recovery house and was an active member of the San Diego Democratic Club. In northern New Jersey he worked with the New Jersey Quilt Project, New Jersey Buddies, and the HIV/AIDS program at St. Raphael's Catholic church.

Linwood Ellis Cutler

January 29, 1946 -
December 13, 1994

Woody Cutler died suddenly on December 13 of the complications of AIDS, a disease he had fought courageously with the formidable resources of mind and the strengths of body he brought to bear on everything he did. Born in Los Angeles in 1946, he graduated from California State University in Los Angeles, where he majored in fine arts and took a minor in microbiology. After relinquishing an early career in advertising, he became a pre-eminent painter of faux finishes, trompe l'oeil, stencil designs and murals. Among his public commissions were exterior and interior finishes for the restaurant Le Dome in Los Angeles, and St. Victor's Church in Hollywood. His many private commissions included work for Mr. and Mrs. Michael Huffington, Dr. Michael Scolaro, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Bloomingdale, His Majesty the King of Malaysia, Ms. Carrie Fisher, Mr. Martin Scorsese, Mr. and Mrs. Harrison Ford, Ms. Rosalind Milestone, and Ms. Cher for her publication Sanctuary. Mr. Cutler was a man of indomitable energy, thoroughgoing style, fierce loyalties, unmitigating generosity, and flashing intelligence and wit. His was a life lived passionately, an unusual combination of hard work and natural charm. He is survived by his mother, brother, and companion Dale Jackson.

CORDEN—Charles Thomas Jr., Beloved son of the late Charles Thomas Sr. and Evelyn (nee Eichlenlaub). Loving brother of Nancy Corden, Janice Reeves, Raymond, Robert, Gregory and Evelyn Saccomanno. Devoted companion of Jack Hoffer. Reposing at Nucciarone Funeral Home, 199 Bleecker St., NYC, Tuesday. Chapel service 8PM Tuesday. In lieu of flowers donations may be sent to Sloan Kettering Cancer Center, 1275 York Avenue, N.Y., NY 10021. 12-7-94

COHEN—Martin A. Age 41, on December 7, 1995. Beloved son of Herbert L. Cohen & the late Terry Cohen. Dear brother of Rochelle Hirsch and Arlene Shamir. Loving brother-in-law of David A. Hirsch and Mordechai Shamir. Dear uncle of Jason, Jeffrey & Stefanie Hirsch and Karen Shamir. At the peak of his life, after a brave and courageous struggle with cancer. He battled his illness with his strength and determination that was an inspiration to all.

CURRIE—Thomas, age 41, a 19 year resident of Manhattan's Upper West Side, died early on Saturday, September 14th at the home of his sister, Joan P. Simon in Virginia Beach, VA, after a courageous ten year struggle with AIDS. An overwhelming loss is felt by his lover, Douglas Tracey, who resided with him and by his close friend of 20 years, Robert Sandia. Tom will be greatly missed by his loving family and by friends all over the world. Tom earned a B.A. in Asian Studies at Columbia, and worked in the food industry, but found his calling as a computer analyst. Tom's great passion was for gourmet cooking, which he did both professionally and for friends and family. That passion was a hallmark of his gregarious and generous personality. A memorial gathering will be announced shortly. 96

CANE—Garrett, Age 46, who designed and decorated some of New York's finest interiors and was one of the city's most original colorists, died Thursday, after many years of battling lymphoma. Survivors include his parents Rose and Victor Magliacane, and two siblings Lisa and David, and his sister-in-law Eileen. He shared his life over the past eight years with David Patrick Stearns. Service at 7 PM, Thursday, at Riverside Chapel, 180 W. 76th St. 10/14/96

CARLOUGH—Thomas G. Of Naples, FL, formerly of NYC, died Saturday, November 2, 1996. Mr. Carrough is survived by his mother, Grace; his brother, Stephen Carrough; his sisters, Joan Matthews and Barbara Lindquist, and many nieces and nephews. A memorial Mass was held on Monday, November 4, 1996, at 10 AM, at St. Ann Catholic Church, Naples, with the Rev. Louis Massanet officiating. In lieu of flowers, the family suggests memorial donations to AmFAR, 733 3rd Ave, NY, NY 10017. For information call Johnson-Pittman Funeral Homes, Naples, FL. 11-4-96

CASAKOS—Dean S., son of Stephen and Mary Casakos, died on Tuesday in Durham, NC. Dean was a resident of New York City for eighteen years. He graduated from high school in New Hartford, NY and the Univ. of Buffalo, NY and the Univ. of Journalism at Syracuse Univ. While working in New York he pursued his true love, the theatre. His writing talents produced a musical, "Talk Show" and a screenplay, "Minor Keys." Dean also wrote and directed his own one-man show, "in Time." Contributions to Triangle Hospice at the Meadowlands, Hillsborough, NC 27278. 10-8-96

Siong Huat Chua

Siong Huat Chua, gay activist, writer and computer analyst, died on Aug. 15 at age 39 after a courageous five-year struggle with AIDS. 94

Siong Huat Chua was born and raised in Malacca, Malaysia. He came to the United States in 1974 to study at MIT. He graduated from MIT in 1980 with a Master's in civil engineering. He worked for many years at the Dana Farber Cancer Institute doing programming and computer analysis.

Siong Huat was a pivotal activist in the gay and lesbian and Asian Communities. He gave generously of his time and expertise to many organizations. He was a founding member of the Boston Asian Gay Men and Lesbians (BAGMAL), which later became the Alliance of Massachusetts Asian Lesbians and Gay Men (AMALGM)—the first gay Asian organization. The organization addressed the double stigmas of racism and homophobia experienced by Asians in North America.

His history of activism in the gay community dates back to the late 1970's. He was a member of the editorial collective of Fag Rag, a radical gay men's literary publication. He was a long-time contributor to Gay Community News, writing articles on arts, culture and politics. He played a key role for many years on the board of directors of Gay and Lesbian Advocates and Defenders (GLAD). He was instrumental in organizing the GLAD forums on immigration and law. He also donated time and computer expertise at Glad Day book store for many years.

Siong Huat edited the AMALGM newsletter and conducted a series of interviews exploring different aspects of Asian gay experience in the United States. At the time of his death he was working on a series of autobiographical short stories. He was an organizer of the 1992 OutWrite conference — a gay and lesbian literary conference.

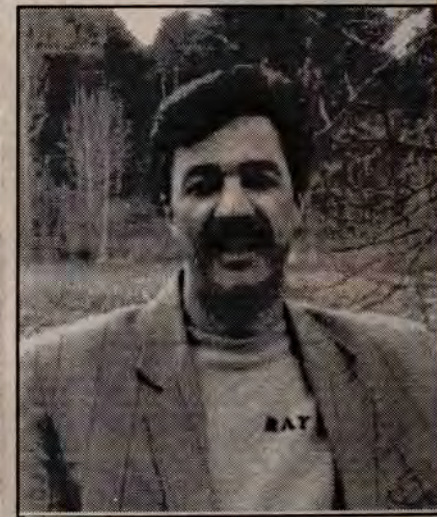

Siong Huat was diagnosed with AIDS in March of 1989. Despite five years of struggling with AIDS and deteriorating health, he continued to give generously to the gay community and his many close friends. He will be remembered for his great will, wit and warm heart. He is survived by his lover of 12 years, Victor Bloise, his supportive and loving family in Malaysia, and his many devoted friends. He was surrounded by loving friends and family at the time of his death.

Cesar Cruz

Cesar Cruz, age 41, of Tremont St., South End, died Sunday, Sept. 4, at the New England Medical Center Boston.

"Carlie Died Last Night"

"Carlie died last night." Richie's voiced cracked when he said the words last Thursday.

Carlie had just turned three. Richie threw a birthday party for her, knowing that this might have been her last. It was.

Over 125 people turned out for that party on August 10. Mayor Susan Golding declared "Carlie Day in San Diego." Even Barney the Dinosaur made an appearance.

Just three weeks ago, Carlie and Richie were featured on the front page of Update. Now the little girl is gone—because of AIDS.

Richie asked us if we could print the poem he wrote for Carlie. It is our pleasure.

Loving Arms
A precious little girl has died.
I mourn for Carlie.
Her heart had gleamed in my soul. My love for her has been taken into the heavens by God.
Into his arms, by love.
May God bless her and her family through eternity. I Love
You — Richie.

Arlene Carmen, Who Ministered To Society's Castoffs, Dies at 58

By WOLFGANG SAXON

Arlene Carmen, a church administrator whose ministry sought out society's castoffs in the streets of Greenwich Village and midtown Manhattan, died on Sunday in Columbia-Presbyterian Hospital. A Village resident, she was 58.

The cause was complications from congestive heart failure, according to Judson Memorial Church, where she was program associate and church administrator.

Ms. Carmen spent 28 years on the staff of Judson, on Washington Square. She became widely known in the late 1970's when she began to minister to a substratum of prosti-tutes, prisoners and rebellious artists, and later, to people with AIDS.

She opened a clinic at the church, but soon realized that mistrust kept away street people. That led her to roam Eighth Avenue in a church van offering counsel and referrals as well as lemonade and clothing. At times, she was accompanied by the Rev. Howard Moody, then the senior minister, who acted as the driver.

Once, in 1978, Ms. Carmen was arrested in a "sweep" of Times Square prostitutes and spent almost 22 hours in custody. She went to court with the New York Civil Liberties Union and won an $8,500 award. A jury found that the arrest was legal but the long detention was not.

She was born and raised in the Bronx and graduated from City College. She worked with Mr. Moody, running a Clergy Consultation Service on Abortion, a nationwide referral network for safe abortions, before the advent of legalized abortion in 1973. Together they wrote two books, one on abortion counseling and one on prostitution. Ms. Carmen also helped stage arts events and campaigned against censorship.

She stopped her runs in the van some years ago, but continued to aid prostitutes, whom she called "sex workers," most recently as a consultant to Manhattan's Midtown Community Court. Ms. Carmen was an organizer of the People With AIDS Health Group.

Ms. Carmen is survived by her mother, Mina Carmen of Freehold, N.J., and two sisters, Andrea Carmen of Freehold, and Jewel DeRoy of Los Angeles.

Patrick G. Coleman

Aug. 15, 1955 - Sept. 9, 1994

Patrick passed away peacefully on Friday afternoon, Sept. 9. His partner, Gary Linders, and friends, Sandy Zimmerman and Mike Taylor, were at his side. Patrick was diagnosed with AIDS in January 1992 and fought courageously to the end. He was a handsome, gentle and quiet man who never liked to draw attention to himself - qualities I loved about him most.

A native of Florida, Patrick graduated in 1984 from FIU with a degree in computer science. He moved to SF in 1986, advanced rapidly in his career, and was last employed as a computer systems engineer for EDS.

Patrick is survived by his partner and soul mate, Gary Linders; his parents, Rosanne and William Coleman of Hallandale, Fla.; two brothers; and numerous friends here in SF, Florida and Canada. Special thanks to Ruth Ann Vihinen of Kaiser Home Hospice, Kaiser Infusion Center staff, Michael, Richard, Tim and Erich.

A cherry tree was planted in Golden Gate Park on Sept. 16 and dedicated to Patrick's memory. A small ceremony with friends was held afterwards. Donations made in Patrick's memory may be sent to the AIDS Emergency Fund. ▼

Jon Cabanatan (a.k.a. Sasha Blue)

Nov. 21, 1966 - Oct. 1, 1994

Jon left us for the glamour capital of the universe - heaven - with a smile on his beautiful face on the evening of October 1. Jon was famous for his flawless impersonations of Whitney Houston and Diana Ross, and, of course, for his ultra-glamorous alter ego, Sasha Blue.

A memorial was held for Jon October 12. In attendance were his brother and sister from Hawaii as well as numerous friends. Thanks to David, Freddy, Doug, etc. for their support. Thanks to everyone at Coming Home Hospice, where Jon resided the last months of his life. Donations can be made to Coming Home in the name of Jon. Rest in peace and glamour, sweet angel; you are sorely missed. - Your friend ▼

MICHAEL JAMES CRAFTON, 23, passed away Nov. 5 surrounded by his loving family. Michael died of heart failure after a courageous struggle with AIDS. Michael had a promising career in Chicago theater, including roles at Northwestern University, Street Signs Theater, the Drury Lane Theater and the Goodman Theater. His talent and passion for acting were great, and will be remembered. He was also a member of the HealthWorks Theatre Company, a volunteer organization which performs plays such as The Wizard of AIDS throughout the Midwest. Michael was a graduate of the John F. Hodge High School in St. James, attended the University of Missouri-Columbia, and was a graduate of Northwestern University in Evanston, where he received a Bachelor's in Speech and majored in theatrical arts. Michael is survived by his parents, Jack and Jean Crafton of St. James, Mo.; sisters Jennifer Ann and Janet Marie; aunts Pauline and Murel; Uncles Gene and Charles; cousins John, Patrick and Thomas; friends Nate, Trevor, Chris, Shane, Sean, Jeff, Elizabeth, Lisa, Curtis, Derek, Phil and Gary as well as a host of others in Chicago, Columbia and St. James too numerous to mention. A memorial service will be held Monday, Dec. 5, at 8p.m. at Northwestern University's Louis Theater. Call (708) 491-7282. Donations should be made to HealthWorks Theatre, 3171 N. Halsted, Chicago, 60657, 929-4260.

Rick Cuevas

Feb. 3, 1939 - Oct. 13, 1994

Rick Cuevas died recently from AIDS complications and is probably shrieking from the other side now that his true age has been published.

A well-known figure in the San Francisco gay deaf community, Rick was a former president of the SF Club for the Deaf and a member of the Rainbow Deaf Society. Fiercely independent, he had a long career as an upholsterer before his declining health forced him to retire.

His nickname, "Tempest Storm," was a metaphor for both his love of burlesque and his fiery Latin temperament. Meeting the real "Tempest" was one of the high points of his life.

One of 15 children, Rick is survived by his "sister-niece," Chris; his sisters, Sherry, Peg, Rita, Cecelia, Mary, Marge, Grace and Delores; his brothers, Victor, Paul and Robert; close friends, Sam, Jim and Dick; former lover, Bruce; and by a host of others whose Sunday afternoons just won't be the same.

A memorial potluck in celebration of his life will be held on Saturday, November 19, at the SF Club for the Deaf, 530 Valencia (between 15th and 17th) at 1 p.m. Please join us. ▼

Leonard passed away on June 12 after a mercifully brief last illness. From childhood on he had to contend with many tragic and adverse circumstances, but somehow through it all maintained a simplicity of heart and a sweet capacity for love.

Many of you may have met or seen him sometime during the past 20 years or so, playing on the GSL or making his impulsive rounds of his favorite places to hang out in the Castro, SOM and the T-loin. Irrepressibly outgoing, he had his own special style of talking and walking. Even the way he played pool had a carefree, easy grace to it! And he loved his sports and his soul music.

He is survived by his beloved Aunt Doshia, his sister and her family, and by some of his old pals and friends. As one of them, I know he changed and blessed my life, and I remember vividly many of the hours I spent with that handsome and lovable man. If any of you would like to get together to honor and celebrate his too brief life, contact John at (510) 531-5754. ▼

and God's love around you flow.*

How the happiness you gave me no one will ever know!

It broke my heart to lose you, but you didn't go alone!

*For a part of me went with you,
the day God called you home.*

A million times I have needed you, a million times I have cried.

If love could have saved you, you would have never died.

*Sadly missed by your Grandmother,
Lelia M. Christmas*

Robert W. Carter

October 20, 1994

On Thursday, October 20, with his 33rd birthday around the corner,

Bob (a true Scorpio) valiantly danced life's closing waltz. As an intensely spiritual being, it was his choice to journey toward his next adventure in the solitude of his Denver apartment, with the sole companionship of Tommy, his beloved cat, at his side.

Bob leaves us with many memories: all-night dancing and wild abandon with many a hot man; an appreciative eye for the beauty around him; his love of cacti, rocks and wood; artistic accomplishments in his photography; the gentle touch of his massage; and always the biting wit so easily aroused.

Bob leaves these memories and so much more, particularly with those he truly loved: his father, Bill; devoted sister, Desiree; soul mate, Howard; and special friends, Rick, Todd, Nicholas, Mark, Tom and Ray.

Good-bye, sweet and gentle man. The gifts you've shared have blessed us all. ▼

Kenneth J. Coughtry
Kenneth J. Coughtry, 48, of Washington, D.C., died Monday, October 3, 1994, of AIDS related complications at Georgetown University Medical Center, according to his longtime friend, Richard E. Hardy of D.C.

Coughtry moved to Washington, D.C. in the early 1970s and began working as a banquet cook. He was employed as a cook at several restaurants over the years including the Cosmos Club and the National Press Club. At the time of his death, he was working as a cook at the John F. Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts.

Coughtry was born Oct. 3, 1946 in Latham, N.Y. He graduated from high school in the mid-1960s.

Coughtry's interests included literature, cinema, and art. He was particularly fond of art from the Greco-Roman, Egyptian, and Pre-Columbian periods. Coughtry also enjoyed visiting museums and historic archaeological sites in Mexico, Italy, and Egypt.

"He was witty, down to earth, and steadfastly loyal in his friendships," said Hardy. Regarding his HIV infection, according to Hardy, Coughtry said, "How can one be angry about something that resulted from an act of love."

In addition to Hardy, Coughtry is survived by his niece, Karyn Coughtry of Latham; and former colleague and caregiver, Mary Lee Berger-Hughes of Arlington, Va.

Coughtry requested before his death that no memorial service be held. His remains were cremated Oct. 6 and will be scattered over one of his three favorite sites, Rome, Mexico, or the Grand Canyon National Park in Arizona.

Mark Douglas Chittle

November 19, 1994

Born in Flint, Michigan, and a resident of San Francisco for 17 years until 1991, Mark, 43, was a lover of life. A man who never held a permanent job, he traveled extensively, alone or with friends.

Mark had a passion for the ocean, loved movies, and always knew a great place to eat. His enthusiasm for life took him places all over the world, where he could charm his way into anything he wanted. He watched the sun set across many cultures, and they always stopped to watch him dance.

He will be sadly missed by his parents, Bob and Jessie of Hale, Mich.; three brothers, Bob of Clio, Bill of Grand Blanc and Mike of Flint; their families; and his sister, Kristen. No services will be held. Donations may be made to the Library for the Blind in Mark's memory. ▼

"Footprints"

Once there was a man who reflected back over his life.
And as his life was viewed before him, he noticed looking back that there were two sets of footprints in the sand.
But he also noticed that during some of the most troublesome and trying times in his life, he saw only one set of footprints.
So he asked, Lord you said that once I decided to follow you, we would walk side by side through life.
But when I needed you most I saw only one set of footprints in the sand
The Lord replied, I love you and would never leave or forsake you.
During your times of trial and suffering when you needed me the most and you saw only one set of footprints, it was then that I carried you.

Darryl Cosby

Darryl Bernard Cosby, 29, of Washington, D.C., died Wednesday, November 9, 1994 at George Washington University Hospital in D.C. of complications associated with AIDS, according to his friend, Jesse Barber of D.C.

Cosby, the oldest of five children, was born Nov. 19, 1964 in Washington, D.C. He was raised in Westfield, Pa., where he attended Blue Mountain Academy. Cosby also studied at Takoma Park Academy and Columbia Union College in Takoma Park, Md. In the late 1980s, Cosby attended American University in D.C.

Cosby worked as a junior executive at Union Labor Life Insurance Company in D.C. until the time of his death. He also worked part-time as a bartender at JR.'s in D.C.

Cosby's interests included art, reading, electronics, and, most importantly, music.

"On Nov. 19, 1964, Darryl was born and there was a great joy in my heart. On Nov. 9, 1994 Darryl went to sleep and then soon ... [there was] another great celebration [of his life] in my heart," said his mother, Diana Cosby of Westfield, Pa.

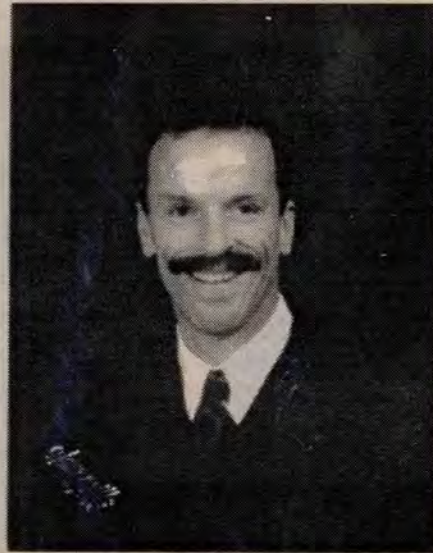

In addition to his mother and Barber, Cosby is survived by his father, Billy Cosby of Westfield, Pa; three sisters; and a brother.

A memorial service was held for Cosby on Nov. 12 at the Dupont Park Seventh-Day Adventist Church in D.C. His remains have been cremated.

Contributions in Cosby's memory may be made to the Whitman-Walker Clinic, 1407 S St., NW, Washington, DC 20009.

His photography, music, words, and smile shall remain with us forever. He is survived by his mother, Helen, father, Dominic, and brothers, Carl and Stephen. Donations can be made to AmFAR, 733 Third Avenue, N.Y.C. 10017. "The memories cluster 'round thee/Of vanished years of life/And things once loved and cherished/No longer claim thy strife/Tho' all that seemed the surest/As phantoms glide away/The treasures of thy spirit/ Shall never know decay./And now in twilight hours/In silent veils of thought/Before thy inner vision/ Are scenes supernatural brought/While spirit friends are hovering/To cheer and comfort thee/Till lifts the shadowy curtain/To immortality."

Martin Caprow, 38, life mirrored in 'Philadelphia'

LOS ANGELES — Martin Caprow, whose lawsuit alleging he was fired from a law firm because he had AIDS mirrored the movie "Philadelphia," died Wednesday. He was 38.

Mr. Caprow drew national attention in February when he claimed the firm of Frank & Freedus in San Diego didn't want to pay for his health insurance. The company denied his allegations.

Unlike the Tom Hanks' character in "Philadelphia," Mr. Caprow lost his claim. A judge agreed in March with the defense that Mr. Caprow was a victim of a poor economy, not discrimination. 12-21-94 —AP

Gary Clare

Director, 32 1/28/94

Gary Clare, director of creative development for the performance-programs department at Thirteen/WNET, the public television station in New York, died on Friday at his home in Manhattan. He was 32.

The cause was AIDS-related, his family said.

Mr. Clare supervised program development and financing for "Great Performances," the performing-arts series produced by WNET for PBS. Among the programs he worked on were "Sondheim: A Celebration at Carnegie Hall," "Gregory Hines's Tap Dance in America" and "In the Wings: Angels in America."

He also helped develop "In the Spotlight," a series of pop music specials, and "Theater in America," a documentary series on the history of the American theater.

A native of Providence, R.I., he received B.A. and M.F.A. degrees from Brandeis University, where he staged plays and musicals. Before joining WNET in 1987, he worked as a director and stage manager in regional theater and Off Broadway.

Mr. Clare is survived by his mother, Dorothy; his father, Robert, and a brother, Douglas, all of Warwick, R.I.

Larry Cruse
Aug. 2, 1955 - Nov. 13, 1994
After a valiant effort to keep his gentle heart smiling, Larry Cruse, much-loved Louisville AIDS activist, passed on to a better life on Sunday, November 13, at 8:30 in the evening, surrounded by family and friends. Larry lived in San Francisco for many years until returning to Louisville in 1990.

Larry was instrumental in getting the first Louisville AIDS Walk off the ground in September 1993. He spent two years working on the project before it became a reality. In its two years of existence, it has generated over $250,000 in contributions for AIDS. The second AIDS Walk, conducted on a cool September day, may have proven too much for him, however. He was hospitalized the next day with a raging fever and never fully recovered after that.

Larry was also an avid supporter of the Fairness Campaign, which is seeking passage of a gay rights bill in Louisville.

This beautiful soul will be missed by a great many friends in the Louisville community, including Teresa Gordon, another AIDS activist; Bill Svendsen; Charlie Beverly; Norman Nichols; and David Williams. He was buried November 16 in Louisville's Evergreen Cemetery after a ceremony attended by over 100 family and friends. ▼

William F. Coxson

William F. Coxson, 35, of Jamaica Plain, died on Nov 29 due to complications from AIDS. Born in Western Pennsylvania, Bill was active in Boston's gay community since relocating here in the early '80s. 94

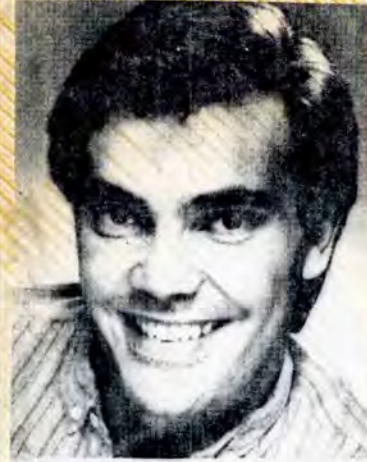

A prolific painter, Bill participated in numerous individual and group art exhibits in the northeast. He was invaluable as an exhibit organizer and curator of several area exhibits, including c/Overt, a 1992 exhibit that dealt with the Boston art community's response to the AIDS pandemic.

Bill is survived by countless friends and by his life partner, Michael Banchy.

COLE—Nat Kelly, 36, son of Nathaniel and Maria (Hawkins) Cole, died Tuesday, October 24, 1995 in Los Angeles, from a prolonged illness. He was a graduate of the Kent School in Connecticut and the University of Redlands in Redlands, California. He is survived by his mother Maria Cole of Boston and sisters Natalie Cole-Fischer, Carole Cole, Timolin Cole-Augustus, and Casey Cole-Ray. A memorial service will be held at St. Victor's Catholic Church in West Hollywood, Friday, October 27, 1995 at 6:30 p.m. Interment will be private. In lieu of flowers, contributions may be made in Kelly's name to the AIDS Project Los Angeles, 1313 N. Vine Street, Hollywood, California 90028; The Serra Project, Seton Hall, Suite 220, 2131 W. Third Street, Los Angeles, California, 90057-0992; or Project Angel Food, 7574 Sunset Boulevard, Los Angeles, California, 90046.

MARK CARSON

Aug. 31, 1994, age 40

THEY SAY THAT until it hits home, people think of AIDS as someone else's problem. The full force of that truism hit ENTERTAINMENT WEEKLY this summer, when associate editor Mark Carson, 40, a creative and courageous member of our staff, died of complications from the virus.

Mark came to EW in 1990, but he already had had a colorful career. Raised in Pittsburgh, Mark earned a BA from Geneva College and an MFA from the University of Denver. After winning a small role in George Romero's Dawn of the Dead, he moved to Manhattan in 1980 to pursue acting. Parts in Off Broadway plays followed, as did gigs as an editor at TIME, Us, and 7 Days. He also became increasingly involved in AIDS activism, and was particularly proud of his arrest at an ACT UP protest.

Mark's love of the arts made him a natural addition to our staff, but his "real vocation was making friends," says one colleague. He had a knack for it. Friends gathered round in the office each morning as Mark held court, sharing his thoughts on the latest movie or show that he had seen.

His heartbreaking battle with the virus left his body ravaged, but his spirit intact. And as the months went by, Mark became an inspiration to us, an encouragement to do something — anything — to make a difference.

Many EW staffers were among the 200 friends and family who gathered in October to celebrate Mark's life and spirit at the Players Club in Manhattan (we think he would have loved that setting). What's left now is a terrible sense of loss — for Mark, yes, and for the thousands of other bright, young, creative people who have succumbed to the virus. That feeling will never leave home.

Joseph C. Cardozo, 41

Education administrator

7-9-94
A funeral Mass will be said today for Joseph Caesar Cardozo, director of education and programs for the Multicultural AIDS Coalition in Boston, who died Saturday in his home in Dorchester. He was 41.

Mr. Cardozo was born in Port Chester, N.Y. He earned a bachelor's degree in special education and communications at Western Michigan University and a master's degree in education administration at Wayne State University before becoming a special-education teacher in the Port Huron, Mich., public school system.

From 1980 to 1985, Mr. Cardozo worked for the Connecticut Department of Children and Youth Services. After serving on the Ernestina Committee of Cape Verdeans United in Connecticut, which preserved the schooner Ernestina, he developed Ocean Classroom, a federally funded marine environment educational and recreational program for youths in Bridgeport, Conn. He also developed an aquaculture vocational program that later became the Greater Bridgeport Vocational Center for Aquaculture.

He was instrumental in the establishment of Bridgeport's annual Harborfest celebration, and from 1985 to 1989 was executive producer and host of "Hora de Cabo Verde," a weekly TV news program for Connecticut's Cape Verdean community on WVBC-TV.

In 1992 he became director of education and programs for the Multicultural AIDS Coalition in Boston, where he designed, developed and implemented educational programs.

Mr. Cardozo leaves his parents, Joseph B. and Theresa (Pina Rosario) of Dunedin, Fla., and Barnstable; a brother, Caesar P. of Boston; a sister, Joy Cardozo Wormser of Bloomfield, Conn.; and a stepbrother, Raphael Cardoso of Huntington, Conn.

Today's Mass will be at 11 a.m. in Our Lady of Victory Church in Centerville.

George Coleman, 35
Publishing Executive

12-24-94
George Coleman, a vice president and executive editor at G. P. Putnam's Sons, died on Saturday at St. Luke's-Roosevelt Hospital Center. Mr. Coleman, who lived in Manhattan, was 35.

The cause was progressive multifocal leukoencephalopathy, a rare neurological disorder associated with AIDS, said his companion, Mark T. Lameier.

In Mr. Coleman's five years with Putnam's, he worked on such best sellers as "Ann-Margret: My Story"; "The Haldeman Diaries," by H. R. Haldeman; "In the Absence of Angels," the autobiography of the AIDS spokeswoman Elizabeth Glaser, and on the works of such popular novelists as Dale Brown, Jack Higgins and Steve Martini.

Before joining Putnam's, Mr. Coleman worked at Donald I. Fine and at Arbor House. At the latter, he acquired the best-selling "Mayflower Madam," by Sydney Biddle Barrows, and William Novak, "No More Vietnams," by Richard M. Nixon, and works by Anthony Burgess.

In addition to Mr. Lameier, Mr. Coleman is survived by a brother, Chris Coleman of Jacksonville, Fla.; a sister, Linda Weimer of Tacoma, Wash., and his mother and stepfather, Carrie and Andy Wheatley of Austin, Tex.

William Choquette of Dorchester, 34

10-1-94
William J. Choquette Jr. of Dorchester, a medical biller, died Saturday at New England Medical Center. He was 34.

Mr. Choquette was born in Methuen. He served with the U.S. Navy.

Mr. Choquette was a member of the Beantown Softball League.

He is survived by his mother, Annette T. (Malone) of Lake Mary, Fla.; his father, William J. Sr. of Winnesquam, N.H.; a sister, Judith A. Lizotte of Charlton; and many nieces and nephews.

A funeral service will be held at 11 a.m. tomorrow at Murphy Funeral Home, Dorchester.

Burial will be in St. Bernard's Cemetery, Fitchburg.

Howard Calvin Cowlshaw Jr.

June 17, 1953 - Sept. 13, 1994

Howard died peacefully at home in the early morning hours of September 13 from liver and kidney involvement due to HIV complications. He was 41. His home was in Yountville.

Howard was born in Ogden, Utah, to Howard and Irma Cowlshaw. Growing up he lived in Utah, Idaho, and moved to California in 1960. He attended the University of California-San Diego and the University of Idaho at Moscow. He was accepted into medical school at the University of Nebraska in his third year and completed medical school in three years. Anesthesia was his chosen specialty.

Howard loved the outdoors, backpacking and hiking, especially "warm, sunny places". He loved traveling and visited many beautiful places throughout the world. He had a sharp mind, a great sense of humor, and a playful smile which lit up his eyes.

He is survived by his loving and devoted family, which includes husband, David; mother, Irma; two wonderful children, Jessie and Brittany; two sisters, Lynda Cooper and Nancy Chambers; their husbands, Dan and Steve; four nieces; six nephews; and Mary, former wife and mother of his two children. Howard was preceded in death by his father. He will be missed by his many friends and colleagues. ▼

Wm. (Peter) Caldwell

Aug. 12, 1955 - Nov. 20, 1994

Peter came to San Francisco barefoot an adult from North Carolina via Florida in the free and wild early '70s. One of his first jobs was at the infamous Barracks on Folsom, which was about as wild and free as it got. A few years later many will remember the gangling blond ensconced at Cliff's uttering such bon mots as "Exercise is for servants."

Peter was maddening, cynical, funny and generous; he loved thrift shopping, Barbie & Ken, Morticia, long-stemmed roses without the flower and Eames furniture.

On a friend's suggestion he went home to North Carolina about five years ago. However, he couldn't stand being away and returned to San Francisco a year ago, just as he became ill.

Peter received wonderful care from a patient staff at St. Mary's and generous assistance from the Lutheran Social Services Agency. Hopefully he is at peace. ▼

John Corrigan

John Barrett Corrigan, 37, died Sunday, February 26, 1995 at his home in Washington, D.C. of AIDS related complications, according to his friend, Wendy Kloner also of Washington.

Corrigan was born July 4, 1957 in Evansville, Ind., and graduated with a bachelor's degree in management from Indiana University in 1979. In 1987, he completed his master's degree in business administration at George Washington University in D.C.

Corrigan worked in personnel management at the Department of Labor and the Federal Trade Commission, before becoming supervisory personnel management specialist at the Bureau of the Census, in the U.S. Department of Commerce. He retired in 1992 for health reasons.

While in retirement, Corrigan volunteered for Food and Friends and the Human Rights Campaign Fund. His other interests included travel, gardening, swimming, and tennis.

Corrigan was preceded in death by his lifetime partner, local artist Ronald Paquette, who died in April 1991.

In addition to Kloner, Corrigan is survived by his father, John Corrigan Sr. of Las Cruces, N.M.; sisters, Ann Corrigan of Dallas, Texas; and Martha Corrigan of Evansville, Ind.; and brother, Steven Corrigan of Laguna Beach, Calif. He also leaves his cat, Midnight.

A memorial service was held Mar. 4 in Evansville. Corrigan's remains were buried next to his mother's at St. Joseph's Cemetery in Evansville.

A local memorial service will be held Sunday, March 19 at 7 p.m. at a friend's private home. For more information, call (202) 667-7457 or (202) 462-2431.

Cardinal Bernardin Offers Prayers For Accuser

CHICAGO — Cardinal Joseph L. Bernardin of Chicago offered condolences and prayers on the death of Steven J. Cook Sept. 22. Cook, 36, died at University Medical Center in Cincinnati after a long struggle with AIDS. Two years ago he accused the cardinal of having sexually abused him as a teen-ager in the early 1970s, when Cardinal Bernardin was archbishop of Cincinnati. The accusation in November 1993 made international headlines. His complete, voluntary retraction of the claim four months later received equally widespread media coverage. Last December, in a face-to-face meeting in Philadelphia that both described as deeply moving and grace-filled, Cook and Cardinal Bernardin were reconciled and prayed together. Cook apologized to the cardinal. The cardinal told Cook he had forgiven him, and at Cook's request he celebrated Mass for him. 25

Paul "PJ" Coache

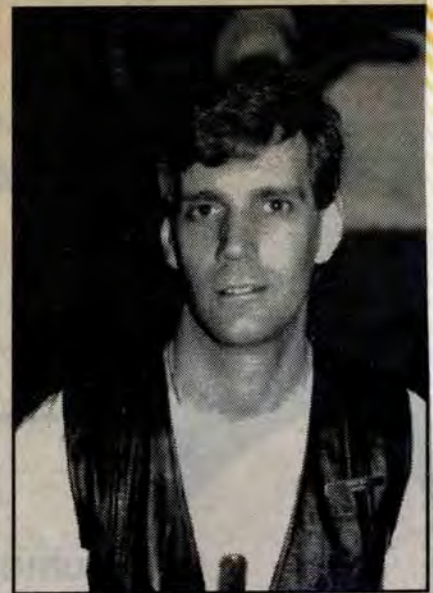

Paul "PJ" Coache died at home in Dorchester on Nov. 14 from complications due to AIDS. 94

Born in Ludlow on Sept. 25, 1956, he graduated from Ludlow High School. He graduated from Holyoke Community College and attended the University of Massachusetts at Amherst.

PJ was a bartender at the Paradise in Cambridge for several years. In previous years, he had owned several Dairy Mart franchises; had been a manager for Rix Drug, Mobil Oil Corp., CVS Drug; and had been an area manager for Dairy Mart. He was a member and former officer of the Black Eagle Motorcycle Club and was a former member and officer of RIDERS MC. PJ was also an enthusiastic world traveler.

PJ leaves his lover, partner and best friend of nearly seven years, Strider Pineo of Dorchester; and his daughter, Meghan Coache of Brimfield. He also leaves his parents, Richard and Claire Coache of Ludlow; a brother, David Coache of Springfield; two sisters, Elaine Baillargeon and Maureen Coache of Ludlow; and nephews Joel, Jared, Matthew and Danny. He will be fondly remembered by many friends in the Boston area and beyond.

A funeral mass was celebrated on Nov. 17 and PJ was buried in St. Aloysius Cemetery in Indian Orchard, Springfield.

A Celebration of Life will be held on Jan. 22 at 3 p.m. at the Arlington Street Church in Boston. This will be followed by a celebratory gathering at the Paradise in Cambridge.

Memorial contributions may be made to the Visiting Nurses Association of Boston.

Robert Emmet Chermack

Oct. 14, 1959 - April 2, 1995

Bob finally crossed over on April 2 surrounded by family and friends at his parents' home in Sonoma.

He lived life to its fullest, with a sharp tongue, quick mind, and hearty sense of mischief and humor. A salesman personified in energy and congeniality explicitly describes Bobby's demeanor. I'll sorely miss him here, but I know that I'll see my little buddy for more grins in another time.

Donations in memory of Bobby should be sent to: Valley of the Moon Hospice, 370 West Napa St., Sonoma, CA 95476 and/or Face to Face, P.O. Box 1599, Guerneville, CA 95446.

Thank you, caregivers, for your loving support. ▼

David Calsada

May 19, 1945 - Aug. 9, 1995

Our beloved David passed away shortly after being diagnosed with cancer. His service to country and community included the USN and the Stop AIDS Project. Noted for his kindness and generosity, he also excelled professionally and artistically.

A ceremony will be held at his home at 11 a.m. on Sunday, Nov. 12, prior to the interment of his ashes. Friends are invited to attend. ▼

Steven Paul Cattano, D.V.M.

In Berkeley on June 19, 1994, Steven Paul Cattano died of AIDS at age

35. Dr. Cattano was a friend to animals, common and exotic, and was sought out for his compassion toward the animal world as well as the human world.

In his abbreviated career, he earned the respect and admiration of all he came in contact with. Included in his association with Berkeley Dog and Cat Hospital was overseeing the welfare of the animals, birds and reptiles in the Lawrence Hall of Science - creatures that delighted thousands of Bay Area children. He also toured Bay Area schools, educating young people in the joys of responsible pet ownership and the need for ecological programs to nourish and supplement the existence of reptiles.

His clientele included people from all over the Bay Area as well as celebrities such as Whoopi Goldberg. He was a graduate of the Cornell University College of Veterinary Medicine and minored in meteorology.

Kerry A. Carson, 22; was student and activist for AIDS education

By Indira A.R. Lakshmanan
GLOBE STAFF

Kerry Anne Carson of York, Maine, and Cushing Island, Maine, a student at the University of Southern Maine and an AIDS-education activist, died Jan. 26 of complications from AIDS. She was 22.

Ms. Carson was diagnosed as infected with the human immunodeficiency virus in 1988 at the age of 15, and two years later began to work as an AIDS educator, speaking in classrooms throughout New England and across the country, and to legislators on Capitol Hill.

During the past 3½ years, Ms. Carson worked with documentary filmmaker Jeanne Blake, a former WBZ-TV medical reporter, on AIDS-education videos. She was interviewed along with her mother for Sex Education in America: AIDS and Adolescence, which aired nationally on public television.

Six weeks ago, Ms. Carson completed work for "In Our Own Words: Teens and AIDS," a video that will be released this month for national distribution in classrooms, in cooperation with the national PTA. She hosted the video and worked as a script consultant.

"Kerry was beautiful and smart and had a spirit that young people identified with," Blake said. "She would walk into a classroom and say, 'Hi, my name is Kerry. I contracted HIV when I was 15. I was just like you - I come from an upper-middle-class background. I had dreams of getting married, having children and a career.'"

Ms. Carson was born in Portland, attended Cumberland schools and obtained her GED after five months of high school. She ran track, sailed and mountain-climbed.

She attended the Maine College of Art, where she studied pottery, hat design and quilting. At the University of Southern Maine in Portland, she held a 3.77 grade-point-average and hoped to pursue a career as a midwife or a social worker.

She leaves her parents, Richard B. and Linda Carson of York, Maine; her sister, Courtney, of San Francisco; and a grandmother and grandfather.

A memorial service will be held tomorrow at 1 p.m. in St. Bartholomew Episcopal Church in Yarmouth, Maine. 95

Michael L. Canfield

May 11, 1957 - April 14, 1995

On the morning of Good Friday, Michael peacefully left this world as we know it. By his side was his partner, Jeffrey Archambo; his mother, Patricia Canfield; and his brother, Daniel Canfield.

Michael finally succumbed to AIDS complications after many years of health, positivity of spirit and his innocent Iowan humor. Although his last 18 months were more challenging than most people would ever know, each day began and ended with his unforgettable smile.

Missy's big adventure began in Waterloo, Iowa, where he was born and raised. Then he was off to Minneapolis and Chicago before settling in San Francisco, where he made his home for the past nine years. With his 6'4" frame, Michael was an extraordinarily successful flirt, especially at the Badlands and the Midnight Sun. Although an Eagle devotee, his loyalties lay forever with his two life partners, Larry Petko and Jeffrey Archambo.

Michael is survived by his partner, Jeffrey; his oldest friend, Ernie; dear friends, Anna, Dar, Margaret and Paula; Tess the cat; his family; and many others.

Until we meet again, Michael; you will always be with us. We love you, Punkin. - Boy ▼

John Mason Curtis

Feb. 14, 1951 - May 11, 1995

Friends and loved ones mourn the passing of Mason Curtis.

Originally from Portland, Ore., Mason studied dance with the Joffrey Ballet in New York. He returned to the West Coast in the '80s and established a career in television production, working on music videos, commercials and live rock concerts.

Now clean and sober he began to work as a freelance video producer as well as an associate producer for KQED. He was then hired by the BBC, which led to Mason's proudest achievement: the four-part documentary A Time of AIDS, for which he was nominated for two Cable Ace Awards.

Mason is survived by his partner, Kimo Auwae; parents, Terrance Jack and Marjorie; brothers, Bruce, Mark and Michael; sister, Kathleen Bohlin; and six nephews.

Monica Cuervas

Nov. 23, 1951 - April 4, 1995

Monica passed away early in the morning on April 4. At her side and caring for her during a long and courageous struggle during her final months were her friends Joe, Tony, Karen, Shirley, Paul and Sandy. She is survived by her sister Gigi and mother Yolanda. We all love and miss her very much.

Monica came to the Mission District from Peru with her family in 1963. She graduated from Westmore High School in Daly City in 1967. A spirited, warm and loving person, she was a devoted companion and a fastidious homemaker. A memorial service was held on April 12, and a celebration of her life was attended by her friends at Aunt Charlie's Lounge on Sunday, April 23. She was like a sister to many of us and will live on in our hearts and memories. We miss you, Sister. ▼

SAMSON CHAN, who helped found Asians and Friends/Chicago, and several gay and AIDS-related groups in Hong Kong, died May 12. Raised in Hong Kong, Chan came to the U.S. in 1980, and entered college, eventually earning an MBA at Roosevelt University. The sixth of seven children, he came out to his parents in a letter, and was greeted with acceptance despite traditionally conservative Chinese views on homosexuality. He helped found AFC in 1983, and worked to raise the visibility of Asians and Asian-Americans in the gay community. In 1990, he returned to Hong Kong and joined the Hong Kong AIDS Foundation, where he served as a service program officer, setting up an AIDS hotline, training volunteers and developing services. He also helped to establish a lesbian/gay hotline in Hong Kong, called "Horizons." He returned to Chicago for a visit in 1994 to commemorate the 10th anniversary of AFC. 95

Daniel Cohen, 45, Journalism Teacher

4-12-95
Daniel Howard Cohen, a journalist and former member of the militant leftist group the Weather Underground, died on Wednesday at St. Luke's-Roosevelt Hospital Center in Manhattan. He was 45.

The cause was complications from AIDS, said his father, Sidney Cohen.

Mr. Cohen directed the photography program at Columbia University's Graduate School of Journalism from 1987 until his death.

Mr. Cohen, who grew up in Baltimore, was arrested in 1969 during an antiwar demonstration in Chicago. He failed to appear a year later for his trial on aggravated battery charges, and then disappeared for five years along with other members of the Weather Underground. In 1976, he surrendered and was sentenced to two years' probation after pleading guilty to reduced charges.

He later graduated from Evergreen State College in Olympia, Wash., and, in 1981, received a master's degree in journalism from Columbia. He joined the journalism school's faculty in 1983.

Mr. Cohen's companion of several years, M. Brooks Jones, died in 1989. Mr. Cohen is survived by his parents, Sidney and Sylvia Cohen of Baltimore; a brother, Paul, of San Francisco, and two sisters, Sandra Lee Cohen Crute of Baltimore and Laura Cohen Hewitt of Manhattan.

Gregory Allan Ceriale

Nov. 11, 1959 - June 28, 1995

The angels came for Greg, and he was peacefully released on Wednesday, June 28, at age 35. He was born in San Jose, Calif.

Greg moved to the Bay Area in 1986. He was a front-line counselor at Walden House.

Greg enjoyed pottery, macramé, writing poetry and quality time with his family and friends. His body is gone now, but his spirit will live forever. He will be remembered and cherished for his generous spirit, his humor and his love for everyone he met.

His gentle soul enriched us all and will be cherished forever in our hearts and memories. Greg's enthusiasm for life, caring and compassion for others were exceeded only by his courage during his battle with AIDS.

Greg is survived by his mother, Beverly Fisher; stepfather, Lee Fisher; father, Allan Ceriale; stepmother, Nancy Ceriale; sisters, Julie Torson and Tina Pielstick; brother, Darold Ceriale; nephews, Brandon and Nicholas; niece, Journey; Auntie Barbara and Uncle Darold; Nana Estelle; his beloved partner, Ron Castner; and lifetime friend, Rainy McKay.

For those who wish to celebrate his life, the memorial will be held at Walden House, 815 Buena Vista West, San Francisco, on Friday, July 7, at 6

Eric S. Caplan

Oct. 25, 1958 - Aug. 24, 1995

Eric S. Caplan passed away August 24 after a battle with AIDS. He was born in Boston and graduated from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology with a bachelor's in materials science and engineering, and received a master's from Virginia Tech.

Eric lived in Atlanta and San Diego before settling down to live in San Francisco six years ago. He worked for SuperShuttle as a driver and dispatcher for three years. He is survived by a brother, Lee; sister-in-law, Laurie, both of Boston; two aunts; two cousins; many loving friends; and his life partner, Tim Mansfield.

Services will be held at the Metropolitan Community Church, 150 Eureka Street, San Francisco on Saturday, September 9, at 3 p.m. Donations may be made to Project Open Hand. ▼

Kevin Calegari

Kevin J. Calegari, 36, a former president of Dignity/USA, the nation's largest group of gay, lesbian, and bisexual Roman Catholics, died in San Francisco of AIDS-related complications on Feb. 12. Calegari lived in San Francisco with Tom Kaun, his partner of 11 years. 95

Calegari, who served as president of Dignity from 1991 to 1993, was the subject of extensive press coverage in 1992 when he traveled to Rome and nailed a Vatican document on homosexuality to the door of the Vatican office that issued the document. The event was widely covered in the mainstream press and in gay publications in the United States, as well as in the Italian press.

Under Calegari's leadership, Dignity increased its level of interaction with other major Catholic reform organizations in the United States and abroad. During Calegari's term of office, Dignity joined the Leadership Conference for Catholic Laity, and became a founding member of the Catholic Organizations for Renewal (COR).

Marianne Duddy, the president of Dignity/USA, said, "Under Kevin's leadership, Dignity took on a more active role in the international Church, a role we are continuing to develop. His willingness to take a public prophetic stance against Vatican discrimination towards gay people was a real turning point in our movement. As a person, he was totally engaged in life, a passionate and compassionate individual, someone who intuitively understood the connections among various issues. We will miss him deeply."

At the time of his death, Calegari was pursuing a Ph.D. in theology at the Graduate Theological Union in Berkeley, California. A native of San Francisco, he was educated at Catholic schools and graduated from Stanford University in 1980 with a Bachelor's degree in Classics. He was a Coro Foundation fellow in public affairs, pursuing graduate studies at Claremont Graduate School. As a boy, he sang in the San Francisco Boys Chorus, and later served as a member of its board of directors. He was a director as well of the Dolores Street Community Services Center in San Francisco.

In a recent issue of the "National Catholic Reporter, Calegari wrote, "My spirituality as a gay man, a Christian and a person living with AIDS for the last seven years has been marked by both conflict and intimacy, filled with passion and ambivalence, anger and inexpressible joy and, above all, driven by a desire for abundant life..."

"It's a sad commentary on the state of our Church, when the courage and willingness to go to the floor on the issues that count, to speak the truth when it hurts, is cause for oppression and contempt (see the [Vatican] Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith's two recent documents on homosexuality, 1986 and 1992). What continues to amaze me is that God's powerful grace is so palpable precisely where the hierarchy denies it can be. I call it 'the sacrament of irony.'"

Kevin is survived by his partner, Tom Kaun; his parents, George and Lorayne Calegari of San Anselmo, California; his sister, Joan Harrington; her husband, Tim, and two nieces and a nephew, all of Sonoma, California; and by Janet Cerni, dear friend and confidant, of San Francisco, as well as many aunts, uncles, and cousins in the San Francisco Bay area and Tom's parents, brother, and sisters.

Johnny Lee Caswell

February 18, 1963 - June 16, 1995

John was born and raised in the Russian River area. He came to San Francisco in his early teens and soon made his way into the hearts of many. At his bedside when he died were dear friends Rosa, Rich, Jose and Rob, his close friend of 14 years with whom he lived most of that time.

He is survived by a large family: his mother, Mary Parrott, his beloved sister, Debbie Jones, and a brother, Thomas Stannage, all of Northern California; Aunts Sybil, Joyce, Shirley and Clyda and cousins Marie and Sandra of the Central valley; and others, too numerous to name.

The celebration of his life will take place on Saturday, July 1, and it will have three parts, as he requested. At 11 a.m. there will be a Requiem Eucharist at St. Aidan's Episcopal Church, Diamond Heights Blvd. and Gold Mine Drive (access by #52 bus from Forest Hill Station). At 1:30 p.m. there will be a Commitment Service at Pier 7 (near Broadway and the Embarcadero). About 2:30 p.m. we shall gather at his home for the party he wanted (1369 Hyde St. #60 - door code #58). Friends who wish to join us, feel free to come to any or all of these.

Like a lot of others, John had grown fond of angels. He felt surrounded by those he had loved who had gone before him -- they were his guardian angels. Now you go to them, Johnny, and we know they welcome you home with them. We miss you beyond words to describe and we shall until the day we join you. Rest in peace, beloved. As you were fond of saying, "See you later, Bve."

J.J. Chan 95

HONG KONG (AP)—A former disk jockey, Hong Kong's only Chinese AIDS sufferer to publicize his disease in a government campaign, has died, newspapers reported July 15.

J.J. Chan, 35, had become familiar to TV viewers in recent weeks, speaking on camera about his illness in a campaign to dispel the myth that AIDS is a foreigners' disease.

He contracted pneumonia and died early July 12 in the hospital with his family by his bed, the papers said.

The Hongkong Standard said Hong Kong has 142 AIDS sufferers, 98 of them Chinese.

The Eastern Express quoted Chan as saying in an interview in May that he contracted AIDS from homosexual sex and that he feared being shunned by conservative Hong Kong society.

"At first I only wanted to escape and hide in the dark so that no one would know I had AIDS. The suppression was so great that I hoped I could kill myself," the Express quoted him as saying.

It was his family's "unimaginable love and support" that encouraged him to go public, he was quoted as saying.

Friend wants to adopt child of woman who died of AIDS

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — A mother who searched desperately for someone to adopt her son as she battled AIDS died peacefully in the company of a friend who wants to fulfill her dying wish.

Her son Duane giggled and played with friends outside, as Debbie Cabil's struggle with the disease came to an end May 26.

Cabil, 39, died surrounded by her collection of angel knickknacks, in the arms of her friend, Jan Hughes.

"I called Duane inside when it started to rain," the local artist and gallery owner said of Cabil's last evening. "But the sun came back out after the storm and he went back outside. He was building a fort with some friends. We could hear him laughing and playing.

"Later I told him, 'She heard you playing outside and so happy, and I think she felt really good about slipping away.'"

Cabil's story was featured in a December 1993 Birmingham News article about AIDS orphans and her desperate search to find a family to adopt her son when she died.

After the story appeared, a Georgia businessman stepped forward to claim responsibility for fathering Duane, 10, who does not have the disease.

For several months Duane has been in the custody of Hughes, who hopes to adopt the boy. Cabil's story also helped launch the Children's Aid Society's innovative program, Family Pairs, which attempts to match HIV-positive families with HIV-negative families interested in adopting the children orphaned by the virus.

Hughes said she sensed her friend's life was almost over the morning of May 26 and before he went to school, Duane sensed it, too.

"He put a pillow right next to her, beside her in the bed," she said. "He laid there and stroked her arm for the longest time."

A stable home with Hughes was a dream come true for Cabil, who said she was raised by an aunt in Germany, worked as a dancer and waitress in Birmingham, and moved from one low rent apartment to another with Duane.

"Finally there was a home established and there was a sweetness in her life," Hughes said. "She was born into this world with nothing like that and she told me many times, 'I have finally found a home.'" ▼

Scott Alan Cissna

Oct. 27, 1960 - May 23, 1995

Scott Alan Cissna, 34, quietly passed away May 23 in Mount Vernon, Ind. He was born in Evansville, Ind., and was a Class of '79 graduate of Mount Vernon High School. He attended the University of Houston and later enlisted in the United States Navy, where he was awarded "Sailor of the Quarter" in 1982 for the Atlantic Fleet.

Scott lived in Wichita briefly during his teenage years before moving to Houston with his best friend Billy. They later moved to San Francisco, where they lived until 1985 before moving to San Diego. His last years were spent living in Palm Springs, where he enjoyed the beauty of the mountain sunrises and sunsets.

He is survived by a loving mother, Linda Bryan; father, Gary Cissna; stepfather, Charles Bryan; brother, James Morris; grandmother, Helene Cissna; several aunts and uncles; and his best friend and confidant of over 17 years, Billy Cates.

Walter Compton

Walter Compton, artist and professor of art history at Massachusetts College of Art, died peacefully at his home in Boston on March 23. The cause of death was complications resulting from AIDS.

Born in Elkhart, Ind., on November 23, 1941, Walter Compton received a B.A. in Comparative Literature from Northwestern University and an M.A. and a Ph.D. in Art History from Harvard University. He had taught at Massachusetts College of Art since 1971.

In his nearly three decades of teaching, Walter Compton touched the lives and helped shape the vision of thousands of students. His deep and wide-ranging knowledge of art, music, and literature, and his energy, integrity, and humor, contributed to the great popularity of his courses. His works are in many private and public collections, including those of Harvard University and the Massachusetts College of Art Permanent Collection, and have been exhibited throughout Massachusetts, including two one-man exhibitions at Boston City Hall.

Walter Compton is survived by his mother, Phoebe Emerson Compton, of Elkhart, Ind; three sisters, Phoebe Compton of Greenfield, MA, Joan Compton of Godfrey, IL, and Cynthia Mosher of Atlanta, GA; and a brother, Gordon E. Compton, of Elkhart. His father, the late Walter Ames Compton, M.D., was the President and Chairman of the Board of Miles Laboratories, Inc..

The 1995 Commencement Ceremony at the Massachusetts College of Art will celebrate his life and work.

A memorial service will be held at 3 p.m. on April 9 in the Trustees Room, 11th Floor, Massachusetts College of Art.

Pryor Conrad

Sept. 1953 - July 30, 1995

Pryor Conrad died July 30, 1995 after a long struggle with AIDS. He was fortunate to have many friends who helped him in his struggle with the disease, and was especially fortunate for his partner of more than 12 years, Robb Crowder. Pryor is survived by his mother, Irene Conrad, and brother, James Conrad, both of Birmingham, Alabama.

Pryor was born September 20, 1953 in Birmingham, Alabama. He was active in civic affairs and ran unsuccessfully for the Jefferson County School Board at age 18. Upon arriving in San Francisco in 1981, Pryor served on the Stonewall Democratic Club Executive Board.

Pryor and Robb moved to San Leandro in 1989, at which time Pryor began working for the Lurie Company. In San Leandro, Pryor was a leader in the Farrelly Pond Neighborhood Association, the Hayward Demos Democratic Club, the Eden Area United Democratic Headquarters and GLOBE.

Pryor's good-natured, Southern charm will be missed by all who had the pleasure of working with him. Services will be held at Christ Lutheran Church, 100 Hacienda Ave. in San Lorenzo on Saturday, August 19 at 11 a.m. Donations can be made to Project Inform, 1965 Market St., Suite 220, San Francisco, CA 94103. ▼

Wayne Clements

Sept. 26, 1951 - Aug. 22, 1995

Wayne Clements passed away on the morning of August 22 after 2-1/2 years battling AIDS. He was born in Galveston, Texas, and graduated from the University of Texas at Austin with a bachelor's in education.

After living in Atlanta and Austin, where he worked in the mental health profession, Wayne moved to Los Angeles in 1986, where he met his life partner, Michael. Together they moved to San Francisco seven years ago. From 1989 to 1994, he worked in the director's office of the Associated Students Union at the University of California, Berkeley.

Wayne is survived by his father, Bill; brother, Ron; and sister, Pam, all of the Houston area; many loving friends across the country; and his partner, Michael Morrison. They will miss his kind, caring nature, his good humor and his relaxed philosophy of life.

A memorial service will be held Oct. 1 at 11 a.m. in the AIDS Memorial Grove, Golden Gate Park. Donations in his memory may be made to Project Open Hand or the Hospice Program at Kaiser Permanente, South San Francisco. ▼

Spence Joe Cannon

Aug. 4, 1950 - Aug. 29, 1995

Spence Joe Cannon died August 29 at Bartlett House from complications of AIDS. He is survived by his mother, Daisy, and brother, Joe Don. Joe was born in Tulsa, Oklahoma, and moved to San Francisco in the mid-70s, where he worked in the retail and hotel industries, and also provided sound and lighting expertise for various cabaret performers.

Joe loved animals, electronics and vocal harmonies. He once resuscitated a tropical long-nosed butterfly by "walking" it back and forth in its tank until it began to breathe again, and he could fix anything from a broken crockpot to a VCR.

Although Joe wasn't much for small talk, his taciturnity hid a sweet, wise and fragile soul. His favorite question was "Why?" Maybe now he knows.

Rest in peace, dear friend. ▼

Clinton John Clark

Aug. 7, 1952 - Nov. 1, 1995

Today, Nov. 1, we said good-bye to our lover of 15-1/2 years, our son of 43 years, our brother, cousin, uncle and friend. Today we said good-bye to a heart of gold, a giver of love and a liver of life. Today we placed another panel on the AIDS Quilt. You will be sorely missed and forever in our hearts and thoughts. We love you.

Clinton John Clark was raised in Seattle but called San Francisco his home. He died at his residence as was his wish. Services were held Tuesday, Nov. 7, at Woodlawn Chapel. Any donations should be sent to the San Francisco AIDS Foundation. ▼

DIED: Duke Comegys, 55, a founder of AIDS Project Los Angeles and former cochairman of the board of directors for the Human Rights Campaign, of complications owing to surgery February 10 in Los Angeles. Christopher Chadman, Dancer And Stage Choreographer, 47

By JENNIFER DUNNING

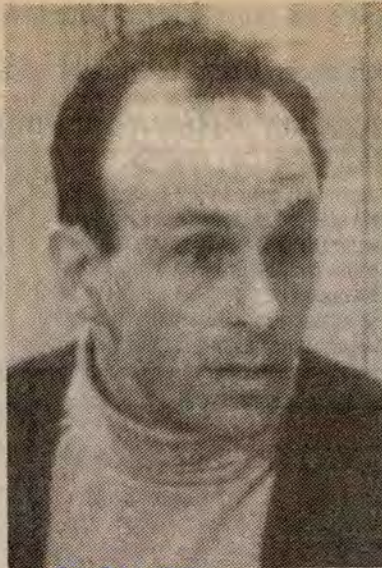

Christopher Chadman, a Broadway choreographer and dancer, died on Sunday at Lenox Hill Hospital in Manhattan. He was 47 and lived in Manhattan.

The cause was AIDS, said Gilbert Parker of the William Morris Agency.

Mr. Chadman was born in New York City and trained at the High School of Performing Arts. He made his Broadway debut in 1968, dancing in "Darling of the Day." In 1976, Mr. Chadman played Rosencrantz in Cliff Jones's "Rockabye Hamlet," directed by Gower Champion, and then took over the title role in a revival of "Pal Joey" at Circle in the Square when Edward Villella, for whom he was the understudy, quit the show during previews.

He assisted Bob Fosse on the musicals "Pippin" (1972) and "Chicago" (1975), and worked with him again on the 1986 musical "Big Deal." Mr. Fosse encouraged him to try choreography, and Mr. Chadman was credited for the "Yankee Doodle Dandy" number in "Dancin'" (1978), in which he performed and was the dance captain. The next year, he choreographed and directed "Dancing in the Dark," a cabaret revue built around the songs of Arthur Schwartz, at the Manhattan Theater Club. He choreographed the 1983 Broadway musical "Merlin," with Billy Wilson.

Mr. Chadman's greatest success came in 1992 with his choreography for the Broadway revival of "Guys and Dolls." His work on the show was nominated for Tony, Drama

Desk and Outer Critics Circle awards, and won the Fred Astaire Award. In his review of the revival in The New York Times, Frank Rich credited Mr. Chadman with helping to "give the audience a fantasy Broadway."

Mr. Chadman also worked in touring and regional theater productions. He designed choreography for Peter Allen and the Rockettes at Radio City Music Hall and staged two Michael Feinstein shows on Broadway, "Piano and Voice" and "Isn't It Romantic."

He is survived by his parents, Gertrude and Sidney Brown, and a brother, Dr. Harvey Brown, all of Los Angeles.

Daniel R. Cohen

Nov. 24, 1941 - Feb. 6, 1996

Daniel R. Cohen, a resident of San Francisco, passed away on Feb. 6 of an AIDS-related illness. He was a long-time employee of the Animal Company on 24th Street.

Daniel's memory is treasured by many friends and neighbors. He is survived in lifelong endearment by the Clark and Molinari families of San Francisco and Los Angeles.

A memorial will be held Feb. 25 in celebration of Daniel's life, love and many talents, as well as the joy he gave to those around him. For more information, call 415/621-3882. Memorial donations in Daniel's name are welcome, and can be made to the San Francisco AIDS Foundation. ▼

Pat Cool, 48, a New York publishing executive, died of AIDS complications on January 5, at New York Hospital-Cornell Medical Center, according to the New York Times. Cool headed advertising and promotion for the Pocket Books and audio branches of Simon & Shuster. He also did promotions for Dell, Crown, Avon and Holt, Rinehart & Winston. He is credited with Pocket Books's decision to publish original titles, one of which was The Quilt: Stories from the Names Project. He is survived by his companion, Michael Stinchcomb of Liverpool, N.Y., and family. (New York Times) 92

Angel Colon

Angel R. Colon, 41, a resident of Adelphi, Maryland, died Saturday, March 18, 1995 at the Washington Home and Hospice in D.C. of complications associated with AIDS, according to his friend and neighbor, Paul Parent of Adelphi.

Born May 25, 1953 in Chicago, Colon grew up in New York City. He served in the U.S. Army for several years in the early 1970s and was stationed in the United States and Germany. Colon moved to the Washington area in the late 1970s.

Colon spent the bulk of his long career with the federal government in the Information Systems Command at the Pentagon. In 1990, Colon began working at the Federal Aviation Administration in the Human Resources Training and Career Development Office. He retired in December of 1994.

Colon was active in his condominium community in Adelphi, serving for several years as vice president of its association and working on various condominium committees. He enjoyed horticulture, and many trees, bushes, and perennials on the condominium property are the result of his labors, according to Parent.

He was fond of his black cat, Magic, who remained a constant companion during his illness. Colon also crocheted afghans for several of his friends, including Parent.

Colon is survived by his mother, Maria A. Colon of New Haven, Conn.; father, Rafael Colon of Chicago; a brother and five sisters; close friends Ron Baviello of Greenbelt, Md., Rhonda Furmanski, and Hilda Mumaw, both of Adelphi; and many other friends and relatives.

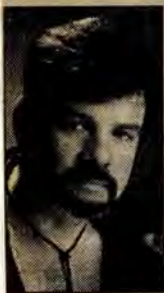

Colon's remains were cremated and his ashes were interred in Connecticut following a funeral mass on March 25.

Curtis Crowell

October 14, 1995

Curtis Crowell made his transition at 8:30 a.m. on Saturday, Oct. 14.

Curtis moved to San Francisco from Dallas in 1982. He and his then life partner, Mike Carnegie, established Lambda Realty on Gough Street, which they operated until 1987. Curtis also worked during this time as an engineering and management consultant.

After Mike's death in 1987, Curtis continued consulting until 1990, when he became too disabled to continue. In 1992, Curtis established the non-profit organization, Lambda Itinerary Ltd. (L.I.L.), which provided travel services to people with AIDS. L.I.L. closed in April 1995 due to lack of funds.

Curtis is survived by his lover, Neal Scott; his daughter, Christina Cherie Crowell; his granddaughter, Elizabeth Diane Trevino; his parents, Charles and Jean Crowell; two brothers, Cliff Crowell and Craig Crowell; and a host of relatives, friends and loved ones.

Curtis' wonderful sense of humor and understanding of the human condition will be missed by all who knew him.

Contributions in memory of Curtis can be made to the AIDS Emergency Fund or Home Care Companions.

Services will be held Saturday, Oct. 21, at 1:30 p.m. at the Gazebo, Davies Medical Center.

Robert Joseph Casetta

September 12, 1956 - April 30, 1995

Robert passed away on Sunday afternoon due to complications from AIDS. He was cared for by his family and friends during his relatively short illness.

Robert leaves literally dozens of friends and acquaintances whose lives were enriched by knowing him. He was active in many political and community organizations during his life and gave thousands of hours volunteering for causes that he supported. Some of the organizations he was associated with were the Art Agnos campaigns, the GGBA, GLAAD, the AIDS Walk-A-Thon and most recently he was on the Board of Directors of the Dolores Street Community Services.

Robert was born in San Mateo, CA. He attended San Francisco Community College, enrolling in their Hotel & Restaurant Management program. He moved to The City in the late 1970's and was immersed in the liberation and party scene that was mushrooming at the time. He worked at Studio West, Drummer magazine and temporary accounting jobs before starting a long career as a staff accountant at American Building Maintenance Industries Company.

Robert loved San Francisco and was a human almanac of San Francisco and Gay history. We will all miss his enthusiasm in telling the stories and adventures from times past. Robert's traveling adventures took him to many places around the globe. Each time he would return with new friendships which he maintained for life. He valued his wide and diverse group of friends bestowing a strong loyalty. Robert was a best friend to many in every sense of the word.

Robert is survived by his parents, Lorenzo & Andree Casetta of Hillsborough; his sister Mireille McKee and her husband Tom and their children Justin & Christin; his brother Daniel and his wife Jeri. He also leaves his feline companions Shaboy & Soleil. Robert's affairs were attended to by his friends Mike ~ Paul, Christopher and Kenn while he was ill.

A gathering to celebrate Robert's life will be held at 2:00 p.m. on Sunday, May 14. Please call 431-0154 (Mike) or 474-1355 (Chris) for details. Save a place for us on the dance floor of life and we'll all meet up before the DJ's last set of mixes. -M.

PHILIP CARLSON

On July 9, 1989, I took my first trip to Fire Island, N.Y., at age 20. I just wanted to see what it was all about. I met Phil as I walked off the ferry; he was selling tickets to a benefit. We had lunch and then dinner, and I fell head over heels (stepping off the boat in pumps is not easy)! We were together about a year and a half.

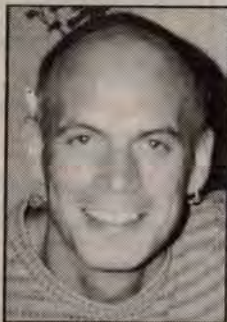

Phil was my first love. When I graduated college, I wanted my independence and ended the relationship. I have always felt a bit of regret for making that decision. We continued to speak every six months or so. I loved him, he taught me that living and loving as a gay man can be wonderful. He took me to my first opera, to the Rainbow Room, to the AIDS Quilt in Washington, D.C. He brought me out.

On November 18, 1993 (we were overdue for a phone call), I was riding home on the subway, stopped at the 14th Street station to make a phone call and found, in the corner of the phone booth, the New York Times obituary page folded over to one obituary. It read, "Philip Allen Carlson, Advertising Executive, 34." It was a horrible way to find out. It was a horrible way to die. I'll always hold Phil very close in my heart. This is my memorial to him.

John Schratwieser, Event Manager, "From All Walks of Life"

Mark Cryts

Mark A. Cryts, 33, a resident of Washington D.C., died Sunday, November 5, 1995, at Bethesda Naval Hospital of complications associated with AIDS, according to his friend, Richard Martineau of Washington.

Cryts was born Aug. 8, 1962 in Inglewood, Calif. After high school, Cryts joined the United States Coast Guard. He also once served as a Presidential Honor Guard.

In 1988, Cryts moved to Washington. Upon his retirement from the Coast Guard, Cryts became a floral designer for a now-defunct company called Bluewillow, according to Martineau.

Cryts is survived by his mother, Mary A. Neal of York Beach, Maine; two brothers, Danny L. Cryts of Dyersburg, Tenn., and Sean T. Neal of York Beach.

According to Martineau, Cryts's mother and aunt hosted a celebration of his life on Nov. 8.

Edward Francis Currid

Edward Francis Currid, 38, the merchandising genius of New Jersey's most recent civil rights legislation, died peacefully June 15 at his Hackensack home from AIDS-related lymphoma, according to Steven Jorgensen, Currid's long-time partner.

Passed in January 1992, the bill amended the New Jersey Law Against Discrimination to include sexual and affectional orientation among its protected classes.

Currid was co-founder and, for many years, treasurer of Visibility In Pride/New Jersey which, in support of the legislation from 1988-1991, sponsored two marches on Trenton. For many years he was also fundraising chair of the Gay Activists Alliance of New Jersey.

"Eddie led VIP-NJ to raise thousands of dollars to create visibility to support passage of the bill," said Connie Gilbert, who with John N. Gish, Jr. co-chaired the Campaign to End Discrimination, a statewide coalition of lesbian, feminist, civic, religious, professional, labor, and civil rights groups established to pass the measure. "VIP-NJ became to action arm of CED, and Eddie was the merchandising genius who financed that action. All those fabulous floats and historic marches boiled down to thousands and thousands of slogan buttons, pride pins, rainbow rings and other assorted items, to say nothing of countless hours of selling at bars, meetings and festivals throughout the tri-state area," she said.

In addition to Jorgensen, who is treasurer of the New Jersey Lesbian and Gay Coalition and its Personal Liberty Fund, Currid is survived by a brother, Eugene, and brother-in-law, Mario Egoavil, of Hackensack; sister Barbara, and brothers John, Ralph and Raymond, all of Kearny; aunts Doris Jelicks of Somerville and Eleanor Kappock of Morris Plains and uncle Rev. Ralph Walter of Greenbrook. Currid was the son of the late John and Helen Walter Currid.

Donald Clemens

May 13, 1964 - Sept. 16, 1995

On the evening of September 16, Donald Clemens, surrounded by family and friends, peacefully succumbed in his valiant battle against the AIDS virus. He slipped away in the home in which he was raised in Vallejo, Calif., with his mother at his side.

Upon graduating from high school in Vallejo, Donald moved to San Francisco, where he worked and played, and received a degree in economics from the University of San Francisco. For many years he worked at the Marriott at Fisherman's Wharf, where he was loved and respected by all. Among his many talents and abilities, he loved to sew and made many beautiful things for his friends and family.

Donald never allowed the disease to define who he was, even when wracked with the pain of its debilitating decline. He was never once ashamed of his condition and was always proud of his identity as a gay man. With his tender expressions of love and his ever present understanding of the sanctity of life, he taught family and friends wisdom and compassion.

Donald is survived by his parents, Ann and Tom Clemens; his four sisters, Donna, Debbie, Carla and Kim; their respective families; and many countless friends. ▼

Thom Carey

Thomas Roy Carey, a resident of Washington, D.C., died Thursday, October 26, 1995 of AIDS-related complications, according to his friend, Sandra Paradis of Greenbelt, Maryland. He was 50.

Carey was born June 1, 1945 in Goldsboro, N.C. According to Paradis, he served for several years in the U.S. Navy where he was stationed in San Diego, Calif. Carey later moved to Boston, Mass. After living there and working as an accountant at Harvard University in Cambridge, Mass., Carey moved to D.C. in the early 1980s to join his longtime friend Douglas E. Paradis. The last job that he held was as an accountant with the World Business Council in Washington.

According to Paradis, Carey enjoyed lifting weights, traveling to the Caribbean, and caring for his automobile.

In addition to Sandra Paradis, Carey 'is survived by relatives in North Carolina. He was predeceased by his friend Douglas Paradis, and his mother, Pauline Gavin-Reid of Goldsboro, N.C.

A memorial service will be held Friday, Dec. 1, at 5:30 p.m., at the Church of the Epiphany, 1317 G St., NW. Carey's remains were cremated, and his remains will be given to a surviving relative.

Contributions in his name may be sent to the Whitman-Walker Clinic, 1407 S St., NW, Washington, DC 20009.

MISS MADISON WRAY/MICHAEL SCOTT CLEM

When I was 20 years old, I met a wonderful person named Madison Wray. She performed in a nightclub called Hojons in Montgomery that I frequented and sometimes worked at. She lilted to Moot tequila with a 7-Up back or sometimes relaxed with a Bacardi and Coke. She was skinny and blond, then a tall, lanky, red-head. She laughed full and deep and had a dark sense of honor.

She was really a man and everyone knew it. But everyone called her Maddy and so I did, too. At her funeral, the program read "Michael," but only the preacher said it out loud. He was Mickey to his family, but introduced herself as Madison, in a dress or not.

I remember her at a Pride March one June and she stood at my side at a rally. She used to wear sunglasses and leopard-skin catsuits. And we would fall off bar stools and pick each other up. She had style, and was crude, and everything in between. She was an artist, an entertainer and a friend.

Everyone loved Maddy for one reason or another. Because she was drunk and loud or friendly or funny. She entertained us on stage with Reba, cartwheels and Muskrat Lover and off stage with antics and jokes, a few fights.

In September 1994, in Maddy's casket, her mother put cigarettes, a lighter, some pot and a little bottle of Cuervo. Well, it's past time for a drink, so everyone raise your glass. This one is for you, Madison. Salute. Thank you for sharing your life with us.

Brian Carneal

Brian Carneal, a longtime resident of Washington D.C., died Friday, October 13, 1995, from AIDS related pneumonia in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, according to his friend, Craig Butkiewicz of Philadelphia. He was 32.

Carneal was born July 31, 1963, in Richmond, Va., where he lived for 18 years. After high school, Carneal moved to Washington, where he became self-employed and gained a taste for antiques and developed a large collection of Nina Hagen memorabilia.

Carneal, who loved animals dearly, had two canine companions; Bandit and Klaus. According to Butkiewicz, Carneal followed up this passion for animals by joining the People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals (PETA), where he served as a member for many years.

In 1990, Carneal moved to Wilmington, Del., where he resided in a DuPont estate and continued to pursue his passion for collecting unusual antiques and music.

Butkiewicz says that Carneal was a fun loving person whose, "Parties were major events with friends from all over the world coming to visit."

Carneal, who spent his final days with friends in Philadelphia, is survived by his lifelong companion, Roy Mason of Arlington, Va.; his mother and father; and a sister and a brother.

A memorial service will be held Sunday, Oct. 22, at 7:30 p.m., at The Ethical Society, 1906 S. Rittenhouse Square, in Philadelphia. In lieu of flowers, contributions may be made to the Brian Carneal Animal Defense Fund at PO Box 558, Arlington, VA 22216.

CARVALHO - Of Back Bay, March 23, 1996, Arthur Jr. aged 41 years of AIDS. Survived by his beloved companion and longtime partner Paul LeClerc Fitzpatrick of Back Bay. His parents Arthur and Mary Carvalho Sr. of Westport MA and many aunts, uncles and cousins in Fall River and New Bedford. A Solemn Requiem Mass will be sung at the Church of the Advent, 30 Brimmer St, Boston on Tuesday March 26, 1996 at 11 a.m. Music by members of the Advent Choir under the direction of Mark Dwyer, Assistant Choir Master. Service of interment in the Bigelow Chapel of Mt. Auburn Cemetery, Cambridge, MA. Burial in the Fitzpatrick Family Crypt. Memorial gifts in Arthur's memory to Chilton House, 65 Chilton St, Cambridge, MA 02138 would be appreciated. Former Director of the Boston Alcohol & Substance Abuse Center of New England Medical Center. Arrangements directed by J.S. Waterman and Sons-Eastman-Waring, 495 Commonwealth Ave, BOSTON, MA.

Scott F. Crofton

In the early morning hours of July 27, 1995 Scott F. Crofton, 39, died after a long and heroic battle against AIDS. In the end Scott was surrounded by family and legions of friends, and when he ultimately passed he was alone with his devoted partner and caregiver, William J. O'Brien.

Mr. Crofton was born and raised in Fall River, MA. He graduated from Durfee High School and Bristol Community College. Scott moved to Boston in 1981 and worked at a variety of jobs. In 1983 he and his longtime friend Jackie Dyos founded Scottscapes, an interior and exterior landscape design and maintenance company. He successfully operated that business until June of 1995, when he was forced to give up the business due to his illness.

A proud member of ACT UP/Boston, Mr. Crofton participated in the production of two videos that were sent to pharmaceutical companies pleading for the early release of experimental, yet promising drugs. One such effort was successful. The early release of 566C80 (Mepron) to treat PCP was due in great part to Scott and the many other committed activists of ACT UP/Boston. Mr. Crofton himself participated in two clinical trials of experimental anti-HIV drugs, as well as three parallel track protocols (providing access to drugs before they are officially and painstakingly approved by the FDA.) His astute observation that there really was no 'standard of care' in the treatment of HIV disease in the early 1990s led to the creation of "The Standard of Care Project" by ACT UP/Boston. This project has since been emulated by other activist groups around the country.

Generous to a fault, Scott's energy, vitality and acerbic wit will be sorely missed by all.

Besides his partner of 10 plus years, Bill O'Brien of Jamaica Plain, Scott leaves his father, Frank L. Crofton of Fall River; two brothers, Eric and his wife Christine, Frank and his wife Cheryl; three sisters, Donna Lynn Read and her husband Dave, Colleen Considine and her husband Gary, and Cindy; plus four nephews and one niece. Scott was preceded in death by his mother, Dolores (Ponte) Crofton and a brother, Paul. He also leaves scores of friends in Boston including the Blazing Salad Family. He wished to thank in particular Pam Proulx of Beth Israel Hospital and Nancy Reinhalter of Boston City Hospital.

Visiting hours were held at J.S. Waterman and Sons on Saturday, July 29, 1995. A funeral mass was celebrated at St. William's Church in Fall River, MA on July 31. As requested, Scott was buried next to his mother in St. Patrick's Cemetery in Fall River. Donations in Scott's memory can be made to Boston City Hospital Clinical AIDS Program, Patient Care Fund, c/o David Gaulin AAC 5, 818 Harrison Avenue, Boston, MA 02118.

JOHN J. CLARKE, JR.

John Jennings Clarke, Jr., would remind you that Clarke was spelled with an "e" on the end if you misspelled his name. John had his own special identity, of which he was very proud, and he only wanted everyone to accept and appreciate him for who he was, as I learned during the 12 years of our relationship.

As time passed, my knowledge of John grew, as did my affection. He had unending loyalty to his friends, a fact well-demonstrated in his friendship with Danny Simmons, whom he helped to care for during Danny's last battle with AIDS. John was there for Danny's mother and sisters also. His needs took a back seat to those of others.

It is sad that John died at 38 in 1992 and was unable to realize some of his dreams, especially his plans to renovate his home and the opportunity to travel. Life was too short for him. John was my handyman, confidant and one of the best friends in the world. There was never a more gentle or kinder person. I miss you greatly, John Jennings Clarke with an "e" on the end.

Michael Collins (Diet Popststitute)

Like Mary Poppins or the Wizard of Oz, Diet Popststitute was too exciting and fun to be real, only he was. If he seemed fantastic it was because his ability to free people from the confines of the conventional bordered on magic. Just to be near him was liberating.

Diet was born Michael Joseph Collins in Catholic, working-class Pittsfield, Mass. He came to San Francisco to reinvent himself and was so spectacularly successful he ended up reinventing San Francisco as well. His playful, queer, campy, militantly avant-garde sensibility manifested itself memorably through The Popststitutes, his performance art/musical group; Klubststitute, his floating cabaret/nightclub dedicated to promoting new talent and social cross-pollination; and Playststitute, his theatrical production company.

Diet was a tireless champion of political engagement, sexual liberation, and self-expression. He will also be remembered for his love of Dinos, smut, Punk and New Wave music, Asian food, basketball, as well as for his amazing fashion sense, generosity, idealism, intelligence, and sharp wit. He is greatly loved and missed by all who knew him. ▼

MICHAEL CHRISTIANSEN

I can remember the first time I met him. In all honesty, I wanted to turn and leave the room. I was not at all prepared for what was to be my first time at coming face to face with the carnage of the disease slowly draining the life of a 26-year-old male named Michael.

I started visiting with Michael at Jerusalem House, where I had become a volunteer. Michael had quite a reputation for being difficult. Translated: Michael was terrified.

I remember one day in particular I began to feel overwhelmed. As I turned to leave Michael's room, I heard a faint voice say, "I love you, darling."

It was on that day that my life changed forever. Michael continually thanked me for being there for him. He couldn't have possibly understood that there was nothing I could have given him that would have compared to the gift that he had given to me.

He taught me that the most important part of caregiving was the first four letters—I cared. And to one scared 26-year-old, that was enough. So this is for Michael, my teacher. "I love you too, darling."

Brenda Edmonds

96 CHARLES CHRISTENSEN, died Jan. 12 at Chicago House Hospice due to complications from AIDS. The author, designer, and stage manager worked on over 200 productions in Chicago and elsewhere in his 25-year career. Memorable Chicago productions included My Name is Alice, The Nerd, Pump Boys and Dinettes, Prelude to a Kiss, Lend Me A Tenor, and Pump Boys and Dinettes. His plays Bones and Alice Rose for But More, a collage of the works of Alice B. Toklas and Gertrude Stein, were produced here. Donations: Biscotto/Miller Fund c/o Season of Concern, 203 N. Wabash, #1700, Chicago, IL 60601.

Gregory Carlisle died March 19 of complications from AIDS in Port Hueneme, Calif. He was 34. Nicknamed "Tura," the San Gabriel Valley native was an associate producer of the television program "Unsolved Mysteries." Carlisle was a Radical Faerie and a member of Act Up/Los Angeles. He is survived by his mother, Marion; father and step-mother, Alan and Cherie; sisters, Debbie and Melinda Spires. 96

Tim Campbell

Timothy M. Campbell, 48, of Rehoboth Beach, Delaware, and formerly of Washington, D.C., died Wednesday, October 4, 1995 of AIDS-related complications, according to his friend, Ward Ellinger of Rehoboth Beach.

Campbell was born in D.C., on Aug. 30, 1947. He attended Catholic University in D.C. and, later, Montgomery County Community College in Maryland where he studied music and conducting. He was also an avid photographer, according to Ellinger.

Campbell worked in the Rehoboth Beach area in bar and restaurant management. He was married to Hester Mowbrey-Clark for seven years while living in the D.C. area. The marriage ended in divorce.

From D.C., Campbell moved to Philadelphia. After living there for about two years, he moved to Rehoboth Beach.

Campbell is also survived by his partner, Allen Jarmon of Rehoboth Beach; two sisters, Elizabeth Woods of Copperas Cove, Texas; Florence Donnan of Albany, Ga.; and brother, Arthur Campbell Jr. of Pennsylvania.

A memorial service and celebration of his life was held Oct. 15 at Epworth United Methodist Church. Family and friends met afterwards at a restaurant, where Campbell's photographs were displayed. His remains were cremated. The ashes will be scattered in the mountains of West Virginia and the Atlantic Ocean.

The family suggests that all contributions be made to the Jeffrey D. Georing Memorial Building Fund, a fund established to build an MCC church and Gay community center, of MCC at PO Box 191, Rehoboth Beach. DE 19971.

COMEAU—Of Cambridge, Aug. 14, 1996, William Justin P., aged 46 yrs. following complications of an AIDS related illness. Lovingly survived by his parents Justin E. and Jean M. (Lanigan) Comeau, W. Yarmouth, MA, 2 brothers Robert J. of Waltham, MA and Paul J. of Arlington, MA, 3 sisters Cheryl Donahue and Diane Comeau, both of Bridgewater, MA and Elaine Arseneault of Arlington, MA, and many nieces, nephews and cousins. He was the long time partner of the late James C. Schurges. A Memorial service of Thanksgiving and Tribute will be held on Sunday, August 18 at 3pm in the Chapel of J. S. Waterman and Sons-Eastman Waring, 495 Commonwealth Avenue (intersection of Beacon at Kenmore MBTA Station), BOSTON. Parking attendants at front entrance to funeral home. Late owner of Justin Hair Design, Cambridge.

Eduardo Paez-Carrillo, at 38; was South End political activist

By James A. Duffy
GLOBE CORRESPONDENT

Eduardo Paez-Carrillo, a Boston community activist who worked on several state and city political campaigns and had hoped to run for public office, died of complications from AIDS in his home in the South End Friday. He was 38.

Born in Venezuela, Mr. Paez-Carrillo graduated from St. Ignacio High School in Caracas. He moved to the United States, attended LaSalle College in Philadelphia, and lived in Denver before settling in Boston in 1983.

When he became politically active in 1990, Mr. Paez-Carrillo acted as precinct captain for the Villa Victoria neighborhood while he worked for Michael Duffy in Duffy's unsuccessful run for the Massachusetts Senate. Duffy now heads the Massachusetts Commission Against Discrimination.

Mr. Paez-Carrillo subsequently worked on the campaigns of Gov. Weld and Lt. Gov. Paul Cellucci, state Sen. Dianne Wilkerson (D-South End), former Councilor at Large Rosaria Salerno, City Council candidate Jose Vincenty and US Senate candidate Mitt Romney, among others.

Mr. Paez-Carrillo served as treasurer of Inquilinos Boricuas en Accion (IBA). He also was president of the board of the Escuela Aguey-bana day-care center at Villa Victoria, and a board member of the Log Cabin Club, an organization of Republican gay and lesbian activists.

Mr. Paez-Carrillo was employed at the state Department of Revenue's Child Support Enforcement division.

Mr. Paez-Carrillo leaves his parents, Jose and Erlinda; three brothers, Gustavo Jose, and Robert; and two sisters, Anita and Isabel.

A funeral Mass will be said tomorrow at 7 p.m. in Cathedral of the Holy Cross in Boston.

BUZ CARR

Buz Carr (1953-1995) was founder of the Atlanta Freedom Marching Band—the nation's largest gay and lesbian band. Buz always said, "Every parade needs a band," and so it came to pass in the winter of 1993. In two years we have grown from five people playing around someone's living room to a massed band and auxiliary group of 70 performing in the 1995 Atlanta Pride parade. His dream of us performing to the nation came true this summer when we performed for the WSB Salute to America Parade on July 4. I am sure he is very proud of us.

He was known and loved by those of us in the band only briefly—his long-standing friends remember him for his parties, the "secret cookbooks," his dream of someday catering and his ability to make any vacation a very memorable experience. In his incarnation as Consuela de BocaChica of the

David Carden

David Carden of Boston died June 11 at the residence of his brother. He was 49.

Although coping with AIDS complications for some years, he remained an avid reader, classical music lover, and active member of the Cavendish (bridge) Club in Brookline. He is survived by his mother, Velma Carden; sister, Lexa Shafer of Norman, Oklahoma; two brothers, Gaines, of Corpus Christi, Texas, and Lance of Jamaica Plain; and by innumerable admiring friends and other relatives.

Donations in David's name can be made to the AIDS Action Committee. A memorial concert will be held Monday, July 29, at 7:30 p.m., in the library at Emmanuel Church, 15 Newbury St., Boston. 76

David Irl Clayton

May 27, 1932 - September 7, 1995

Beloved of Rick and Ross, David died of AIDS related illness. Extraordinarily intelligent, witty and caring he will be sorely missed. Born in Sacramento, the youngest child of Herbert and Ella Clayton, David was valedictorian of his High School class. He majored in History and Russian at UCLA, then graduated from Boalt Hall at U.C. Berkeley. He then entered the U.S. Army and served as counselor to terminally ill soldiers at Walter Reed Army Hospital in Washington, D.C.

David practiced law in Sacramento until 1967 when he became Associate Counsel with the San Francisco Neighborhood Legal Assistance. At that time he and Rick moved their home to San Francisco. His position permitted him to represent the poor and underprivileged. In 1969 he became Chief Counsel for the Natoma Street Office. In 1972 he entered private practice, by forming with Rick and Dale, the law partnership of Stokes, Clayton, and McKenzie.

In his youth, David was very active in Oak Park Methodist Church, and while at UCLA, the Wesley Methodist Student Fellowship. He spent two summers working at a Methodist Church in Kauai. After returning from the Army he was Lay Leader and Chairman of the Board of Trustees at Oak Park Methodist. In San Francisco, Bethany Methodist Church was his spiritual home and he served that church in many positions.

Rooted in his religious heritage was a deep commitment to stewardship and to tithing; both expressing his belief that people to whom life has been more than generous have an obligation to share.

David dedicated a great deal of his personal time and resources to others. He was a very active member in a number of gay organizations—among which he was a founding member of the first gay organization in Sacramento, Association for Responsible Citizenship, a member of the Council of Religion and the Homosexual, as well as being a founding member of the Golden Gate Business Association.

In 1982 he met Ross who became part of his core family, to whom he provided guidance and opportunity—sharing his ideals of education, service, stability, and achievement—and sharing his passions for classical music, literary fiction, travel, theater, and London.

In 1984 David left the practice of law to manage the family businesses. In this capacity he oversaw the formation of the Steamworks Health Education Office, the first privately funded safer-sex education, outreach and support effort of its kind, becoming a national model of business-community partnership in the battle against AIDS.

David served on the board and as president of the board of Theater Rhinoceros. He was a major supporter of the Lesbian and Gay Film Festival. He was a patron of the Museum Society, and supported the California Academy of Sciences, the Museum of Modern Arts, the Symphony, and the Zoological Society.

He gave the money to build the kitchen for The Center (for PWA's) in Oakland. He was a substantial contributor to the gay unit of the new main library.

Throughout his life David was loved, by his brothers and sisters, nieces and nephews, his extended family of friends, his longtime employees and business partners, his caregiver Brian, and Ross and Rick. From this secure position, grounded in true family values, he was able to give generously of himself and his resources. He will be greatly missed.

Services will be held on Saturday, September 16 at 1:00 p.m. at Bethany Methodist Church. Remembrances may be made to the Berkeley Gay Men's Health Collective at the Berkeley Free Clinic.

Ducayne "Duke" Chambers

Dec. 10, 1954 - Nov. 6, 1995

Duke died unexpectedly from AIDS complications at his home on November 6, with his partner in life, Jim Judd, at his side. A native of California, Duke came to San Francisco, where he met Jim 17 years ago. At that time, he worked as an office manager for Tiffany and Company, and for the past 15 years as produce manager for Safeway Inc.

We will all miss Duke's smile, thoughtful nature and cheerful, positive outlook on life. He is survived by his partner, Jim; his mother, Alice Chambers; sisters, Camille Chambers M.D. and Nina Lederman; brothers, Ron Chambers M.D. and George Chambers; and many nieces and nephews. He was preceded in death by his sister, Colleen Chambers, and father, George Chambers M.D.

A private family memorial was held at the Columbarium, and a celebration of life for family and friends was held afterward in Duke and Jim's home.

Donations can be made to the AIDS Memorial Grove/Circle of Friends, 856 Stanyan St., SF, CA 94117.

Duke, you lived with style and died with grace. You were a wonderful role model, and I love you with all my heart and will remember you forever. - Jim ▼

(Robert) Duncan Campbell

Oct. 30, 1948 - Jan. 4, 1996

Duncan was a tower of strength and love. His deep speaking voice and rich, resonant singing voice carried messages of beauty and healing and deeply touched everyone who heard them. He used his musicality to open people's hearts, to bring people together, and to build community. His laugh was natural, deep and spontaneous.

Duncan died of AIDS-related pneumonia. He died peacefully with his lover, Conrad, next to him.

Duncan was a talented landscape designer, performer and writer. Both his many solo concerts and his concerts with the a cappella trio River, Oak and Stone raised thousand of dollars for various AIDS agencies. He also sang with the San Francisco Opera chorus and with the Gay Men's Chorus.

Duncan grew up in Oregon and spent most of his life in the Bay Area. He lived with his lover, Conrad Martel, in Petaluma. The last garden Duncan designed was for the front of their home.

Duncan is survived by Conrad; his mother, Virginia; and brothers, Bruce and Doug. Donations in his memory may be made to Hospice of Petaluma, 415 A St., Petaluma, CA 94952 or Face to Face, 873 Second St., Santa Rosa, CA 95404. ▼

Lab Chimpanzee With AIDS Is Euthanized

ATLANTA, Feb. 18 (AP) — The first laboratory chimpanzee to develop AIDS has been euthanized after medical tests showed that the disease in the chimpanzee was untreatable.

The chimpanzee, which was infected with the AIDS virus in 1985, was put to death on Tuesday, two weeks after a researcher at the Yerkes Primate Research Center at Emory University reported that this was the first such case of AIDS in a laboratory chimpanzee.

Dr. Thomas R. Insel, the center's director, said it was clear that the chimpanzee had reached terminal stages of the disease and was beyond the point of recovery.

Dr. Insel said there was little likelihood that new information would be gained by prolonging the life of the chimpanzee, which was 15 years old and which was named Jerom.

With the exception of humans, chimpanzees are the only animal that can be infected with HIV, the virus that causes AIDS. Previously, it appeared that chimpanzees never got sick from the disease.

The chimpanzee was one of 13 at Yerkes that were inoculated with HIV as part of a research project begun in 1985. It developed clinical signs of AIDS last year.

In Defense of Animals, an animal rights group, said it agreed with the decision to euthanize Jerom. But the group assailed the use of chimpanzees in AIDS research and called for a moratorium on infecting any more chimpanzees with HIV.

Philip Carpenter

Philip L. Carpenter, 50, a longtime resident of Arlington, Virginia, died of AIDS-related complications on Tuesday, February 20, 1996 at his home in Miami Beach, Florida, according to his companion, Steve Sauls of Miami Beach.

Carpenter was born Jan. 4, 1946 in Bowling Green, Ky. He later moved with his family to Washington, D.C. In 1968, he graduated from the University of Virginia in Charlottesville with a bachelor's degree in English literature. While serving as a finance officer in the United States Army, he was stationed in Korea during the Vietnam War.

After he was discharged in 1970, Carpenter returned to Washington and performed briefly with Folger Shakespeare Library's theatre. Later, he began working in real estate and specialized in Northern Virginia property management. For over 15 years, he lived with Sauls in Arlington. According to Sauls, the couple held in their home one of the Washington area's first AIDS fundraisers in 1981.

In 1988, Carpenter moved to South Florida, where he sold hotels and apartment buildings. He was recognized in 1992 by the Miami Beach Development Corporation for the restoration of his historic home, a Mediterranean-style villa.

"He brought a lot of care and detail to his work," said Carolyn Daley, Carpenter's real estate partner from 1988-91.

In addition to Sauls and Daley, Carpenter is survived by his father, Sidney Carpenter, of Bowling Green, Ky.; brother, Rich of Winston-Salem, N.C.; and additional family and friends in the Washington, D.C. and southern Florida areas.

A memorial service will be held Saturday, March 23, at 11:30 a.m., at the Miami Beach Community Church, where his ashes will be interred.

Contributions in his memory may be sent to the Stonewall Community Foundation, 300 Mercer St., Apt. 23J, New York, NY 10003. Proceeds will be used for AIDS research by the Veterans' Administration Regional Medical Center in Miami.

Tony Holland and Tom Campbell

everyone. When I first met him, he was so nice that I was suspicious. No cute white boy could be this nice and be genuine! I was sure there had to be an angle somewhere.

Remarkably enough, not only was there no angle, but in just a few short minutes, he did something few people could do in those days. He somehow reached through the alcohol-induced, lust-driven atmosphere of the bar, and my equally fueled immediate consciousness, and reached a place in me that somehow knew this was "good people." Deserving of much more attention than just a cheap come-on. I knew after a very short while that this was someone I wanted for a friend. A real friend, and that's just what we became.

In a few days he just about bowled me over. We got together and went to a comedy show, mainly because I felt that his spirits needed lifting. You see, I found out that Tom's lover had just died barely two months before we met. That may not sound very tragic to some now, but this was at the beginning of the AIDS crisis. There were no long-term survivors yet, so everybody was pretty much living in abject horror of what was going on.

What floored me was that I realized that the night I met him, he apparently saw in me the vile mood and temperament I was in. He tried to cheer me up and raise my outlook when, quite frankly, what was on his plate was a helluva lot bigger than my crisis of the moment (which I can't even remember).

This is the kind of man Thomas Campbell was. And for that I truly loved him and we'll always miss him.

Oh yes, and one more thing, we became such good friends that we were pretty much inseparable at the time. A lot of my friends started to ask if he was my new "flame."

I suddenly realized that, though we had never become sexual with each other, or even approached the subject, I loved this man more, knew him better, shared more with him and indeed was closer to him than any other man I had ever know. Including lovers.

I wish I could share with him now that some of the things he said to me, I have learned to do, and results have come to pass. My life has gotten much better, and he was perhaps much smarter than we both knew at the time. I'll just have to trust that he knows all this. Sleep well, my friend. 10-17-95

TOM CAMPBELL

The man I would like to pay tribute to was probably one of the most significant gay men that I have ever met.

He came into my life at a time when I was physically, spiritually and emotionally bankrupt. Even though he had his own special pain at the time, he was able to reach through those problems and reach out to me.

You see, we live in a community that's sometimes very cruel and vicious. Quite frankly, it took me a very long time to become equipped to handle those facets of our life. So naturally I spent some time feeling beaten and also becoming jaded at the hands of it all.

Tom Campbell was the consummate West Virginia gentleman. Always with a kind, friendly word for everyone. When I first met him, he was so nice that I was suspicious. No cute white boy could be this nice and be genuine! I was sure there had to be an angle somewhere.

Remarkably enough, not only was there no angle, but in just a few short minutes, he did something few people could do in those days. BRIAN CARROLL

February 21, 1966 —
December 4, 1996

Your energy, joy and kindness, for others, will be a precious legacy and inspiration for us all.

Richard, Ed, Michael, Robert, Terry, Liz, Chris, Joe, Karen and all your friends and family.

Devon Clayton died April 23rd of suicide in Atlanta. He was 34. The nationally known writer and gay editor, who suffered from depression, indicated in a letter that he was HIV negative, and that his friends would find his actions difficult to understand. A native of Pasadena, Calif., he was raised in Houston, and later attended UCLA. After graduation, he held a series of jobs as an editor and sometime journalist. He worked for six years at the Advocate, rising from copy editor to associate editor. At the time of his death, he was editor of the Atlanta-based gay newspaper Southern Voice. Clayton is predeceased by his mother, who also committed suicide. He is survived by his father, Dr. Donald Clayton;

Steven Corbin

Steven Corbin, noted gay black writer and ACT UP member, died August 31 in his native New York City from complications arising from AIDS. He was 41.

Steven was the keynote speaker for the AIDS Action Committee's 4th Annual Bayard Rustin Breakfast in 1993. His evoking speech at that time "challenged us to go beyond the red ribbons." He played a major role in re-shaping people's attitudes and their roles in the fight against AIDS. Steven was living on the west coast two years ago, and was instrumental in getting Clean Needles Now, a program devoted to providing drug users with preventive information about HIV, into South Central Los Angeles. Steven was also a vocal spokesperson in what he perceived to be exclusionary policies in the gay publishing world that kept gay writers from being cultivated.

Steven's first novel, "No Easy Place to Be," was published by Simon and Shuster in 1989 to favorable reviews in the both gay and mainstream press. In this book Steven reviewed the history of the Harlem Renaissance through the relationship of three sisters. In 1993, Steven wrote "Fragments That Remain," the story of an embattled African-American family, and its eldest son's interracial homosexual love affair. His latest novel, "A Hundred Days From Now," which tells the story of two lovers dealing with AIDS, came out just as Corbin was nominated for a Lambda Literary Award in the category of gay male fiction. The book listed as a bestseller in the Washington D.C. area by the Washington Post, and was said by Publisher's Weekly to have "stinging poignancy." "A Hundred Days From Now" was published by Alyson Press in 1994.

William Philip "Wink" Catalini

"Wink" passed away on New Year's Eve. We knew that he would not choose just any old day to leave us. He was born on Mothers' Day, 1947, and lived every day of his life with passion. He loved Gloucester, good food, dancing, music, travel, history, politics, and all things Italian. He was opinionated and stubborn and fought like hell for everything he thought was important. He was a contractor by trade, and a perfectionist at all he built and remodeled. Many of us have beautiful homes and rooms and porches and decks and fences that testify to his skill as an artisan.

When Wink was diagnosed with AIDS in the early eighties, he began to mobilize and to educate literally hundreds of people. His intelligence, his anger, and his drive fueled him, and he threw himself into the fight to stay alive and to care for others with AIDS. He was a founder, former executive director, and board member of the North Shore AIDS Health Project in Gloucester. Many of us owe him a huge debt of gratitude.

Winkie, we're really going to miss you. Thank you for everything your life has brought to us. The party will never be the same.

Rob Callaway

Robert Callaway, 35, of Washington, D.C., died Friday, February 23, 1996 in New Haven, Connecticut, due to AIDS related complications, according to his partner of five years, David Stephens of D.C.

Callaway was born in Pensacola, Fla., on April 14, 1960, and grew up in Pensacola as well as Rhode Island and New Jersey. He graduated from high school in Roswell, Ga., in 1978, and earned an engineering degree from Georgia Institute of Technology in the early 1980s.

Before settling in D.C. in the late 1980s, Callaway worked as an architect in Atlanta, Miami, and Philadelphia. His professional work in D.C. included positions with the firms VVKR, Sasaki Associates, and Ellerbe Beckett, where he completed an interior design project for the 3M Federal Government Affairs Office in D.C., Stephens said.

Callaway had also served as the facilities manager for the Phillips Collection in D.C. and did interior design work for the National Foreign Affairs Training Center.

Friends also benefited from his creative talents, as Callaway often assisted with their home renovations, Stephens said. Callaway also enjoyed gardening and spending time with his dog Killian.

He is also survived by sisters, Lisa Grindstaff of Atlanta and Margo Cundy of Lorton, Va.; and brothers, David Cundy and John Niemela, both of Atlanta, and Steven Cundy of Jacksonville, Fla.

A memorial service will be held Saturday, March 9, time and location to be announced. Memorial donations may be made to the Mental Health and Addiction Treatment Services at Whitman-Walker Clinic, 1407 S St., NW, Washington, DC 20009.

JEAN-PAUL COLLIN (JP)

July 11, 1945 — May 8, 1996

Greatly missed by partner Frank, friends, co-workers and family members. Thank you to the staff and volunteers at Casey House.

"The Greatest gift in Life is to have Loved."

In Memory Of: Janice Johnson Crumartie and Robert Johnson

"I Miss You So"

Though you are not here wherever I go or whatever I do
I see your face in my mind and I miss you so
I miss telling you everything
I miss showing you things
I miss your eyes secretly giving each other confidence
I miss your touch
I miss our excitement together
I miss everything we shared
I don't like missing you
It is a very cold and lonely feeling
I wish that I could be with you right now where the warmth of our love would melt the winter snows
But since I can't be with you right now
I will have to be content just dreaming about when we'll be together again

Raul Cruz Jr.
1950-1996

Raul Cruz died at home on January 23. Cruz was born in Tampa and attended the University of South Florida. He was an art and antique collector and member of Metropolitan Community Church of St. Petersburg. Cruz was the owner of On The Avenue Antiques, also in St. Petersburg.

He is survived by his companion Leif Cain, father Raul Sr., step-mother Euladia, mother Martha Carpenter, step-father Richard Carpenter, brothers David and Edward, and five sisters: Laverne Judy, Diana, Brenda and Scarlet.

Steven H. Cohen

Oct. 12, 1946 - Jan. 15, 1995

Steven H. Cohen, R.N., M.S., born in Brooklyn, N.Y., died of AIDS complications at St. Francis Memorial Hospital in San Francisco. Steven attended Hunter College in N.Y. and earned his bachelor's in 1969. He taught in Spanish Harlem before attending Pace University. There he earned his M.S. in nursing in 1977. Shortly after that, he moved to San Francisco and worked at various hospitals in the area until his medical retirement from St. Francis in August 1992.

Steven is survived by his parents, Ben and Sylvia Cohen of Sunrise, Fla.; his sister, Joyce Scheinman of Las Vegas, Nev.; his brother, Martin Shelby of Largo, Fla.; and his lover of 11 years, Will Patton of Oakland, Calif. He was lovingly cared for by his friends and family at St. Francis. Steven was entombed in Hollywood, Fla. He is greatly missed. ▼

Hal Carter

By Timothy Cwiek
PGN Contributing Writer

Hal Carter, a highly respected AIDS educator and massage therapist, died Dec. 27 from complications due to AIDS. 95

He was 39 and lived in West Philadelphia.

Carter worked as a certified massage therapist for 10 years and had an office in Center City until about a year ago.

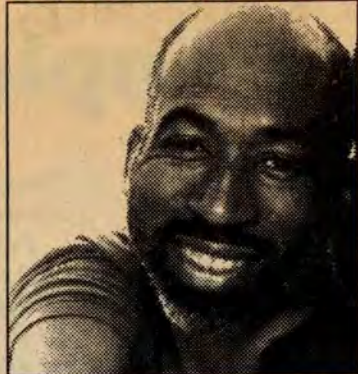

He began a massage-therapy program at We The People and donated his massage services to many PWAs.

"Hal was a phenomenal body worker," said his lover, Kevin Greene. "He was known nationally; we did massages throughout the country. He had a vast number of specialties within the discipline of massage therapy. He had superb skills and good training; his intuition was an asset."

Carter grew up in Paterson, N.J., and graduated from Eastside High School there.

He attended Norfolk State University in Virginia, and worked as a psychiatric social worker in Houston and Atlanta before moving to Philadelphia in 1988.

A few years ago, Greene and Carter formed a joint business, Rootworks.

"Rootworks was a joint venture by both of us to promote a healthier community through a variety of holistic approaches," Greene said. "We focused on the lesbian and gay communities."

Greene said Carter's main legacy was one of accepting others.

"He had a wide range of friends and worked at accepting people just where they're at," Greene said. "But it also was important for him to hold people responsible for their own lives."

Carter worked for several local AIDS agencies. He coordinated the Brother to Brother program at BEBASHI, he coordinated youth programs at Unity, and he directed member services at We The People.

Friends mourned Carter's passing.

"He was clearly one of the most respected black gay men in the community," said David Fair, director of We The People.

"Hal was great," added Roy Hayes, a case manager for the William Craig Foundation.

"After you had a massage from him, you always felt like a new person. He gave of himself unsparingly, and imparted his own strength and hope into the massage."

AIDS activist Arnold Jackson said he co-facilitated a workshop, "Healing Is a Vision," with Carter.

"I have profound love, respect and admiration for Hal," Jackson said. "He turned HIV into something positive and started me on my journey of de-mystifying AIDS. He'll always be someone special."

Pam Ladds, director of Wisdom, said Carter would be missed.

"This is an incredible loss," Ladds said. "Hal was central to the lives of so many persons. There was a real energy that came out of him, it was extremely powerful."

Tyrone Smith of Unity said he never would forget Carter.

"Hal was beautiful, inside and out," Smith said. "He was also a tremendous dancer. Once you interacted with him, it transformed your life. We were blessed to have him as long as we did. We mourn his death, but we must cling to his contributions."

In addition to Greene, Carter is survived by his parents, Audrey Hinton and Lloyd Carter, sisters Tioasha and Rhonda, brother Gary; and son Stacey.

A memorial service will be held at 2 p.m. Jan. 6 at Calvary United Methodist Church, 48th and Baltimore streets. ▼

James Robert Cancellier

Sept. 9, 1949 - Jan. 1, 1996

Jim died in his Arlington, Va. home, as was his wish. The cause of death was AIDS complications.

Jim was a California native, born in Oakland and raised in Eureka. After living in Hawaii, he moved to San Francisco. During the 1970s, as "Bashka," Jim had a successful career as a female impersonator. A protegee of Charles Pierce, he headlined at clubs both here and in Las Vegas. He was also active in the San Francisco Imperial Court.

In 1982, Jim moved to New York, where he began his career as an award-winning interior designer. He was commissioned to do the window treatments at the 21 Club, and his work was featured in several interior design publications. The year 1986 found him in Washington, D.C., where he continued his design work in private homes. A highly spiritual man, he loved both his work and his clients.

Jim is survived by his partner of six years, Jay Harvey; his sister and brother-in-law, Denise and David Jones; and their three children, Josh, Carl and David Jr. His remains were cremated. Memorial contributions may be made to the Whitman Walker Clinic, 1407 S Street NW, Washington, D.C. 20009. ▼

E LewS Carroll

Jan. 24, 1947 - Feb. 13, 1996

E, our beloved son, brother and friend, died peacefully on Feb. 13 after a long and courageous struggle with AIDS.

E was a native of Southern California; he graduated from UCLA in 1969 with a degree in theater arts. He was co-founder of the Gorilla Theater in Isla Vista, UC Santa Barbara in the early 1970s.

E came to San Francisco in 1980 and worked at the Sierra Club, as a waiter in well-known restaurants, and later as a program assistant at UC Berkeley Extension.

E was an actor, writer, artist, an enthusiast at life and living. His gifts brought together the most creative and amazing groups of people. His energy was boundless, his curiosity insatiable, his heart large enough to embrace all people. He excelled at the art of being E. He will be sorely missed.

Those who will always hold E in their hearts include his mother Margaret Carroll; his brothers and sisters, Hugh, Jerome, Greta and Nadine; and a large and diverse "family" of friends. Donations can be made in his name to Visiting Nurses and Hospice of San Francisco, for in-home AIDS care. ▼

Roger Chilton

Roger T. Chilton, a former resident of Washington, D.C., died in New York City on Saturday, February 24, 1996, due to AIDS related complications, according to his good friend, Edgar Christopher Wells of Washington, D.C. He was 51.

Chilton was born in Sydney, Australia on Nov. 13, 1944, where he was raised and educated. He settled in the Dupont Circle area after traveling around the U.S.

Chilton began working at the Australian Embassy in D.C. during the mid-1970s, but later moved to New York City, where he worked briefly at the Australian Chancellery before enrolling at New York University to earn a teaching degree. He taught English in New York City public schools for 10 years.

He is also survived by his wife, Kathleen Chilton, and his close friend Bruce Jericiau, both of New York City. He is also survived by his mother and sister, both of Australia, and numerous friends in Australia and the United States.

"He was a true friend who wasn't afraid to speak his mind and be honest with his feelings," Wells said.

A private celebration of Chilton's life will take place in New York City on Sunday, March 3.

Eric Lee Cook

April 28, 1957 - April 13, 1996

Eric passed on Saturday, April 13, at Mount Zion Hospital, after several years living with AIDS. A strong sense of loss is felt by everyone who loved him.

Growing up in Sacramento, Eric was the oldest of five children. He joined the Navy at 18 and served six years.

After the Navy, Eric moved to San Bruno and met his lover of seven years, Major. They spent their years traveling, exploring and growing together.

Eric had an uncompromising love for adventure, and a determination to work hard and live life to the fullest. He explored many of life's wonders, from hiking the Sierra back country alone, to finding euphoria hang-gliding. He captured the cosmos using his camera and telescope. With the innocence of a child, he opened his heart to his friends and let them all in.

Eric's employer donated $2,500 to AmFAR in his name and will give an annual award in his memory. Eric leaves behind his loving parents, Gerry and Inez; sisters, Denise and Wendy; brothers, Alan and David; and friends, Major, Mark, and Steve, whom he loved and who miss him very much. Send donations to Circle of Friends: 856 Stanyan St., SF, CA 94117.

Jeffery Lee Chung

June 12, 1963 - Feb. 16, 1996

Jeff came to San Francisco about seven years ago from Seattle. His life here had its struggles, but through it all, Jeff's charm and warmth won him loyal friends who stayed with him no matter what. Last fall he was hired by the SF Department of Mental Health as an Asian self-help specialist. His work was recognized as so outstanding that he became one of the leading Asian advocates at the state level for mental health consumers.

Jeff experienced cardiac arrest on Feb. 15 and died 24 hours later at Presbyterian Hospital.

His fellow staff members in the Department of Mental Health as well as the clients he helped will miss Jeff very much. He leaves a large family: his parents, Chang Lai and Kim Te Chung; brothers, Steven and Kee Wah Chung; and sisters, Amy Lynn Blanchard and Judy Lynn Pham. Jeff leaves close friends who were his Bay Area family, including his roommate, Dr. Cameron Thompson; very dear friends, Dennis Brotarlo, Mali Henigman and the Rev. Rob Rhudy; and Roy Crew, his supervisor at DMH.

All of us are grieved by our loss, Jeff, and know your spirit is with God. Until we join you, peace, friend. ▼

Stephen Patrick Cannon "Little Stephen"

Dec. 31, 1957 - Jan. 13, 1996

After a valiant struggle with AIDS, Stephen quietly passed away in the arms of his loving mother, Eva, on the morning of Saturday, Jan. 13. A bartender by profession, Little Stephen's bright, smiling face was a familiar sight in the San Francisco Bay Area, and in Modesto and Stockton, where he worked for several years at popular clubs.

Stephen graduated from Sonora High School in 1976. His interests included singing, camping and living life to the fullest. He is survived by his parents, Bob and Eva; his two sisters, Shelly and Kelly; brother, Larry; niece, Stephanie; nephew, Dillon; and his very special friend, Carol.

At Stephen's request, there will be no memorial service. In lieu of flowers or other remembrances, donations may be made to: Sierra AIDS Council, P.O. Box 1062, Sonora, CA (209/533-2873).

"I'm so glad we had this time together, just to have a laugh and sing a song. Seems we just get started and before you know it, comes the time we have to say so long." So long, little buddy! ▼

Steven Colarusso

A memorial service is planned for March 27 for Steven Colarusso, who passed through this life Jan. 27 after a monumental battle with AIDS. Steven was loved and will be missed by many friends and fellow community members too innumerable to list.

Steven was born and grew up in Boston and attended Boston Latin High School. Through his high school years, he had a love of space, science and public speaking. As early as the fifth grade, Steven was giving presentations to his fellow schoolmates on the solar system.

Steven began to take up and defend liberal causes while attending Williams College in North Adams, MA, and while working on the local college newspaper. Upon graduating in 1981 Steven moved into Boston and entrenched himself in the local Boston political and gay scene. He was employed at Blue Cross/Blue Shield and MetPath Labs. His love of politics and the good fight took him to City Hall and then ultimately to the AIDS Action Committee's education department, where he worked until 1993.

At AIDS Action, he was a founding member and then head of their group, Safe Company (created to promote and provide safe sex information to our community). The group distributed safe sex information through bar interventions and is most remembered for the popular bar game, Safe Connections. Steven spearheaded and directed individuals from all segments of our community, including the Hat Sisters, to create the safe sex video, "Hat Rap." This video rallied all groups in Boston to embrace safer sex. Over the years, Steven worked closely with David Scondras through five political elections and assisted many liberal candidates in obtaining political office. Steven was the proud recipient of the Jeff Barmeyer Award in 1992, given by the Greater Boston Lesbian and Gay Political Alliance to those who are instrumental in the fight against AIDS.

Steven was a voracious reader with a vast collection of books on classics, politics and gay and lesbian literature. He had a love of Provincetown, Thai food, the arts and all music ranging from the symphony, Frank Sinatra, Tony Bennett to anything alternative. Steven will most be remembered for his love and fanaticism of Star Trek and space, and for having the liberalism that defines this community. Steven never gave up in his fight against AIDS and his commitment to this community. He continued to participate in a variety of panel discussions on all topics that affected the gay community, until his passing into the Final Frontier. He will be greatly missed and affectionately remembered.

Steven's memorial service is scheduled for Saturday, March 30 from 1:00-3:00 p.m. at the Church of the Covenant, corner of Berkeley and Newbury streets. Donations will be accepted to fund the service, all proceeds to benefit the Hospice at Mission Hill.

Richard Cromonic

Richard Cromonic, a former editor at the music magazine What's New and later the Portland and Boston-based music magazine Sweet Potato, died in a fire at his Brighton home early in the morning on Jan. 9. He was 40.

Rich, known for his droll sense of humor and his affection for felines, was an occasional free-lance record reviewer for the Boston Globe and the Boston Phoenix.

After drifting away from the music writing business, Rich worked translating text into braille at the Braille Press. Most recently, he did transcripts of documentary television shows for Mercury Manuscripts and Mulberry Studios.

Rich was born in Easton, Pa., and graduated from Penn State with a bachelor's degree in journalism in 1974.

He leaves his parents, William and Helen Cromonic of Bound Brook, NJ.

The funeral was held on January 15 in New Jersey. A memorial concert in his memory is in the planning stages.

Reggie Clemons

Reginald Wayne Clemons, 36, of Washington, D.C., died of AIDS related complications at the Hospice of Washington in Washington, D.C., on Friday, March 22, 1996, according to his close friend, Dave Lawrence, also of D.C.

Clemons was born in Washington, D.C., on Aug. 27, 1959, and was educated in D.C. public schools. From an early age, he showed great promise as a sketch and design artist, and during his years at McKinley Technical Senior High School was one of 13 area students chosen to receive special art training at the Lemuel Penn Center. Clemons later studied art and fashion design at the University of the District of Columbia. He also participated in several Ebony Magazine Fashion Fairs in the D.C. area, and produced his own shows which featured his own original designs.

Clemons was committed to his spiritual beliefs, and in 1993 cofounded the Inner Light Unity Fellowship Church, where he was most recently a deacon-in-training and church delegate. Clemons also attended many AIDS spiritual retreats sponsored by the Episcopal Caring Response to AIDS, and in 1985 cofounded Us Helping Us People Into Living, a holistic health AIDS organization.

Clemons will be remembered for his kindness, honesty, and sense of humor. He enjoyed drawing, dancing, and going to the movies.

In addition to Lawrence, Clemons is survived by his parents, Jacqueline H. and Robert L. Clemons; sister, Phyllis A. Clemons; half-brother, Roderick Clemons; step-brother, Eric Clemons; and niece, Ebony Clemons, all of D.C. Clemons is also survived by his close friend, the Rev. Kwabena Rainey Cheeks of Washington, D.C., and many other relatives and friends.

James "Jay" Anthony Clark, 45, attorney, of AIDS complications May 27 in Sausalito, Calif. Clark helped orchestrate the 1988 passage of a gay rights ordinance in Alexandria, Va. 96

Miguel Soto-Chaves

Miguel A. Soto-Chaves, 42, of Washington, D.C., died Saturday, April 13, 1996, of AIDS-related complications at the Arlington Hospital, according to his life partner, James McKinney Jr. of Arlington, Virginia.

Soto-Chaves was born on May 27, 1953, in Puerto Rico, where he attended the Catholic University and received a degree in accounting. In 1976, he moved to D.C. and worked for several accounting firms. In 1980, he began his 16-year career as a travel agent. McKinney said that even after all that time, Soto-Chaves still loved the excitement of planning a business or pleasure trip for his clients.

Soto-Chaves received many benefits from being a travel agent, McKinney said, and was able to travel the globe, and loved traveling to new places. He was also proud of his background.

"He never let anyone forget his Puerto Rican heritage and culture," McKinney said. "[He was] always listening to Latin music, planning parties, and entertaining guests."

Before he died, Soto-Chaves specified a special thank you to his co-workers at CW Travel, his many clients, and his friends who never left his side through his illness.

In addition to McKinney, he is survived by his father, Miguel Soto-Cuevas of Lares, P.R.; sister, Dorinda Rodriguez of Bucare, P.R.; and five nieces, Dorinda and Marivia of Silver Spring, Md., and Eugenia, Lourdes and Marta, all of Bucare.

Soto-Chaves's remains were sent back to Puerto Rico, where he will be buried next to his mother's grave, who died on Feb. 14, 1996.

Charles Dean Claytor

Charles Dean Claytor, age 40, died of AIDS related illness at his home in Atlanta, July 24, 1996.

Born in Detroit, Michigan, Charlie was naturalized as a Southerner at age nine, when his family moved to Opelika, Ala. In 1983, he moved to Atlanta where he worked in retail jewelry sales.

He was known by his family and friends for his openness, honesty, devotion, good humor and hearty laughter, and his love of music, theatre, his home — and parties.

He is survived by his life partner, Tom Woodward of Atlanta; his parents Helen and Charles Claytor and sister and brother-in-law Sharon and Jerry Rutledge, all of Ardmore, Okla.; and brother and sisters-in-law Paul and Gail Claytor of Arlington Heights, Ill., and David and Linda Claytor of Opelika, Ala., along with many nieces and nephews.

PETER JAMES CORTOPASSI

MAY 27, 1964-MARCH 10, 1996

"If you had me see your Doctor,
If you didn't eat your heart out."

Peter returned to the Universe when his physical being could no longer contain his greater spirit. Peter arrived in San Francisco in 1982 from Woodland, CA (the City of Trees). He loved San Francisco and the City returned his Love, but did not equal it.

A Landscape Designer, True Creative Artist and Lover of Life, he now embraces his Afterlife with the enthusiasm that he lived among us. He will be remembered and missed by all that had the privilege to encounter him. Peter is survived by his loving Parents, three loving older Brothers and all others that are here to remember him.

A Woodland service has been held at his parent's home. A City Celebration will be held this Sunday, March 24th commencing at 4:00, hosted by Molecules, 433 South Van Ness Avenue between 15th and 16th Streets. Call 621-7519 for additional information.

Peter was the most inspirational and challenging individual in my lifetime. Thank you Peter for allowing me to be a friend to you.

Jose Bianco Chirino

Dec. 29, 1951 - May 27, 1996

Sheila (China), as he was best known among all his friends, passed away peacefully at the Peter Claver Community Hospice. He died of AIDS-related complications. Angelita, Jorge and Juan Gonzalez were at his bedside until the end.

A native of Cuba, Jose never lost faith in going back and visiting his family, who he supported after coming to this country by working odd jobs and doing anything he could to send money home. The only son, he received a blow to his dignity when his mother told him to stay in the United States and she would visit him instead.

Jose came to the U.S. in the Mariel exodus and lived in San Jose, Calif., with his sponsors and his friend (and later companion), Jorge Rivera, who he met in a refugee camp.

Sheila will be remembered by his many friends in San Jose and San Francisco, but most of all by his ex-partner, Jorge, who he helped with all his problems throughout the 13 years they knew each other.

Jose asked me to thank all the staff at the hospice for their compassion, good care and emotional support.

Thanks.
China, rest in peace.

Edward Comes

Edward M. Comes, 56, a former resident of Falls Church, Virginia, died Sunday, April 14, 1996 of AIDS-related complications at Kaiser Permanente Medical Center in Fresno, California, according to his partner David Klingensmith, als of Fresno.

Comes was born in Pleasantville, Pa. on March 25, 1940. He attended Clarion State Teacher's College, Clarion, Pa. In the mid 1960s, Comes moved to Washington, D.C. to attend the Lewis Hotel School, now defunct. After completing his training, he returned to Pennsylvania.

In the early 1980s, Comes returned to Washington, where he was employed by several different hotels, including the Madison. In 1982, he served as director of hotel and restaurant management at the ATI Career Institute in Falls Church, where he remained until he moved to Fresno in 1990. Comes managed the furniture department of Macy's department store in Fresno until he retired in 1994.

According to Klingensmith, Comes enjoyed travel — especially to San Francisco and Los Angeles — and entertaining.

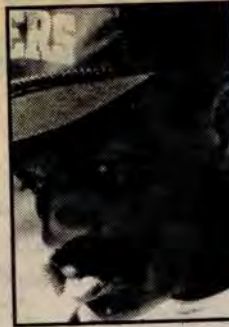

In addition to Klingensmith, Comes is survived by a sister, Donna Rodgers of Titusville, Pa. and several other relatives, as well as many friends in Fresno and the D.C. area.

Memorial services were held April 20 at Fresno's Wesley United Methodist Church. Comes's remains were cremated and his ashes will be scattered.

HANK CARDE, known as "everybody's advocate" among Beltway activists and PWAs, died of AIDS May 12. He was 51. Carde volunteered at AIDS Action, battling the capital's snarled AIDS bureaucracy and working to improve city services for PWAs. "He had the qualities of a prophet," said Frank Miller, an AIDS Action colleague, "a long, flowing beard, intense expression and extraordinary tenacity." Unimpressed by titles, Carde "would take anyone on," Miller said. "He didn't care if it was the mayor or the president—if someone wasn't doing their job and PWAs weren't being protected, that's all that mattered." JF

Will Cooley

Willie Kitchen Jr., 49, died of complications associated with AIDS at his home in Arlington, Virginia, on Friday, June 14, 1996, according to his friend Richard Boesch of Washington, D.C.

Originally from Poulin, Ga., Kitchen was born Jan. 25, 1947 and grew up in Philadelphia, Pa., and Washington, D.C. He was raised by his aunt Charlemagne Cooley, and informally adopted her last name, said Boesch. Friends knew him as Will Cooley.

He worked as an accountant for several businesses in the D.C. area. Most recently he worked as a temporary mail carrier, said Boesch. He also volunteered at the Whitman-Walker Clinics in D.C. and Northern Virginia.

He also enjoyed "collecting and surrounding himself with beauty," said Boesch. Before he died, Boesch said that

Ken "Coral" Cheesebrew

Jan. 19, 1961 - Aug. 8, 1996

Peace finally came to Coral, early Thursday morning, August 8, after a long, slow decline. Appropriately, he left us the morning before the Thursday evening circle of the Radical Faeries, which he had so long been a part of.

Childlike, Coral could be difficult and demanding. But he also was charming, generous and great fun to be around. He was far brighter than he ever gave himself credit for. He loved his turtles, leather and his daddy. When happy, his face glowed and his smile went ear to ear. He was at his happiest when drumming with the faeries, hiking in the woods, dancing a goofy dance to the B-52s or just hanging out at the faerie sanctuary at Wolf Creek, Ore.

Coral's enthusiasm was contagious, and he loved organizing people for parties or outings. He had an extraordinary ability to remember song lyrics and would recite them at the drop of a hat. He lived most of his adult life in San Francisco and Portland, Ore., a city he dearly loved. We'll miss you Kenasaurus; your like we'll not see again.

Kitchen left the following words with friends and family; "Don't quit, don't give up, don't fall by the wayside. Set goals, have dreams, be motivated. Always be willing to help others, ... and try to do all the things that you want to do in life. ... And never forget to pray. Pray for others always."

He was predeceased by his mother, and his former partner Dan Von Wald, who died from AIDS complications in 1992.

In addition to Boesch and his Aunt Charlemagne Cooley, he is survived by his father, Willie Kitchen Sr., of Poulin, Ga.; brother, Jimmy Kitchen of Virginia Beach, Va.; sisters, Bennie Mae Kitchen of Poulin, and Esther Neal of Princess Anne, Md.; and special friends David Miller of D.C.; Katherine Von Wald, Steven Pritchard, both of Germantown, Md.; Gordon Dublin of Arlington, Va.

A memorial service will be held at 1:30 p.m. on Sunday, June 30, at St. Thomas Episcopal Church, 1772 Church Street, NW.

Memorial contributions may be made to the Whitman-Walker Clinic Austin Center, (Attention: Development Department), 1407 S St., NW, Washington, DC 20009.

CHRIS COTHRAN, 41, a long-time Chicago gay activist and gay businessman, died of AIDS-complications Aug. 6.

Cothran, inducted into the Chicago Gay and Lesbian Hall of Fame last year, participated in a BLACKLINES Roundtable earlier this year, discussing his long involvement working for lesbian rights.

Most recently, Cothran wrote for NIGHTLINES as "Peter Pica," a video reviewer, and worked on growing his company, T-Square Graphics. He was also a long-time member of Chicago's Gay and Lesbian Pride Committee, and served on the Mayor's advisory council on lesbian issues from 1985-1992.

From 1980-1983, Cothran was director of the Chicago chapter of the National Coalition of Black Lesbians and Gays, and from 1982-84 he edited HABARI-DAFTARI, the coalition's national newsmagazine. He was also an NCBLG officer '82-84 (including treasurer and chairperson).

In Chicago, he was co-founder of the Gay and Lesbian Caucus of the Independent Voters of Illinois-Independent Precinct Organization (IVI-IPO).

As a business activist, he was treasurer of Chicago's Metropolitan Business Association (a gay group) 1985-86, and was a board member of the National Association of Business Councils from 1985-87. He was also a former production staffer for GAYLIFE and WINDY CITY TIMES.

Cothran's proudest achievements were in the sporting arena, and he was especially boastful of bowling a 300 game, and being on Team Chicago's silver-medal bowling team at the Gay Games in Vancouver.

Cothran is survived by many family members and friends, including his caretaker, Larry Walker. Cothran's mother buried him in Atlanta. Memorial services are pending. 96

Joey Clark

Joey Layne Clark, 34, a former resident of the Washington, D.C., area, died Saturday, July 6, 1996, of AIDS-related complications at Padua House, an AIDS hospice and shelter in Long Beach, California, according to his partner of five years, Clifford A. Crittsinger, also of Long Beach.

Clark was born Nov. 13, 1961, in Dallas, Texas. He attended North Garland High School in Garland, Texas, and graduated from Lewisville (Texas) High School. He was also a graduate of the Dallas Fashion and Art Institute.

Clark worked as a disc jockey at several dance clubs in Texas, Florida, and California. While living in the metropolitan D.C. area from 1991-93, he worked as a DJ at Remington's, a Gay bar in southeast D.C.

Clark won first place at the Regional Dallas Billboard Magazine DJ Spinoff Competition. He continued to place in the top five at the national competition, held in New York City.

Crittsinger said Clark was well known as a DJ for his skillful use of scratching, phasing, and overlapping. He also introduced the feat of upside-down reverse spinning, Crittsinger said.

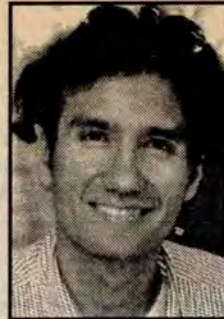

"His many friends will remember him for his warm smile, outgoing demeanor, and uncompromising faith in God," said Crittsinger.

In addition to Crittsinger, Clark is survived by his parents, Jobie D. and Linda J. Broyles of Southmayd, Texas; grandparents, Dick and Ann Carpenter of Garland, Texas; brother, Lonnie Giles of Mesquite, Texas; and sisters, Lisa Cook of Rowlett, Texas; and Julie Morgan of Carrollton, Texas; and many friends.

PAUL CORSER, 37, program officer of the American Foundation for AIDS Research (AmFAR), died of AIDS January 4. In 1991, Corser developed AmFAR's Community-Based Clinical Trials program, which tested AIDS drugs in local health centers. "Paul's intelligence and commitment to ending AIDS was unequalled," said his colleagues in a newspaper obituary. "We will miss his support as we develop the community-based research agenda he helped us build for so many years." Also on the board of New York City's Lower East Side Harm Reduction Center, Corser oversaw AmFAR's grantmaking program. 1999

Jim Castillo

James Rafael Castillo, 36, a resident of Washington, D.C., died Thursday, July 18, 1996, of AIDS-related complications, according to his friend Micheal DiPaula, also of Washington, D.C.

DiPaula said Castillo was visiting family in New York City when he became sick. He died at the Rivington House, a New York AIDS hospice.

Castillo was born June 3, 1960, in Arequipa, Peru. He moved with his family to Freeport, N.Y., in 1963. He received a bachelor's degree in 1984 and a master's degree in 1987, both from Adelphi University in Garden City, N.Y. Castillo moved to Charlottesville, Va., in 1987 to pursue a doctoral degree at the University of Virginia. At the same time, he took a job at the university as a research scientist. He retired from that job in 1994. Castillo was secretary of the University of Virginia's Lesbian and Gay Student Association, and helped found the Charlottesville chapter of Dignity/Integrity, an association of Gay Catholics and Episcopalians. He was a member of St. Paul's Memorial Church in Charlottesville, where he sang in the choir.

In 1994, Castillo moved to D.C., where he was a member of the St. Thomas Episcopal Parish, sang in the choir, and performed with the church's acting troupe, the Doubting Thomas Players.

Castillo enjoyed gardening, music, modern dance, acting, and opera, according to DiPaula. He also enjoyed the outdoors and walking his Labrador retriever, Maxines Own Lucy.

In addition to DiPaula, Castillo is survived by his mother, Dorothy Tenney of Laurens, S.C.; father, Rodolfo Castillo of Freeport, N.Y.; four sisters, Estella Windsor of Kew Gardens, N.Y., Diana Castillo of Brooklyn, N.Y., Carol Castillo of Seatauket, N.Y., and Laurie Crowe of Laurens, S.C.; and other family and friends.

A memorial service will be Saturday, July 27, at 2 p.m., at St. Thomas Episcopal Church, 1772 Church St., NW, Washington, D.C. Castillo's remains were cremated and will be interred at a later date.

Patrick Condry

Patrick Dennis Condry, 39, of Laurel, Maryland, died unexpectedly from a heart attack related to AIDS complications in a nursing home in Hyattsville, Maryland on Monday, June 3, 1996, according to his companion Joe Garvey who was holding Condry when he died.

Condry was born Jan. 16, 1957 in Baltimore, Md., and grew up in Cumberland, Md. He graduated in 1975 from Oldtown High School in Oldtown, Md., where he played football, was active in drama, and won a first place trophy in the school's "Voice of Democracy" public speaking contest.

Condry later attended classes at the University of Virginia in Charlottesville and the University of Maryland at College Park, where he was an enthusiastic football fan who often cheered for both teams on the field, Garvey said. He especially enjoyed watching Redskins games on television, and often turned on the surround-sound volume "full force," Garvey said.

Condry enjoyed traveling, and lived in Wilmington, Del., New York City, and Atlanta, Ga., before settling in Northern Virginia, where he worked as a health care specialist and nurse for several companies and private nursing homes in the area.

Condry was a "fun loving person" who approached ordinary tasks in extraordinary ways, said Garvey, recalling the time Condry watered his garden by dancing among the plants with a round sprinkler on his head.

Condry also had a knack for home repair and fixing electronic devices. Garvey said he could also "turn simple salads and fresh vegetables into culinary delights." He wound down on Saturday's at Hugo's Sports bar in Arlington, where he often lunched with Garvey and sipped his trademark Smirnoff vodka cocktails, said Garvey.

A memorial service was held June 8 in Cumberland, Md. Condry's remains were cremated and buried in St. Mary's Cemetery in Cumberland next to his brother Martin Condry, who died from AIDS complications in 1993.

Condry was predeceased by his mother and father, Eleanor and Leo Condry, and partner of 18 years David Lester Dunn, who died from AIDS complications in 1992.

Riley Campbell, co-owner of Nob Hill, dies at age 36

Nob Hill co-owner Riley L. Campbell, 36, of Washington, D.C., died on Thursday, July 18, 1996, at the Hyattsville Manor Nursing Home of complications associated with AIDS, according to his partner, Ed Amos.

A well-known organizer in the black Gay community, Campbell was co-owner of Nob Hill Restaurant and Bar and was event coordinator for the Fourth Annual Black Lesbian and Gay Pride celebration in 1994.

Born in Oxford, Miss., on February 3, 1960, Campbell grew up on a farm with eight older siblings.

After high school, he pursued his childhood dream of becoming a broadcast news anchor. In 1982, he graduated with a degree in broadcast journalism from the University* of Mississippi and worked as an assignment editor for WPTV-NEWS in West Palm Beach, Fla.

Riley Campbell

He moved to D.C. in 1985 to "make his mark," said Amos. While in D.C., Campbell founded R.C. Communications Inc., a marketing and telecommunications company, and later formed Reliable Answering Service, a company that operated until 1995.

In a column he wrote for the Washington Blade in 1994, Campbell said he promised to give himself 10 years in D.C. before moving on to another region. Reflecting back, he said, "Washington has been good to me and I have no regrets about my time here."

Campbell wrote that there were three "events" in his life for which he was proudest: his 10-year relationship with Amos, purchasing Nob Hill with three business partners in 1992, and coordinating Black Lesbian and Gay Pride Day in 1994.

According to a 1992 Blade profile on Campbell, Nob Hill was the first Gay bar Campbell had ever stepped into, and one of few in D.C. with a predominantly black clientele.

"Riley painstakingly labored to make the bar an integral part of the black Gay and Lesbian community," said Amos, who added that Campbell delighted in researching the bar's 40-year history. Hanging on its walls are historical documents and photos of Nob Hill which Campbell collected over the years. Nob Hill, according to previous Blade stories, is the oldest black Gay nightclub in the country.

Serving the local black Gay community became increasingly important to Campbell. Under his direction, the 1994 Black Pride celebration attracted 7,000 people, one of its largest crowds ever.

Although Campbell didn't consider himself a particularly political person, he never missed an election. People who aren't involved with politics at all levels, Campbell once said, "lose the right to complain."

Campbell was also an avid reader and founded the Washington Black Literary Society, a reading and discussion group for black Gay men, with his late friends Milton Bonds and Eddie Bowie.

"When the 10 years I gave myself in Washington are up," he wrote in his 1994 Blade column, "I hope to be remembered as a member of the community who became involved."

Campbell was predeceased by his parents, Alton and Calvin Campbell. In addition to Amos, Campbell is survived by special friends Patricia Willingham and Eric Wiggins; three sisters, Ruby Weathers of Jackson, Miss., Everlee Peyton of Slidell, La., and Lavern Ivy of Oxford, Miss.; four brothers, Booker T. and Joe L., both of Milwaukee, Wis., and Richard and Gerald, both of Oxford, Miss.; and many other relatives and friends.

A memorial celebration will be held at 1 p.m. on Saturday, July 27, at the First Congregational Church of Christ, 10th and G streets, NW. His remains will be interred at his favorite location near a catfish pond near the family's farm in Oxford, Miss., said Amos.

Contributions in his name may be made to IMPACT-DC, 300 Eye Street, NE, Suite 2, Washington, DC, 20002.

ANTHONY CASTIGLIONE, 41, a chef and San Francisco resident, died of AIDS February 20. According to Castiglione's partner, Tim Powers, in 1995 Castiglione left behind a history "filled with drugs and regrets" and moved to California where he began "successfully cramming for life's final exam." Although he was a chef at San Francisco's upscale market, Mollie Stone, "Tony's most impressive work was on himself," Powers said. "In just a few short years he picked himself up, brushed himself off and grew to be a good, decent man who found peace before he died." 99

LADY CATIRIA, 39, a Puerto Rican drag performer with a famous collection of gowns, died of AIDS May 3. Highlights of Catiria's 20-year career included running a nightclub and appearing in the Hollywood drag epic To Wong Foo... In 1996, Catiria won the Miss Continental crown—"like Miss Universe for drag queens and transsexuals," she told POZ in her June 1999 profile, "Queen of Hearts." During the last performance of her 1996 reign, a wasting Catiria went public about her HIV status, both to silence gossips and to educate people about the virus. At a tribute performance in February, which Catiria was too ill to attend, fellow drag queens performed the Lady's star turns to a tear-streaked ovation. 99

Winston H. Cox, 55, Dies; Former Chief of Showtime

By DIANA B. HENRIQUES

Winston H. Cox, the former chairman and chief executive of Showtime Network and an outspoken critic of gratuitous violence on television, died on Saturday after collapsing at a Manhattan health club. He was 55.

The cause was a heart attack, said Jay Larkin, a senior vice president of Showtime, a division of Viacom.

Mr. Cox, known as Tony, resigned from Viacom in early 1995, after a corporate reorganization. Recently, he had become chief executive of Cybersmith, a chain of computer-equipped cafes in Cambridge, Mass. He also owned the San Jose Giants, a class-A minor league baseball team in the California League.

While at Showtime, Mr. Cox helped initiate the "Voices Against Violence" campaign, the cable television industry's effort to curb the level of violence in its programs in the face of threatened Federal legislation. He also served on the advisory board of the John A. Reisenbach Foundation, a crime-prevention group set up to honor a television industry executive killed in a shooting in New York City in 1990.

Mr. Cox, a 1963 graduate of Princeton University, began his media career at Time Inc. in 1965, the same year he earned a master's degree in business administration from the Harvard Business School. In 1976, he joined the Home Box Office Network Group, a division of Time, and in 1982 he became the movie network's executive vice president of operations.

In 1987, he was recruited to take the chairman's post at Showtime, a rival of HBO. Through his relationship with the boxing promoter Don King, Mr. Cox helped secure for Showtime the contract to televise the Mike Tyson prizefights, Mr. Larkin said.

Mr. Cox had received many industry awards, including the prestigious Vanguard Award from the National Cable Television Association. He was also recognized by the National Association of Minorities in Cable for his efforts to increase the representation of women and minorities in the industry, and served on the board of Cable Positive, the cable industry's AIDS action group.

Besides his industry affiliations, Mr. Cox was active in the Central Park Conservancy and in alumni affairs at Princeton.

Mr. Cox was a resident of Manhattan and Nantucket, Mass. He is survived by his wife, Heidi Stamas Cox, of Manhattan; their two young children, Alexandra and Samuel, also of Manhattan, and two adult children from an earlier marriage, Christopher and Elizabeth, also of Manhattan. Survivors also include his moth-

Kelley Combs

June 25, 1946 - August 15, 1996

Kelley died peacefully at home after an eight year battle with lymphoma complicated by HIV. He died in the arms of his spouse, David Kincaid. His community gathered and anointed him and one another with holy oil, light, and love.

One of Kelley's missions was to help people reconcile Christian faith with gay sexuality.

Kelley was the local coordinator and regional V.P. for Evangelicals Concerned, a national group dedicated to integrating spirituality and sexuality. Kelley graduated from the School for Deacons. He was a member of St. Gregory's Episcopal Church, whose new building is being adorned with icons, including Sergius and Bacchus, 4th century Roman soldiers canonized for their love of each other and of Christ.

Kelley was also a gardener, creating an oasis in his backyard in Noe Valley. He recently started a heritage rose garden at the Bishop's Ranch, an Episcopal retreat center. Donations in lieu of flowers are suggested:

1. St. Gregory's Church, Kelley Combs Fund - Icon Project; or
2. Kelley Combs Memorial Rose Garden, at the Bishop's Ranch, 5297 Westside Road, Healdsburg, CA 95448

A funeral and celebration will be held at:
3:00 pm, Saturday, September 7th
at St. Gregory's Episcopal Church

Gerry Crane

Teacher who challenged Michigan school system

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. (AP) — Gerry Crane, who was forced to resign as a music teacher because he was gay, died Jan. 3 from complications of a heart attack. He was 32.

Crane, who began teaching music at Byron Center High School in 1993, quit his job last July after months of unrelenting hostility from the community.

Crane's family declined comment through Saint Mary's Health Services, the Grand Rapids hospital where he died early Jan. 3.

"Mr. Crane's family and loved ones request prayers, support and that their privacy be respected at this time," spokeswoman Micki Benz said in a statement.

Benz said Crane suffered a heart attack Dec. 27 and had been in intensive care all week. She said funeral arrangements were pending.

"We are stunned and saddened by this sudden and unexpected tragedy," Byron Center Education Association President David Prindle said in a release. "He will be missed."

A release put out by Byron Center Public Schools said officials there were saddened to hear of Crane's death.

"Despite the prior public controversy, Mr. Crane's dedication to teaching and to music was unwavering and unquestioned," the release said. "He will be missed by the many friends he made while working in the district."

The campaign against Crane included the threat of dismissal after school board members discovered he "married" his same-sex partner and an explicit video mailed to the parents of his students that showed homosexual acts.

The anti-gay packages mailed last February included a letter signed by 38 people associated with a group called Parents for Traditional Values.

Crane will be remembered by his supporters as an excellent teacher who revived a mediocre music program and produced the school's first musical.

Opponents, however, charged that his sexual orientation set a poor example for teenagers.

Richard Gregory, pastor of Byron Center Bible Church, had said just as news of Crane's homosexuality was spreading through the community in December 1995 that he "made a choice that imperils the morals of our community. The issue is the biblical authority that teaches that homosexuality is immoral."

A woman who answered the phone at the church Jan. 3 said Gregory would have no comment on Crane's death.

Although the school board did not fire Crane, it issued a statement that December, making its stance clear.

"Individuals who espouse homosexuality do not constitute proper role models as teachers for students in this district," the board said in pledging to keep him under scrutiny.

Stung by the criticism, Crane nonetheless pledged to stick around. But by July, he opted to take a severance package and move on.

Crane received support from his students who gave him a standing ovation during a holiday concert on Dec. 7, 1995.

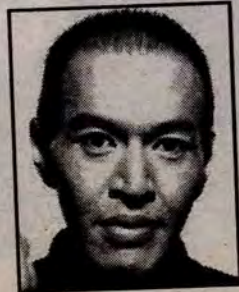

"We want him to know we are 100 percent behind him," senior Joe Pennington said at the time. ▼

PADDY CHEW, a Gay AIDS activist and the only person in the conservative city-state of Singapore to publicly admit he had AIDS, died Aug. 21, 1999, according to Reuters.

"We needed to give AIDS a face; never mind if it is ugly like mine," Chew once joked in an interview with The Flying Inkpot.

The former Singapore Airlines flight attendant revealed that he had AIDS during Singapore's first conference on the disease last December. He campaigned vocally for greater awareness of the disease and tolerance for its victims. The Associated Press reported that before his death, Chew starred in a monologue play in which he told the audience in a candid and conversational way how it felt to have AIDS.

"When I came out, every structure in Singapore society and every home was talking about it," Chew told the

AP. "I want them to talk about it more."

Steven Caputo

Steven Anthony Caputo, 38, of Alexandria, Virginia, died Saturday, December 21, 1996, at Georgetown University Hospital due to complications resulting from AIDS, according to his close friend

David Suchoski of Washington, D.C.

Caputo was born April 1, 1958, in Oak Ridge, Tenn. He graduated from Oak Ridge High School in 1977 and took classes for two years at Roane State Community College, also in Oak Ridge.

He worked as a patrolling officer for the Knox County Sheriff's Department and managed a Pizza Hut restaurant before moving to Washington in the mid-1980s. While living in the Washington area Caputo held managerial positions at several restaurants, including Pizza Hut, Steak and Ale, and Old Country Buffet.

Suchoski said Caputo loved working on improving his single-family home in Alexandria. He recently completed an addition to the house that included an additional bedroom and bath — installing new windows just the week before he died, Suchoski said.

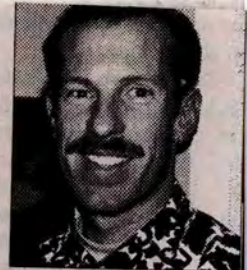

"He'll be missed for his wonderful sense of humor and his eternal optimism," Suchoski said. "He was optimistic about everything, and he didn't let his illness beat him down — he'd always bounce back. And he was always trying to make people laugh."

Caputo is survived by his mother, Mary Jane Walburg of Seymour, Tenn.; father, Anthony Caputo of Knoxville, Tenn.; and sister, Ann Trotter of Houston. He also leaves behind a niece and nephew, many friends, and Zach, his beloved Scottish Terrier.

A memorial service was held Dec. 21 at Demaine's Funeral Home in Alexandria, Va. A funeral Mass was held Dec. 27 at Immaculate Conception Catholic Church in Knoxville, Tenn. His remains were buried at Woodlawn Cemetery in Knoxville, located atop a hill overlooking the Great Smoky Mountains. ▼

Oscar A. Cabral

Oscar A. Cabral, a Back Bay resident for 18 years, died of AIDS-related complications on April 26 at Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center. He was 42.

Oscar was born and raised in El Paso, Texas. After graduating from International Business College of El Paso, Oscar worked for U.S. Steel in Chicago and for the P.B.I. in Washington, D.C. He then began an 18-year career with U.S. Air. His partner of 12 years, Michael Belton, died of AIDS in 1989. He did volunteer work for the Boston Living Center and the Prudential Building's St. Francis Chapel.

Oscar was a special person, with a great sense of humor and a smile or joke for everyone. He was always concerned about others even during his most difficult times. He had a way of lighting up a room and bringing people together wherever he was. Even at the hospital, his room was filled with people and laughter. He will be greatly missed.

He is survived by his loving sister, Lucy Cabral-Aguilar of El Paso, her husband, Rogelio, and two nieces, Michele and Gabriela, and many, many friends.

Services were held on April 30 at the Jesuit Urban Center. The family requests any donations in Oscar's memory be made to the Boston Living Center, 29 Stanhope Street, Boston, MA 02116.

Eric S. Carpenter

Eric Carpenter, 30, of Boston, passed away suddenly April 15 at Beth Israel Hospital.

Eric graduated from Assabet Valley Regional High School in Marlborough and received his BA in sociology from the University of Massachusetts at Boston.

Eric worked extensively in the hotel industry in greater Boston as an accountant, payroll manager and PC specialist for such hotel chains as Sheraton, Hilton and Westin, and later for the Delano Hotel in South Beach, (Miami) Florida. More recently, Eric was particularly proud of his involvement in a relatively new technological field in which he developed and implemented personnel management software for large corporations across the country.

Eric is survived by his beloved uncle, Peter Carpenter; his parents, Scott & Donna Carpenter; his sister, Kathleen; and a legion of loving and devoted friends; as well as his best friend, his pooch, Austi.

A wake for Eric was conducted at J. S. Waterman Funeral Home in Kenmore Square on April 21.

A mass for Eric will be held at St. Cecilia's Church in Boston on Thursday, April 22 at 9 a.m., followed at 10 a.m. by a memorial service to be conducted at J. S. Waterman.

In lieu of flowers, please make donations in Eric's name to the Victory Programs or AIDS Action Committee, both located in Boston.

Vermont Democratic state Chairman David Curtis remembered for fairness

by Ross Snyder
Associated Press Writer

BURLINGTON, Vt. (AP) — Vermont's politically powerful joined with the humble and disadvantaged to celebrate a life dedicated to humility and generosity.

In paying their final respects Aug. 11 to David Curtis, governors and U.S. senators, criminals and crime victims painted a picture of a man who left a legacy of bettering the lives of all those around him.

"It is not a past that is lost," Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., said, stopping midsentence to choke back his emotion for a boyhood friend. "It was a past of accomplishment. It was a past of hope for others, of giving. It was a past of great talent, legal talent, of legacy to his state, his family."

Curtis, chairman of the state Democratic Party and a former state defender general, died Saturday of heart failure complicated by lung cancer and AIDS. He was 61.

Curtis was remembered less for the positions he held than for the causes he championed and the people he served. He also was honored for his own remarkable personal journey, from conservative lawyer with a wife and three children to liberal Democrat, who as a gay man forthrightly and publicly dealt with his AIDS, yet remained dedicated to his children.

"David Curtis left us with a legacy of thoughtfulness, of compassion, of love and commitment," former Gov. Philip Hoff said. "How could we ask for anything more than that?"

Although his constituency early in his career was the world of business, Curtis eventually came to represent the people largely forgotten by society: those accused of a crime, women trying to develop a political voice, gays and lesbians, people with AIDS.

"David was a model of living life generously and fully right up to the end," said close friend Rep. William Lippert, D-Hinesburg. "He accepted collect calls in the middle of the night from convicted murderers who just wanted to talk. ... He would laugh and say, 'He's a really nice guy, actually.'"

Curtis was born in Montpelier, educated at the University of Vermont and Boston College Law School and landed his first law clerk's job alongside another aspiring young attorney who would one day become attorney general and then U.S. senator.

"At that time we were both Republicans and looked forward to being allied friends," Sen. James Jeffords said.

Curtis retained his dedication to the Republican Party for many years, serving in the Vermont House as a Republican from Charlotte. As a young lawyer working in the same Burlington firm as Leahy and then-Gov. Hoff, a Democrat, he was unabashedly conservative.

"He was this avid, off-the-wall, right-wing supporter of Goldwater," Hoff said, drawing laughter. "As unlikely a beginning as it was, over time David and I became the best of friends."

And that was even though Curtis slapped a "Goldwater for president" bumper sticker on Hoff's car above the gubernatorial license plate No. 1.

As time went on, Curtis' politics began to shift as he underwent a personal journey. In 1969, he took on a client challenging Vermont's statutes outlawing abortion, suing then-Chittenden County State's Attorney Patrick Leahy and Attorney General James Jeffords. Curtis beat them both, legalizing abortion in Vermont.

"David's victory was somewhat diminished by the fact that the opposing attorney and his client, Pat Leahy, agreed with the results," Jeffords said, smiling broadly at his welcome defeat 30 years ago.

Eventually, Curtis divorced and moved in 1978 to Tennessee, where he came out as a gay man. He also worked for a time in South Dakota, representing Lakota Indians.

He finally returned to Vermont and served as defender general, overseeing the state's network of attorneys representing poor people accused of crimes.

By that time he was a committed liberal Democrat, but it never stopped him from taking on governors of his adopted party to make sure those accused of crimes had a good lawyer.

He went on to head the American Civil Liberties Union chapter in Vermont and became an advocate for those with AIDS, disclosing that he had the disease himself in congressional testimony.

The pews in the Unitarian Church in Burlington were filled Aug. 11 with many of the people Curtis served and befriended, illustrating his life: governors, senators, lawmakers, three sitting Vermont Supreme Court justices, prosecutors, gays and lesbians, lawyers and advocates for criminals.

The diversity of the crowd itself was a fitting tribute, Leahy said.

"Only David could fill this church with such a spectacle of people, all walks of life." ▼
