

Dr. Hacib Aoun, 36; Championed Rights Of Health Workers

2-16-92

By MIREYA NAVARRO

Dr. Hacib Aoun, a doctor who championed the rights of health-care workers after becoming infected with H.I.V. on the job, died Sunday at his home in Glen Arm, Md. He was 36 years old.

Dr. Aoun died of complications from AIDS, said a friend, Lee Koromvokis.

Dr. Aoun was one of the earliest health-care workers to become infected in the course of his duties. He became infected with H.I.V., the virus that causes AIDS, in 1982 at John Hopkins University Hospital when a test tube with contaminated blood broke in his hand, piercing a thumb. He received an AIDS diagnosis in 1986.

Dr. Aoun sued the hospital, saying hospital officials refused to support him and dismissed him from his hospital job. University officials said they offered him a faculty position and other benefits before he brought his suit. The lawsuit was settled out of court in 1988.

Opposed Mandatory Testing

A cardiologist educated at the University of Costa Rica and Vanderbilt University in Nashville, Dr. Aoun was a chief resident of medicine at the time of the accident. Even as his health faltered, he became a strong voice on behalf of health-care workers, opposing mandatory testing of health care workers for H.I.V. because of likely discrimination against those infected. He also exhorted interns and residents to insure that they had benefits to protect themselves in the event they contracted an illness on the job.

"They ask you to go be on the front lines in medicine, saying you have a moral and ethical duty to do it, and you go willingly," he told The New York Times in March 1990. "But if something happens, you are on your own."

In an article published this month in the Annals of Internal Medicine, he said: "Medicine must lead the way in changing society's fears and misconceptions about AIDS. If medical people show little compassion or discriminate against the victims of this illness, why should the rest of society know or do better?"

He is survived by his wife, Dr. Patricia Aoun, of Glen Arm; a daughter, Gabriela; his parents, Orlando and Aura Aoun, and two brothers, Orlando and Juan Carlos, all of Caracas, Venezuela.

JEAN-PAUL ARON, a writer and philosopher who last year became the first public figure in France to announce that he had AIDS, died Aug. 20 of complications related to the disease. He was 61.

Aron, who was openly gay, condemned in numerous broadcast and print interviews what he called a "taboo" associated with AIDS. He wrote critically acclaimed works of sociology and philosophy as well as novels and plays. 1988

Paul Allee, specialist in radiation oncology

Paul E. Allee of Boston, an assistant professor in the department of radiation oncology at Tufts University School of Medicine and staff radiation oncologist at the New England Medical Center Hospital, died Tuesday of complications from AIDS at the Lemuel Shattuck Hospital in Boston. He was 44.

Dr. Allee, formerly of Independence, Mo., received his education at the University of Missouri in Columbia and graduated from the School of Medicine in 1976.

He came to Boston to serve his internship and residency at the Framingham Union Hospital, Boston City Hospital, Massachusetts General Hospital and Tufts-New England Medical Center where, in 1982, he received a Clinical Fellowship in Therapeutic Radiology and a Teaching Fellowship at Tufts University School of Medicine.

His appointment as assistant professor there became effective in October 1989. Dr. Allee also served as a consultant in radiation therapy and staff radiation therapist at Boston's Veterans Administration Medical Center.

Dr. Allee was an active member in several professional organizations including the American College of Radiology, the American Society for Therapeutic Radiology and Oncology, the American Society of Clinical Oncology, the Eastern Cooperative Oncology Group, Massachusetts Radiological Society and the New England Society for Radiation Oncology.

He was also an active volunteer for the AIDS Action Committee in Boston. Last year, Dr. Allee was in Washington, D.C., for the display of the AIDS Quilt where he read aloud the names of several people who had died of AIDS and who had patches in their memory as part of the quilt.

He is survived by his brother, Edward, and sister-in-law, Margaret, both of Missouri; and two nieces.

A memorial service will be held for Dr. Allee at 1 p.m. tomorrow at the Tufts-New England Medical Center Meditation Room.

Arrangements are by J.S. Waterman and Sons Funeral Home, Boston.

Mr. Armistead died of AIDS March 13 in a hospice in Pasadena, where he lived. He was 34.

A native of Los Angeles, Mr. Armistead graduated from the University of California at Santa Cruz and received a master's degree in music at BU in 1987. While a graduate student here, he also gave lessons and recitals.

He was a founding member of the Manet Consort of Annapolis, Md., organist and pianist of the First African Methodist Episcopal Church of Pasadena and a member of the Chamber Singers Choir at Pasadena City College.

He leaves his parents, Charles and Mary Armistead of Pasadena.

Wes Anderson Dies; Art Director Was 39

Wes Anderson, the design director of The Village Voice from 1989 until this year, died on Friday. He was 39 years old.

He died of colon and lymphatic cancer, his doctors said.

Mr. Anderson was born in Fort Wayne, Ind., and attended the School of Visual Arts in New York City. Before graduating he moved to Seattle, where he became a partner in Square Studios, a graphic-design concern. In the early 1980's, he worked for The Seattle Rocket, a weekly newspaper. In 1984 he became a design director for The Seattle Weekly.

Mr. Anderson was hired by The Village Voice in 1985 as deputy art director. He became art director two years later and design director in 1989. The next year he completely redesigned The Voice. He was the design director of the Voice Literary Supplement from 1985 to 1990.

Mr. Anderson received awards from the Society of Publication Designers, the Society of Newspaper Designers and Print magazine. He also designed freelance for arts and political organizations and designed the first books by the comics artist Lynda Barry.

His companion was Sharada Mohammed.

He is survived by his son, Casey Haakenson. A memorial service will be held at 1 P.M. today at Riverside Memorial Chapel.

FAYETTEVILLE — Dr. Charles Adkins, 42, who died of AIDS Nov. 7, contracted disease 9 months ago, not 3 years ago as death certificate says, co-worker and physician's assistant Sidney Wolinsky said. Dr. Arlyn Moeller, who signed certificate, declined comment. 1/91

Paul Abels Dies; Former Pastor Of Gay Village Church Was 54

By BRUCE LAMBERT

The Rev. Paul M. Abels, a former Greenwich Village pastor who was the first openly gay minister with a congregation in a major Christian denomination in America, died on Thursday at his home in Rensselaerville, N.Y. He was 54 years old.

He died of complications from AIDS, said Thomas Hunt, his companion for the past 14 years.

Mr. Abels was the pastor of the Washington Square United Methodist Church from 1973 to 1984. It was known by some as the Peace Church for its opposition to the Vietnam War, and it had a large membership of gay men and women.

Object of Criticism

Controversy arose when he publicly acknowledged his homosexuality in 1977 and began performing "covenant ceremonies" for gay couples who were unable to have legal weddings.

Citing a Biblical passage against homosexuality, critics called for his removal. His bishop urged Mr. Abels to take a leave, but he declined, and a regional Methodist body voted in his favor. The bishop appealed to a national church council, which decided Mr. Abels could retain his congregation.

But the criticism continued, and he retired shortly before a 1984 national church conference voted to bar actively gay men and women from ordination or service as clergy. That is still the policy of the Methodists and most other denominations. Mr. Abels remained a Methodist and became active with Affirmation, a national group of gay and lesbian church members.

After leaving the ministry, he ran Equinox, a nonprofit organization in Albany for runaway teen-agers, battered women, the homeless and drug and alcohol abusers. Since 1989 he worked as a consultant and, with Mr. Hunt as partner, opened Catalpa House, a bed-and-breakfast tourist home in Rensselaerville.

He was a past president of the Rensselaerville Historical Society and Rensselaerville Historic District Association. He was a founder of Provo Muse, a performing arts organization, and the Gay and Lesbian Emergency Fund in New York for victims of anti-gay violence.

Mr. Abels was born in Xenia, Ohio. He graduated from Drew University and its seminary and also earned a master's degree in sacred music from Union Theological Seminary. He was an organist and pianist.

He worked for the National Council of Churches in New York from 1964 to 1969, as a program assistant in music ministry and later as director for the arts. He compiled and edited the "Anthology of Religious Folk Music" and "New Hymns for a New Day," which the council published. Some of his own hymns were included in the books. From 1969 to 1972, he worked in performing arts management. In 1972 and 1973, he was the general administrator of the Westbeth artists' housing center.

He had been married and divorced. He is survived by two sisters, Leola Abels and Alberta Paul, and two brothers, Stanley and Lowell, all of the Cedarville, Ohio, area.

Daryl Allen

Daryl D. Allen died on October 4, 1991 while at the Hospice at Mission Hill.

Daryl, who was born in Cherry Township, Kansas, received his Masters of Science degree in Logistics Management. He achieved the rank of Major in the U.S. Air Force while serving in the Phillipines and Thailand during the Viet Nam war.

He lived in various cities in the U.S. and Canada, including Boston. While in Boston, he lived in the Fenway and then in the South End until moving last year to the Charlestown Navy Yard.

He wrote numerous plays, several of which were produced and staged in California and elsewhere. His latest job was the EDP Coordinator and Computer Network Administrator at the Executive Office of Transportation and Construction for the state of Massachusetts.

Daryl is survived by his mother, Mini Beatrice Allen, eight brothers and sisters, his former wife of 12 years, Janet Allyn, and his lover of nine years, Jonathan Houston.

A service was held on Saturday, November 9 at the Arlington Street Church. Donations may be made to the Hospice at Mission Hill.

ASHLEY—Corlanders, 42, died peacefully in his sleep Oct. 17 after a valiant battle against AIDS. He is survived by parents, Juanetta and Charles of Solon, Ohio and brother La Valle of Los Angeles. 93

Thomas J. Audette

Thomas J. Audette, a former resident of Randolph, Mass., who had also lived in Provincetown during the 1970s before moving to Houston, died in January 1989, of AIDS. He is survived by his companion, Garrison Smith, of Houston; two sons and two daughters, of Randolph; his mother Ann, a sister, Dorothy, and a brother, Richard, all of Boston.

Since 1984, Audette had worked at Houston's Montrose Clinic, which was founded in 1981 by a group of gay professionals as a clinic for sexually transmitted diseases. At the time, Audette was the clinic's only employee, working part-time at first. He soon began working at Montrose full-time, and eventually became its first executive director.

In 1985, because of Audette's efforts, the clinic became the first alternative HIV antibody testing site in Houston, and has to date tested over 25,000 people. During his tenure, Audette saw the clinic expand to the point of outgrowing its first two locations, acquiring a staff of 11 full-time employees, half a dozen part-time employees, and approximately 150 volunteers in the process. In 1988, the clinic served over 12,000 patients.

In honor of Audette's memory, the clinic has decided to operate its sexually transmitted diseases and HIV counseling/testing programs under the name of the Thomas Audette Memorial Clinic. At the time of the dedication, current Executive Director Ralph C. Lasher commented, "Tom put his heart and soul into the Montrose Clinic, and by his leadership greatly expanded its services and enhanced its reputation. It is only fitting that we honor him in this way."

I feel very proud to have known Tom Audette, and feel this information should reach his friends through your publication.

Nestor Almendros, winner of the 1978 Academy Award for cinematography for the film Days of Heaven, died of lymphoma March 4 in New York City. He was 61. 1992

Other films for which Almendros directed cinematography include Kramer vs. Kramer, Sophie's Choice, The Blue Lagoon, Places in the Heart, Still of the Night, and The Last Metro. Almendros also codirected Improper Conduct and Nobody Listened, two films about repression of gay men and other minorities in Cuba.

Dr. Rudolph Almaraz, a Johns Hopkins Hospital surgeon who died of AIDS complications Nov. 16, contracted AIDS when blood from a patient squirted into his eyes and mouth, Baltimore's The Sunday Sun reported. Almaraz's lawyer, Marvin Ellin, said that happened during a 1983 operation at Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center in New York. Officials there say they have no record of the incident. Johns Hopkins is offering free AIDS tests to about 1,800 people operated on by Almaraz. Officials called chances of contracting AIDS in surgery slim.

Robert Brigham Auld

Former landscape architect

Robert Brigham Auld, 46, died of complications due to AIDS, at his home in Provincetown, MA, on Wednesday, August 29, 1990.

Mr. Auld, known as Brigham to his friends, lived in Boston and New York City before moving to Provincetown over two years ago. He summered in Provincetown for over 20 years.

Before retiring from the interior landscape design business, Mr. Auld attracted an illustrious clientele. Virginia Graham, a big client, introduced Lucille Ball and Paulette Goddard to his design work. Actress Susan Hayward was a source of great inspiration to Auld. He ran "Terestria", a rooftop greenhouse in NYC. During the Christmas seasons of 1986 and 1987, he designed and installed all of the holiday decorations at Trump Towers.

In 1989, Mr. Auld was elected President of the Provincetown Positive People with AIDS Coalition, an office he held until his death. His passion for the principles of self-empowerment were widely acclaimed and he was an acknowledged leader of the local response to the AIDS crisis.

Mr. Auld leaves his mother, Gertrude M. Auld; his father, Robert F. Auld; a sister, Geraldine Correia; a brother, Ronald J. Auld; all of Bourne, MA. He also leaves a dear cousin, Ellen Leahy of Boston, and four nieces, two nephews, one grand nephew, and a sister and brother-in-law. Among the many friends he leaves in Provincetown are Jim Rann, Pasquale Natale, Jeffrey Maienza and John Perry Ryan.

Linwood Anderson

Florida resident formerly of Boston

Linwood Anderson, 32 years-old, formerly of Boston, died in his sleep the morning of February 4, 1990, at his home in Coral Gables, Florida. Linnie had wrestled with a multitude of AIDS-related illnesses for several years.

During his Boston residence in the early 1980's, Linnie attended Harvard and Northeastern. He knew the Latin names of hundreds of trees and flowers, adored classical music, and loved travel and adventure. In the summer of 1988, Linnie sojourned at the house in Beachmont where had enjoyed so many parties in days gone by. His private illness became apparent only when he was faced with seeking pentamidine treatment.

Despite his own ailments, Linnie helped care for his friend Robert's grandmother, of whom he was very fond. His scintillating personality, effusive charm, pungent wit, and unerring civility are well-remembered by his friends. He was thoughtful and brave, and he retained his exuberance as long as he possibly could.

As a columnist in Miami, Linnie frequently covered society events and the South Beach arts scene. He also reported on the 1987 March on Washington and the inaugural display of the Quilt.

Linwood is survived by his mother, two brothers, and two sisters, all of Coral Gables; his cousin Juliann of Dorchester; and many Boston friends.

Linwood Anderson

A memorial service will be held at 11:00 a.m. on February 17, 1990, at Union Congregational Church in Winthrop. A reception in Beverly will follow. (For directions telephone Daniel Reid and Robert Ryan at (508) 921-6323.)

We best remember Linnie bundled in sweaters, on the ferry to Provincetown, with a cigarette in one hand and a cocktail in the other, reading a book by Louise Hay. Even as he was failing, he was healing. We'll miss you, Linwood. Be at peace. □

Anthem Against AIDS

The American Foundation for AIDS Research has adopted the song "The Day After That" from "Kiss of the Spider Woman" as an official anthem. Sung by Anthony Crivello during the musical, the song is about political revolution. But Liza Minnelli, when she saw the show, thought that the song was "about a lot more than revolution." "It's about hope, about fighting despair," she said. With the approval of the foundation and the song's authors, John Kander and Fred Ebb, she is recording "The Day After That" for a video to be introduced on Dec. 1, World AIDS Day. The lyrics include these:

And the world that gives us pain
That fills our lives with fear
On the day after that Will disappear
And the war we've fought to win
I promise you we will win
If not tomorrow
Then the day after that

Peter Ansin, 34

20th Century Fox executive

3-20-92
Peter Ansin, an executive with the 20th Century Fox Corporation, died Friday in Los Angeles of AIDS-related lymphoma. He was 34.

Born in Boston, Mr. Ansin attended Lincoln Public Schools and graduated from Concord Academy. He received his bachelor's degree in 1980 from Columbia University and was a 1985 graduate of the Stanford Business School.

Mr. Ansin leaves his partner, Peter Carley of Santa Monica, Calif.; his mother, Mikki Ansin of Cambridge; his father, John Ehrenfeld of Lexington; a sister, Elizabeth Mendez of Los Angeles, and a brother, Thomas Ehrenfeld of Cambridge.

Fighting apathy about AIDS

In this hour of raised awareness about AIDS, I wish to offer the gay community my most sincere thanks for trying to educate us, raise money for AIDS research, and lobby in Congress to make AIDS an issue of national importance.

Thanks for taking care of our sick and dying regardless of their sexual orientation or mode of contraction. Thank you for carrying the load for the rest of us while we hid behind our veils of false security, while we shunned those that reminded us of the horrors of AIDS. Thank you for showing us how a community might band together to fight a disease that is so frightening that most of us had convinced ourselves that it was not ours to fear. On the afternoon of Nov. 7, with the announcement by Magic Johnson, it was very courageously and publicly made ours.

We are indebted to the gay community for having the courage to fight not only this disease, but the apathy of an ignorant society. Our ignorance is rapidly fading. I pray that soon our apathy will, too.

Dear Abby: Is there any reason why an obituary must state that a person has died of AIDS? I notice that it is never stated that a person has died of steroids, yet steroids attack the system in a similar manner by destroying the immune system.

Due to ignorance, many people think AIDS is a venereal disease — which it is not. Please consider the anguish that loved ones must endure when this kind of information appears in the obituary. I can remember when people were just as afraid of cancer. They wouldn't go into the home of one so infected, lest they, too, become infected.

By the way, I do not have AIDS nor am I HIV positive. Thanks, Abby, for letting me have my say.

— Helen in K.C.

Dear Helen: When the cause of death is AIDS, and that fact appears in the obituary, it is very often the wish of the deceased. (It is nothing to be ashamed of; we have lost some of our finest people to AIDS.) However, if the family of the deceased chooses to omit (or disguise) the cause of death, the family will have the last word. Literally.

Larz F. Anderson 2d, a vice president with Baron Capital Inc. and Baron Asset Management, a publicly traded mutual fund, died on Tuesday at his home in New York City. He was 33 years old.

Mr. Anderson died of complications related to AIDS, said William Megevik, his companion of 10 years.

As an executive for eight years with Baron Capital, an institutional brokerage firm, Mr. Anderson analyzed stocks in the communications industry, as well as in the gaming and hotel industries. He served as one of the firm's analysts in its unsuccessful attempt in 1986 at a takeover of Strawberry & Clothier, the Philadelphia-based department store company.

Mr. Anderson, born in Pittsfield, Mass., graduated in 1981 from Princeton University with a degree in architecture, and received his master's degree from the Columbia University Business School.

In addition to Mr. Megevik, he is survived by his parents, Larz and Marylouise of Dallas; two sisters, Catherine, of Chicago and Carey, of Dallas, and a brother, Nicholas, of Dallas.

AGUILAR—Francis Eric, on Feb. 10th, 1994. He was a Minister Counsel to the Guatemalan Mission of the United Nations. Survived by his life companion of fifteen years, Jose A. Barral. In lieu of flowers, donations may be sent to God's Love We Deliver in New York City.

APPEL—like Beloved son of Ann Ehringer and Bud Apfel; loving step-son of Jane Apfel; loving brother of Robert; loving companion of Francesco Mazzitelli. Service 3 PM, Monday at "The Riverside," 76th St and Amsterdam Ave.

ADAMS—Rick D. 34, passed away December 22, 1993 in Austin, Texas. Rick had worked at the Atrium Club in Manhattan. Services will be in Springdale, Arkansas, Sisco Funeral Chapel.

ANACREONTE—Frank. Of 12 Big Trail, Sherman, CT, died Thursday, January 9, 1992, at the age of 41, at Danbury Hospital following AIDS-related complications. Mr. Anacreonte was born on July 28, 1950 in Brooklyn, New York. He is the son of Joseph and Victoria (nee Angotti) Anacreonte of Valley Stream, L.I. He worked in various aspects of the garment business for twenty years, most recently as a menswear designer at Foxcroft Industries, NY, a division of Van Heusen. He was a Manhattan resident and traveled extensively. Mr. Anacreonte is survived by his longtime companion Geoffrey McDermott of Brooklyn, his parents, one brother Anthony Anacreonte of Port Jefferson, N.Y., and one sister Judy Dini of Sayville, N.Y., and their families. Memorial contributions may be made to the American Foundation of AIDS Research, N.Y. For information, the Dignity Cremation Service, Seymour, Connecticut.

Dentist Dies of AIDS, And Florida Town Is Sad, but Uneasy

By PETER APPLEBOME

Special to The New York Times

STUART, Fla., Sept. 7 — An AIDS drama that apparently began with a common dental procedure reached a painful turning point here today with a public appearance in West Palm Beach by a young woman suffering from the disease and the report that the dentist who officials say may have transmitted it to her had died.

Earlier this week, the local newspaper, The Stuart News, printed a long and emotional letter from the dentist, David J. Acer, to his patients. He said Federal health officials believed he transmitted the AIDS virus to a patient, in what would be the only transmission of the disease by a health-care provider.

Although he said he did not believe he had transmitted the disease to his patient, he urged his other patients, for their "peace of mind," to be tested for the disease.

So far about 200 of Dr. Acer's former patients have been tested, and public health officials say they have had a steady stream of worried callers inquiring about the disease. Among his patients were about 370 state judicial and school employees who had dental insurance through Cigna Dental Health Insurance.

But despite his former patients' worries about their health and the stigma of AIDS, several people here said they were struck that the town had showed little outrage or panic over the case.

"A few years back, I might have expected more outrage or anger, as if someone was to blame," said Thomas

Thomas M. Liberti, deputy chief of the AIDS Program for the State of Florida, said there was concern and anxiety but little panic or hysteria on the part of the people who have called seeking information about the disease. He said that reflected the degree to which the public has come to recognize the limited ways in which the disease is transmitted.

"I believe the reaction we're seeing reflects 1990, not 1985," he said. "Five years ago there would have been a lot more panic, more chaos. The level of knowledge about the disease now is pretty high."

But he conceded that the transmission, as reported by the CDC, contradicts most notions of how the disease is transmitted.

Still, if there was no panic locally, there was widespread concern both about personal health and confidentiality — a reflection of how difficult the issues raised in the case are.

revealed that he was gay and had AIDS, died of complications from the disease Jan. 10 in Dayton. He was 53. 1993

Thus, one former patient who had been quoted in the local press refused to let his name be used again. "If he had been your dentist, would you want your name in print associated with AIDS?" he asked.

Frank Brogan, superintendent of the Martin County Schools, said: "We've been dealing with this for four weeks, and we haven't had a single person who wants to talk to the media. People don't want their name associated with AIDS."

Question of Guidelines

The case of Dr. Acer seems certain to renew a debate about what, if any, restrictions, and disclosure requirements should be placed on health-care workers infected with the AIDS virus who perform surgery or other invasive procedures.

At her press conference here today, Ms. Bergalis, who has no outward signs of the disease, said she believed such disclosure should be mandatory.

Current non-binding guidelines say the decision should be made by the health-care worker's doctor or supervisor. There is no requirement or recommendation that the health-care worker notify a patient or vice versa.

She said she was suing Dr. Acer's estate because she wants to protect others from going through what she is now enduring. She said she suffers from nausea and vomiting and is undergoing experimental medical procedures at the University of Miami.

Ms. Bergalis and her family came to the press conference with Dr. Sanford E. Kuvin, a resident of Palm Beach and vice chairman of the board of trustees of the National Foundation for Infectious Diseases in Washington.

Calling Ms. Bergalis' case "the tip of the iceberg," he said, "The patient has the right to know what harm can befall him or her."

The C.D.C. says it is reviewing its guidelines, but most medical officials have balked at mandatory disclosures, saying there is no evidence of danger to patients or health-care workers when proper procedures, like the use of gloves and masks, are followed.

They say a disclosure requirement would ruin the careers and betray the anonymity of health-care workers without providing any verifiable benefits to patients.

"It's important to recognize that it's been over nine years since AIDS has been first reported and this is the first reported, documented case of possible transmission during an invasive procedure," said Dr. James Curran, Director of the HIV/AIDS division of the Centers. "If this occurs, it's very infrequent. This is very important and can't be ignored, but also it doesn't mean we expect a whole barrage of cases just like it."

Issue for Doctors and Patients

The comments of Ms. Bergalis and her mother added a painfully personal element to a puzzling episode here that has left many local residents worried and raised troubling questions about whether doctors or patients who carry the AIDS virus should be forced to disclose it.

The case first became public in July when the Centers for Disease Control, without naming any of the individuals involved, said it had uncovered a case in which the AIDS virus was apparently transmitted by a dentist to his patient during a tooth extraction in 1987.

It said the dentist was wearing gloves and a mask in accordance with C.D.C. guidelines when the procedure was performed.

The agency said there was no certainty the infection took place then, but evidence strongly pointed to it. Tests of the molecular structure of the AIDS viruses from the dentist and patient were very similar, the agency said, strongly suggesting that the cases were linked.

Officials at the agency said they presumed that the dentist's blood had gone directly into the patient's open wound or had somehow contaminated the instruments used in the procedure.

Letter in Newspaper

Last week, after Ms. Bergalis filed a lawsuit against him, Dr. Acer drafted a letter to his former patients telling them about his disease but seeking to reassure them "that it is unlikely you have been infected with the disease from me." After Dr. Acer died, his lawyer had the letter printed in the local paper.

"I am David J. Acer, and I have AIDS," the letter began. "I was formerly a dentist in the Martin County area and if you were my patients, I ask you to please read this letter."

In his letter, Dr. Acer said that he had rigorously followed guidelines set out by the Centers for Disease Control and that he did not believe he transmitted the disease to his patient. But he said he understood that patients could be worried and upset, and he urged them to contact health officials for counseling and possible testing.

"Finally, please try to understand," he concluded. "I am a gentle man, and I would never intentionally expose anyone to this disease. I have cared for people all my life, and to infect anyone with this disease would be contrary to everything I have stood for."

Reactions from former patients reflected both what is known about the disease and the stigma, fear and uncertainty still attached to it.

E. Weber Jr., editor and president of The Stuart News. "Now the reaction is more sadness than outrage, for both the dentist and the patient. I think people understand AIDS better than they once did."

Today Dr. Acer's lawyer, Deborah Sawyer, reported that Dr. Acer, who was 40 years old, died on Monday. And his former patient, 22-year-old Kimberly Bergalis, said at a news conference that she believes all doctors and patients with the disease should be required to disclose the fact before undergoing or initiating any invasive medical procedures. "What we've gone through is an injustice," she said. "If this can be prevented, if new guidelines can be established to prevent this from happening again, then I think that's what needs to be done."

Her mother, Anna, who was also a patient of Dr. Acer was more blunt. "I am very angry at what happened here, and why this thing happened," she said. "I am angry at anyone who knew of this case and didn't do anything to stop it."

Kenny Arkin

Formerly with Boston Gay Men's Chorus

Kenny Arkin, age 35, a longtime resident of Cambridge who in recent years lived in Winston-Salem, NC and Seattle, Washington, died of complications from AIDS in his Seattle home on Sept. 30. His mother and his lover Joe were at his bedside.

Kenny was an artist known for his beautiful voice, skilled piano playing and eloquent prose. In the 1970s, he was active in men's feminist organizations like the Men's Childcare and Walls to Roses collectives. He composed and sang two songs on the album, Walls to Roses. He was a member of the Boston Gay Men's Chorus, Seattle Men's Chorus and other choral societies. Kenny worked for many years as a nurse at Harvard's Stillman Infirmary. He had just completed a program in nurse anesthesiology when he was diagnosed with HIV infection and shortly afterwards with AIDS. In his last three years, he was active in the Seattle gay and lesbian and AIDS communities.

Kenny had a penetrating intelligence and was keenly perceptive about people and social institutions. He was an exemplary care-giver, quick to spot hypocrisy, who strove to give his clients direct, honest and deeply humane treatment. His generosity, warmth, sense of humor, vibrant spirit and loyalty won him many friends wherever he lived. He was a man of great integrity. His death is a profound loss for those blessed with knowing him.

In lieu of flowers, donations in his memory can be made to the group that assisted him most during his illness, the Seattle AIDS Support Group, at 303 17th Ave E, Seattle, WA 98112. 1991

Wilfred Colon Augusto

Harvard Medical Library employee

South End resident Wilfred Colon Augusto, 36, of Boston, died peacefully on Tuesday, Sept. 17, after a long illness at Beth Israel Hospital, surrounded by his loving friends.

A graduate of the State University of New York at Oswego, Wilfred was employed at the Harvard University Medical Library and by Nynex. He also was active with the Latino Health Network.

Diagnosed with AIDS in 1985, Wilfred continued to live his life to its fullest. His great sense of humor and admiration for living allowed Wilfred to deal with the many challenges and the changing circumstances precipitated by AIDS. He enjoyed traveling, especially to his native Puerto Rico, and spending summers in Provincetown as well as dining out.

He is survived by his two companions, Robert L. Reader, and long time friend, Richard J. Moreau, whose care and devotion sustained him through his illness. He also leaves behind many friends who will cherish his memory.

A memorial service was held on Tuesday, Sept. 24 at J.S. Waterman & Sons Funeral Home. Memorial contributions in Wilfred's name may be made to the Hospice at Mission Hill, 20 Parker Hill Avenue, Boston, MA 02120.

Richard Anthony

Contratenero vocalist Richard Anthony Strange, who performed under the name Heartsinger, died January 20 at Trinity Lutheran Hospital in Kansas City, Mo., from complications due to AIDS. He was 50.

Richard was born in Chicago and lived in San Francisco; Portland, Ore.; Asheville, N.C.; and Europe. During the mid-1980s he lived for several years in Fitchburg and in Boston. In 1989 he moved from North Carolina to the Kansas City area, working for three years at the Silent Unity Prayer Room and the Unity School of Christianity.

During his singing career he gave many concerts, including recitals at the Arlington Street Church in Boston, the University of Massachusetts-Amherst, Grace and Holy Trinity Cathedral in Kansas City, and at the Kansas City Renaissance Festival. He performed a "History of Song" program in seven languages, tracing Western vocal music since the Middle Ages. In 1988 he released an album, "Songs of Love and Nature," a selection of gay male poetry put to music by composer Ron Lambe.

A memorial service was conducted at the Unity Temple in Kansas City on Feb. 7. Survivors include a sister, Alexandra Bernard of Chicago; and a brother, Michael Strange of Cincinnati.

A. J. Antoon, who won a Tony award in 1973 for directing the Broadway version of That Championship Season, died of complications from AIDS Jan. 22 in New York City. He was 47. 1992

1992 C.D. Arnold, 49, a San Francisco award-winning playwright whose Dinosaur Trilogy was published in 1981, died Sept. 20 of AIDS complications. Place of death was not reported (Bay Area Reporter)

IN LOVING MEMORY of J. Timothy Atkinson, 1/8/58, passed on 1am, 2/13/93. He was an example to all suffering w/ the AIDS virus in that he never gave up hope that the sun shone through his hair & put that smile on the face of those around him & yet again he has been able to get there first & is in peace in the bosom of Our Lord Jesus Christ. # John A. Avant

John Alfred Avant, former fiction librarian and lecturer at the Main Brooklyn Library on Grand Army Plaza, died on Saturday at his home in Manhattan. He was 48.

The cause was AIDS-related illness, said his companion, David Allen.

Under Mr. Avant's guidance, the library's fiction collection became one of the largest in the country. He led taped monthly book discussions until last year.

He was born in Fleahop, Ala., on Sept. 1, 1945.

In 1968, after graduating from Emory University in Atlanta with a Master's of Library Science, he joined the Brooklyn library in 1968. He was named Fiction Librarian in 1974.

He also wrote for The New Republic; reviewed films and fiction for Gays-week, and was a columnist on pay television for CableVision magazine.

Beauty and the Beast Genius Remembered

Gay Lyricist-Producer Howard Ashman's Work Is Up for Oscars

BY MICHAEL LASSELL

hen the envelopes for the Academy Awards of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences are opened March 30, one name almost certain to be read is that of Howard Ashman, executive producer of Disney's wildly popular Beauty and the Beast and lyricist for an unprecedented three nominated songs in a category of five. But Ashman, who also coproduced and wrote lyrics for Disney's The Little Mermaid and created the book and lyrics for both stage and screen versions of Little Shop of Horrors, won't be in the auditorium to receive an Oscar. AIDS claimed his life in March 1991 at the age of 40.

Composer Alan Menken, however, will be in the audience, not only as nominee for Best Score for Beauty and conominee for the three Beauty songs but also as Ashman's longtime collaborator and friend. Accepting any Ashman awards will be Bill Lauch, the architectural designer who was Ashman's lover of seven years when the writer-director-lyricist died.

"Disney left it up to the family who would accept [an Oscar] for Howard," says Lauch, 36, from the home he built for himself and Ashman and in which Ashman never got to live. "But once I made it clear to everyone that I wanted to do this, Disney and the academy were behind me. As much as I shy away from public attention, I felt it was something I had to do for Howard and for all the gay spouses and widowers who are ignored by society."

"I love to represent Howard and to talk about him," says Ashman's sister, Sarah Gillespie, who collected Ashman's Golden Globe for the song "Beauty and the Beast." "But I understand Bill's wanting and needing to do it. And, most important, I think it would make Howard very happy."

Lauch says he was always treated by Disney with the deference paid to partners of valued employees, but he does not know whether he will be introduced as Ashman's lover or some more general term. "I suppose that's up to the academy," he says, noting that his motivation is personal rather than confrontational. "My purpose is just to be there representing Howard. We made no excuse about our relationship. We were always treated as a couple by Disney, both before Howard got sick and after."

Ashman, whose one unsuccessful stab at Broadway, Smile, won him a Tony nomination for Best Book of a Musical, died eight months before the release of Beauty and the Beast. In fact, this first animated feature to be nominated for Best Picture is dedicated to the man who not only wrote the lyrics and produced the film but whose idea it was to animate the scene-stealing household objects. "Howard had a profound effect," says Beauty producer Don Hahn, "not only on the story but on the animators as well. The fact that three of his songs were nominated is a tribute to his genius."

The story of Beauty and the Beast, the tale of a pure-hearted lass who falls in love with the gentle soul of a hideous and hated creature, is one with particular resonance for gay men and lesbians. "Gay people will always identify with someone who's on the outside, who is feared and misunderstood," says Lauch. "I think Howard saw this as a lovely operetta, but as members of a minority, we respond to being perceived as ugly, as a monster. People are afraid of what they don't understand—that's actually in the lyrics of one of the songs."

Ashman kept contributing to Beauty and the Beast as long as his illness left him strength. One of his last tasks was to listen by telephone from New York to Angela Lansbury's recording session for "Be Our Guest," which, along with the lively "Belle" and the haunting "Beauty and the Beast," is one of the film's nominated songs. By that time, Ashman and Menken had also completed three songs for Aladdin, Disney's next animated release.

"He was the best of our generation," says Menken, who is not gay. "He had an absolutely original voice, was a brilliant lyricist, had a strong set of opinions, and, as a director, he knew how everything was going to look."

"The one thing that sticks with me about Howard," says the soft-spoken Lauch, "was that when Howard believed in you, it instilled this incredible sense of confidence. And when he believed in something, it was contagious. People would rally around him. He gave like no one I ever met. He had this magical quality of seeming to make your life better. He was a mirror in which you saw yourself the way you wanted yourself to be seen."

Peter Allen, Australian singer, dancer, pianist, songwriter; at 48

ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK - Peter Allen, the Australian singer, dancer, songwriter and pianist, who was discovered by Judy Garland and once married to her daughter Liza Minnelli, died yesterday in San Diego. He was 48.

Mr. Allen died of an AIDS-related illness, his personal assistant, Bruce Cudd, said in a statement from New York.

Mr. Allen's last concert appearances were to packed houses in Sydney in January.

Mr. Allen was born in Tenterfield, Australia, where he began singing in pubs at age 5. Miss Garland discovered the act, called Chris and Peter Allen, at the Hong Kong Hilton while she was on a world tour. She was impressed enough to ask the duo to open for her in Miami, Las Vegas and other cities. The duo later broke up and Mr. Allen went on to write songs that became hits for him and for others. He recorded 11 albums.

Among his hits were "I Honestly Love You" for Olivia Newton-John; "Don't Cry Out Loud" for Melissa Manchester; "You and Me (We Wanted It All)" for Frank Sinatra; "Arthur's Theme," for Christopher Cross; and "I'd Rather Leave While I'm in Love" for Rita Coolidge. Mr. Allen received an Academy Award for "Arthur's Theme," which was in the film "Arthur" starring Dudley Moore.

In 1973, during a cabaret revival in New York, Mr. Allen became the toast of Reno Sweeney, the most influential cabaret at that time.

But he shone in big concerts, with lots of production numbers, in which he was on stage nonstop, appearing tireless. He played many concerts at Radio City Music Hall, in his debut there becoming the first performer to join the Rockettes' chorus line.

On Broadway, Mr. Allen had a long run in his autobiographical show, "Up in One - More Than a Concert." In 1988, he wrote music and lyrics for a Broadway show, "Legs Diamond," and played the title role. Critics panned it and the show had a short run. His Broadway debut had been in 1970 in "Soon," with Richard Gere and Nell Carter.

Mr. Allen leaves his mother,

PETER ALLEN

Marion; a sister, Lynne; and a niece, Bryden, all of Sydney.

The funeral will be private. A memorial service is being planned.

David Henry Amell

Sept. 18, 1953 - March 27, 1993

The morning of March 27, David lost his battle with AIDS, ending a long stay at Davies Hospital. David was born in Cobleskill, N.Y. and attended Albany State, earning a B.S. in mathematics. After teaching math and swimming in Richmondville, N.Y., for several years, he moved to San Francisco and began his career with Hibernia Bank. He later became a technical writer with Federal Home Loan Bank, until his retirement was necessary in June, 1992.

David's greatest enjoyment came from his involvement with synchronized swimming. As a coach for the S.F. Merionettes he helped lead his team to national competition. A Senior National Judge and Grand Masters Champion, David won the recognition of his peers.

With his passing, David has left Gary, his lover of ten years; dear friends Patrick and Diane, always to be grateful for his love, caring, and most of all his exuberant smile.

His parents, Mary and Clifford Amell; sisters Katherine and Susan; brothers Fred, Steven, and James gave him great comfort by travelling to his side in his final days. Their presence helped ease David's transition to eternity.

Donations in David's memory may be made to any AIDS organization involved with AIDS education. An informal open house will be held on Sunday, April 18th. Call Gary 621-1998 for information. ▼

ANDREW LAWRENCE AVALOS

Andy Avalos, 37, died of AIDS complications on Dec. 20, 1992 at Chris Brownlie Hospice in Los Angeles, and a memorial service was held there Jan. 9. Disposition of his ashes is pending. He is survived by his companion of 11 years in West Hollywood; father Elias Avalos, mother Olga Valdez and brother Steven Avalos, all in Los Angeles. Donations in his memory to Pacific Care for Counseling, 941 S. Genesee Ave., Los Angeles, CA 90036 would be appreciated.

Born in Ajo, Ariz., Avalos' family moved to Southern California when he was a child. Raised in the San Fernando Valley, he graduated from John H. Francis Polytechnic High School in Sun Valley in 1973 and earned a bachelor's degree in journalism at California State University in Hayward. Returning to Los Angeles, he was employed by Fox Broadcasting Co., KTTV and KTLA television stations before joining the Los Angeles Times in Feb., 1990, first as a copy messenger, then wire room staffer in the editorial dept.

During the evenings, Avalos returned to school to study for a teaching credential, hoping to change careers and instruct primary school students. Although he received the credential, by that time his health had declined and he was unable to pursue this goal.

A member of the Southern California chapter of the National Lesbian & Gay Journalists Association, in his leisure time Avalos wrote short stories and poetry, was an accomplished chef and hosted dinner parties in his home, and often met friends on Friday nights for dinner at their favorite Mexican restaurant. He also loved travelling and had been to Mexico, Asia and Europe.

One of the joys in his life was his little dog Tuffy, who sometimes accompanied him to NLGJA meetings and, after hospitalizations and during his final stay at Brownlie, was sneaked in by friends so the devoted canine could lavish affection and support on his much-loved human.

Steven Joel Adkisson

June 19, 1949 - Feb. 5, 1993

Steve was our friend. He left us and the city he loved on February 5 at 5:15 p.m. Steve was born in Florida and made San Francisco his home in 1974.

Steve passed away quietly, in his sleep with his friends and sisters at his side. He died of AIDS-related complications.

Steve, you are our star, shine brightly love, so we can follow in your light. We will miss you until we are together again.

Dear sweet prince, sleep well. I pray we all will learn to live as you did, filled with hope, truth, love and courage.

Steve is survived by his numerous family members in Florida, and his many friends, including Art Corrente (415) 431-0482 of San Francisco and Shawn Wilcox of Benton, Ohio (216) 674-1675.

Donations may be made in Steve's name to the AIDS charity of your choice. ▼

Kenneth Ahlstrom

Ken passed away on the morning of March 1, 1993 after a long illness. Until he became too ill to work, Ken was the manager of the Russian River Resort in Guerneville, and took great pride in being the River's answer to Leon Helmsley! Before becoming manager he terrorized the resort for several seasons - both the guests and the owners - as the "Waitress from Hell!" We will always remember him for what he was: high-energy and fun-loving, always "on," and someone with the most wonderful and outrageous sense of humor. If anything was going on, Ken was either in the middle of it, or the cause of it! He was a good friend and we will miss him a lot.

For Ken and those who have endured as he did:

"And God shall wipe away their tears. There will be no more sadness, no suffering, and no pain. And what once was, will be gone forever."

ARRIDENT - Keith, aka Coleman Jones, Age 38. Died September 9th, after many years of struggling with AIDS. Keith was a longtime volunteer with the PWA Coalition, PWA Health Group, Community Research Initiative, Act Up, GMSMA and GMHC. He was on the Coordinating and Health Committees of PONY, participated in the making of safe sex films and worked with the clean needle exchange program. Survived by his father, Coleman Jones and his sister Janice Jones, both of Florida. Memorial service will be held on November 1, 2-5 p.m. at The Gay Community Service Center, 208 West 13 Street, NYC. In memory of Keith, contributions may be made to the American Foundation for AIDS Research, 733 Third Avenue, New York, N.Y. 10017. 92

ALPERT Entered into rest Feb 10. Michael of Sharon. Beloved husband of Barbara (Feil). Dear son of Joseph and the late Gloria (Rosen). Devoted father of Clifford and Rachael. John Allen Anderson

July 23, 1952 — April 12, 1993

John Allen Anderson passed away at home in San Diego in the arms of his lover, from lymphoma complications.

He is survived by his lover of seven and a half years, Don Dawson; daughter Julie; grandson Cory DeLorne; son Troy Anderson; mother Beatrice Kannegaard; brother Randy and four sisters: Dawn, Peggy, Linda and Goldie; and many nieces and nephews.

John, a County resident for seven years, graduated from high school in Minnesota, and was a self-employed furniture designer and craftsman. He was an expert at leather crafting as well as a painter of private homes.

John was an outspoken individual who believed that feelings should always be honest and open rather than concealed.

"One early July morning in 1991, John and I were talking and just enjoying the view of the beach and the sounds of the waves from a point just above the beach when we noticed an object that seemed to be moving just at the water's edge. At that time of the morning there were no other people in the area. At second glance the object appeared more clearly to be a young dolphin. Without hesitation we ran down to the distressed dolphin and began to splash water on it to keep it moist. Neither one of us had any type of previous experience in situations such as this, but our natural instinct was to return it to the ocean. I grabbed the tail and John helped me by pushing the dolphin gently from the front. The dolphin's mother or mate was now leaping over the waves toward us. We stood and watched as they swam away together.

"We were both so overwhelmed by emotion that we cried together in happiness. This side of John was unlike anything most people who knew him would ever have seen," said Dawson

Robert C. Alexander

June 6, 1950 - May 31, 1993

Eternally 86'd from the International House of Pancakes for laughing uncontrollably in 1967, I learned the first of many immutable sacred laws:

(1) NEVER do mescaline at the International House of Pancakes. In '67, the waitresses were all gussied up as Belgian chambermaid with plastic dirndls and I could not handle it at all.

(2) Truth is a gift of community. My show-off ego wanted to chain myself to the door of the Cauldron when they tried to close the baths but by listening to the singing, drumming and trancing of the Radical Faeries around me, I was able to drown out the "should" voices of my mind, and discovered my individual, truthful desire to merely march on City Hall in a bath towel. Best thing I've ever done

The people I have passionately loved include Curtis W. Colby III Heather "Moon-peach" Graham, St. John Maher, Jim Lavendier, George Downie, Dennis Altman, Jere David Liner, Etienne Hafs, John Crandall Dunlap, and several thousand others of SF's gayest. O what ecstasy I have known in the bearded embrace of my brothers

Joseph Abaldo, 47, a founder of the New Repertory Company and Abaldo/Richin Casting, who starred for over two years on Broadway in The Magic Show, died Dec. 4 in New York City of AIDS complications. His partner was Michael Kelly Boone

AMBROSINI Michael Edward, of Boston, Tues., Aug. 10, 1993, in Boston, age 38. Son of Claire (Ayube) and Vincent D. Ambrosini of Boston. Brother of Vincent T. Ambrosini of Boston, Thomas Terwilliger and wife of Pauline of Quincy, and the late William Vincent Ambrosini. Uncle of Caitlin Terwilliger of Quincy. Also survived by many relatives and friends. A Memorial Mass will be held at the Holy Cross, 1400 Washington St., Boston. Relatives and friends are respectfully invited to attend. In lieu of flowers, donations in Michael's memory may be made to the Fenway Community Health Center, 7 Haverland St., Boston, MA 02115. Arrangements by the J.S. Waterman & Sons and Eastman-Waring Funeral Home.

Arthur Ashe, the only black man to win Wimbledon, the United States and Australian Opens and a longtime human-rights activist, died yesterday. He was 49.

A New York Hospital administrator, Judith Lilavois, said Ashe died at 3:13 P.M. of pneumonia, a complication of AIDS. 2/6/93

"An additional statement will come from his family and the hospital tomorrow," she said.

Militant in his convictions but mild in his manner, this slim, bookish and bespectacled athlete never thought himself a rebel and preferred information to insurrection.

Since he believed his singular success carried inherent responsibilities, Ashe, during his decade-long professional tennis career and beyond it, dedicated himself to dismantling the barriers of poverty, privilege, racism and social stereotyping. Even the fact of his own mortality became a cause célèbre, and Ashe, in the headlines again, conducted his final campaign against the ravages of AIDS.

Ashe, who believed he contracted H.I.V., the virus that causes AIDS, through a transfusion of tainted blood during his second round of heart-bypass surgery in 1983, first learned of his infection after he entered New York Hospital for emergency brain surgery in September, 1988. He was hospitalized after he suffered paralysis of his right arm, the one that served up 26 aces the day he became the 1968 U.S. Open champion. The surgery and a subsequent biopsy revealed the presence of toxoplasmosis, a parasitic infection linked to AIDS.

Ashe chose not to publicize his condition, preferring to protect his family's privacy and being well aware of the inevitable demands such a disclosure would place on a man of his celebrity.

He did not disclose his condition until April 8, 1992, and then only after being apprised that USA Today a national daily newspaper intended to publish an announcement of his illness as soon as it could confirm it.

"I have good days and bad days," said Ashe at the time. "My ratio of good days to bad days is about six to one. I don't think anybody in my stage of this would be able to go through with no bad days. But I didn't want to go public now because I am not sick." Sick, in Ashe's terminology, meant being bedridden and nonfunctional: as an avid golfer, prominent speaker, occasional columnist for The Washington Post, television commentator for HBO and ABC sports; author of a three-volume history of the black athlete in America, and a noted participant in countless civic projects and protests, Ashe hardly went into retreat in the four years that followed his AIDS diagnosis.

Compiling the 1,600-page treatise "A Hard Road to Glory" was Ashe's first project after learning he had AIDS, and he admitted he immersed himself in its research partially as therapy. Ever in icy control on the tennis court, Ashe was just as assiduous about remaining in control of himself and his emotions in his off-court life.

Begins AIDS Program

Just before being stricken by a mild heart attack, his third, in early September 1992, Ashe assembled tennis luminaries at the United States Open to inaugurate a 15-month, $5 million fund-raising effort on behalf of his namesake foundation to combat AIDS. With that project safely in the works, he traveled to Washington, where he was part of a group that was arrested while protesting the Bush administration's treatment of Haitian refugees.

For Ashe, the handcuffs were nothing new; this longtime friend to Nelson Mandela and the first black athlete to be granted a visa (but not hotel accommodations) to compete in South Africa, in 1973, was arrested in 1985 as he protested South Africa's policy of apartheid.

But devoting himself to becoming a human billboard in the fight against AIDS, the only cause to impose itself upon him against his will, was a role Ashe always understood he would eventually accept with his usual poise.

Only the fact that the timing of his public pledge to help eradicate AIDS was beyond his control bothered him. As the father of a daughter, Camera, now 6, named for her mother's avocation of choice, Ashe didn't want his limited time to be spent working overtime, which happened to be his only way of working, to help halt the spread of this disease. He did not want his to become a one-issue existence.

But once the announcement was a fait accompli, Ashe's initial anger dissipated and he seemed almost relieved: nothing like a valid cause to set Ashe's competitive juices simmering.

"The foundation was something I always knew I wanted to do, long before I went public on April 8," said Ashe, who continued to refer to that date as the beginning of his life as an AIDS activist and the end of his relatively "unfettered" existence as a former tennis champion with a sports, business, and family agenda.

The shy yet eloquent Ashe, who listed the tennis star Pancho Gonzalez as his only sports idol, did not set out to become a role model for young black athletes. But because he dared to stand by his convictions, that is precisely what happened.

Unlike baseball's Jackie Robinson, who acted as conduit for the rites of passage of a stream of deserving black baseball players, Ashe was the only black tennis player of his era. It was a position that left him feeling ostracized at times, he said, by both blacks and whites.

"It's an abnormal world I live in," he told Sports Illustrated's Frank Deford in 1966. "It's like I'm floating down the middle. I'm never quite sure where I am ... It does bother me that I'm in this predicament, but I don't dwell on it, because I know it will resolve itself."

But Ashe served as a beacon for future generations of black tennis players.

"He's always been for black players someone to look up to and someone who says, 'You can do it, it doesn't matter where you come from or how you look,'" said Zina Garrison-Jackson, a product of Houston's public parks system who reached a career-high ranking of No. 4 in the world in 1989.

"Arthur showed you what is possible to be accomplished," she said. "I always wanted to follow in his footsteps, and nobody can forget that he made the footsteps: I can really appreciate the time that he made his breakthrough in. It was harder then for a minority player to break in, especially in our sport, but he did it to the hilt."

According to Pam Shriver, Ashe's example of grace under pressure was not lost on the women players campaigning for equality in their workplace: "He was a voice for all the minorities, and that goes for women, too. He brought a level of conscience to the game, whether he was speaking on South Africa or inner-city minorities or exclusionary policies anyplace. Arthur's influence on tennis didn't fade after he left the sport."

Arthur Ashe was born in Richmond on July 10, 1943, and played his first tennis at the age of 7 on the courts at Brookfield Park, the segregated playground adjacent to his home. By the time he was 14, he had found a patron in Dr. Walter Johnson, a Lynchburg, Va., physician with two decades of experience in assisting black tennis prodigies. Until he joined forces with Ashe, Johnson's most notable protegee was Althea Gibson.

Ashe reached the semifinals of the junior national championships on his first try in 1958. He won the indoor singles title in 1960 and 1961, and completed his high-school years at Sumner High School in St. Louis in order to train full-time there with Richard Hudlin. In 1962, as the fifth-ranked junior in the nation, Ashe received a full scholarship to U.C.L.A. While a student there, he attracted the attention of Pancho Gonzalez and Pancho Segura, both of whom helped refine Ashe's serve-and-volley game and the unflappable temperament that vaulted him to three Grand Slam tournament singles titles. They also encouraged his penchant for experimentation: At one time, Ashe accumulated 16 variations of the backhand in his stroke repertoire. ARTHUR ASHE

In 1963, he joined the United States Davis Cup Team, and by 1966, the year of his graduation from U.C.L.A. with a B.S. in business administration, he was described by the renowned tennis teacher Harry Hopman as "the most promising player in the world."

ARMONDE—James. Age 37. Died late Saturday evening at Saint Luke's Hospital after a short, but unsuccessful bout with AIDS. Mr. Armonde, who had a Master's in Public Health and worked for The American Lawyer in Washington, was best known for his good taste, creativity and his charismatic quality. He leaves behind two sisters, a married brother, and a father as well as his constructed family of devoted and loving friends who offered him and experienced mutual love and devotion. Burial will be in his native city of Denver, Colorado and a memorial and a party in celebration of his life will be held in late September in New York City. We will all miss him, remember and cherish him and will always think of his playfulness, generosity and his caring soul. 8-21-93

Steven Andrew Anderson

June 24, 1963 — June 19, 1993

Steven Andrew Anderson, a native Californian, passed away due to AIDS-related cancer on June 19 in Burbank, Calif. He was one week shy of his 30th birthday.

Anderson grew up in Burbank, attending St. Finbar Catholic School and graduating from John Burroughs High School with the class of 1981.

He pursued a career in telecommunications working as a phone system technician for Rolm Systems, formerly IBM. He installed and provided 24-hour service maintenance for many large companies in the Southern California area.

Friends say of Anderson, "Everyone he touched loved him. He always cared about the feelings and opinions of others before himself. During his personal fight with AIDS, he lived on his own, demonstrating an unsurpassed amount of courage enduring the loss of both parents and his lover. He made a difference whenever he could and forgave himself for the things he could not change. He celebrated life to the fullest and left this world with a clear conscience shortly before his 30th birthday."

Anderson wrote a letter to be read after his passing, extending his eternal love to the special people in his life and a "thank you" to all the people who were part of his life.

A memorial service for Herman Ira Adams will be held Saturday, August 27, 1994, at 10 a.m., at the Metropolitan Community Church, 474 Ridge St., NW.

Powell, 42, of Washington, D.C. died Tuesday, August 23, 1994, of pneumonia, according to his friend, Angela Powell of D.C. A full obituary will appear next week.

Richard Dale Atwood, Jr.

Richard Dale Atwood, Jr., age 36, died February 27, 1993 at his family home in Toledo, Ohio, from complications due to AIDS. Known throughout the area as a fine baritone soloist, Rick was a part of the professional music scene in Philadelphia since his arrival in 1978.

Born in Ohio on May 14, 1956, Rick lived in Toledo attending Woodward High School. Before studying voice on scholarship at Temple University in Philadelphia with George Massey and Philip Cho, Rick was enrolled at the University of Toledo. There he was a member and soloist of the All-Ohio State Chorus, the Toledo Choral Society, and the Toledo Symphony. He also appeared with the Philadelphia Orchestra, Hershey Symphony, Reading Opera Company and the Santa Fe Opera

Patrick Angus, a painter who was best known for his depictions of gay life in Manhattan, died of complications from AIDS May 13 in New York City. He was 39.

Company.

In 1990, Rick attended a Summer Opera Workshop at the Academia vocale di Lucca in Italy, sponsored by the Church of Saint Asaph in Bala Cynwyd, where he was on staff as baritone soloist. Saint Asaph's congregation played a key role in his life since his arrival in 1987, providing a forum for his music, and for his own spiritual growth.

The warm relationships he formed there were his greatest source of strength and support in the later years of his life. Before joining St. Asaph's, Rick was baritone soloist at St. Stephen's Church.

Rick is also well-known for another role he played here in Philadelphia—that of Day Manager at Le Bec Fin, a fine French restaurant on Walnut Street. His affable personality and knowledge of fine food and wine made him a popular favorite with the clientele. He was also a volunteer for Episcopal Community Services.

A memorial service was held at St. Asaph's Church on Sunday, May 16. Music by composer Ralph Vaughan Williams was featured and a quilt designed by Laz Manou and sewn by members of St. Asaph's will be on display. Contributions can be made in his name to Episcopal Community Services.

ASADORIAN—In Bradford, MA, April 16, 1994, at his residence, Ronald D. Asadorian. Beloved son of Diane M. (Clough) Asadorian. Loving brother of Donna M. Asadorian and Debra A. Asadorian of Bradford. Devoted grandson of Beatrice (Greenwood) Asadorian of Bradford and Norma F. and Mary E. (Donovan) Clough of Malden and a resident of 35 Sun Valley Drive. The funeral will be Wednesday morning at 9 a.m. from the H.L. Farmer & Sons Funeral Home, 210 So. Main St., BRADFORD, followed by a Mass of Christian Burial at 10:00 a.m. in Sacred Hearts Church, Bradford. Interment will be in Elmwood Cemetery, Bradford. Calling hours at the Bradford funeral home will be Tuesday afternoon and evening 2-4 and 7-9 p.m. Contributions in his memory may be made to the New England Hemophilia Association, c/o AIDS Research Department, 170 Rustcraft Rd., Dedham MA 02026-4539.

ALSTON—Vincent, September 10, 1959-April 19, 1994. Remembered with affection on your birthday and always. J.C.

Mark "Puffy" Abramson

March 3, 1967-March 17, 1993

Mark's nickname, "Puffy," was given to him by his friends because of his intense interest in body-building. He will always be remembered for his personality, his deep concerns for others, and his unique way of dancing, therefore giving us "the Puffy dance."

Mark definitely knew how to enjoy life.

Mark's final resting place will be Emerald Bay at Lake Tahoe. He is survived by his parents, Barbera and Larry; his sisters, of Danville, CA; and by the many friends he made throughout his life who will always have a special place in their hearts for the good memories spent with him.

A gathering of friends in celebration of Mark's life will be held on Saturday, May 1, at 4 p.m. in San Francisco.

For more information, please call Mark Heide at (415) 641-8873. ▼

Sam Allen

July 20, 1940-July 6, 1993

After a long battle with AIDS, Sam died peacefully in his home in San Jose with his close friends, Kelly Hill and Katherine Woodruff, his brother Dick Allen, and his dog, Scooter at his bedside.

Sam graduated from Wake Forest University and attended graduate school at UNC-Chapel Hill. He taught school in Los Angeles where he was one of the original founders of The Advocate. Moving to San Francisco in 1972, he pursued his career as an artist. He developed and refined his "cut paper drawing" technique, his success in this medium afforded him the recognition he so richly deserved.

We will remember him for his beautiful and moving works of art, his fine culinary abilities, his special garden, his honesty and his supportive personality which touched all who knew him.

He is survived by his brother, Dick; and his two special aunts, Ines Pinney and Ruth Warner, in Springfield, Massachusetts.

Sam, your art lives on to remind us all of your passion for life and your appreciation of beauty. Thank you for giving all who knew you a deeper sense of what life is all about.

Sam was "not interested in a memorial service." There will be an honoring of him at his beloved Wilbur Hot Springs at a future date. ▼

Jeff Taylor Abbott

Jeff Taylor Abbott, a graduate of the University of Massachusetts, Boston, died September 17 at his home in Somerville after a 31-month fight with AIDS. He was 37.

Mr. Abbott was born in Boston and raised in Allston and Cambridge where he received his diploma from Mantor Hall Preparatory School. In what would become a life-long interest in politics, Mr. Abbott was active in Allston public affairs. While in high school, he regularly published editorial pieces in the Allston-Brighton Citizen Item and, as a teenager, ran a close race for a seat on the Allston Neighborhood Council. Jeff was also a good gardener and he was pleased to win an Allston contest for his outstanding tomatoes.

In college he studied the history of New England and its material culture. He took part in the excavation of Boston's historic Blackstone Block, an 18th-century site, and unearthed many artifacts of daily life during the colonial period. As a research assistant for the Massachusetts Art Commission, he compiled the first, comprehensive inventory of holdings by the State House, including portraits and other paintings by Copley and Sergeant. He especially enjoyed studying the political history of the Kennedy family, which he followed in newspapers, books, and magazines. Jeff earned certificates in both New England historical archeology and urban archeology on his way to a bachelor's degree in American history which he received in 1984.

After graduation from college, he moved to San Francisco, where he completed advanced coursework in Museum Studies at John F. Kennedy University. There he furthered his interest in arts administration by working as a development researcher for the Fine Arts Museums of San Francisco and later as the Media Relations Associate for the San Francisco Ballet.

Jeff created, authored and edited San Francisco Ballet's first newsletter to subscribers and authored the ballet's Official Media Guide. From 1986 to 1988, while the Ballet grew rapidly in national stature, he wrote press releases, corresponded with and hosted the local and national media at Ballet events, coordinated dancer photo sessions and organized significant public relations events.

A man of very many interests and talents, Jeff, in 1989 took over the operation of a small espresso bar and gourmet coffee store in San Francisco's Marina District, in the weeks following the great earthquake of that year. His hard work and commercial vision turned Java Bay Coffee Company into a successful and exciting business. In the years to follow, he would start Rubino Coffee Company in West Hollywood, California.

He leaves his beloved partner, Alan Ray, of Somerville; his mother, Ruth Taylor Trani, of South Pasadena, California; his sister, Christine Becke; his brother-in-law, Michael Becker; and nephews Benjamin, Matthew, and Ethan Becker, all of Medford.

Funeral services were held from the Watson Funeral Home in Cambridgeport on Sept. 17 followed by a Liturgy of Christian Burial in St. Paul's Church, Harvard Square, Cambridge. Jeff's cremated remains will be interred in Mt. Auburn Cemetery which Jeff, ever the New England Historian, described as one of the loveliest gardens on earth. Remembrances in Jeff's memory to the AIDS Action Committee, 131 Clarendon Street, Boston, MA, 02116.

Vincent C. Astuto

Vincent C. Astuto, of Everett, died at his home Tuesday, Dec. 21 after a lengthy battle with AIDS. Born in Los Angeles, he grew up in Southern California and attended UCLA. He entered the United States Air Force in 1966, stationed in Alaska. His career in the design industry brought him to Boston in 1982 and he started several companies, including Push Play Video and LaserLoft, both of Everett. He was actively involved with the AIDS Action Committee, Bears for Children, and ITBIC, as well as the Video Software Dealers Association.

He is survived by his lover, Daniel Berns of Everett; his mother Sheila Astuto of Reseda, Calif.; his sisters Jacqueline Astuto, Watertown, NY; Linda C. Walters, of Reseda; and one son, Jason Adam of Saugus, Calif. 1993 Age 46

Gene Arnaiz, Jr.

June 22, 1952–April 30, 1993

Our beloved Gene passed away in the early morning hours of April 30, 1993, at his ranch in San Andreas. Surrounded by his close circle of family and friends to the very end, he fought a valiant and courageous battle against AIDS.

Born in Ventura, California, Gene was the great-great-great grandson of Don Luis Antonio Arguello, the first governor of Alta California, while under Mexican rule and his great-great-great grandmother was Marie de la Conception, the fabled woman of California legend of which Point Conception is named for.

His family at one time had vast land holdings in what is now San Diego. And Gene's life was never more noble, from his youthful experience of travelling and preaching the gospel to his years of personal friendship with Betty Hutton, screen star of Annie Get Your Gun, and Greatest Show on Earth, among others, to his transformation of the Hexagon House in Guerneville to the woods resort and one of the Sonoma County's hottest night clubs. He even designed the beautiful hexagon dance floor which many may recall. From the Russian River to Los Angeles and Palm Springs where as a property investor he restored many homes and estates to their once original elegance, Gene was a quiet and discerning nature and always walked with his God. He loved his family and friends and his beautiful smile and kind heart will never be forgotten. ▼

Dominic Aquino Jr.

August 14, 1993

Dominic Aquino Jr. passed away at his home in San Francisco on August 14, 1993. Born in Detroit, Michigan, he moved to San Francisco at age 20.

Dominic was exceptional at his profession as a Cosmetologist at Hair by Henrik & Co. He inspired those around him and felt loved in return. After his companion died three years ago, he bought a Harley Davidson Motorcycle, which became his new love. When his illness progressed, he took on a positive outlook and continued to do all the things that made him happy. He spent his last few days with his many friends. He also shared his great appreciation to those who sent special wishes through their cards, letters, and calls.

He is survived by his mother and two sisters. Dominic will continue to live in the hearts of his friends and family forever. It is near impossible to say goodbye to such a wonderful brother. I will love you forever and miss you every day of my life ... your sister, Donna. ▼

Larry Aguirre

Larry R. Aguirre, 37, died on Friday, April 16, 1993, of complications associated with AIDS, according to his lover of 16 years, Dick Frank. He passed away at their home in Alexandria, Virginia.

Frank said Aguirre was a great sports enthusiast and participant who loved all sports — both individual and team. He was highly competitive and enjoyed playing tennis and softball, having played for teams in the Gay World Series from 1985 through 1991. He played left-field for the Virginia Outlaws team and in 1989, the Outlaws won second place in the Gay World Series.

Aguirre also loved working in the yard, said Frank, and he was a great outdoorsman.

Aguirre was a banker, working most recently for Perpetual Savings Bank until it folded last year. He was with Perpetual for several years, and he was previously employed by Dominion and Riggs, two other D.C. area banks.

Aguirre was born and raised in Nixon, Texas, which he left around 1975 for Kansas City, Mo. He moved to the D.C. area in 1977.

Aguirre leaves his beloved pet dog Emma, a Basenji. Frank said they were devoted companions and that after Aguirre returned home in March after a stay at the Hospice of Northern Virginia, Emma stayed with him, sleeping on his bed until his death and his remains were taken away.

In addition to Frank, survivors include his mother, Julia Aguirre of Nixon; and nine siblings, Nancy Cisneros; Caroline Calley; Steve Aguirre; Patrick Aguirre; and John Aguirre, all of Nixon; Janie Peña of Houston, Texas; Josie Peña of Kansas City, Mo.; Joe Aguirre Jr. of Smiley, Texas; and Pablo Aguirre of Austin, Texas.

Frank was predeceased by his father, Joe Aguirre Sr., and brother, Freddie.

A Rosary was held on April 18, and a Catholic Mass and graveside service were held on the 19th. His remains then were buried at the Latin American Cemetery in Nixon.

Contributions in his name may be made to the Names Project of the National Capital Area, 1613 K St., NW, Washington, DC 20006; or to the NAMES Project in San Francisco, at 310 Townsend St., San Francisco, CA 94107.

Nathaniel Anderson

Nathaniel Anderson, 40, of Washington, D.C. died on Tuesday, March 9, 1993, at his home of complications associated with AIDS.

According to his longtime friend and caregiver, Bob Werner, Anderson was born in Baltimore and graduated from Baltimore City College. In 1972 he moved to D.C. Six years later, Anderson began working as a computer specialist at Frank B. Hall, Inc., a D.C. insurance company, where he continued working until 1993.

Anderson's interests included travel, music, movies, and dining. According to Werner, he loved people, touching many people's lives and forgiving everyone.

Anderson is survived by his devoted friend, John Bullock; good friend, Tony Compton; "a very special person in his life," Albert McQueen, all of Washington, D.C.; and his family.

A private memorial service will be held for Anderson on Friday, March 12. Anderson's remains will be interred in Baltimore.

Werner said that the AIDS service group Food and Friends was "always there for Nathaniel when he needed [it]." In lieu of flowers, contributions in Anderson's name may be made to Food and Friends, P.O. Box 70601, Washington, DC 20024.

Tice Alexander, an interior designer in New York who was known for the elegance of his rooms, died on Monday at New York Hospital. He was 35.

His companion, Glenn Albin, said the cause was AIDS. 8-21-93

Mr. Alexander worked with Parish-Hadley Associates from 1980 to 1986 and then formed his own design concern, Tice Alexander Inc. at 260 West 72d Street in Manhattan. His first name was Matthew, but he had been known since childhood as Tice.

He was a contributing editor for Connoisseur magazine, for which he wrote a monthly column called Connoisseur's Choice. The magazine is no longer published.

Mr. Alexander was born in Kansas City and attended the University of Kansas and the Kansas City Art Institute before graduating from the Fashion Institute of Technology in Manhattan in 1980.

He is survived by his companion; his mother, Lorna Burge of Kansas City; his father and stepmother, Bill J. and Jinny Alexander of Kansas City, and a brother, Britton, of Chicago.

Q I have read articles that say insurance companies are refusing to pay life insurance policies when young people die of AIDS. How could this be legal? Advisor

A If it can be established that the applicant didn't tell the truth in the insurance application, then in some instances life insurance benefits may be denied.

In one case, a New York judge ruled against the New England Mutual Life Insurance Co., which tried to rescind the $50,000 life insurance policy of Jeffrey Duke after he contracted AIDS. The insurer said that Duke, who died of the disease in 1988, had misstated his relationship with his beneficiary, who was his lover and business partner. The judge ordered payment of the policy and also the $127,500 of attorney's fees.

February 17, 1993

Arthur Allison died in San Francisco on February 17, 1993.

Arthur loved to be naked, drink, smoke and have a good time. Yet he took very good care of himself. He took life in his proportions. Arthur loved to enjoy friends, wear cashmere, silk, levis, leather and feathers. But most of all he adored and loved his roses. His light shined in others. Petals and fragrances were his. Arthur grew up in Kentucky bluegrass, where he was loved and adored. Yet he gave back even more in laughs and shared moments. As we all learn to share and love, we bond in our loss as well. Arthur's cats, Lulu, Games and Mr. Light share in our loss for a man who touched people in a living and giving spirit. You're always in my heart, Arthur, and I know you know it.

Hilary Keith Ayers

March 2, 1952 - May 2, 1993

Hilary passed on to a higher level of existence after a long illness due to lymphoma complications from HIV. He ended his struggle in the comfort of his home and care of his partner and long-time companion, Jose Garcia. He will be missed by his supportive family of Kaysville, Utah. He leaves behind his parents, James and Marge Ayers, three brothers: Mike, Tom and twin brother Jeff; sisters, Julie and Marian; and their families.

Hilary, an individual dedicated to self-improvement and awareness, came to San Francisco in the mid-seventies and made many friends. He formed his own home improvement business and leaves behind many beautiful creations. His beautiful talent for creating comfortable environments and maintaining the harmony and serenity within will be remembered by all who knew him. He filled the lives of many with joy and laughter.

His favorite hobby of creating greeting cards from his photography of flowers will be remembered together.

A memorial gathering will be held at 2 p.m., Saturday, May 15, at 269A Moultrie St., San Francisco. In lieu of flowers, contributions can be made to Home Care Companions, Inc.

Patrick "Terry" Alford

Sept. 11, 1948 - June 6, 1993

After courageously living with AIDS for seven years, Terry peacefully passed away at his home in Martinez, CA. Surrounded by his life partner of 16 years, Michael McAllister, his brother and sister-in-law, Billy and Priscilla Alford.

Terry retired in Feb., 1993 after 26 years of dedicated and distinguished service with Alameda County as a division supervisor.

During the final stage of his life, he was compassionately supported by a host of extended family and network of friends. A service celebrating his life will be held on Saturday, June 19, 1993 at 11 a.m., at the Sunset View Mortuary Chapel, Colusa and Fairmount Avenue's in Berkeley-El Cerrito, CA. Father Mark Colelli will officiate.

Interment will be private at St. Mary's cemetery in Oakland, CA. The world is a better place for having this gentle, compassionate, caring person pass through. He will always be alive and loved in our hearts and minds. Not goodbye, just until we meet again. Contributions in his memory can be made to the AIDS Project of Contra Costa, 2326 Blvd. Circle, Walnut Creek, CA, 94595. Or PAWS, P.O. Box 460489, San Francisco, CA, 94146. ## Jeffrey Annin Jeffrey Burt Annin, 42, of Arlington, Virginia, died on Thursday, February 25, 1993, at his home of complications associated with AIDS, according to his friend of 15 years, Bill McKinley of Arlington.

From 1987 until his retirement in January of last year, Annin was a specialist in child abuse and neglect issues at the Child Welfare League of America (CWLA) in D.C., a national advocacy association for child welfare agencies. Traveling extensively, he developed training materials about pediatric and adolescent AIDS education and prevention for social service agencies across the country.

CWLA Executive Director David Liederma described Annin's death as "a loss for the nation's children and youth to whom he has devoted his professional life."

In December 1992, Annin received a lifetime achievement award from the National Association of Public Child Welfare Administrators. According to Liz Loudon, the director of foundation for CWLA, an annual award from the league also will be established in the memory of Annin.

Before his position at the CWLA, Annin held other jobs related to child welfare. From 1985 until his move to the D.C. area, he worked at the University of Tennessee in Knoxville. Annin also had been employed at the University of Denver in Colorado, and as an attorney with the state department of social services in Helena, Mont.

Born and raised in Hamilton, Mont., Annin attended the University of Montana in Missoula, where he received a bachelor's degree in Spanish, a master's degree in education, and a law degree.

A fan of theater, particularly musicals, Annin enjoyed participating in community theater. At the Grand Street Theatre in Helena, he played leading roles in Best

John Alexander, of Yarmouth, Maine, gently completed his adventure in his 40th year on earth on January 30, 1994. Choosing to fast, and leave consciously, aware, and comfortably surrounded by family and a family of friends was an easy and painless decision. AIDS was rapidly killing his body.

An intuitive Body Worker, Hands on Healer, license plate historian/collector and gardener, he leaves us with a finer appreciation of life. We are rich in memories and will miss him.

A celebration of his life was held in Yarmouth on February 12 at the Unitarian Universalist Church.

In lieu of flowers, donations may be made to Clover Hospice, Minot Ave., Auburn, ME, or Peabody House, (in care of the AIDS Project) Portland, ME.

Little Whore House in Texas and Chicago. His other interests included cooking and entertaining at his home.

In addition to McKinley, Annin is survived by his parents, Fawn and Mark Annin of Hamilton; one sister, Melanie of Seattle, Wash.; one brother, Stephen; sister-in-law, Linda; niece, Yvette, all of Dallas, Texas; and significant friends, Wally Brewer of D.C.; Christina Crowe of Boston, Mass; and Norma Harris of Miami, Fla.

A memorial service was held on March 7, at the First Presbyterian Church in Hamilton.

On Wednesday, March 17, a celebration of Annin's life will be held at 7:30 p.m., during the CWLA National Annual Conference at the Grand Hyatt Washington Hotel at 1000 H St., NW. Another celebration of his life has been scheduled on Sunday, April 25, in D.C. The time and location will be announced later.

His body was cremated and the remains will be interred in Hamilton.

Contributions in Annin's name may be made to Northern Virginia AIDS Ministry (NOVAM), 413 Duke St., Alexandria, VA 22314-3735.

Tracy Lee Anders

(Tracy Cofield Horne)
March 28, 1958 -
Feb. 4, 1994

Born Tracy Cofield Horne on March 28, 1958 in Lynwood, California, Tracy Lee Anders died of complications of AIDS early on the morning of Feb. 4, 1994, in San Diego.

A resident of Los Angeles, Hollywood, San Francisco, Columbus, Ohio and San Diego, Tracy held a variety of jobs and made friends wherever he went.

From his early years, Tracy knew he was Gay. His first close relationship was with David Lee Anders in their teen years. After David lost his life in a swimming accident, Tracy took David's name in memory.

In 1977, Tracy moved to West Hollywood, where, as was his pattern, he instantly endeared himself to many people.

In 1982, Tracy moved to San Francisco, where he worked for Colortile and appeared as a cover model for Honcho magazine's July, 1984 issue. He moved again, in 1984, to Columbus, Ohio, where he took a sales position with the Lazarus department store in 1985.

While in Columbus, Tracy was active in AIDS charities and awareness programs. It was during this period that he was diagnosed. He began working for Core-Mark industries in 1990 and was transferred by the company later that year to San Diego, where he met his spouse, John Kleppinger.

Robert L. Anguiano

March 27, 1993

Robert L. Anguiano, loving son of Louis and Lucy, passed away March 27, 1993.

He is survived by his parents, Louis and Lucy; his long-time companion Richard Gillman; childhood friend, Lorenzo Mendoza; sisters Susan Romero and Carol Johnson; and brothers Pat and Ruben Anguiano.

Bobby will be deeply missed by all his friends and family. Donations to Chris Brownlie Hospice in Los Angeles would be greatly appreciated.

In 1991, continuing with his AIDS fund-raising and awareness work, Tracy appeared as the January model for that year's BULC calendar. John and Tracy filed a Declaration of Domestic Partnership in Laguna Beach in June of 1992, and with his characteristic charm and wit Tracy declared to his friends and family, "I's married now!" taking a line from Whoopi Goldberg's character in "The Color Purple." His friends will remember him for his affection for all kinds of animals and pets, of which there were many.

Tracy was a long-time survivor. Infected in the early days of the epidemic, he saw a long list of friends and partners pass before him. The compassion and support he showed all of them were returned to him by the legions of friends who will keep him in their memories. His bright smile, charming personality, powerful sense of humor and unconditional love are only a few of his character traits that will sustain his friends in his absence. Even as he struggled with his disease, his concern was for the well-being of others, especially children who have to confront this epidemic.

Tracy is survived by his mother and stepfather, Gerriwyn and Edward Myers of Cerritos, California; father Ralph Horne of Virginia Beach, Virginia; sisters Gina, Peggy and Catherine; brothers Dick, Wyn, Randy and Steven; nieces Casey and Wendy; nephew Jim; close friends David Johnson of Columbus and Ted Erler of Apopka, Florida.

Cap Anderson (a.k.a. Cap Moran)

Aug. 8, 1954-April 3, 1993

Cap died peacefully at home after a two year struggle with AIDS.

Cap moved here from Seattle in 1982. Over the years, he worked for the State Bar of California, U.C. Medical Center, Eddie Bauer, Sharper Image and Pac Bell.

Cap's social life was dominated by his dance activities, including square dancing (with Western Star Dancers), Appalachian-style clogging (with the Cornmashers), and Scottish country dancing (at Noe Valley Ministry), plus occasional two-stepping, ballroom, Cajun and contra dancing. He taught beginners' clogging classes at C.C.S.F. and the Free Folk Festival, and performed with the Cornmashers at the '87 and '88 S.F. ethnic dance festivals.

Joseph John Amon

Sept. 6, 1959-April 1, 1993

It's taken the last two months to realize it will be a long time before Joey's infectious laugh fills a room; or the uncorking of a bottle brings a devilishly stated ... "Do you know what I like about you? Absolutely nothing!"

The Virgo in Joey would have you believe the above statement as truth. However, close friends and family who saw past Joey's stony-walled exterior knew him to be filled with abundant warmth, generosity and charm ... or more precise, a caustic tongue able to slice its way mercilessly through the densest of bar crowds.

His zest for life eventually dulled through this six-year struggle with HIV+ and ARC; even the most obstinate of personalities weakened by the seemingly endless stays at Davis Hospital. Regardless, Joey smiled through his tears and remained silent during the pain as he was attended to by an outstanding nursing staff and loving friends. In March of 1993 Joey faced his third bout of PCP ... and as the fable goes, "... a road well lit is a road well traveled." Joey, ever the independent, opted to save the candles and ventured forth on his own.

He will be dearly missed by family, friends, his cats, "Mother Other," and "Buttons," and his lover of 14 years, Shayne.

Prayot Anusak

Nov. 17, 2492-Feb. 12, 2537

Prayot died peacefully. A devout Thai

Buddhist, he lived his life in engaged mindfulness, and he helped many learn this practice. A gentle spirit, he celebrated his body and enjoyed the pleasures of the Earth. "Enjoy life," he would say.

Prayot immigrated to America in 1972 with many dreams. He worked many jobs here, from pumping gas to gardening for Grace Cathedral. His great love, though, was dance. Through performance Prayot felt he was able to express more than new language limitations would allow. He was also an incredible cook, as all who had his food will attest.

A religious man, an educator, a great spirit, Prayot was a good soul. He will be sorely missed. An informal memorial gathering will be held in Golden Gate Park at 2 p.m., Saturday, March 12. For info, please phone 771-3637. ▼

NARCISO ABREU

Narciso Abreu entered in eternal rest peacefully July 23, 1994, age 31. Longtime companion and friend of Carlos Jenkins, he also leaves a mother, a sister, and a niece in Cuba

Thomas J. Aguilar

HONOLULU (AP) — Showman Thomas J. Aguilar, one of the original cast members of the hit play "A Chorus Line," has died from complications caused by AIDS. He was 41.

Aguilar died at his Honolulu home May 7 surrounded by family and friends, his publicist said May 8. He had been diagnosed with HIV in 1988.

Aguilar was an actor, singer, dancer, director and choreographer who rose to prominence for his 1976 performance as the lead character Paul in the London and Broadway versions of "A Chorus Line," one of the longest-running and most successful stage productions ever.

His work in the London production earned him the honor of being the only American to ever be nominated for the Plays and Players Award for most promising actor.

He also starred in the plays "Sing America Sing" and "Rockabye Hamlet," and also appeared on the television show "A Different World" as Manny, and guest-starred on the shows "Fame" and "One Day at a Time."

It was after "A Chorus Line" played in Hawaii that the Mendota, Calif., native retired from Broadway and moved to the islands.

In 1986, he formed the American Theatre Company Hawaii to help people make the jump from amateur to professional theatre. The company helped many local actors win roles in the plays "Les Miserables" and "Miss Saigon."

He directed over 50 plays and musicals, and friends said it was this love of the theatre that kept him going after he was diagnosed with HIV. Aguilar said much the same thing when he told an interviewer last year that "one of the great things about the theatre is that it always saved my life."

Aguilar, who announced in 1991 that he had AIDS, said in that same 1992 interview that of the 17 original men cast in "A Chorus Line," only he and one other still were alive. He dedicated the remainder of his life to educating people about the disease.

He's survived by his father, John Aguilar Sr., and his stepmother, Mercy; sister Rosemary Ramirez; half-sisters Josephine Vasquez and Susan Salinas, and half-brothers John Aguilar Jr., Lawrence Aguilar and Anthony Aguilar.

Funeral arrangements are pending, and a private burial will be held in Fresno, Calif.

Paul A. Anderson, 43; Helped AIDS Projects

Paul A. Anderson, a Chicago commodity trader and a benefactor of AIDS-related projects, died Nov. 18 at his home in San Francisco. He was 43 years old and also lived in Chicago.

Word of his death was received yesterday from Martin Delaney, a friend in San Francisco who said Mr. Anderson died from AIDS.

Mr. Anderson, a native of Park Ridge, Ill., received a bachelor's degree from Augustana College in Rock Island, Ill., and a master's degree from Purdue University. He was a member of the Chicago Board of Trade, a former president of the Ferguson Grain Company and a trustee of Augustana College.

In 1989 he established the Anderson Prize Foundation, which underwrites the Stonewall Awards, annual grants to people who help to improve the lives of homosexuals in the United States. The awards are named after the Stonewall Inn, the target of a New York City police raid in 1969.

Mr. Anderson is survived by his companion, Allen Schuh; his mother, Betty Anderson of Park Ridge, and two sisters, Karen and Deborah.

ARTINO—Ralph, on July 7th, 1995. Beloved son of Angie and the late Fred. Devoted brother of Joe, brother-in-law to Ann. Longtime companion of Ed Walcott. Friends may call at Frank E. ABREU—Joseph M., 39, August 10, Of AIDS. Loving son of Ernest and Mary Abreu of Redding, Massachusetts, loving companion of the late Mark Mutchnik. Will be missed by brothers, Ernest and Paul, and sister, Manuela DeRosa and their families. Services will be held Tuesday, August 13, at 4 P.M. Calvary Church, 21st and Park Avenue South, New York City. The family will be receiving friends at Joseph Abreu's residence immediately following service.

ARIAS—Hernando. On March 21, 1994. Of New York City. After a long illness, passed away peacefully at Cabrini Hospital and Medical Center. He is survived by his mother Petronilla Arias and eight brothers and sisters. In lieu of flowers donations can be made to God's Love We Deliver, 895 Amsterdam Avenue, N.Y., N.Y. 10025.

ABEL—Dr. Robert A. Age 57. Beloved brother of Marilyn and Elliot Garland, niece Marjorie and nephew Steven Garland and life long companion John Turner. Family practitioner in East Rockaway and Lynbrook, NY. Physician for the Lynbrook and East Rockaway Fire Departments and the Lynbrook Police Department. Served in Vietnam as Battalion Surgeon with the Third Marine Division at the DMZ, and was decorated for core of wounded under fire. A caring physician who was loved by all who came into contact with him.

David L. Arnold

April 14, 1955-June 24, 1993

One a beautiful, warm, clear, San Francisco morning. David left us to begin his journey to a better place. A place with bigger and better bowling alleys for sure.

David was an excellent bowler, bowling in several leagues over the years, and when his disease caused him to lose the use of his right arm, he changed to bowling with his left. Such was his love of the sport.

His passing leaves an emptiness impossible to fill and he is deeply missed by his parents, Ralph and Ann; his sister, Nadene and her family as well as myself and our dog and cat, Montana and BooBoo. He also leaves his special friend, Keith; and good friends Betty, David, Laverte, Susan, Helen and many others.

A celebration of his life will be held at our home in early August. Please call 824-1136 for more information.

Donations in David's memory can be made to any AIDS charity.

Richard Alan Austin

April 27, 1955-March 12, 1992

Richard (Rick) Austin passed away on March 12 at his home after a ten-month battle with cancer. Rick touched the hearts of all who knew him. His steadfast spirit of caring, quick wit and rare sense of humor, which he maintained even through the final hours, will live in our hearts and memories.

Rick grew up in New Jersey and spent his college years in Boston. After a brief visit to San Francisco in 1982, he decided to make it his permanent home. He was employed at the law firm of Bronson, Bronson and McKinnon.

At the time of his death, he was surrounded by the presence and love of his companion, Glenn; his dear friends Michael and Carol; and his aunt Dianne. In addition to his many friends, he is also survived by his niece Melanie; sisters Loraine and Gail; his brother, Bob; his grandmother, and his father and stepmother.

We are deeply grateful to Rick's physicians and to the many medical caregivers who unfailingly provided kind and compassionate support to Rick and to those close to him throughout his brave struggle.

Although Rick's love of Provincetown will bring him to his final resting place, there will be a celebration of his life on July 18 in Provincetown. For information, call Glenn at (415) 695-9714 or Carlos at (617) 236-4264. Donations in Rick's memory may be made to your favorite charity.

Emile Ardolino, Director, Is Dead; Specialist in Dance Films Was 50

11-20-93

By JENNIFER DUNNING

Emile Ardolino, an Oscar-winning maker of dance documentaries who went on to become a Hollywood director of films including "Dirty Dancing" and "Sister Act," died on Saturday morning at his home in Los Angeles. He was 50.

The cause was AIDS, said Cindy Gilmore, a longtime colleague and coproducer at Ardolino Productions.

Mr. Ardolino, whose new film of George Balanchine's "Nutcracker" is to be released on Wednesday, was considered a dance-film maker of exceptional sensitivity. He had an eye and an imagination that seemed to understand intuitively how to lend the immediacy of film to an art that often requires the distance and framing of a stage. When watching dance on television, "you can be in five seats at the same time — every time you change an angle," he said in 1982. Mr. Ardolino always managed to convert the most hardened film crew members; by the end of work on his dance films, they would be blithely conferring with him about arabesques, chainé turns and pirouettes.

"I do love dance," he said in a 1987 interview with The New York Times about "Dirty Dancing," his first major Hollywood film. "I do love music. It was a script in which the dance was used to move the plot along, to reveal character, and the story didn't stop; in addition to which, I saw a subtlety of body language throughout. So I related to all that immediately."

production of "Jesus Christ Superstar."

'Dance in America'

Mr. Ardolino edited several documentaries for PBS and produced dance films commissioned by the Dance Collection of the New York Public Library for its Jerome Robbins Film Archive. In 1975, he and Merrill Brockway were named as producers of "Dance in America," a television series devoted to American dance and broadcast on Channel 13 in New York. It was to play an important role in making dance popular in America.

Over the next decade, Mr. Ardolino directed and produced 28 programs for the series. He won an Emmy Award for his directing of "Choreography by Balanchine IV" in the 1978-79 season and a Directors Guild of America Award for "The Spellbound Child" in the 1980-81 season. Mr. Ardolino left the series in 1983, although he continued to create individual programs for it.

It was Jacques d'Amboise, a principal dancer with the City Ballet, who set Mr. Ardolino on his Hollywood career with an invitation to direct "He Makes Me Feel Like Dancin'." An account of Mr. d'Amboise's work with children, which won Mr. Ardolino the 1983 Academy Award for best documentary feature, two Emmys, a Peabody Award and other honors.

A director known for his soft-spoken though firm way with actors, Mr. Ardolino was also something of a humanist. "I am interested in scripts about character, mainly, whether it's a comedy, a romance or a drama," he said. "I like audiences to feel something when they come out. I don't want them to come out numb. I really want them to feel and to think, mostly feel."

Mr. Ardolino, who was born in Maspeth, Queens, developed an intense love for Broadway shows in adolescence and said he spent all his money on tickets, sneaking in for second acts when he couldn't afford admission. He saw the original production of "Gypsy" 25 times, he told friends. Mr. Ardolino appeared in many theater productions as a student at Queens College. He studied dance with Matt Mattox and had a few acting jobs, including the role of the Boy in a road company of "The Fantasticks."

He founded Compton-Ardolino Films with Gardner Compton in 1967, working as an editor, a director and a producer of documentaries, industrial films and multi-media stage productions through 1974. He won an Obie Award in 1969 for his films for the original Broadway production of "Oh! Calcutta!" and created films for the Joffrey Ballet's "Astarte" and the New York City Opera's "Makropoulos Affair." He also designed the original multi-media concept for the Broadway

Success in documentaries, then a career in Hollywood.

Three years later, "Dirty Dancing" made Mr. Ardolino a new director to be reckoned with in Hollywood. The story of an innocent young girl and a street-smart dance teacher at a Catskill hotel in the early 1960's, "Dirty Dancing" was a low-budget movie that had a huge success at the box office. It made Patrick Swayze a star and also featured Jennifer Grey.

Mr. Ardolino went on to make "Chances Are" in 1988, "Three Men and a Little Lady" in 1990, and "Sister Act," starring Whoopi Goldberg, in 1992. He also directed television productions of three shows produced by Joseph Papp: David Henry Hwang's play "The Dance and the Railroad," Shakespeare's "Midsummer Night's Dream," starring William Hurt, and "Alice at the Palace," starring Meryl Streep. At his death, he had just finished directing a television production of "Gypsy," starring Bette Midler, to be broadcast in December on CBS.

Mr. Ardolino is survived by his companion, Luis M. Rodriguez-Dilla of Los Angeles, and three sisters, Aurelia Janosek of Jackson Heights, Queens, Livia Meyer of Parlin, N.J., and Dorothy Boland of Elmhurst, Queens.

Bart Silvas Amarillas

September 14, 1994

Bart Amarillas, 47, died of AIDS complications the evening of September 14.

He had been diagnosed with AIDS since August 1992. At his side was his life partner, Richard Horton.

Bart was born and raised in Arizona, and moved to the Bay Area in 1974. He spent some time in a Franciscan monastery and later worked in a variety of jobs in the social service sector.

A longtime activist, Bart worked for the Urban Indian Child Resource Center in Oakland. His proudest achievement was almost single-handedly founding the American Indian AIDS Institute.

A special thanks to Robyn Rashke, Shanti volunteer, and attorney Karen Beausey. Also thanks to the staff of Visiting Nurses, including Bev Sambolin; the staff of the American Indian Health Clinic, especially Kevin Worth, Dr. John Pakula, Vicki Gourneau and Marishka Posinski; Dr. Scarlett Wilson, his ophthalmologist; Dr. Scott Shepard, his surgeon; and the staff at San Francisco General.

Besides Richard Horton and many friends in the Bay Area, Bart is survived by his sister, Carmen Moreno of Red Rock, Ariz.; other siblings; and numerous nieces and nephews.

A requiem Mass will be celebrated at the Church of the Advent of Christ the King, 261 Fell St., San Francisco, at 4 p.m. on Sept. 24. For further information call Richard at 821-9347. ▼

Clifford C. Arnold Sr. Clifford Arnold of Jacksonville, Fla., died Dec. 10 due to complications from AIDS. He was 50. A Navy veteran, Arnold moved to Los Angeles to become the technical director of cardiopulmonary physiology at Cedars-Sinai Medical Center. He was a longtime supporter of the Los Angeles Shanti Foundation. 94

AGNITSCH—Robert C., M.D., Dr. Robert Agnitsch died June 6, 1995 in NYC at age 56. Beloved son of Edna Agnitsch Squitieri and the late Charles J. Agnitsch. Also survived by his longtime companion, James E. Graves; his brother and sister-in-law, Richard J. Agnitsch and Kathleen Nottage Agnitsch, and two nieces, Jennifer Leigh Agnitsch and Kathryn Nottage Schaub. An ophthalmologist in private practice in NYC and Staten Island for many years, he served on the medical staff of St. Vincent's Hospital, NYC, & Bayley Seton Hospital in Staten Island. He received his bachelor's degree from Georgetown University and medical degree from Creighton University in Omaha. He served as a Lieutenant in the Navy during the Vietnam War & was awarded the Vietnam Service Medal with Bronze Star. Funeral services are private. Donations in his memory can be made to St. Vincent's Hospital, Dr. Robert C. Agnitsch Memorial, 153 West 11th Street, New York, New York 10011.

ALPERT—Alan. Extraordinarily gifted artist, graphic-designer, teacher. Succumbed to AIDS, Feb. 12th, eight days before his 50th birthday. A native New Yorker, graduate of the High School of Art and Design and Carnegie Tech, and the Art Students League; a teacher at Pratt Institute; member of the Simian Society and the Graphic Artists Guild. Beloved companion of 20 years of Michael Pace; adored brother of Monte, brother-in-law of Barbara, uncle of Matthew. Proud parent of Shanti and Shiloh. Cherished friend of many. Alan had taste, talent, dignity, humor, humility, patience, persistence, a huge capacity for love and caring and, ultimately, and not unexpectedly, great bravery. Memorial service to be announced. In lieu of flowers, please contribute to GMHC. Alan, you'll be missed terribly, and loved always. Geoffrey, Terry, & Benjamin Weill

ABAJIAN—Robert Haig, on January 6, 1995. Beloved son of the late Moses and Azniv Abajian. Survived by his brother Anthony of Maryland and two nieces of Florida. Friends may call at Frank E. Campbell, 1076 Madison Avenue at 81 St., Monday 2-5 and 7-9 PM. Services at St. Varian's Armenian Cathedral, 34th St. at 2nd Ave (time to be announced). Contributions in his memory may be made to God's Love We Deliver.

AQUINO—Theresa M. Devoted sister of Salvatore, Michael, Rose, Florence, Edward, Virginia, Carolyn, and Thomas. Pre-deceased by brother Vincent; sisters Leah and Helen. Beloved aunt of numerous nieces and nephews, passed away suddenly on Tuesday, March 22, 1994. Funeral Mass will be held at St. Paul the Apostle R.C. Church, 9th Ave and 59th St, at 10AM, Saturday, March 26th. Interment at Moravian Cemetery, Staten Island following services. In lieu of flowers, charitable contributions may be made to the AIDS Program at St. Paul the Apostle Church.

ASIMOV—Stan. I deeply mourn the loss of my dear and constant friend and mentor, whose intelligence, grace and profound decency blessed all who knew him. In the worst of times he spoke of the best; in the best of times, in the greatest pain he spoke of healing; in the face of rage he counseled peace. What a man. I loved him and will miss him terribly. 8-22-95 John Van Doorn

Danilo Eduardo Andrade

Sept. 24, 1959 - April 20, 1994

Danilo suffered a stroke on April 14 similar to that of former President Nixon's last week, an irony he would have appreciated, especially since Nixon's stroke paralyzed his right arm and leg while Danilo's stroke, which was AIDS-related, paralyzed his left arm and leg. They died two days apart.

Born in Otavalo, Ecuador, Danilo moved to New York City when he was five years old, where he grew up the fourth of six children of Nelson Andrade, a master carpenter, and Nelly Andrade. From the age of six, he wanted to be an airline pilot, and he was delighted when the family moved to Long Island, a block from an airport. But since his eyesight was not perfect, Danilo decided to become an aircraft mechanic, studying at the New York Institute of Technology and then the Academy of Aeronautics in Queens.

On April 8, 1983, Danilo met Daniel Berkowitz in a neighborhood bar in Manhattan. They spent nearly every day together for the next 11 years.

In 1984, his job at United Airlines came through, and with a down payment from his parents for a new car, he packed up Daniel and his possessions, and drove cross-country.

On the job, he worked his way up from mechanic to aircraft engine inspector. At home, he literally built a household, rebuilding floors, installing lighting, always renovating, fixing and helping others to do so. In the neighborhood, he became active in his building and block associations, and was the strong, quiet center of a loving social circle that was always widening. An active traveler and a political activist, Danilo made a trip to Nicaragua as part of a union fact-finding mission. He was arrested twice, once during a demonstration for the freedom fighters and later, in a protest against the president's backtracking "compromise" on gays in the military. Danilo was a devoted listener of KPFA-FM and reader of The Nation.

Athletic, competent, low-key, spiritual — "Homosexuality," he once said, "is God's way of keeping the population explosion under control" — Danilo Andrade suffered greatly during the last three months of his life, but assured his friends he was not afraid to die. Besides his lover and his parents, he is survived by siblings Susana, Nelson, Rocio, Nelly, Jimmy and seven nieces and nephews.

A memorial service was held to honor Danilo's life on Saturday, April 23, at Comisky Roche Funeral Home. Donations may be made in Danilo's memory to Project Open Hand. ▼

Blair Apperson

June 9, 1965 - Aug. 8, 1994

Blair died at home after a short struggle with AIDS. The course of Blair's illness was much like his life: very fast-paced and totally unpredictable. Not only did Blair live on his own terms, he died on them as well. Anyone who met Blair would remember the encounter. With interests as diverse as cacti and tattoos, Blair made a strong impression on everyone he met.

Blair was born in Abilene, Texas. He moved to Riverside in the '70s and finally migrated to the Bay Area in 1985. He got his nursing license in 1989 from Mission College. After working at Crestwood Institution, he worked at San Francisco General as a psych tech in the Psychiatric Emergency Room.

He is survived by his husband, Jeff Dauber of San Francisco; his sister, Denise of Salt Lake City; his mother, Judy of Crestline, California; and his father, Larry of Arlington, Texas.

An informal memorial will be held Saturday, August 20, from 3 to 8 p.m. Call 821-5883 for details. ▼

John Angeles

Aug. 31, 1949 - Nov. 24, 1994

John passed away unexpectedly on Thanksgiving Day at 4:15 p.m. from complications of advanced HIV disease. With him at his passing were David Differding, his lifetime partner of 13 years, and his friends Cathy, Annie and Barry.

John served in Vietnam as a Navy corpsman. After coming to San Francisco in 1980, his entire nursing career was involved in AIDS care. He first worked in private home care during the early days of the epidemic, and then in 1984, he began working on the AIDS Ward at Garden Sullivan Hospital. John was a sensitive, get-the-job-done nurse who was respected by all in the health care community.

John loved to travel, especially to Puerto Vallarta. Christmas was his favorite time of year. His passions included Egyptology, old movies and living life to the max.

John is survived by his family in Fort Worth; his life partner, David; and his cats, Morris and Cleo.

A celebration of John's life will be held in January.

JEFFREY W. ARMSTEAD

Actor with Boston, N.Y. troupes

A funeral will be held today for Jeffrey William Armstead of Roxbury, an actor and playwright, who died of respiratory arrest Monday in New England Deaconess Hospital. He was 32.

Mr. Armstead was born in Boston. A graduate of Boston English High School and Xavier University in New Orleans, he also trained for the theater at the Elma Lewis School of Fine Arts in Boston under the late Vernon Blackman.

He performed with many local theater companies, including the Boston Youth Theater, the Playwrights' Platform, Black Folks Theater Company, the Theater Offensive, Theater of Relativity and the Roxbury Outreach Shakespeare Experience. As a member of the group Brothers du Jour he co-wrote and performed in the choreo-drama "Through the Fire."

He was a former resident of New York City, where he trained and performed with the Rainbow Studio Collective, Amas Theater Company and Nuyorican Poets Cafe.

Mr. Armstead, who did volunteer work for the AIDS Action Committee, was the recipient of the 1993 community service award from the Christians About AIDS Prevention Education of Louisville, Ky.

He leaves his father, Roger Sr. of Mattapan; and four brothers, Roger Jr. of New Jersey, John of Maryland, Michael of Boston and Carleton of Washington, D.C.

The service will be at 7 p.m. in the Charles Street A.M.E. Church in Dorchester. Burial will be in Fairview Cemetery in Hyde Park.

Mark Arnold

Nov. 4, 1952 - April 28, 1994

Mark sailed away to a more peaceful place, to join Tom and others who had gone before. He leaves behind his father, Sidney; his sister, Wendy; his brother, Richard; his roommate, Rick; and his loving friend, Tovar.

There will be no formal farewell ceremony. In remembrance, contributions may be made to the AIDS Emergency Fund or the Godfather Service Fund.

"Home is the sailor, home from the sea." ▼

Casey Alexander

Sept. 12, 1950 - Nov. 25, 1994

Our partner and friend "Went to Paris" in time to decorate God's Christmas trees.

He left us after a long battle with AIDS with a tear in his eye and a smile on his face. He will be lovingly missed by his partner, Franz; Aunt Martha; cousins, Sandy and Scott; and many, many dear friends.

"Boo" misses him terribly. A special thanks for all the loving help from Adrienne, Cecelia, Joellen, Nancy, Penni, Richard and Ruth.

Friends are invited to a memorial service on Sunday, December 11, at 1:30 p.m. at the Swedenborgian Church, 2107 Lyon St., SF. In lieu of flowers memorial contributions can be made to the Family Link, 317 Castro St., SF, CA 94114. ▼

Walter "Wally" M. Antosiewicz

Nov. 20, 1952 - April 14, 1994

A very special person passed away on April 14, 1994.

Wally Antosiewicz will be missed by many people whose lives he touched. Wally's strength, love of life, and positive attitude were an inspiration to all. He never ceased to amaze his friends with his many talents and hobbies.

For the past 10 years, Wally was a partner with Classic Dental arts, where he fabricated porcelain veneers and gained a reputation for his perfection and accuracy. In addition, Wally facilitated numerous support groups for different AIDS organizations in San Francisco.

Wally has left behind his lover, Nathan, and many loving friends. Wally would probably tell us to keep a positive attitude and to "be here for the cure." ▼

Walter S. Albertson <sup>94</sup>

Walter S. "Art" Albertson, 32, of Philadelphia, died on June 12. Son of Walter and Caroline Albertson of Collingswood; also survived by his loving companion George C. Smith of Philadelphia. Interment was in New St. Mary's Cemetery, Bellmawr, NJ.

Art left behind his three loving dogs, Jezebel, Jeremy and Rhae, who also miss him very much.

Donations in Art's memory can be made to the Livingrin Foundation, Lambda Recovery Program, 4835 Hulmenulle Road, Bensalem, PA 19020.

Stephen K. Ager

Dec. 21, 1953 - May 18, 1995

Steve left us for a better place last Thursday at 10:27 a.m. He was ready to take this last big step after having spent time with several members of his family, including his daughter, Rebekah, who came to visit him.

He died peacefully at home, as was his wish, in the arms of his caring friend Jesus, with his buddy Steve and his brother John by his side. All three, with the help of many friends, stayed with him around the clock until the end.

Steve is survived by his daughter; his ex-wife, Debbie; his mother, Eve; and siblings, John, Michelle, Pam, Rosemarie and Ed. He also leaves behind a host of friends and relatives in the Bay Area, the Russian River and Colorado.

A memorial service is planned for Memorial Day (Monday, May 29) at 1 p.m. in the AIDS Grove at Golden Gate Park. Donations in Steve's name should be directed to Project Open Hand and Visiting Nurses of San Francisco. For more information, please call 821-6787. ▼

Michael "Conchita" Aguilar

March 25, 1961 - June 6, 1994

We will remember our Michael for his sense of humor and caring ways. We'll miss you always, but rejoice in the knowledge that you are with God, Jesus, and your beloved Eric. Michael resided in New Orleans since

January 1992. - Vaya con dios - Mom, Jackie and friends. ▼

Activist FERDINANDO ATTANSIO, 38, died of AIDS March 7 in Turin, Italy. Attansio was a member of the "AIDS gang" whose string of local robberies protesting the lack of health care for PWAs made headlines around the world last summer. Under an Italian law keeping terminally ill criminals out of jail, the band was repeatedly arrested and released. <sup>96</sup>

Mark Altbush <sup>94</sup>

Mark Altbush of Jamaica Plain died on Friday, May 13 in Boston at the Hospice at Mission Hill from AIDS-related causes.

Mark was born in New York City on March 14, 1956, and was raised there and in Rye Brook, New York. He attended MIT, after which he decided to remain in the Boston area. Mark worked as a chemical engineer before deciding to pursue a career in photography. For several years he worked in both fields, serving as an engineering consultant and working as a free-lance photographer. Mark was diagnosed with AIDS in 1989 and continued to work until 1991. He devoted much time as a volunteer at the AIDS Action Committee where he ran their free-ticket program.

Mark spent many years in Boston, including the time after his diagnosis. He had a passion for classical music and often attended concerts, recitals and opera. He loved art and architecture, reading (especially novels), and he enjoyed travel. Mark's wit, his appreciation for beauty in all forms, and his remarkable determination will be missed by all who love him. Mark is survived by many good friends; his parents Jack and Hannah Altbush of Hartford, CT, and his partner Bill. Mark's family and friends will hold a memorial service at Killian Hall on the MIT campus on Saturday, June 18 at 4:00 pm.

Mark's wish was that his friends and family make monetary donations to AIDS-related charities (such as the AIDS Action Committee and the Hospice at Mission Hill) and/or perform some related volunteer work in his memory.

John G. Anderson

John G. Anderson of Dorchester, an account executive in classified advertising for the Globe, died June 3 near Florence, Ariz., after an automobile accident. He was 41.

Mr. Anderson was born in Hartford and raised in Norwich, Conn. He graduated from Norwich Free Academy in 1970 and Ohio Wesleyan University in 1974.

Mr. Anderson came to work for the Globe's advertising department in 1985. He was a member of the Governing Board of the Boston Globe Employees Association, a 1,100-member union.

Before joining the Globe, Mr. Anderson was a travel agent with Garber Travel and Crimson Travel (now Thomas Cook Travel) in Boston. He also taught at the Southbury Training School in Connecticut for emotional disturbed children.

An active member of his community, Mr. Anderson was on the Board of the Fields Corner Community Development Corporation. He was also an officer of the Meeting House Hill Civic Association, a vice president the Jones Hill Civic Association and a member of the Ward 15 Democratic Committee.

Mr. Anderson was a member of the Sterling Institute of Relationships, and a key leader of the Sterling Community Service Foundation Project at the Oliver Wendell Holmes Elementary School in Dorchester. The Project raised over $35,000 in cash and materials over the years for the school, resulting in a new playground and school beautification.

Mr. Anderson leaves his mother, Dr. Ruth M. Anderson; three brothers, Andrew of Norwell, Conn., Martin R. of Brookline and Frank L. of Merced, Calif.; four nephews and a niece.

A fund to encourage young writers at the elementary school is being set up in lieu of flowers. Memorial donations may be sent to the John G. Anderson Memorial Fund, c/o of Hugh J. Halsey, 50 Maple Street, Needham, MA 02192.

Allan Albert, 48; founder, producer of the Proposition comedy troupe

By Tom Long
GLOBE STAFF

Allan Albert of New York City, founder and producer of the Proposition, the Cambridge improvisational comedy troupe that served as a training ground for Jane Curtin, Henry Winkler, Josh Mostel and other young comedians, died of cancer Friday in St. Vincent's Hospital in New York City. He was 48.

The Proposition Theater in Cambridge was a magnet for hip theatergoers from 1964 to 1974. Inside the converted bakery in Inman Square, the talented but temperamental Albert oversaw a small troupe of young actors who mastered improvisational theater techniques and made the Proposition nationally renowned.

More than 75 performers including Judy Kahn and Monteith & Rand took to the tiny theater's stage and New Englanders flocked to the show for a theatrical experience that Mr. Albert described in a 1973 interview in the Globe as "A little like Chinese food ... We draw 150,000 people a year and virtually all of them enjoy it ... It's mutual and it's pleasurable."

"We were all sort of learning how to be grown-ups," Mr. Albert recalled in another interview in the Globe in 1989. "It was the first professional thing that I did, and the Prop started a lot of people off on their careers, such as Second City did. We were a very popular show and developed a loyal following."

Alternately described as "egotistical," "brilliant" and "acerbic" by his colleagues, Mr. Albert's relations with his actors soured in 1974 when the 10-member cast went on a 25-day strike for better hours and wages and eventually left en masse to form the now-defunct Next Move Theater.

Geraldine Librandi, a member of the cast, left with them. "That concept of company that Allan was trying to develop was probably ahead of its time," she said in a 1989 interview in the Globe. "We felt we were being asked to do more than was possible, that he was asking a relatively small group of people to fulfill all of these responsibilities. It was becoming, for some people, incredibly grueling and burdensome."

Like many of the actors, she maintained a love-hate relationship with Mr. Albert. "I did learn a great deal from him. He was the first person to give me a job when I graduated from college," she recalled. "He was very supportive of me in my work. But Allan could be incredibly brutal verbally and he had a temper."

Mr. Albert was born in New York City and raised in Miami Beach. He graduated from Amherst College and attended the Yale School of Drama, where he founded the Proposition.

From 1977 to 1979, he was artistic director of the Berkshire Theater Festival in Stockbridge. He later became director of comedy for Home Box Office, where he produced shows by Robert Klein, George Carlin and Steve Allen and, as a senior vice president of Gannett Productions, produced corporate films on Ansel Adams and Stephen Sondheim, and on West Point.

In 1980, he formed Allan Albert Productions, a leading producer of shows for the theme park industry. He also produced several shows for the Public Broadcasting System including "You're the Top: The Cole Porter Story" and directed the Cole Porter 100th Anniversary Gala at Carnegie Hall in 1991.

A trustee of the International Center of Photography, he formed the Oasis Foundation in 1989 to promote the work of new photographers.

Jose Amoros III

Jose Anthony Amoros III of Gaithersburg, Maryland, died Thursday, September 8, 1994, of complications associated with AIDS at the National Navy Medical Center, according to his dear friend, Robert Lee Griffin of Gaithersburg. He was 37.

Amoros was born Sept. 5, 1957 in Brooklyn, N.Y. He enlisted in the U.S. Navy in 1982 where he served as an operations specialist, Griffin said.

While stationed in Italy during the early 1980s, Amoros began working on a bachelor's degree in music by taking night classes at a music conservatory. He finished the degree in 1985, said Griffin. Amoros retired from the Navy in 1992.

He was a member of Open Door Metropolitan Community Church, a predominantly Gay congregation, in Boyds, Md.

In addition to Griffin, Amoros is survived by his parents, Hilda and Jose A. Amoros; sisters, Rosalind Sanchez and Eileen Kelly; niece, Megan Kelly and nephew, Manuel Sanchez; all of Gaithersburg.

A memorial service was held Sept. 13 at Open Door MCC. Amoros's remains were interred at Arlington National Cemetery in Arlington, Va.

Contributions in Amoros's name may be made to the H.M. Jackson Foundation, National Navy Medical Center, PO Box 207, 8901 Wisconsin Ave., Bethesda, MD 20889-5000. The Foundation supports the AIDS research clinic at the Navy medical center.

Stanley J. Abramovitch

Founded human resource firm

Stanley J. Abramovitch, the founder and manager of Abramovitch & Associates, died of complications from AIDS Monday in his home in Liverpool, N.Y. He was 43.

Born in Boston, Mr. Abramovitch graduated from Lynn English High School and cum laude from Salem State College.

He was the founder and manager of Abramovitch & Associates of Boston and New York, a human resource development firm.

He leaves his mother, Regina (Krupa) Abramovitch of Peabody; a sister, Barbara Abramovitch of Peabody; and two brothers, Frank of Manchester, N.H., and Robert of Liverpool.

Karl E. Allen

Oct. 18, 1956 - Oct. 31, 1994

Karl was born in England on an American Air Force base and grew up in Southern California. He served in both the U.S. Air Force and U.S. Navy before moving to the Castro in 1983.

Karl enjoyed the leather scene and working on his classic VW bus. He died at home on Halloween at 2:30 p.m. after a long battle with AIDS.

Karl is survived by his lesbian mom, who cared for him day and night through his long battle; brother, Shane Allen; sister and her domestic partner, Sheila Allen and Peg Yeates; and nephew, Sean Allen-Yeates.

Our thanks to the staff of the SF VA Hospital, Marin General, Davies Medical, Project Open Hand and the Marin Humane Society.

Karl, we love you and miss you. ▼

°Abel Rios Arias

Nov. 26, 1962 - Feb. 27, 1995

On February 27, °Abel left his physical plane and became a radiant being full of light, at one with the universe. His transition took place at his home with Sian, his lover of 13-1/2 years, at his side.

Since °Abel was the writer in the family, it seems so inappropriate that I am the one left behind to tell his story. He was first and foremost a writer, a voracious reader and a whimsical gardener who loved his roses. He was the kindest, gentlest soul I have ever known.

°Abel was lover to Sian M. Van Cortlandt; son "in-law" to Charlotte; son of Maria Luisa Arias; brother to Mary, Pita, Rudy and Jose; and uncle to Maria, Jeannie, Danielle, Nicole, Rudy Jr. and little Milani. There are countless people to thank but a few shine bright: Fern Schneiderman, Tanis Bridges, Richard LaBonte, the 7West nursing staff at St. Mary's, friends and family.

There will be a memorial service at Chapel of the Chimes, 4499 Piedmont Avenue, Oakland, on Friday, March 17, 5:30-8 p.m. For more information, please call Sian at (510) 652-3736. Those who attend are requested to wear red in °Abel's honor! ▼

Carl Robert (Bob) Abendroth

Feb. 1, 1948 - Dec. 3, 1994

After a long, courageous battle with AIDS, Bob passed away on a cold, rainy Saturday morning at the VA Hospital in SF.

Before retiring in 1991, Bob had been self-employed, specializing in advanced computer management. He distinguished himself in the Vietnam War as an electronic specialist (Army intelligence) with a top secret/cryptographic security clearance.

Bob also volunteered many tireless hours of his computer expertise to organizations such as the AIDS Bike-A-Thon, the Stop AIDS Project and his most recent achievement, the 1994 Gay Games in New York City.

Bob is survived by his parents, Carl and Claire of North Carolina; a sister, Carole; and a brother, Rick. He also leaves behind his devoted friends, Eugen, Demi, George, Bill and his beloved cats, Harold and Maude.

Special thanks go to his Shanti volunteer, Urs Hofmann, and the supportive nursing staff at the VA who comforted Bob in his final months.

Bob asked that in lieu of flowers, donations may be made to the AIDS Bike-A-Thon or the Shanti Project in his name.

A private memorial celebration was held December 13.

Michael R. Adkins

Jan. 3, 1964 - Dec. 11, 1994

Forever the strong, righteous fighter in health and in illness, Michael found his peace at 12:55 p.m. Sunday. I'm so grateful that we were able to meet his wishes to keep him at home, to have myself (his lover Bob), his mother Phyllis, his guardian angel Adrian and new-found teacher of peace

Roby at his side as he entered his new world and his beloved cousin Tammie arriving in time for her good-byes. Keeping this promise to Mike has given me the peace I need to continue.

I wish to extend thanks to his friends and co-workers at King American Ambulance, Dr. Charles McDonald and the staff at California Pacific Medical Center and our team of visiting nurses, especially Martha, Laura, Joyce, Michael, Carol, Katherine and Mary Ellen. Special loving thanks to our friends Tom, Laura, Terri, Patrice and Chris, who were always there.

Michael is survived by two sisters in New Jersey and family up and down the East Coast. An open house to remember Michael will be held at our home on Friday, December 16, at 7:30 p.m. Please call (415) 589-5901 for further details.

Good-bye. Sweet Honey Man. ▼

Chicago political leader Robert Adams dies

ROBERT JOHN ADAMS, 42, an attorney and accomplished leader in Chicago and national HIV/AIDS and gay and lesbian political movements, died Nov. 9 from complications due to AIDS, according to his life partner, Michael Konlon.

Adams' career included work as Chief Corporation Counsel for the City of Chicago Department of Law, Development Director for the Chicago Department of Health Division of HIV/AIDS Public Policy, and legislative assistant for Massachusetts Democratic U.S. rep. Gerry E. Studds.

Born in Macomb, Ill. in 1952, Adams graduated Cum Laude from the University of Illinois at Urbana in 1975 with a Bachelor's Degree in Political Science, and received his Juris Doctor in 1978 from the U. of Illinois College of Law.

After working at the Chicago law firm of Pretzel and Stouffer, he began three years as Chief Assistant Corporation Counsel at the City of Chicago Department of Law, where he managed a tort litigation staff of 45 attorneys and 25 support personnel.

In 1989, Adams became the first full-time Executive Director of IMPACT, the city's gay and lesbian political action committee. Under his leadership the organization grew into one of the region's best-known political action committees.

In 1991, Adams moved to Washington, D.C. to work as legislative assistant to openly gay Rep. Gerry E. Studds. While there, Adams concentrated on issues such as gays and lesbians in the military and the civil rights of people with HIV and AIDS. Upon his return to Chicago, he was hired as Development Director for the Division of HIV/AIDS Public Policy and Programs at the Chicago Department of Health.

Long committed to raising public awareness about the devastation caused by HIV and AIDS, Adams chaired the region's most extensive display of the NAMES Project National AIDS Memorial Quilt at Navy Pier in 1988, which was visited by more than 25,000 people.

Adams served as a board member of the Howard Brown Health Center from 1987 to 1989, was a founding member of Human Rights Campaign Fund Federal Club, and served on the local organizing committee for the 1987 March on Washington for gay and lesbian rights.

For his community activism and accomplishments he was named by GAY CHICAGO MAGAZINE the 1988 Organizer of the Year, was given IMPACT's 1994 Alongi Award for exceptional service [his speech was re-printed in the March edition of OUTLINES], and in November was inducted by Mayor Daley's office into the City of Chicago Gay and Lesbian Hall of Fame.

He is remembered by friends and activists as a committed worker who did not seek headlines or power, but rather simple justice for gays and lesbians.

In addition to Konlon, Adams is survived by his mother, Jean Adams, brothers Thomas and William Adams, sister Nancy Whitecar, grandmother Carol Falder, and five nieces and nephews. Interment was private in Macomb.

A memorial service and reception will take place on Thursday, Dec. 8, at 6 p.m. at the Chicago Historical Society, Clark Street and North Avenue. Donations: The Engle Fund for Persons with AIDS, c/o Dr. Robert Murphy, 303 E. Superior, Chicago, IL 60611.

Dr. Carlos H. Amaya 1951 - 1995

Dr. Carlos H. Amaya passed away at Davies Medical Center

May 27. His longtime companion, Ted Peterson, and his sister, Alicia Eldayat, were with him during the final hours of his life.

Carlos was born in El Salvador. He completed his medical studies there, graduating with high honors. He practiced medicine in San Salvador for several years before coming to the U.S. He continued his medical career in this country by becoming a private nurse.

Among others, he saw many of his closest friends through their final ordeal. This was one of his greatest legacies. He had a great sense of loyalty to his friends and a great sense of humanity.

Carlos had too many friends to mention who stood with him until the end, but he wanted to give Ariel O'Donnell a special thanks. He requested that a special thanks also go to Dr. Krampf, Dr. Silverberg and Dr. Cazen, all of whom attended him during his final months. He also wanted to acknowledge the wonderful nursing staff, 2nd Floor North of Davies.

He leaves behind in San Francisco his sister, Alicia, and in El Salvador his devoted mother, Flora; father, Noe; sisters, Rina and Evelyn; and brothers, Mario, Alfredo

Stephen L. Adams

Stephen L. Adams, age 32, of Captiva Island, Florida; died in Beth Israel Hospital on Dec. 15 after a long illness. Stephen was born in Chicopee, Mass., on June 1, 1962. He was educated in the Nashua, (N.H.) school system and attended the Wilma Boyd School of Travel in Pittsburgh. Stephen had been employed at the South Seas Plantation in Florida. He was active in the AIDS Task Force in Florida.

He is survived by his biological mother, Kathryn Woods of Ft. Myers, Fla.; his parents, Lloyd and Ann (Heath) Adams of Nashua, NH; a sister, Sandra Adams of Hudson, NH; nieces and nephew, Jessica, Jennifer and Michael Adams, all of Hudson. He is also survived by his half-sisters, Mary and Patricia Parker of Amesbury, and Jennifer Woods of Florida; and a half-brother, David Wood, of Nashua.

A Mass of Christian Burial was celebrated in Immaculate Conception Church on Dec. 19. The family requests that memorial contributions be made to the Southern New Hampshire HIV/AIDS Task Force, 12 Amherst St., P.O. Box 321, Nashua, NH 03061; or to AIDS Housing Works, New York, NY 10034; or to Home Health Hospice Care, 22 Prospect Street, Nashua, NH 03060.

ADEL "ANTOINE" ANTOUN

January 8, 1952 — October 30, 1994

Died peacefully at St Michael's Hospital.

He was always searching for words, for love, for contentment. On his journey, he gave much of what he was seeking to others around him. May his soul now rest. Antoine will be fondly remembered by his many friends and family.

Love Always,

Hennessey Salutes Comrades Fallen

San Francisco Sheriff Michael Hennessey joined the City of West Hollywood and Aid For AIDS Friday, February 24 in honoring California peace officers who have died of AIDS.

In his remarks at the unveiling of a memorial for officers who have died of AIDS, Hennessey said gay police officers faced prejudice but "laid their lives on the line every day for their communities."

Hennessey saluted the courage of officers with AIDS who struggled every day with the disease, and specifically mentioned the late Lieutenant John Abney, an 11-year veteran San Francisco Sheriff's deputy. Six years after Abney's AIDS-related death, Hennessey said, he was "missed every day."

Abney was a founding officer of the Golden State Peace Officer's Association, a lesbian and gay law enforcement group. Hennessey called him the epitome of a "good cop."

According to Hennessey, 16 San Francisco Sheriff's deputies are known to have succumbed to the disease.

Robert W. Atwood

A memorial service is planned for July 15 at 11 a.m. at the Arlington Street Church for Robert W. Atwood of Beverly who died of AIDS-related complications at the Hospice at Mission Hill on Easter Sunday, April 16, after living heroically for 11 years with HIV. He was 32. 95

"Bobby" always chose the "road less traveled." In love with the city, he'd stroll its streets often, enjoying the grandeur and elegance of Boston's built surroundings. He loved Maine's Seaside Trolley Museum and never tired of hunting for the most obscure diner. One of his favorites was the (now closed) Flash in the Pan Diner, which served gourmet food. He savored the experience of Woodman's fried clams and steamers; Doyle's in J.P. and the Beverly Depot. He also traveled extensively and was an avid skier and beach lover. He delighted in "trashy mystery novels" and was a huge fan of Looney Tunes cartoons.

Originally from Beverly, Bobby graduated from Beverly High School in 1981. After receiving training in culinary arts, he worked as an assistant teacher and kitchen manager at North Shore Vocational Technical Institute. In 1983, he relocated to Atlanta. Returning to Boston in 1984, he went to work for Federal Express. In 1988 he joined Children's Hospital, where he worked until 1994 as database coordinator for the blood donor center. While working at Children's Hospital, he received a degree in computer programming from Northeastern University.

He is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert F. Atwood of Beverly; two brothers, Donald Atwood of Haverhill and Jeffrey Atwood of Alexandria, VA; a sister, Sharon Page of Rochester, N.H.; his beloved cats, "Punkinz" and "Mackie"; and many close friends.

Clayton Forrest Axelrod

January 4, 1996

San Francisco tax consultant, and lately, abstract expressionist artist and ferryboat captain in Berkeley, Clay, 46, died at home in Kensington, Calif., on Jan. 4 of AIDS-related lymphoma.

He is survived by his wife, Melanie Kask of Kensington; his mother, Beverly Axelrod of Pacifica; his father, Marshall Axelrod of Forestville; his brother, Douglas Axelrod of San Francisco; his cat, Lily; and many loving friends.

There will be a memorial Sunday, Jan. 28, from 1-6 p.m. at Clay's home in Kensington. The family requests that rather than flowers, contributions in his name be sent to PAWS: Pets Are Wonderful Support, 539 Castro St., SF, CA 94114; 415/241-1460. ▼

A Mother Remembers Her Son's Tragedy

By ABBY GOODNOUGH

In the comforting din of a coffee shop, a woman with tired eyes sat down to discuss one of the saddest events of her life. On the table she gently propped up three framed pictures of her son, who died in the summer. Audrey Amdursky explained how she had found a bit of solace after his death. In July, Mrs. Amdursky's son Richard Amdur died of complications from H.I.V., the virus that causes AIDS. He was born with hemophilia, an inherited blood disorder. But his case was mild and never kept him from leading a normal life.

The Neediest Cases

In 1983, when his wisdom teeth were removed, he needed his first transfusion. Although no one realized it for years, the blood was contaminated with H.I.V.

Mr. Amdur had no symptoms of illness in 1991, when a test showed that he had H.I.V. Three years later, when he was 28, he died.

"Richard spent his last few months telling friends about his hemophilia and why he had AIDS, trying to take the stigma away from both," Mrs. Amdursky said. "In the end, he was ready to let go."

In one aspect, Mr. Amdur, who lived in Manhattan and who worked in retailing, was fortunate. His family could afford the extensive insurance required to cover his medical bills.

But thousands of others with AIDS cannot, especially if they also have hemophilia, which often requires costly medication and hospitalization.

A few years before her son died, Mrs. Amdursky started volunteering to work with men with hemophilia and AIDS, providing emotional support to them and their families. "Hemophilia is like AIDS in that it's a secret, because everyone is scared of it," Mrs. Amdursky said. "But in the end, Richard did want people to know. And in telling his story, I'm saying something for him."

When Mr. Amdur died, his family and friends donated money to a fund that Mrs. Amdursky had created in his name. Last month, she decided to give the money, $9,050, to The New York Times Neediest Cases Fund. The money, which Mrs. Amdursky earmarked for UJA-Federation of New York, one of seven charities that the fund supports, will provide full medical insurance for several hemophiliacs with AIDS.

"There's enough tension as it is, but when you add the expense of medical insurance it can tear a family apart," she added. "It can break them emotionally, and it can break them financially."

For people with AIDS, one visit to a doctor can cost $2,000, because of highly technical tests, she said. The expenses can easily reach $300,000 a year. Often, Mrs. Amdursky added, people who have both AIDS and hemophilia exceed the limits of employer-sponsored insurance and try to buy expensive private policies or pay out of pocket.

Mrs. Amdursky said she gave the money to the Neediest Cases because she did not want any of it to be used for administrative costs. The Times pays the costs of the campaign. So all contributions go directly to the charities involved.

"I woke up in the middle of the night and realized this was the perfect channel for it," she said. "This way I could be sure it would go to the people who needed it most."

For 83 years, the fund has helped provide programs and financial support for the poor, sick, elderly and disabled in New York City. The current campaign started on Thanksgiving Day and as of Friday had raised $3,067,007.15. Last Jan. 8, the recorded total was $3,030,953.85.

The chief operating officer for program services at UJA-Federation, Jeffrey Solomon, said he hoped that Mrs. Amdursky's donation would raise awareness about the financial burdens of AIDS.

"This is the kind of bridge funding that so many families are desperate for and never get," Mr. Solomon said. "With all the other trauma of AIDS people often forget about the financial impact. It's very rare to have a donor who is so sensitive to this kind of need."

He said the donation would provide medical insurance for as many as three people. Mrs. Amdursky said she hoped that friends and relatives would continue contributing to the fund yearly.

"This is the start of something, and hopefully it will go on for a long time," she said. "I can't think of a better way to remember Richard, and to help take some of the stress out of a terrible situation."

Quilt Story

I took care of my best friend, Sjafril Adjar, until he died from AIDS last June. My family and I submitted a panel in his memory to The Names Project. His panel (#3040) reflected his kindness to others, his fondness for the 49ers, and the love of my family for him. Several of my adult family members viewed his panel in the Stockton exhibit that September. His panel was surrounded in a section of porno stars and S&M leather sex scenes. Yes, everyone's panel should be part of the showing, but I could not concentrate on my best friend's memory. I found that section offensive, especially to my parents and other family members who have children and would be forced to be confronted by the obvious sex scenes.

Ms. Yost, my lesbian sister's partner, and I wrote letters to Anthony Turney, Executive Director of The Names Project, requesting that my friend's panel be placed in an unoffensive section. Mr. Turney's reaction was rigid; it would stay in that porno panel or be removed from the Quilt. During an exchange of letters over several months, Mr. Turney expressed his concern for "precedence" and artistic freedom. He cited contradictory policies without ever produced any written policy statements. Each of his letters was patronizing, a slap in my face. In a fit of cold-blooded arrogance on January 18, he wrote a letter to me saying the issue was under further review but the same day wrote Ms. Yost to say the panel would soon be removed from the Quilt.

I wrote to Mr. Turney that I would pursue a lawsuit if he returned the panel instead of placing it in an inoffensive section. February 14 I received a letter from Steinhart & Falconer, the law firm for The Names Project. I want the public to know that Mr. Turney is diverting our contributions to pay lawyers to fight over the panel of a victim to AIDS, now a victim of Mr. Turney's callous and vicious ego. I ask the community to withdraw all support from The Names Project until the executive director and board of directors are replaced with truly caring individuals. Instead of donating my money to various AIDS projects in several counties, I am being forced to finance a lawsuit just so my entire family and I can visit Sjafril's panel in the Quilt, in a section of other ordinary persons.

Reza Abdoh, 32, Theater Artist Known for Large-Scale Works

By STEPHEN HOLDEN

Reza Abdoh, an Iranian-born creator of innovative large-scale stage spectacles known for their visual flamboyance and ferocious energy, died yesterday at his home in Manhattan. He was 32.

The cause was AIDS, said his companion, Brendan Doyle.

A theatrical visionary who was better known in Europe than in the United States, Mr. Abdoh was the director of Dar a Luz, a tribelike theater group based in New York and Los Angeles. For his young ensemble he devised four original productions between 1990 and 1994: "The Hip-Hop Waltz of Eurydice" (1990), "Bogeyman" (1991), "The Law of Remains" (1992) and "Quotations From a Ruined City" (1993). These environmental theater pieces were phantasmagoric nightmares that used multimedia techniques and raw images of urban decay to bombard the senses.

His work in the United States was presented first in Los Angeles and later in New York, most often in unusual and unmarked spaces: storefronts, warehouses, side streets, industrial lofts, gymnasiums and disused hotels. In Europe, by contrast, his troupe was presented at major arts festivals and urban theater centers.

Mr. Abdoh was born in Teheran in 1963. At the age of 12, he moved to England. By the time he was 14, he had started to direct productions at the National Youth Theater. After moving to the United States, he attended the University of Southern California. In 1985, Diane White, who became his longtime producer, and Bill Bushnell at the Los Angeles Theater Center presented his work for the first time in a theatrical venue.

In 1990, he was commissioned by the director Peter Sellars to create a work for the Los Angeles Festival, which led to a series of later commissions in Europe. He was recently a recipient of a Cal Arts/Herb Alpert

In addition to Mr. Doyle, he is survived by three brothers, Salar Abdoh of Manhattan, Sid Abdoh of Los Angeles and Ali Mohadjerin of Iran; his mother, Homa Mohadjerin of Iran, and a sister, Negar Fathi of Iran.

Tony Azito, 46, Stage Actor

By WILLIAM GRIMES

Tony Azito, the lanky, loose-limbed Broadway actor who led the Keystone Kops in the New York Shakespeare Festival's 1981 production of "The Pirates of Penzance," died yesterday at St. Vincent's Hospital in Manhattan. He was 46 and lived in Manhattan.

The cause was AIDS, said Bonnie Egan, a friend.

Mr. Azito was born in Manhattan and attended public schools in Manhattan and Queens. He studied drama at the Juilliard School, where he worked with John Houseman in the experimental company that later became the nucleus of the Acting Company. He also studied with the dancer and choreographer Anna Sokolow.

He left Juilliard in 1976 to take the role of Mr. Peachum's assistant in the Shakespeare in the Park production of "The Threepenny Opera." A year later, he appeared as Dr. Nakamura in the Brecht-Weill musical "Happy End," which starred Meryl Streep. Both performances were widely praised.

In 1980, he was nominated for a Tony Award and received a Drama Desk Award for his role as the Sergeant in "Pirates." He also appeared in the film version of the operetta.

Mr. Azito spent four years with the LaMama Experimental Theater Company, appearing in a dozen shows. In the 1970's, he often performed cabaret at Reno Sweeney and the Ballroom. With the Shakespeare Festival, he appeared as Bardolph in "Henry IV" (1985) and Feste in "Twelfth Night" (1986).

His film credits included "Union City," "Private Resort" and "Bloodhounds of Broadway," as well as small roles in "The Addams Family" and "Moonstruck." In the television series "Miami Vice" he had a recurring role as the drug dealer Manolo.

He is survived by his mother, Gladys, of Hartford; a sister, Jean-

Mikel Ambrose

March 7, 1946 - Aug. 4, 1995

Our friend Mikel died peacefully, joining his lifetime companion, Bruce Anderson, last Friday evening after a struggle with AIDS. He died at home surrounded by friends and family.

Mikel was born in Port Angeles, Washington and grew up in Denver. He received his Bachelor's degree in Business Administration at the University of Colorado, but moved west in 1968 to make San Francisco his permanent home. Mikel met Bruce in 1973 and together they formed a loving partnership that lasted until Bruce's death in January, 1992.

For 27 years Mikel managed the San Francisco office of Now Designs. Mikel loved San Francisco, the theater, reading, and long evenings with friends playing Pictionary and Samba. He was a number one fan of Beach Blanket Babylon and Val Diamond.

Mikel is survived by his mother Alice and stepfather Bob of Honolulu; his friends Nancy, Craig, Del, Dan, Duane, Adele, Patrick, Joshua, Cory and Neil; and his cousin Susie. A celebration of Mikel's life was held on Sunday, August 6, 1995. Contributions may be sent to Project Open Hand or the San Francisco AIDS Foundation. ▼

Ramon C. Abar

Jan. 1, 1954 - May 1, 1995

Ray's courageous battle with AIDS ended rather suddenly at 9:30 p.m. on May 1. At the time of his passing, he was surrounded by his brother, Ron; sister, Betty; and partner, Ed. He is also survived by his aged mother, Maria; sisters, Elena, Cecilia and Juliana; brother, Fred; plus 28 loving nieces and nephews.

Ray was born in the Philippines, immigrating to the United States in 1973. He loved being an American and a San Franciscan. He worked as a food server at the St. Francis Westin Hotel for 20 years and leaves many friends there.

Ray loved his large supportive family, and he loved to travel. He traveled all over the U.S. and the world. Over the past year he traveled in the California redwoods, in the Sierra, to many places in Europe, to Las Vegas and the Grand Canyon.

A memorial service celebrating Ray's life was held on May 8 at the St. Francis Lutheran Church. His burial took place in the Skylawn Memorial Park in Half Moon Bay, where he can now look out over the beautiful beach and Pacific he loved so much. ▼

Robert Arpin, 48, Catholic Priest Who Made Public He Was Gay

By ROBERT McG. THOMAS Jr.

The Rev. Robert Arpin, the first openly gay Roman Catholic priest in the United States, died on Tuesday at his home in San Francisco. He was 48.

His mother, Jeanette Arpin, said the cause was AIDS, the disease whose diagnosis in May 1987 prompted Father Arpin to make a public declaration two months later that he was a gay priest with AIDS.

"AIDS is a sickness, a disease," he told a San Francisco television station, "not a moral judgment, not God's wrath."

Danny Apolinar, 61; Wrote Rock Musical

3-23-95

Danny Apolinar, a composer and nightclub performer and a writer of "Your Own Thing," a seminal rock musical, died on Thursday at St. Luke's-Roosevelt Hospital Center in Manhattan. He was 61.

The cause was kidney failure, said his companion, John Britton.

Mr. Apolinar, a native of Brooklyn, worked as a freelance graphic artist in the 1950's. Later, he composed cabaret songs and frequently performed as a singer and pianist, first at the Duplex in Greenwich Village in 1960 and later — alone or with the Danny Apolinar Trio — in cabarets and piano bars in Las Vegas, Nev., Miami, Chicago, New Orleans, San Juan, P.R., and St. Tropez, France.

Mr. Apolinar and Hal Hester wrote the music and lyrics for "Your Own Thing," the first rock musical, which opened Off Broadway in 1968. A modern satire based loosely on Shakespeare's "Twelfth Night," it won the New York Drama Critics Circle Award as the year's best musical. The show ran for three years in New York and had seven simultaneous touring companies.

The show's title became an instant catch phrase, expressing the spirit of social tumult of the youth culture in the 1960's and 70's.

Mr. Apolinar also wrote the lyrics for "Changes," a jazz musical, to Addy Fieger's music, and a series of cabaret revues in the late 1980's.

In addition to Mr. Britton, Mr. Apolinar is survived by a brother, Ed, of Brentwood, L.I.

as "an objective disorder" and homosexual practice as "an intrinsic evil."

It also made Father Arpin something of a hero to the gay community in San Francisco and to other gay priests.

Father Arpin, who was born in Chicopee, Mass., worked as a parish priest in Springfield, Mass., before he transferred to San Francisco in 1986 to work as a counselor to people in grief.

Despite the church's teachings on homosexuality, Father Arpin, who estimated that 40 percent of American priests and 60 percent of those in urban areas are homosexual, experienced little interference from the church. The reason, he suggested, was his disease.

"The Roman Church continues to be homophobic," he said, "rooting out and attempting to silence gay priests. I survive only because I have public sympathy because I have AIDS."

Still, he said, he found hope in the fact that the church allowed him to continue as a priest.

"I have nothing to be ashamed of," he said. "I don't think I am an imposter standing before God. I have a clear conscience."

His mother, who lives in Chicopee, is his only immediate survivor.

Dennis Alan Anderson

Child Psychiatrist, 41

2-19-95

Dennis Alan Anderson, a child psychiatrist at Long Island Jewish Medical Center in New Hyde Park, Queens, died on Wednesday at Cabrini Hospital. He was 41 and lived in Manhattan.

The cause was AIDS-related, a hospital spokeswoman said.

Dr. Anderson was a staff psychiatrist at the center's Schneider Children's Hospital and an assistant professor of psychiatry at Albert Einstein College of Medicine in the Bronx.

He played a key role in establishing the hospital's Worob Center for Gender Development and its Sexual Identity Service, which helps children who have problems with sexual identity and conduct. According to Long Island Jewish, the Worob Center is the first of its kind on Long Island and among only a few nationwide.

A native of Tacoma, Wash., Dr. Anderson earned his M.D. in 1979 at the University of Washington, where he also trained in child psychiatry.

Journalist Brett Averill Dies at 37

by Dennis Conkin

Former Bay Area Reporter editor and newspaperman Brett Averill died Tuesday, June 20 of AIDS-related lymphoma at the San Francisco home he shared with his lover Bill Weintraub. He was 37. 95

Born in Cincinnati, Ohio and raised in Newport News, Virginia, Averill began his lifelong vocation in journalism as a high school summer intern working at a variety of newspapers and magazines. He served as managing editor of the Virginia Commonwealth University's Commonwealth Times while a student at the institution.

In 1981, Averill moved to New York City and worked as a volunteer at the fledgling New York Native.

Averill served as editor of the Native from 1981-1984, a pivotal period in national lesbian and gay history. During his Native tenure, Averill quintupled the paper's circulation and guided it into national prominence.

"They were very important years in gay journalism," Weintraub told the B.A.R. after Averill's death. "It was the beginning of the epidemic, there was a sharp increase in anti-gay violence. There was a rise in the religious right and it was the beginning of the Reagan years."

Also of great concern to Averill during his Native tenure was the "intense hypocrisy coming out of Ed Koch's City Hall," and the strain between the lesbian and gay community and the homophobia of the New York Times at the time.

Under Averill's guidance, the Native featured a mix of established gay writers including Arthur Bell, Edmund White, and Vito Russo, along with such then-unknowns as novelists Dorothy Allison and Allen Gurganis.

As Native editor, Averill also gave voice to scores of controversial and talented writers including Larry Bush, current New York city councilperson Tom Dwayne, Fortune Society founder David Rothenberg, and lesbian activists Marcia Pally and Amber Hollobaugh.

The first articles on AIDS, by writer and ACT UP founder Larry Kramer and AIDS medical writer Larry Mass, M.D., were printed by Averill during his tenure at the paper.

Averill also ran "We Know Who We Are," a groundbreaking article by Robert Berkowitz and Michael Callan, the late longtime AIDS survivor, which identified gay male promiscuity as a leading factor in the epidemic.

"As an editor Brett sought to encourage all points of view in the lesbian and gay community, and made sure they received coverage," Weintraub said.

Randy Allen, 38, Performance Artist

5-11-95

Randy Allen, an actor and performance artist, died on Thursday at Pennsylvania Hospital in Philadelphia. He was 38 and lived in Philadelphia.

The cause was AIDS, said Tony Origlio, his press representative.

Mr. Allen was born in La Porte, Ind., and first studied acting in St. Louis. He also attended the London Academy of Music and Dramatic Arts and earned a master's degree in directing at the University of Southern California.

He was best known for impersonating female entertainers, including Judy Garland, Lisa Minelli, Marilyn Monroe and Bette Davis. He toured the country in his one-man show, "P.S. Bette Davis" and performed in "Marilyn: Something's Got to Give," a re-creation of Marilyn Monroe.

He is survived by his companion, Ron Hayes; his parents, Betty and Otto, of Hamlet, Ind.; a sister, Faye Mercer, and two brothers, Ray and Larry, all of La Porte.

Stephen Anderson

July 15, 1954 - May 15, 1995

Stephen Anderson died at home in San Rafael on Monday, May 15. He was born in Albany, N.Y., and lived in California for the past 13 years. He graduated cum laude from the University at Albany in 1976. He attended Georgetown University and San Diego College, where he majored in television production.

Stephen was active in the theatre in New York City. He founded his own production company and produced television commercials. He is remembered by his friends as an avid gardener and for his creativity, spontaneity and fabulous wit.

Survivors include many loving friends; Stephen's father, Harold Anderson; his mother, Charlotte Pringle Anderson; and his sister, Elizabeth Anderson.

A memorial service will be held at Harbin Hot Springs on Saturday, June 24, at 5 p.m. in the garden. Contact Katrine at (707) 987-2900 for more information. ▼

Joe Aton

Feb. 28, 1963 - Feb. 1, 1995

Joe Aton, 32, passed away February 1 from AIDS at Laguna Honda Hospital after a valiant 10-year struggle. Born in Wausau, Wisc., Joe had been a resident of the Bay Area since 1986. He was employed by, and had many good friends at, the gay-owned and operated housecleaning firm, the Clean Team. He was also employed by Nordstrom of San Francisco.

Joe served his country honorably from 1981 to 1984. His tour of duty brought him to such countries and ports as Turkey, Philadelphia, Norfolk and San Diego. He left trails of friends in many sections of the world.

Joe loved his two cocker spaniels, Shader and Shadette; animals in general; traveling; Stevie Nicks; rock music; and free-form dancing. He smiled easily and often, and was very easygoing and full of fun.

Joe was preceded in death by his much beloved mother, Carol Fay Aton. Survivors include his loving lesbian sister, Julie Aton; her partner, Teri; another sister, Sue; brothers, Jon and Steve; partner, Robert Scott; and very good longtime friend, Lionel Hernandez.

Joe will be greatly missed by many, but his joyous spirit will be remembered and live on in all of us. ▼

Champion of Washington state's gay men and lesbians dies of AIDS

Hundreds gather for candlelight march Aug. 6

SEATTLE (AP)—The weather was lousy and arrangements weren't made until the last minute, but that didn't stop more than 750 people from taking part in a candlelight march in honor of Washington state Sen. Cal Anderson.

The Seattle Democrat, the first openly gay member of Washington's legislature, died Aug. 4 after a long battle with AIDS. He was 47.

Organizers had predicted that only 100 to 300 would show up for the Aug. 6 candlelight march in the Capitol Hill neighborhood, which Anderson represented. It former Anderson campaign manager and an aide to City Councilwoman Martha Choe.

Murray led the procession 15 blocks south on Broadway Avenue to Cal Anderson House, a $2.6 million apartment complex for poor people with AIDS.

The march ended with a silent vigil and the singing of "We Shall Overcome."

A memorial service was scheduled for 3 p.m. Aug. 10 in Saint James Cathedral in Seattle's Capitol Hill neighborhood.

Secretary of the Senate Marty Brown said Anderson was found dead by his partner, Eric Ishino, at their Seattle home when Ishino came home from work Aug. 4.

A man who answered the phone at the Anderson home declined comment.

Anderson, a Democratic senator from Seattle's 43rd District, was absent for most of the 1995 legislative session, battling non-Hodgkins lymphoma, an AIDS-related cancer.

Gov. Mike Lowry, a fellow Democrat, called Anderson "a man of integrity and courage who served the people of his district and the state with distinction."

Anderson, 47, was awarded two Bronze Stars and two Army Commendation Medals during his tour of duty in Vietnam. He was appointed to the House in November 1987 to fill out an unexpired term.

He won House elections in 1988, 1990 and 1992 in the heavily Democratic, liberal 43rd District, and won an open Senate seat in 1994 with 81 percent of the vote. He took an interest in civil rights, the environment, and legislation dealing with elections, ethics and state government.

Anderson for years waged an unsuccessful battle to have the Legislature adopt a gay-rights bill. He was a major had rained most of the day and the idea for the event only came up Saturday afternoon.

Organizer George Scarola said word was spread by phone, leaflets and computer.

By the time the march began, the rain had stopped.

"I'm here because Cal Anderson symbolized everything good about the gay community," said Kathy Callahan, 34, of West Seattle. "His loss is a loss for everyone who believes in equality."

"I'm really happy. Happy in a sad situation," said Ed Murray, a

force in fighting anti-gay rights initiatives in 1994.

"He spent too short a time with us," said Senate Majority Leader Marc Gaspard, a close friend. "He lived a life of dignity and courage and grace. His pain is gone, he's with God."

In a 1994 interview, on the day the gay civil rights bill died for the 17th year in a row, Anderson said his tenure in the Legislature put a human face on homosexuality and would pave the way for eventual passage of the legislation and equal treatment for gays and lesbians.

"Egotistically, my being in the House has helped, because they see that gay men care about the same issues they do, that we are not monsters. We are their friends, their family, their compatriots," he said.

Even among colleagues who disagreed with his position on gay rights, he was a favorite. Members from both sides of the aisle called him a hard worker, willing to do the behind-the-scenes committee and constituent chores that "showboat" legislators avoid.

But the inability to pass a gay-rights bill was a perennial disappointment for him.

The closest he came to pushing the measure through was in 1994, when it cleared the House and died by two votes in the Senate. In the 1995 Legislature, in a much more hostile environment, the bill wasn't introduced.

Anderson, a hero to the gay community, also helped battle anti-gay rights initiatives in 1994. Opponents mounted an unprecedented $1 million "decline to sign" campaign and kept the backers from collecting sufficient voter signatures to reach the ballot.

Anderson already was expressing concern about two similar measures that could be heading to the statewide ballot in 1996.

Washington state Sen. Cal Anderson

A $2.6 million apartment complex for low-income people with AIDS was dedicated to Anderson last month.

Anderson, who called himself "a Democrat who happens to be gay," was low-key about his sexual orientation, but was open about it in his campaigns.

"What I do in my bedroom behind closed doors just isn't what my life is about and I've never made it that big of a concern for myself," he told a reporter in 1988.

Anderson stunned his colleagues and constituents in February by announcing that he had full-blown AIDS.

"For many years I've known that I am HIV-positive," he said in a letter he called "difficult and emotional" to write.

Anderson was also known for his sense of humor, sometimes at his own expense. He once rose to announce his sponsorship of a resolution making the apple the official state fruit of Washington.

The subject of fruit was of vital concern to many of his constituents, he said, straight-faced. He sat down. The delayed reaction then came, with the chamber erupting in laughter. Humor, he told reporters later, was a secret weapon for getting them past their discomfort. ▼

Artist and activist CORY ROBERTS-AULI, 32, died of AIDS March 10 in Los Angeles. Roberts-Auli tested HIV positive in 1987 and went on to join ACT UP and Queer Nation. In 1991 he was at the helm of massive protests against Gov. Pete Wilson's veto of AB101, the gay and lesbian civil-rights bill. Targeted at a demonstration by the LAPD, he was beaten, jailed and charged with 18 felonies, including one count of assault with a deadly weapon: His saliva. In 1992, Roberts-Auli began making paintings and shrouds using his blood and other body fluids as material. 96

Victor J. "Jerry" Allen

My wonderful partner of 14 years found peace at last from a lifetime battle with depression on July 2. Jerry took his own life in our home in Portland, and he is now a free spirit who continues to look after those he loved.

Jerry was a career social worker - MSW and LCSW - who took his work seriously as he did most everything in his life. At the time of his death, he was working at the Home Care Division at Southwest Washington Medical Center in Vancouver, Wash.

Jerry was instrumental in forming one of the first gay AA groups in San Francisco. He was appointed by Mayor George Moscone to the SF Citywide Alcoholism Advisory Board.

We moved to the Northwest, where Jerry was born, about three years ago to live a little slower lifestyle. Jerry loved working in the yard, and a beautiful rose garden is testimony to his nurture.

He leaves his loving partner, Don Frueh; his parents, Mary and Vic Allen of Portland; a sister, Caroline Allen of Rancho Cordova, Calif.; three nephews; and a niece. Memorial contributions may be made to the charity of your choice.

Fly free among the stars, dear one.

Marc Clinton Ansley

Sept. 30, 1960 - Aug. 21, 1995

Marc Clinton Ansley, 34, passed away peacefully Aug. 21 at 2 p.m. after a heroic battle with AIDS.

Marc was born in Minneapolis, Minn., the eldest son of Brad and Jill. He received his undergraduate degrees in German and finance from Westmar College in LeMars, Iowa, in 1982. He obtained an MBA from the University of Colorado in Denver in 1989.

While living in Denver, Marc was an active volunteer for the Colorado AIDS Project. He was a facilitator for support groups and spoke to over 150 groups as a man living with HIV.

In 1990 Marc accepted the position of finance director with the Shanti Project in San Francisco. He was a volunteer for the NAMES Project and Under One Roof.

Marc is survived by his father, Brad W.; brother, Robert; grandmother, Helen Whereatt; grandfather, Ben Ansley; and soulmates, Brad Smith, Robert Hall and Richard Davis.

There will be a memorial for Marc Sept. 9 at 1 p.m. at the AIDS Memorial Grove in Golden Gate Park. A reception will follow. For more information call Brad Smith at 861-0128. Contributions may be made to the AIDS Emergency Fund or the NAMES Project. ▼

TOM AYERS, Ph.D.

Although we were privileged to know Tom for only a short while—the months of preparation leading up to and following the AIDS Walk in 1994, he was a fine man and a cherished friend whom we will never forget.

Tom shared with us his keen intellect, great humor, extensive knowledge of nutrition and the workings of the human body (he was a registered dietitian/Ph.D.), and his gift for gab—often in the form of public speaking, sharing his personal experiences with HIV or doing informational presentations on HIV/AIDS.

At the AIDS Walk office, Tom worked beside us as a full-time volunteer staff person. His many talents and vast experience with people and organizations and his unique problem-solving skills, not to mention his incredible style, were invaluable. No task was too small or too complex, and throughout our long work weeks, Tom was always the person who made us laugh with his biting and ironic humor. Almost never were any of us aware that he was in pain nearly every day—the untreatable symptom of the brain lesions which would take his life in June of this year.

Tom had a new love in his life who brought him great joy—baby Ryan, his nephew. We all learned about Ryan's brilliance, his first steps, and his charming personality—complete with pictures always at the ready. All of us know that Ryan's uncle Tom will be his lifelong inspiration, as he is ours.

RIK AMADOR

We both knew our friendship wouldn't last a lifetime. That's why we crammed so much into a few short years—trips, meals with our respective partners, phone calls, serving on the church board together. And the laughter.

Rik never failed to make me laugh uncontrollably with his wicked sense of humor—whether regaling me with a story about his close-knit Cuban family, trips to see the Virgin Mary in Conyers or his impersonation of Michelle Pfeiffer as Catwoman.

The night Rik told me that he and Bruce were HIV-positive, I said, "Yeah, right," thinking it was another one of his practical jokes on me. But it wasn't. He taught me so many things. Foremost among them: to "break the mold."

I was always more cautious/conservative than Rik—in everything from dress to day-to-day living. Thanks to my dear friend, I keep trying to break the mold every day—to do the unexpected.

Not a day goes by that I don't think about Rik. Seven months later, I still can't believe he's gone. I keep expecting him to turn up, laughing his ass off because he's played another joke on me. I think he'd appreciate that image.

Bruce Z. Anderson, 46, theatrical manager

Bruce Zeitz Anderson of Boston, a former New York theatrical manager, died of AIDS Tuesday at Deaconess Hospital in Boston. He was 46.

Born in New Bedford, Mr. Anderson lived in Boston the past year and had previously resided in New York City for 20 years.

He was a graduate of Friend's Academy in Dartmouth, Moses Brown Academy in Providence, R.I., and Brandeis University.

Following a family history of entertainment, Mr. Anderson was a theatrical manager for S.M.P. Stat Co. in New York City.

His late grandfather had owned the Zeiterion Theatre in New Bedford (currently owned by New Bedford Historical Society).

Mr. Anderson was former treasurer of the South Shore Music Circus in Cohasset and former general manager of Cape Cod Melody Tent.

He enjoyed music and travel.

Mr. Anderson is survived by his mother, Elaine of Boston; two brothers, Richard Lloyd of Brooklyn Heights, N.Y., and Frederick Alan of South Orange, N.J.; and five nieces and a nephew.

There will be no services.

Matthew Allen, subject of book, on AIDS, at 13

DALLAS — Matthew Allen knew he couldn't beat AIDS, but he at least wanted to make it to his 13th birthday.

He died Friday, a little more than a month after he reached his goal.

"Matt was very courageous," said his grandfather, the Rev. Jimmy Allen. "He took 36 pills a day every day of his life and never complained."

Allen, former president of the Southern Baptist Convention, had revealed a painful journey of faith in the book, "Burden of a Secret: A Story of Truth and Mercy in the Face of AIDS."

In 1985, Allen found out his daughter-in-law Lydia had contracted AIDS from a blood transfusion hours before Matt was born. Lydia, Matt and Bryan, a second son born before the bad blood was discovered, were infected with the virus.

Matt's father, Scott Allen, wasn't infected, but was dismissed as minister of education at First Christian Church in Colorado Springs, Colo., when he sought his pastor's consolation. Matt was kicked out of the church's day-care center and the family was told to find another church.

When the family moved to Dallas and moved in with Allen and his wife, church after church refused to enroll Matt in Sunday school.

"Good churches. Great churches. Wonderful people. Churches pastored by fine men of God, many of whom I had mentored. Nobody had room for a boy with AIDS," Allen wrote.

Matt went to Lakewood Elementary School until last December. From kindergarten until fourth grade, only a small number of people at the school knew of his illness.

In a recent interview, Matt said his classmates supported him once they found out he had AIDS.

"They treated me like a normal kid before we went public, and they treated me the same after," he told The Dallas Morning News. He could recall only one taunt from a classmate directed at his illness.

Although Matt had been bed-ridden for about a year, his school chums gathered shortly before his Oct. 4 birthday for a small party with balloons and gifts. To the music "The Circle of Life" from the movie "The Lion King," the children paraded around Matt, surrounding him with music, banners and love.

John Ryan Alexander died Sept. 20 of an apparent suicide in Inglewood, Calif. He was 29. A native of Bloomington, Ill., Alexander was active in the community, including his parachute jump in August to help raise funds for the Los Angeles Gay and Lesbian Community Services Center's Y-DIVE to benefit the Pedro Zamora HIV clinic and gay street youth. According to friends, Alexander was a U.S. military veteran. A memorial mass held Sept. 25 at the American Martyrs Church in Manhattan Beach, Calif., was attended by Alexander's family and his many friends in the community.

"Even in that moment he was looking beyond his fears and pain and trying to focus us on the larger issue," said principal Karen Rogers.

"His theme was thanks to the students and a challenge to us to be sensitive to the needs of other people who are HIV positive and who have AIDS," she said.

A memorial service for Matt was scheduled Wednesday at the Dallas Horticulture Center at Fair Park.

Besides his father and grandfather, Matt is survived by his paternal grandmother, Wanda Allen of Big Canoe, Ga., and his maternal grandmother, Joyce Williams of San Antonio. —AP

Clinton Anderson

July 14, 1942 - July 12, 1995

Our beloved friend, Clint, died of AIDS July 12 in Sonoma County, Calif.

His passing was prolonged but peaceful. He was in the superb care of loving friends and hospice support.

While his time near the end was marked with great physical challenge, as you would expect, he determinedly kept his sense of self, in body and soul. He was in a state of serenity and grace. He was faithful to the end in his covenant with all of his collective family, past and present, and full of remorse for everyone else afflicted.

Clint is survived by his brother and his father. Clint was very grateful for his relationship with his father.

Clinton, you were the older brother I never had. I had such good times with you. When you listened, I felt heard, and when you shared, which was never pedantic, I was enlivened. I'm eternally grateful. Though fallible as all of us, you were well along the way on the path of love. My heart is wounded at losing you but joyful for your "new-found" freedom. — Love, Jeff ▼

Eigil Axlil, 71

ASSOCIATED PRESS

COPENHAGEN — Eigil Axlil, whose lifelong crusade for gay rights made Denmark the first country in the world to allow same-sex marriages, died last Friday at 71, a newspaper reported yesterday.

On Oct. 1, 1989, he and Axel Axlil became the first gay men to take marriage vows legally. That was the same day that a law took effect in Denmark that allowed homosexuals to register marriages.

In the late 1950s, both were sentenced on pornography charges to short prison terms for running an international gay modeling agency.

Shortly after their arrest, the men melded their first names into a new surname, Axlil, and used it ever since in a public show of defiance.

Jeffrey Alan Alons

March 9, 1963 - Oct. 28, 1995

Jeffrey passed with quietude, dignity and faith at home in the presence of his companion,

Ross, and his father, Merl. He is also survived by his mother, Rose ("Mama Rose"); sisters, Deborah and Niki; and younger brother, Jason.

Jeff is now a member of the "Fifth Section" of the SF Gay Men's Chorus, which he joined in April 1994. An actor as well as a singer, Jeff studied at the Goodman Theatre in Chicago, taught theatre at Minneapolis' Climb Theatre, and most recently was seen in productions at Theatertworks in Palo Alto.

Jeff received his BA from Dordt College and a master's in English from Notre Dame in 1987. Until June 1994, Jeff was an administrative assistant at the University of California Medical Center. He was a deacon and lay leader at the Metropolitan Community Church of San Francisco, and frequently a soloist with the MCC/SF choirs.

Jeff will be laid to rest Thursday, November 2, in Orange City, Iowa, where he grew up.

A memorial service will be held at the MCC/SF, 150 Eureka St., Saturday, November 4, at 2 p.m. In lieu of flowers, an offering will be taken to benefit MCC/SF music programs. ▼

David Adkins

David Allen Adkins, 28, a resident of Washington, D.C., died Friday, November 10, 1995 at Howard University Hospital due to a drug and alcohol overdose, according to his companion, James Huber of Washington, D.C.

Adkins was born Feb. 26, 1967 in D.C. and lived in the metropolitan area most of his life. He was last employed as a manager at a Dollar City Store in Alexandria, Va. Adkins was also active in the Outreach program at the Whitman-Walker Clinic of Northern Virginia. According to Huber, Adkins enjoyed many outdoor activities, including canoeing, camping, fishing, hiking, biking, and swimming. Adkins also liked shopping and spending time with his mother and friends, Huber said.

"He'll always be remembered for his outgoing personality and terrific smile," Huber said.

In addition to Huber, Adkins is survived by his mother, Adele Adkins; brother, sister-in-law, and nephew Junior, Julie, and Christopher Adkins, all of Sterling, Va.; friend, Greg Eaheart of Herndon, Va.; and many friends and relatives.

A viewing was held Nov. 12 at Ines Pearson Funeral home in Falls Church, Va. Adkins's funeral was held Tuesday, Nov. 14 in White Top, Va. His remains were buried.

Memorial contributions may be made to Adkins's mother, Adele Adkins. Send to Caceres Health Group, c/o of James Huber, 1759 Q St., NW, Washington, DC 20009.

Peter Adair died June 27 of complications from AIDS in San Francisco. He was 53. A native of New Mexico, he was known for his documentary films dealing with compelling topics such as gay liberation, living with HIV/AIDS, and nuclear weapons. His best-known work, "Word Is Out" (1978), is the first filmed portrayal of gay men and lesbians as "everyday people." He is predeceased by his mother, Carolyn, who co-edited the book version of "Word Is Out." Adair is survived by his life partner, Rudy Norton; his father, and two sisters, Margo and Nancy.

Robert Allan

July 8, 1958 - Oct. 16, 1995

Robert Allan passed away on Monday, Oct. 16. Born in Massachusetts,

Robert was raised through high school in Leominster. He then spent four years in Boston working as a data entry operator before moving to San Francisco in 1981.

Until his disability retirement a year and a half ago, Robert was a self-employed as a respected program analyst. He was an outgoing, generous man who enjoyed country western dancing, music of all kinds and cooking.

Robert is survived by his parents, Robert and Gloria Lucier of Leominster, Mass.; sister and brother-in-law, Carol and Lawrence Dion of Leominster, Mass.; brother and sister-in-law, Gene and Pam Lucier of San Jose, Calif.; niece, Donna Cormier of Ashby, Mass.; nephew, Scott Dion of Leominster, Mass.; a host of relatives; and friends in San Francisco and Boston.

Robert's remains will be distributed in San Francisco and Boston. A special thank you to the staff of Kaiser Hospital and to his friends and neighbors. Robert's family requests that any donations be directed to Project Open Hand, 2720 17th St., SF, CA 94110.

We miss you, Robie. ▼

DIANE ARCE, 35. Loving mother, sister and friend. Diane was my sister and my Rock of Gibraltar. I could tell her everything and I knew she still loved me, no matter what. She taught me that life is too short and to enjoy it while you can and to fight for what you believe in and not let anyone tell you otherwise. She was a firm believer that her life was hers and she was going to live it the way she chose. She was a fighter right until the very end. Her death has given me the strength and desire to want to help others with this disease. I still have a part of her in my nephew Desmond, who has lost both of his parents to this disease and has matured far beyond his 14 years. Although she is gone now, Diane lives on in my heart and I speak to her everyday through my thoughts and my tears.

Danny William Abreu

City Opera Marketing Director, 39

Danny William Abreu, director of marketing for the New York City Opera, died on Tuesday at his home in Brooklyn. He was 39.

The cause was AIDS, said his companion, Paul G. Wasmund.

Mr. Abreu began his career at the Metropolitan Opera and later worked as marketing manager for Dance magazine and for the Joffrey Ballet. He taught at Columbia University as part of the theater management program and gave lectures on management for organizations including the American Symphony Orchestra League, the Association of Performing Arts Presenters and Opera America.

He was born in Los Angeles and attended Fordham University at Lincoln Center. Mr. Abreu was executive vice president of Ziff Marketing, a company specializing in planning and research for cultural organizations, before joining City Opera in 1990.

In addition to his companion, he is survived by a stepbrother, John L. Anderson of Philadelphia, and another brother, Harry J. Abreu of Elkton, Md.

Michael Edward Axelrad

Nov. 29, 1939 - Nov. 28, 1995

Michael was a native of San Francisco, the loving companion of David Wunz, the loving son of Jessica and Joseph, and the grandson of Myra and Harry. He graduated from Lowell High, and received a B.A. from Reed College, an

M.A. from Columbia University and an M.B.A. from U.C. Berkeley.

Michael was a self-employed CPA for 18 years. He jostled successfully with the IRS but could not beat AIDS. A resident of Guerneville, he was given and gave lots of love, and is grateful for his friends. The rest do not count. He had great fun at times. Private services were held. ▼

IN THE 13TH YEAR of the AIDS epidemic, 32,914 people—from July '94 through June '95—died from the virus. According to the Centers for Disease Control, to date, more than 300,000 people have died in the U.S. alone—a number greater than the population of Tampa. The figures are staggering, and yet, like casualty reports from a far-off war, they have taken on an abstract quality. “Burn-out and despair have set in,” says Jay Blotcher of the American Foundation for AIDS Research. “World War II was only six years. This is battle fatigue of momentous proportions.”

◆ Perhaps in defiance of the nation’s weariness, Hollywood has focused its attention on the virus, working AIDS into a variety of projects. In 1995, both Warner Bros. and Universal Studios, respectively, released the AIDS-themed films Boys on the Side and The Cure; and interestingly, neither studio felt the need to trumpet its film as a “message movie” in its ad campaign. Spearhead released the single “Positive,” a song about the anxiety of taking an HIV test. On ABC’s General Hospital, two teenage characters tested positive for HIV. Though one character remains asymptomatic, the other died Nov. 29. ◆ Again this year, in conjunction with World AIDS Day and the 7th Annual Day Without Art, ENTERTAINMENT WEEKLY publishes this tribute to members of the entertainment industry lost to the virus in the last year. We present these 120 faces to you with the hope that you look past the numbers and see instead what’s been lost with each passing.

1995 THE FACES OF AIDS

Van Ault

Chattanooga, Tenn., native Van R. Ault, 39, writer and lecturer, died April 2 in San Francisco, where he had moved in 1972.

There he studied under Dr. Barbara Ray, and became a practitioner of The Radiance Technique®, a method of radiant touch therapy, and became an authorized instructor. He pioneered the use of Radiance Technique® in conjunction with hypnotherapy, and published a successful book relating to the study. Ault also wrote articles for Magical Blends and The San Francisco Sentinel, and functioned as editor-in-chief of Centerpoint, a journal supporting his Radiant Touch therapy.

Darrell Ables

Darrell Ables, 40, of Arlington, Virginia died at home on Thursday, December 21, 1995 of complications associated with AIDS, according to his friend, Dwight Ingersoll of Oakton, Virginia.

Ables was born Nov. 1, 1955 in Corpus Christi, Texas. In 1980, Ables moved to the Washington area from Houston to further his career in computers.

According to Ingersoll, Ables enjoyed cooking, reading, traveling, and listening to music.

In addition to Ingersoll, Ables is survived by his longtime companion, Dawn G.T. Gibson of Arlington, and parents, Wendy and Frank Ables of Houston.

Ables's remains were cremated, and his ashes are being kept by Gibson.

A memorial service is scheduled for Saturday, Jan. 20. For more information, call (703) 273-5099.

David Andrus

David Andrus, 28, died Thursday, January 11, surrounded by his loved ones. He is survived by his life partner, Bart Nikolas, and his parents, Paul and Diane Andrus.

A wake celebrating David will be held at his house, 780 Palatine Ave. in Ormewood Park, on Sunday, January 28, from 5 p.m. until 8 p.m. For directions or more information, call 622-4190.

Donations may be made to Cancer Survivors Fund, c/o DeKalb Medical Center, 2701 North Decatur Rd, Decatur, GA 30031.

DANIEL D. ABBOTT

*To my loving husband & best friend,
You were always there for me
The tender wind that carried me
A light in the dark shining your love
Into my life
You've been my inspiration
Through the lies you were the truth
My world is a better place because Of you
I was blessed because I was loved
By you*

Always in my heart and mind, Roger

JEFFERY W. AMORY

February 18, 1943

November 10, 1995

Jeff became the first Coordinator of the AIDS Office of the San Francisco Department of Health in 1983, shortly after moving to the City from Miami, Florida. As Coordinator, Jeff played a major role in the early development of the famed "San Francisco Model" for community-based responses to the AIDS epidemic. He guided the first AIDS groups such as the SF AIDS Foundation, Shanti, Stop AIDS Project, and the AIDS Health Project. He wrote the grants to the federal Centers for Disease Control and to the state Department of Health Services that brought millions of dollars to these fledgling San Francisco agencies and to other innovative efforts to stem the ravages of AIDS. He left the AIDS Office in 1989 and opened a consulting practice focussed on financial planning and management for grass roots organizations.

Jeff was born and raised in Connecticut and received his B.A. from Dartmouth University and an M.A. degree in Education from Amherst University. He then traveled the globe in a wide-ranging career that saw him teach English in Hong Kong, coordinate rural education in South Dakota, manage the finances of the Crisis Intervention Center in Miami, and counsel a variety of AIDS agencies in the SF Bay Area.

Jeff was justly proud of having applied his enormous intelligence and professional energies for the wellbeing of others in the communities in which he lived and worked.

Jeff is survived by his parents Harold and Jean Amory of Jacksonville, Florida, by his brother Paul of Connecticut, and by numerous loving friends in San Francisco and in other cities across the country who were the beneficiaries of his superb skills in home repair, two-stepping, computers, racquetball and boundless caring friendship.

Jeff's friends are gathering for a remembrance of his life on Sunday, February 4, at 3:00pm at 10 UN Plaza, 2nd floor, (corner of 7th & Market Streets, San Francisco) in the facilities of Continuum, the AIDS/HIV Day Health Care Center. For further information, please call (415) 647-5265.

Carolyn (Casey) Adair

March 9, 1996

Carolyn (Casey) Adair died early Saturday morning, March 9, at age 82. She is survived by her husband of 57 years, John Adair; her three children, Peter, Nancy and Margo; her dog, Zia; and favorite cat, Daisy; all of San Francisco.

Casey married John Adair, an anthropologist, in 1939. She actively supported John on all his books and writings including The Navajo and Pueblo Silversmiths.

In 1978, with her eldest daughter, Nancy, Casey edited the book, Word Is Out, based on the film produced by her son, Peter. In the 1980s she edited her daughter Margo's book, Working Inside Out, and was a contributing editor to the national magazine, Green Letter. She was an avid supporter of social justice and had a passion for reading, arguing, gardening, dogs, the arts and, most importantly, baseball.

The family wishes to thank the Kaiser staff, especially Dr. Goard and Victoria Doggit, R.N., and her home caregivers, especially Sheyli Johnstone and George Franklin, who provided her with loving attention. A memorial will be held on Friday, April 5, at 7 p.m. in the Goethe Room at the Academy of Science in Golden Gate Park. ▼

Concealing AIDS often means losing a legacy

My friend died a month ago. His death notice, with far more detail spent on his relations than his life, appeared in the Washington Post 20 days after the night he died, with hardly a sound, in his own bed lying next to his lover.

Jim Graham

He'll never have a news obituary, not in the Post or in the Washington Blade, because both newspapers require that the cause of death be identified. And even if the all-too-common "after a long illness" or some other dodge had been used, the facts of his contribution to Whitman-Walker Clinic could implicitly reveal all. Instead, his family has decided that the son they raised, educated, and loved must not and will not be associated with the disease that killed him. Since AIDS cannot be mentioned or revealed, neither will the key details of his marvelous life be published. And that's the reason that I cannot name him here, nor can anything I write identify him.

So, I ask, what's new?

How many times in the years of the epidemic has this happened, here and everywhere else AIDS has taken its toll? Lots. I can close my eyes and recall many examples: A distinguished psychiatrist whom I once knew well but had lost contact with comes to mind. His death received no public notice at all, and it was eight weeks after his passing that I learned of it. I was not alone; it was I who informed his former colleagues at a major medical school. The public response to his death was silence as chilling as stone.

Yet I find no consolation in the fact that my friend's situation is but another in a long line of "hushed-up" AIDS deaths. It all makes me angry, but not in a lashing-out kind of way. It is instead a deep and churning anger, one that muscles aside the tears that once again I am holding back. I wonder: Why haven't I gotten used to all this hiding as just part and parcel of AIDS? Why am I still so provoked after so much of this?

I remind myself that decisions to hide the cause of death, like the diagnosis that preceded it, are complex. They are usually reached only after much discussion and soul-searching.

I also know that what prompts this response goes way beyond the views of surviving relations. There's obviously an expectation that people generally might think less of the deceased, and perhaps the family itself, if the truth were known. The reaction could be more than just gossip and negative comments. There can be legal consequences, as was the case with a local surgeon who died of AIDS several years ago. After his death, former patients became aware of his HIV status, and there was an uproar

I remind myself that decisions to hide the cause of death, like the diagnosis that preceded it, are complex.

of questions and fears concerning possible infection during surgery. The ensuing controversy was widely reported in the pages of the Washington Post and elsewhere. This is not simple stuff.

But this too is undeniable: Near the heart of it is often AIDSphobia and homophobia — in other words, feelings of shame. And thus the decision against a public obituary is not unlike a judgment borne of shame. It is a judgment on him, on the disease that killed him, and as I think about it, on you and me, and everyone infected with this virus. We are found somehow wanting, when in fact the reverse is the case.

In my friend's life, there is reason for great pride. He met and exceeded high standards. He was professionally accomplished and acclaimed. He gave freely of precious talents to the Gay community and to all in need. He lived his life fully, finding time for creative expression as well as charitable endeavors. He enjoyed a party and he was a great host. He was in a committed long-term relationship with a man to whom he was devoted. He loved, and he was loved.

I am deeply proud of what he and I and others have done and of the often heroic struggle of people with AIDS and their caregivers. Thus I wanted pride visibly expressed to be the keynote. I wanted our world to know how much we gained by his life and lost in his passing. I wanted to publicly share my memories of him.

But I cannot.

Instead I go along with their decision. I will not name him here, out of respect for his family and their wishes. Yet I hope they understand how I feel. While it hurts, and hurts deeply, it also adds to my determination to fight the shadows as well as the substance of AIDS, so that some day we may be free of its chilling stigmas.

Victor Albright

Victor Albright died Feb. 4 due to complications from AIDS. He lived at the Adelphia House in Philadelphia and worked for a Center City bank.

Albright was well-known in the country and western and leather communities in Philadelphia. He was associated with the Philadelphians Club, and was one of the original members of the Independence Squares, Philadelphia's gay and lesbian square dance group.

A recognized face at the Bike Stop, and especially at the two-stepping nights at Woody's, Albright touched many people with his friendliness. His long illness slowed him down, but did not stop his commitment to community projects, among which were the first Names Project Quilt display at the armory, and the Delaware Valley's first country and western AIDS benefit, "Lassos and Lariats." The third benefit, being held in April, will be dedicated to him.

Albright is survived by his parents, Victor and Josephine Albright of Northeast Philadelphia; and a sister.

A memorial service will be held at at 6:30 p.m. March 4 St. Luke and the Epiphany Church, 330 S. 13th St. Memorial contributions may be made to St. Luke's. ▽

John Edward Austin

June 25, 1946 - Dec. 17, 1995

John Austin, Atlanta businessman and AIDS activist, died Dec. 17 after a lengthy and courageous battle with the disease that he spent the last 10 years working to raise awareness of, AIDS.

In St. Louis, Mo., Austin was born and educated in art and the business field. He served in the medical division of the army during the Vietnam War. In the early '70s he joined the Art Stergen family from St. Louis as manager of the then famous Sweet Gum Head show bar in Atlanta.

John loved show business. He enjoyed people and offered that certain little something that made them feel special. His kindness and sparkling personality won over his employees and turned many difficult talents into star performers. He made female impermember of the Atlanta Gay Center.

In 1989 he opened the Atlanta Hair Salon with his companion, Mr. Daryl Lanza.

Billy Jones, a friend of 25 years, said, "John had a singing and dancing, show-must-go-on attitude. He always came up with a hit!"

Surviving in addition to his companion is a sister, Mrs. Pamela Miller, of St. Louis; a brother, Ron Horschman, of Boulder, Colo.; three nieces and two nephews.

Thomas Joseph Acquario

Known as "Chico" to his family and friends, Thomas Joseph Acquario died Dec. 14, 1995, at Beth Israel Hospital of complications from AIDS. He was 50.

From 1976 until 1994 when he retired due to his illness, Mr. Acquario taught French at Boston University where he was also a student counselor. In 1991-92, he was director of Boston University's year abroad program in Grenoble, France.

He was a baseball historian, an unshakable Yankees fan despite having lived in Boston for 20 years, a croquet enthusiast, water colorist, and avid reader. He was also a deeply spiritual person whose practice drew from both eastern and western traditions and enriched his many friendships.

Born in the Bronx in 1945, Mr. Acquario graduated from Vincentian High School in Albany where he was valedictorian. He was also first in his class at Siena College in Loudonville, N.Y. He received a Ph.D. in French from the University of Ohio and also did graduate work in psychology.

Mr. Acquario is survived by his partner, Robert Sterner of Boston and Provincetown, where he spent summers for many years; his mother, Emma Acquario; his brother, William; his sister, Janet DiFabio; eight nieces and nephews; and many devoted friends in Boston and Provincetown.

A memorial service was held at the Jesuit Urban Center in Boston on Dec. 18.

Jose T. Alvarado

Oct. 27, 1957 - May 21, 1996

For all who knew Jose, knew of his big heart. His lifetime goal was to help others be happy, in return that would make his life fulfilled.

Jose passed peacefully at home, with his partner of 12 years, family and friends by his side. He is now in the heavens above, watching and guiding us with warmth and love as he always did.

Even in the world after this world, we will be together. Two magical beings of light and air, dancing through the heavens, shaking the stars free from the night sky. Even in the life beyond this life, where a billion souls free-fall through the universe, I will come and I will find you. Until we meet again, always remember... I love you.

Jose will be missed by his parents, Joe and Hope; brother and sisters, Ruben, Yolanda, Sylvia and Yvonne; all of his wonderful friends; and most of all his soulmate and lifetime partner, Ron Alvarez. Jose will always remain in our hearts and prayers.

Lois Angeles a.k.a. Brett Moore

Sept. 28, 1955 - July 20, 1996

Lois Angeles (a.k.a. Brett Moore) - show girl, balloon girl, lounge lizard and private instigator - passed on to that emergency cocktail party in the sky. Lois served this life hard and furious.

Dedicating many years to being a surgical nurse, from Kaiser to St. Mary's to New York and back, Lois used her skills - and she had many of them - to help others. She could cartwheel down Market Street with the best of them.

Lois' zest for life was awe-inspiring, and her zest for drag was scary. Leaving many a good friend and family member behind, thoughts and nightmares of Lois will be with us forever.

A gathering will take place at the AIDS Memorial Grove in Golden Gate

William Allen

William Roy Allen, 44, a long-time resident of the Washington, D.C. area, died from AIDS related complications at the side of his life partner, Michael E. Herman, at the couple's home in Washington, D.C., on Friday, May 24, 1996, according to Herman.

Allen was born Jan. 6, 1952 in Paris, Tenn., where he was raised and educated. He moved to the D.C. area in 1970 and worked in a variety of capacities; first as a clerk and computer operator for the FBI personnel office, and later as an administrative assistant for the U.S. Department of Energy. He also attended Bell Business College from 1972 to 1977.

Most recently, Allen worked as a computer network administrator for the D.C. law firm Leventhal, Senter, and Lerman, and over the past ten years supervised the installation and daily operation of the firm's computer network system. Allen also served as treasurer for the Association of Legal Information Systems Managers, Inc. (ALISM).

Allen's interests included horses, photography, and collecting baseball caps. He also enjoyed the "spiritual uplift" of gospel music, Herman said, particularly listening to the gospel choir at the Metropolitan Community Church of Washington, D.C., where he regularly attended services.

Allen also enjoyed traveling to Hawaii, Germany, "and many points in between," said Herman, and valued the moments he shared with friends.

He will be remembered for his "exuberance for all of life's adventures," particularly his love for roller coasters, and for his "beautiful smile and trademark laugh," said Herman. Allen will also be remembered for his "fighting spirit" and "deep concern for others," said Herman. He often attended candlelight AIDS vigils and participated annually in the AIDS Walk, completing the walk last year in a wheel chair, Herman said.

In addition to Herman, Allen is survived by half-brothers James Howard and Hurley Edward Allen of Paris, Tenn.; nieces Shaneka Allen Carter and Stacy L. Allen of McKenzie, Tenn.; and several aunts, uncles, and cousins. His close surviving friends include James R. Kent of D.C., Michael Mitchell of Oakland, Calif., and Rudolph Chandler of Nairobi, Kenya. Allen is also survived by his "very dedicated" home health aides Rosa Richardson and Abiodun Esam.

John 'Jack' Antoine

John "Jack" Antoine, 32, of Long Beach, California and Las Vegas, Nevada, died at his Long Beach home on Tuesday, April 2, 1996 of AIDS-related complications, according to his partner of more than six years, Rick Keseley.

Antoine was born July 10, 1963, in Cohasset, Mass., and attended college in Massachusetts. In the mid-1980s he began working for New York Air as a flight attendant, and he later transferred to Continental Airlines, where he worked until 1987 as an international flight attendant.

After leaving Continental, he became the office manager for Dr. Arlen Leight, a Dupont Circle dentist, and then worked for another dentist, Dr. Steven Garcia. Keseley said Antoine got to be well known because Leight's office had such a large Gay practice.

Antoine enjoyed shopping, cooking, country western dancing, and traveling. He especially liked to take trips to Boston to visit his family, said his friend Marc Slyman.

"He was able to live a fairly full life until recently. People who knew him knew the value of him," Keseley said.

Antoine is also survived by his parents, Marge and A.J. Antoine of Cohasset; and siblings, Nancy Antoine-DiRocco, Patricia Lyne, and Jane E. Antoine, all of Massachusetts; and Richard Antoine of Georgia, as well as many other friends and family.

Antoine's remains were cremated on April 5. A memorial service was held April 8 in Cohasset.

Contributions in Antoine's name can be made to The Amarylis Foundation (a housing provider for AIDS patients in Massachusetts) PO Box 269, Marshfield, MA 02050.

Al's story

Al was 32 years old, full of life, and loved by all who knew him. He heard of a study being done with 30 HIV/AIDS patients. Al was one of those who were chosen. The study involved whole-body hyperthermia, which means raising the temperature of the body by heating the blood. (See "Extra Body Heat No Treat for HIV," Positively Aware, November/December 1995.)

The study site where Al went was St. Elizabeth Hospital in Lafayette, Indiana. It was sponsored by IDT, Inc., of Pittsburgh and Hemo Cleanse, Inc., of West Lafayette, Indiana, and was FDA-approved.

Al had been diagnosed with AIDS two years before entering this study. He was so happy about having been approved. All he would say was, "I'm going to live."

On May 18, 1995, he underwent the whole-body hyperthermia treatment. Yet, halfway through the treatment, Al began to hyperventilate. This caused cerebral edema (swelling of the brain), persistent coma, and possible seizures. For several days after that, he was attached to a ventilator and was sedated to minimize movement.

Eventually, we persuaded the doctors to decrease the dosages of the drugs to see if he would come out of the coma. When he did awake, we noticed that he was not the Al that we all knew. He had suffered multiple strokes. He could not walk, could barely lift his arms, wasn't able to speak, and had lost control of his bowels. In addition, one eye was crossed, and he had trouble swallowing.

The doctors concluded that they could not help him. So we brought him home, where he died with his family on June 22. ~~23~~

We lost a great human being due to this experimental treatment. Anyone who is considering this study needs to realize that the procedure is by no means proven. Anyone who undergoes this treatment is risking his or her life. Remember, one dead person is too many.

Gary Allan Airel

Gary Airel died on April 30 after a long, courageous battle with his illness. He was born in Geneva, New York on April 16, 1949. Gary attended SUNY in Albany, New York where he earned a Bachelor's degree and graduated cum laude. He then attended the Graduate School at SUNY in 1971.

Gary moved to Boston in 1976. He eventually began work in long-term health care and then joined the supervisory staff of the Boston Health and Swim Club. He later became a Certified Aerobics Instructor and taught at various health clubs throughout the city.

Gary worked with the AIDS Action Committee's Speakers Bureau and devoted his time educating many diversified groups about AIDS awareness and prevention.

Gary is survived by his longtime companion, Edmund Ciampolillo of Boston; his mother, Mary Frances Fortenot of Manou, La.; his father, Walter Airel; and his sister, Lynn Airel, both of Geneseo, New York; and his brother, Gregory Airel and family of Strongsville, Ohio.

Gary will be remembered by his family and friends as the handsome, determined, intellectual, honest man that he was. He has been a major source of inspiration in many peoples' lives. He will be greatly missed by those of us who knew him well and loved him.

A service to celebrate Gary's life will be held at 11 a.m. on May 19 in the Chapel of J.S. Waterman and Sons-Eastman Waring, 495 Commonwealth Avenue, Kenmore Square, Boston.

Memorials in Gary's name may be made to the Gary A. Airel Memorial Fund, c/o Edmund Ciampolillo, 78 Berkeley St., Boston, MA 02116. 96

Abel Arron Alvarado died May 18 of complications from AIDS in Los Angeles. He was 36. A native of Carlsbad, N.M., he was a respected artist. He was preceded in death by his father, Abraham, and brother, Angel. Survivors include his mother, Maria; sisters, Amanda Granger, Adele Talavera, Anna, Andrea and Angie; brothers, Adam (and Adam's partner, Kevin Hunt), Abraham Jr., nieces, nephews; and many friends. 96

Donald S. Anthony, 45

Insurance agency president
9-14-96

Donald S. Anthony, president of Anthony and Malcolm Insurance Agency, died Saturday at his home in Haverhill from complications due to AIDS. He was 45.

Born in Haverhill, Mr. Anthony graduated from Haverhill High School in 1969 and Graham Junior College in 1971.

As the third generation president of Anthony and Malcolm Insurance Agency in Bradford, Mr. Anthony was a member of many insurance organizations. He was also a member of the Haverhill Chamber of Commerce.

Mr. Anthony was a former member and treasurer of the board of directors for the Greater Haverhill YMCA. He was also a board member for the Strongest Link AIDS Services in Topsfield, a member of the board of directors and treasurer of the Elmwood Cemetery in Bradford, a member of the National Eagle Scout Association, an active member of the First Church of Christ, and a member of the Northern Haverhill Striders.

Mr. Anthony leaves his parents, Richard S. Anthony and Lois E. (Clough) Anthony of Kingston, N.H.; two brothers, Kenneth J. Anthony of Haverhill and Thomas B. Anthony of Hamilton; and his close friend of many years, Bruce Christie of Haverhill.

A memorial service will be held Saturday at 10:30 a.m. at the First Church of Christ in Bradford.

Michael John Aringdale

May 15, 1964 - July 11, 1996

Michael Aringdale crossed over at Henry House in Santa Rosa among close friends and family members. Born to John and Caren in Vallejo, Calif., he chose to live locally his entire life.

Michael enjoyed entertaining, fine dinners and parties, command performances, catering and teaching the finer points of beauty in hair. The impersonation troupe he worked with provided a fine vehicle for his contribution to theatre and dance, and his impeccable impersonations of Madonna and Annie Lennox will be fondly remembered.

To say that he is missed is an understatement. Michael leaves behind a close-knit, loving and supportive family, as well as a large circle of wonderful friends and business associates.

I want to thank the many people who loved and cared for Michael in his ending process. Please know that the love and kindness you gave to him will come back to you threefold. Good-bye, dear Michael; our love is with you always.

Daniel E. Albertson

June 6, 1962 - Sept. 7, 1996

Dan spent his life working and volunteering for many organizations in the gay and lesbian community, both in LA and SF. Some of his proudest achievements were founding the Community Youth Education Project in LA, his time at LYRIC and the Stop AIDS Project in SF, and his creation of Little Dog Productions for promoting nonprofit events.

Dan was predeceased by his mother; Aunt Lourine; his first spouse, Robert; Max; and many dear friends. He leaves behind his loving spouse, Sean; his dog, Granger; baby, Spike; and his family of friends and adversaries.

Dan would wish to express his love to Cosmo, Gino, Reid, David, Evan and Todd, Anne, Laela and the kind staff at Davies, and others too numerous to list.

We'll always remember Dan for his integrity, courage and strength; his generous nature, stubborn independence and blunt sarcasm; and most of all, the outspoken way he lived his short but full life.

A ceremony will be held Sunday, September 15, 3 p.m., in the AIDS Memorial Grove in Golden Gate Park. Instead of flowers, please make donations in Dan's name to: Marine Mammal Center, Marin Headlands G.G.N.R.A., Sausalito, CA 94965.

We love you, Dan.

G. ERIC ARCHIBEQUE, MD, died September 11 of unknown causes after living with HIV for 10 years. Archibeque—known to online HIVers as “Ask Dr. Eric,” moderator of Stadtlanders Pharmacy’s “Personal Connections” HIV chat room—was born in Albuquerque, New Mexico, and lived in California. He moved to New York City this past January. An internist, he served on the clinical faculty at the University of California system, teaching at both the San Francisco and San Diego campuses, and also worked at the AIDS clinic at San Francisco General Hospital. Archibeque, 40, routinely volunteered additional time at San Francisco’s Haight-Ashbury Free Clinic and New York City’s HIV Community Clinic. He died at home with his partner, Dave Pasquel, and his two cats, Michael-angelo and Mia. 1999

T.J. Anthony dies at 37 <sup>96</sup>

by Dennis Conkin

Gay social justice activist and political consultant T.J. Anthony died peacefully at home on August 2 after a long illness. He was 37.

Michigan-born Anthony survived a traumatic childhood that included life in more than a dozen foster homes before serving as an aide to two San Francisco Supervisors and as advisor and friend to scores of local community leaders, political figures, and activists.

Anthony served most recently as an aide to Supervisor Barbara Kaufman, whose campaign he managed in 1992.

During his tenure with Kaufman, Anthony helped create the city’s Human Resources Department, but is best known for his role in developing the revised San Francisco City Charter, approved by voters last year.

Anthony was presented with a leather-bound volume of the Charter by San Francisco Planning and Urban Research shortly before his death, and was recognized with a proclamation in July by Mayor Willie Brown for his monumental contribution to the charter reform effort.

“I loved T.J.,” Kaufman told the Bay Area Reporter. “This has been like losing one of my kids. He wasn’t just my aide, he was a good friend. His death leaves a tremendous void.”

During his tenure as an aide to former Supervisor Richard Hongisto, Anthony was instrumental in developing the city’s catastrophic leave policy, needle exchange policies, and the city policy of reunification of foster children with their birth families. He also authored Proposition X, a voter-approved initiative that banned city officeholders from having slush funds in “Friends Accounts.”

“While a public policy analyst and legislative aide, T.J.’s true passion lay in realizing his core beliefs through political activism,” said longtime friend and colleague Tab Buckner.

“This is like losing a brother,” said long-time friend, attorney Kay Tsenin. “T.J. was the consummate feminist, and his friends will always carry him in our hearts.”

Anthony helped organize the nation’s first men’s march for choice, was a past president of his union local, past president of the Judicial Project, and a member of the executive board of the California Democratic Party. A convert to Judaism, Anthony was also on the governing board of the American Jewish Congress.

A memorial service celebrating Anthony’s life and accomplishments will be held at 2 p.m. Sunday, August 11 at The Congregation Sherith Israel, located at 2266 California Street in San Francisco. ▼
