

Herve Guibert, 36, wrote about AIDS experience

PARIS — Writer Herve Guibert, who chronicled his struggle with AIDS in two autobiographical best-sellers, has died of the disease. He was 36.

Mr. Guibert's death Friday came two weeks after he attempted suicide by an overdose of sleeping pills Dec. 13, the eve of his birthday.

Born in Paris in 1955, Mr. Guibert began work as a journalist in 1973 and spent nine years at the respected daily Le Monde. He wrote his first novel at the age of 22.

Works such as "Les Chiens" (The Dogs), filled with homosexual eroticism, and "Mes Parents" (My Parents), a biting attack on his family, had a mixed critical reception.

But Mr. Guibert won plaudits from critics and the public alike when he went public with his illness and wrote two novels based on his experiences.

In "L'Ami Qui Ne M'a Pas Sauve la Vie" (The Friend Who Didn't Save My Life) and "Le Protocole Compassionnel" (The Compassionate Protocol), he recounted in hallucinating style the torment of the disease.

"He helped those who endured the same burden as himself, and showed everybody that life deserves to be fully lived," Culture Minister Jack Lang said.

A sequel to "Le Protocole Compassionnel" titled "L'Homme Au Chapeau Rouge" (The Man in the Red Hat) will be published in February by Gallimard.

Mr. Guibert will be buried Friday on the Italian isle of Elbe. 12-27-91 —AP

Kevin Michael George, AIDS

Kevin Michael George, age 29, died from AIDS-related complications on December 3 at New England Deaconess Hospital in the presence of friends and family. A native of Boston, George had a lifetime commitment to community activism and a selfless devotion to the needs of others.

Born in Jamaica Plain, George attended Boston English High School, where he was president of the Student Council and a student member of the Boston School Committee. While in high school, George co-founded Boston's Committee for Gay Youth and was a member of Lambda.

George received a bachelor's degree from the University of Massachusetts at Amherst in 1982. While a college student, George served as president of the Peoples Gay Alliance, as a member of the Chancellor's Committee on Civility and as an active participant in student government. He also worked as a resident assistant.

After graduating, George worked as a manager of several clubs and restaurants in both Provincetown and Fort Lauderdale and became a licensed real estate broker. In Provincetown, he first became active in Alcoholics Anonymous and remained active in that organization until his death.

For eight years, George was a student of the Indo-American Karate School. He achieved the rank of Third Degree White Dragon and was a member of the Goldens, the governing body of the Poekoelan Association. In October 1987, when George moved to the South End, he founded the Boston Poekoelan Association, a school of self defense, and taught classes aimed at both the gay and straight community, as well as classes for children.

While living in Boston, George was a contributor to the book You Can Do Something About AIDS, served on the board of directors of the Boston Living Center, and was featured in 100 Legends, a collection of art featuring people with AIDS. In addition, under George's leadership, the Monday night dinner program for people with AIDS grew from a small, informal gathering to a weekly program that serves over 100 people at AIDS Action Committee headquarters.

George recently received awards from the AIDS Action Committee and the National Gay Task Force, recognizing his work in support of people with AIDS. In addition to his many political and community activities, he maintained a lifelong interest in science fiction and comic books, amassing a vast collection of both.

Kevin George is survived by his parents, William and Margaret George, of Jamaica Plain; his brothers, David, Terrence and Robert, also of Jamaica Plain; his sister Christine Ellis, of Milton and her children, Stephen, Michelle and Bradford; and by his countless friends.

A memorial service for George will be held on Sunday, January 28 at 2:00 p.m. at the Arlington Street Church in Boston, followed by a reception in his honor at Club Cafe. Donations in George's memory may be made to the AIDS Action Committee or to the New England Deaconess Hospital AIDS Research Fund.

Michael Vincent Giovinco 37 year-old Cambridge resident

Michael Vincent Giovinco of Cambridge died Saturday, February 10, 1990 in the company of friends at the Hospice of Mission Hill, of AIDS-related causes. He was 37 years-old.

Michael worked at the Coffee Connection since 1978, most recently in the position of Purchasing Manager. He is fondly remembered by many colleagues and patrons for his thoughtfulness, attention to detail, and imagination. Although he was a shy man at heart, Michael loved an invitation to romp. On Saturdays, he and his friend Amy used to pause from waiting tables at the Harvard Square Coffee Connection and waltz to Pachelbel's Canon. A self-educated man who loved T.S. Eliot, mysteries, and references of all kinds, Michael was a friend to the homeless in Harvard Square; to lovers of antique banks, plates, and toys; to program members who attended meetings at his apartment in the early 80's, and especially to children.

After his diagnosis in 1987, Michael transformed the courtyard and streetfront of his apartment on Chauncy Street into spacious and beautiful gardens, which were a refuge and delight to many. These oases were inspired by the memory of his mother, Dorothy, and by spiritual gifts for which Michael daily gave thanks. Michael also took time to share these gifts as a speaker in several AIDS ACTION volunteer trainings and, most recently, as a speaker on the Today Show.

The family Michael leaves behind includes his father, Vincent, and stepmother, Patricia of Greenwich, Connecticut; sister Terri McInnes of Cleveland; brother of Steyen of New York; and nephews Michael and Joseph McInnes. It also includes his friend Andrea Small, of Schoharie, NY; past partners Michael Connolly, Michael Castellana, and Bill McCallion; his AIDS ACTION buddies Paul Paternoster and Pamela Sussman Paternoster and their son Aaron; Cathy, Grace, Smitty, and other neighbors; and many friends.

A memorial service will be held at 3:00 p.m., Saturday, March 3, at the Friends Meeting House, 4 Longfellow Park, Cambridge. In lieu of flowers, contributions may be made to the AIDS ACTION Committee or to the Hospice at Mission Hill. □

Richard Lee Gibson Boston Clinical Partners employee

Richard Lee Gibson of Boston, 43 years old, died May 21 of AIDS-related complications. Richard was the dear friend of Gianni Zeno of New York City; Jos Fayette of Norwich, Conn.; Joan Sulley of Jamaica Plain; and Ron Johns of Boston.

Richard last worked as an administrator at Clinical Partners in Boston where he had been since 1990. Prior to that he also worked at the Boston Opera Association, the Boston Lyric Opera and the Boston Music Viva. He attended the University of Texas at Austin, where he received a Bachelor of Arts Degree in French. He also did graduate work in linguistics at the American University in Washington, D.C.

A memorial service will be held on Sunday, June 16, at 2:00 p.m. at the Chapel of the J.S. Watermen & Sons/Eastman-Waring Funeral Service, 495 Commonwealth Avenue, Kenmore Square, Boston. Parking attendants and physically challenged parking will be available. Relatives and friends are respectfully invited to attend. Interment will be private.

In lieu of flowers, donations in Richard's name may be made to the AIDS ACTION Committee, 131 Clarendon Street, Boston, MA 02116. Donations may also be made to the Animal Rescue League, 10 Chandler Street, Boston, MA 02117. 1991

DAVID GALLEGLY

Feb. 15, 1993, age 42

Actor and singer who originated the role of Guy Rose in the L.A. musical Boyz n the City. Meets Boy. 213

Jay Goldfarb was a wonderful member of our community who died in February. This is the eulogy that was delivered by his father.

A child is the greatest treasure on earth. Jay was a very special person, a man for all seasons, and Jay, we will love you for all eternity. Our love for you is boundless. A short time after Jay became ill, Esther showed me a short poem by Rae Turnbull that I think is appropriate to read now:

Look for me when I'm gone.
Look for me in the clouds
That drift across the sunrise of a winter sky.
Feel my presence in the mist
That rises from the river bottom
On a spring morning
And when the grass is green,
And the smell of the May
Is strong and sweet...
Look for me.

The beauty of Jay lay not only in his countenance but inside the deepest part of his soul.

His warm smile, his gentleness, his helpfulness, his kind words and charitable ways. His attempt to find goodness in everything and anything, always stood out like a beacon in a lighthouse.

Hamlet said of his father, "We shall not soon look upon the likes of him again," and so it is with our Jay.

When Jay was born it was 3:00 in the morning. I looked up at the stars in the heavens and said, "Thank you for this beautiful son. Indeed he has been so for all the years of his life and forever more.

When I was a little boy, I had a Zayda, which is grandfather in Jewish. He was a very pious man. He would always say to me, "If a person is merciful and just, when that person dies, he will sit at the right hand side of God. If there is such a thing, Jay is now sitting in his reserved seat.

I also hope there is a hereafter, because the thought of not seeing Jay again is too painful to contemplate.

Jay was well liked and loved by all who came in contact with him from his formative to adult years. He was easy to be with and never gave us problems growing up. Jay achieved the highest standards all through his school years and never boasted of his achievements.

Jay graduated from the University of Vermont Summa Cum Laude and was a member of Phi Beta Kappa.

Jay chose to attend Tufts Medical School and specialized in internal medicine. When Jay completed medical school his mother became ill. Jay returned home for thirty days. He took care of his mother and ministered to her with his usual kindness and tenderness.

While growing up, Esther and I took Jay and Cheryl on beautiful vacations that he enjoyed so much and will always be a part of our beautiful memories.

Jay had so many great abilities. Anything he put his hand to came out so beautiful. His sketching was marvelous. He played piano with such feeling. Jay loved architecture. Beautiful scenery and all nature. He was an excellent photographer, and we now have framed photographs of so many places he visited in adult life as another beautiful memory of him.

One of Jay's proudest moments came when he took me sailing on the Charles River. I could see how happy he was with this accomplishment. He was a really good sailor.

Jay brought beauty, serenity, understanding into our lives. He was and always will be our prince and knight in shining armor. Then I recall the time Jay came to us, and told us of his being gay. He came with a great deal of concern, fearing we would turn our backs on him.

Nothing could have been further from the truth. If anything, we loved him more and more.

We also realized that his soul had been tortured in trying to keep this from us. Our hearts were broken for Jay. We gave him assurance, and made him comfortable in the knowledge that we would always be at his side. He was too dear and precious to us. Then, as a doctor he demonstrated the same qualities that endeared him to his family, friends and acquaintances.

He was kind, understanding and treated his patients with dignity no matter their station in life.

With the onset of Jay's illness, he displayed a rare courage. He kept his calm, determined not to panic. He fought valiantly and never wavered.

Then in his darkest moments, Jay would counsel and console other patients with AIDS. Jay was a man who stood ten feet tall. Often he would say to his mother, "When I'm gone will you please make some chicken soup for someone else with AIDS?" We surely will.

Esther and I were also so proud of Jay's home. He decorated it so beautifully and did everything by himself, until he became ill. For Esther and I there will never be another Jay. We will miss all his beautiful qualities. All the things we learned from him, the laughter, the tears, and not being able to kiss him and tell Jay, "We love you so very much."

Then for his dedication to his work, and contribution to the clinic, Jay was greatly honored by having the clinic named "The Jay Goldfarb, M.D. Ambulatory Care Center." Dedicated September 28, 1988.

Of all the accolades given to Jay, he was proudest of the words teacher and healer.

So finally, Esther and I would say to you: Thousands of years from now, if someone would listen to the howling winds, of the rustling of leaves in the trees, or the eaters running downstream in the rivers, lakes or streams, you will hear someone saying, "Esther and Keeva love Jay."

Daniel D. Gage, Jr.

8/24/59—6/13/90

Dan Gage died from AIDS on June 13, 1990 at Beth Israel Hospital. He was surrounded by family and friends. Dan was a photographer who thrived in this medium of expression. Since his diagnosis, Dan was active in several AIDS-related organizations, including the PWA Coalition and the AIDS Action Committee Speaker's Bureau. According to Laurie Sherman, coordinator of the Speaker's Bureau, "Dan became one of our best speakers." Another source of strength and support for Dan came from his involvement in the fellowship.

Dan is survived by his mother, Emily Ann, his father, Daniel D., Sr., siblings Colm, Maura, Tim, Lily and many friends.

His family and friends invite you to a celebration of Dan's life on September 10 at 7:00 p.m. at Arlington Street Church with a reception to follow in the parish Hall. In tribute, a slide presentation of Dan's work will be included in the memorial service.

We love you and miss you, Dan.

Francis Giambrone

Longtime Boston-area psychotherapist

Francis Giambrone died peacefully at home on Wed., April 8, surrounded by loving friends. He was 52 years old.

His practice in psychotherapy spanned a twelve-year period, and focused initially on gay married men, many of whom he helped to make important transitions in their lives. He was honored by Gay Fathers of Boston at a banquet last year for his contributions to that group. Francis co-led the first PWA support group at AIDS Action Committee for several years. He also worked at Hospice West and was a member of the vision group which founded the Hospice at Mission Hill.

In addition to his many professional accomplishments, Francis was an appreciator of art and an artist, who expressed himself through photography, painting, theater, and most recently, doll-making.

He derived his greatest pleasure, however, from his friends, and he was constantly creating opportunities to bring people together, whether for a weekend at "Narnia"—his home in Maine—or at an elaborate dinner party at home.

The common thread which ran through all of Francis' life was his spiritual quest. In seeking his own path, he investigated many paths. His early studies for the priesthood were followed by travels to Greece, Israel, Nepal and India, where he ordained for a period as a Buddhist monk. He later spent two years as resident manager of Insight Meditation Society in Barre, MA. His caring for others was most deeply expressed through his work and his friendships.

Francis is survived by his parents, Frank and Catherine and his sister, Carol, of San Luis Obispo, CA; his brother, James, of Khatmandu, Nepal; his niece, Julie; and his nephew, Eric.

The time and place of a memorial service will be announced at a later date. A charitable fund is being established in Francis' name, and contributions in his memory may be sent to the Francis Giambrone Fund, c/o Michael Zucker, 7 Arlington St., Cambridge, MA 02140.

Dr. Andrew Geiger

Worked at Emerson Hospital

Dr. Andrew Geiger, a longtime resident of the South End, died of AIDS on September 3, 1990 at his parent's home in Wayland. He was 33.

Dr. Geiger graduated from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and the University of Massachusetts Medical School in Worcester. He interned at St. Vincent's Hospital in Worcester where he became chief resident. He was board-certified as a radiologist in 1988, and practi until July, 1990, at Emerson Hospital.

Andrew was a kind friend and a fine doctor. Curious and adventurous, he travelled widely in the United States, Europe, and Asia. He loved new music, Eames chairs, pterodactyls, and was a familar face at Hammersley's Bistro and the Tremont Ice Cream Shop. Once diagnosed, he met the indignities of his disease with wit, scorn, and courage.

He is survived by his parents, Karl and Bettyanne Geiger of Wayland; his sister, Elizabeth Hattemer of Louisville, Ky.; three brothers, Jonathan of Seattle, Christopher of Boxfod, Mass., and Stephen of Waltham; and many close friends in Boston.

Donations may be made in his memory to the Boston AIDS ACTION Committee.

Howard Grunwald

Howard Grunwald passed away on Friday, Jan. 17 in San Francisco after a long and brave bout with AIDS.

A graduate of Syracuse University, Howard relocated to Boston in 1981 where he resided until 1985. During this period, Howard worked on a number of independent film projects and also was an employee at Rebecca's Cafe on Charles Street.

Howard cultivated many strong and enduring friendships in Boston and San Francisco. His wit, charm and intelligence will be missed.

A memorial service was held on Feb. 2 in San Francisco.

Daniel Gardiner, 37

Chef, active in AIDS issues

Daniel D. Gardiner, 37, a chef who formerly lived in Boston, died of AIDS yesterday in Maine Medical Center in Waterville. He had lived in Maine for the past year.

Mr. Gardiner had been a chef for 18 years and had worked in several restaurants in Denver and Chicago. He was also a chef aboard several offshore oil rigs in the Gulf of Mexico.

He was born in Boston and was raised in Malden, where he graduated from Malden High School in 1969. In 1975, Mr. Gardiner received a degree in accounting from North Shore Community College in Beverly.

For the past year, he had been a spokesman for the Maine AIDS Education Office. He was a member of the Mount Vernon Masonic Lodge in Malden and had been a volunteer in 1987 for the AIDS Action Committee in Boston.

Mr. Gardiner leaves his parents, Alvah and Beatrice (Lynch) of Fairfield, Maine; and three sisters, Denise Delorie of Norridgewock, Maine, Dianne Tilton of Skowhegan, Maine and Deborah Gardiner of St. Marys, Ga.

A funeral Mass will be said at 2:30 p.m. today in St. Mark's Episcopal Church, Waterville.

IN THE ABSENCE OF ANGELS

In an exclusive book excerpt, a Hollywood mother movingly describes her family's battle with AIDS

By Elizabeth Glaser and Laura Palmer

A decade ago, before the nation awakened to the daily nightmare that is AIDS, Elizabeth Glaser was infected with the virus through a tainted blood transfusion. She did not know that she had passed the virus on to her two children until her daughter, Ariel, developed the disease at age 4. For more than three years, Elizabeth, 43, and her husband, director Paul Michael Glaser, 47, the former star of the TV series Starsky and Hutch, kept their painful ordeal private.

Then in 1989, just after the first anniversary of Ariel's death, the Glasers went public with their story upon learning that a tabloid was about to expose their tragedy in an unauthorized feature. Since then, Elizabeth and writer Laura Palmer have collaborated on In the Absence of Angels, an inspiring account of the Glaser family's struggles and triumphs, which will be published by G.P. Putnam's Sons in February. "After we found out that my family was HIV-positive," says Elizabeth, "it was clear that I would have to grow as a person more than I had ever imagined in order to find a way to cope. I wanted to let America see how painful it is to be a family battling AIDS and how hard it is to deal with the isolation and discrimination that comes through ignorance."

The book is more than an anguished account of a mother's loss; it is a testament to one woman's brave refusal to surrender. "If reading my story can help open hearts to people who are battling this disease," says Elizabeth, "then maybe other families will have an easier time." Here is a selection from In the Absence of Angels.

There were no words, no sounds, everything was obliterated by a single focus, getting to the hospital. It was as though I were motionless and the scenery was being pulled past me.

When I arrived at Cedars-Sinai Medical Center, my husband, Paul, rushed over, and I could see the fear in his face. I was six months pregnant and had started bleeding. My baby wasn't due for 11 more weeks.

I was diagnosed as having placenta previa, which meant the placenta was growing across my cervix. All we could do was pray that I would stop bleeding, because my child was probably too small to live outside my body. I lay there, day after day, with Paul by my side, waiting.

On the sixth day, I was sent home and told to stay in bed for the rest of my pregnancy. I was so afraid that I did less than whatever the doctor said I could. Each day was a victory, the next, a challenge.

Finally, on Aug. 4, 1981, Ariel Glaser was delivered by cesarean section. She was three and a half weeks early and weighed five pounds, two ounces, but I didn't care. When I looked into her eyes for the first time, I was amazed that this miracle was mine. Our fears were gone.

I was trying to tell the doctors how glad I was that it was over, when I heard the anesthesiologist saying that something was wrong. I couldn't breathe. I hemorrhaged. I was gasping for air. My doctor pushed on my stomach and I could feel the warm blood gushing out. I was too horrified to even scream. What was happening to me?

The transfusions began. I watched the dark red blood drip out of the squat plastic bag, flow through an IV tube and into a vein in my arm. I was transfused with seven pints. After the doctors packed me with cotton I finally stopped bleeding.

It wasn't until I saw my baby daughter again that the weariness and terror began to drift away, to be replaced with an instinctive love. She was beautiful, and we had both survived. It was over. I finally fell asleep, thinking about the wonderful life the three of us had to look forward to.

Three weeks later I saw an article about a new virus called AIDS. I called my obstetrician immediately. "I just read an article in the paper about AIDS, a virus that may be transmitted by blood transfusions. I just got seven pints!"

"Oh, Elizabeth," he said, "you've been through a difficult ordeal, but it's behind you. Relax and enjoy your baby. Your nightmare is over. AIDS isn't ever going to have anything to do with you."

June 1975

I had pork chops, not passion, on my mind when I met Paul 15 years ago. I was coming home from a session with my therapist and determined to defrost two chops and have supper by myself.

I had, in fact, just spent 50 minutes explaining why I didn't need a man. Then, while waiting for the light to change at the intersection of Santa Monica and Beverly Boulevards, I looked at the car next to me. "Oh, my God, that is the cutest guy I have ever seen," I thought. I smiled. He smiled. The light changed.

I turned right. He turned right. I glanced into the rearview mirror and he signaled me over with his arm. I was anxious and jittery as I pulled over. He stepped out of his car and walked toward me. I rolled down my window and he said, "Okay, let me see your driver's license." I looked at him and laughed. He was droll and disarming.

"What are you doing for dinner?" he asked. Thinking of therapy, I told him I was going home and making pork chops. "Wouldn't you rather go out for Chinese food?" "Yes," I said without missing a beat. One therapy session thrown out the window.

We went to Al Fong's in Beverly Hills. It was dark and the food was dreadful. Midway through the moo shu pork I asked Paul what he did. He said, "I'm an actor." I was so disappointed. I had lived in Los Angeles long enough to know that being an actor meant absolutely nothing. "Are you working?" I asked politely. "Actually, I am. I'm in a show that's just been picked up by a network. It'll be on ABC in the fall." "What's it called?" "Starsky and Hutch. It's a cop show about two detectives. I play Starsky."

I knew that night that even though he was an actor, this was the man for me. I was 27 and in love. When I looked at Paul I saw happily-ever-after. In September I moved into the one-room bungalow in the Hollywood Hills he shared with a dog named Max.

Paul didn't even have a television. We watched the debut of Starsky and Hutch with David Soul, the actor who played Hutch, at the home of David's agent. Everyone, including the stars, felt the show would be cancelled in eight weeks. By Thanksgiving, it was the hottest show on TV, and Paul and David were as famous as rock stars.

Paul and I were both stunned by his instant celebrity status. For years, he had worked steadily, doing everything from Shakespeare to soaps. Starsky was not how he imagined becoming famous. There was a lot of adjusting to do. The simple joy of taking a walk on the beach in our jeans and sweatshirts came to a halt. Until you went out in public with Paul, you had no sense of how overwhelming, demanding, and ridiculous being a celebrity was.

During the years that Starsky was on the air, we never got involved in the social side of Hollywood. We saved our money, knowing that actors usually have lean times, and wanted to be prepared for that. The price I paid for Paul's celebrity was invisibility. Hollywood people would nod and smile when I would say I was a teacher or, later, an exhibits director at the Children's Museum. I had to find ways to accept that; one solution was to make a life of my own that was independent and strong.

I definitely knew I wanted to be married and have children. I had had a wonderful childhood and was looking forward to ► Elizabeth, who gave birth to Ari (right) at 33, grew up in Hewlett Harbor, N.Y., and earned a master's degree in early childhood education at Boston University. After a two-year marriage to a former classmate, she moved to L.A., where she was teaching when she met Paul.

starting a family of my own. But Paul's childhood had been more complicated, and marriage and family were scary to him. Paul and I talked it through, and he finally agreed that we'd get married when we were ready to have children.

Three months after our wedding in August 1980, I was pregnant. All the goodness in the world seemed to be ours. In nine months I would have what I had always wanted most, a child of my own with a man that I loved.

When Ari was about a year and a half old, we began looking for a larger house. Paul and I wanted more children, and I was trying to get pregnant again. From the moment I walked into the sprawling Mediterranean house in Santa Monica, I knew this was the home for my family. Our children would grow up and go to college, and then Glaser children would come home with Glaser grandchildren.

Everything seemed to be going well. I had gotten pregnant and had miscarried, but was pregnant once more. And on Oct. 25, 1984, I delivered a beautiful son we named Jake.

In the spring of 1985 Paul was offered the job of directing his first feature film, Band of the Hand. The film was being shot in Miami, so we packed up the family and rented a house on the beach for the three-month shoot.

From Miami I took the children to visit my parents, who were living in Puerto Rico. We had just returned from that trip when Ari, who was then 4, started to have stomach aches and cramps. She was in a great deal of pain. We consulted a pediatrician who said that she had probably picked up a bug in Puerto Rico. When Ari didn't get better, I went to another doctor who suggested a stomach specialist. He had Ari hospitalized for more tests. The doctors said they had no idea what was wrong with Ariel, but for the next three days they watched her as if she might die. Once again I saw her life as precarious. I could feel all my dreams and plans start to crumble. My many fears began to return. Without even knowing what was wrong, I was fighting for Ari's life all over again.

By the time we left Florida in November Ariel was stronger, but not well. Doctors there said that she suffered from a blood disorder that usually leads to kidney failure. There was more color in her face and lips, but she still had bouts of diarrhea and would wake up in pain. Over the next few months we were doing test after test, trying to diagnose the underlying cause of Ari's illness. Paul and I had told Ari there was something funny with her blood and that was the reason she was so frequently tired. We told her that the doctors were going to find a way to make her better.

As time went by and things still didn't improve, Ariel was tested for all sorts of unusual diseases including lupus and leukemia. There was also talk of doing a liver and kidney biopsy, but that was postponed. When each test came back negative, I felt we had won another diagnostic round. But Ari's doctor, Richard Fine, wasn't as cheerful. He knew what we didn't—that Ari's diarrhea and low helper T-cells count [an important part of the immune system that fights infection] were symptoms of AIDS.

I don't think I was any more anxious about an AIDS test than I was about anything else. Just as her doctors had ruled out lupus and leukemia, they'd rule out AIDS. We took her in to be tested.

When the phone rang the next day, Paul answered it and after he hung up he said, "They've got to run it again. It's shown some kind of positivity. It's probably a mistake and we'll know in two days." The two days slowly passed. Richard Fine called that morning in late May. "The test has come back positive. You all have to come in tomorrow to be tested."

Ari had been diagnosed. Ari's illness now had a name. Ariel had AIDS. I remember walking into the bathroom and screaming as loud as I could. Ari and Jake must have been out of the house because I would never have fallen apart in front of them. Paul walked into the bathroom, but we couldn't touch. We couldn't even look at each other. He turned and walked out. I was still crying. He walked back in. He said, "You have to pull yourself together." I thought, "Why? My life is over. The most important thing in my life—my daughter—is going to die."

I became more and more hysterical. Finally, Paul sat down by me on the edge of the tub and just said, "We don't know. You have to get control for Ari and Jake, Elizabeth. You have to—now do it."

From that moment on I had no choice but to become intentionally schizophrenic. What I felt was one thing, and what I presented to my children and to the rest of the outside world was another.

The next morning we were all tested. Richard Fine called back later. "We have to run the tests on Elizabeth and Jake again," he said, and by then we knew what that meant. We had tested positive.

Paul and I went back to UCLA and sat numbly in Dr. Fine's office with him and Dr. Richard Stiehm, the pediatric immunologist who would become Ari's doctor. They explained that there had been a lot of infected blood at Cedars-Sinai Medical Center in the early years of the epidemic because it is located on the edge of West Hollywood, which has a large gay population.

Dr. Stiehm said he thought I had been infected through my blood transfusion and had passed the virus on to Ari during breast feeding and to Jake in utero.

Paul and I sat there. In our worst nightmares, we could never have imagined the devastation of that office visit. Our entire world had been crushed. Ari, Jake and I might all die. It was too much to comprehend. Still, today, it is too much to comprehend.

They said that Ari should start on gamma globulin treatments right away to shore up her immune system. She could get the infusions at the UCLA clinic once every three weeks, by sitting for four hours with an IV in her arm. Dr. Stiehm strongly recommended that we shouldn't tell anyone about our diagnosis because the experiences of other families with AIDS had not been positive. "The world is not ready for your family," was how he put it.

► Ari (next to Elizabeth) celebrated Jake's second birthday with some of her playmates. After Ari's death, Elizabeth invited her daughter's closest friends over to thank them for their loyalty and gave each child a memento from among Ari's possessions.

▼ "After Ari died," says Elizabeth, "I thought, 'It's not okay for me to ever be happy again, because I've lost my child,' but I've learned that the challenge of my life is to be happy in the face of losing my child."

Nevertheless, he said we needed to either tell her nursery school or take her out of it. The Centers for Disease Control guidelines, at that time, said that a child with AIDS should not be in nursery school without first getting permission from the school. It was surreal. Along with this hideous medical diagnosis came instructions on how we needed to handle the rest of the world.

Dr. Stiehm told me that I could test positive and carry the AIDS virus without being symptomatic or showing any signs of the disease. In other words, there was a big difference between being HIV-positive and having full-blown AIDS. Although Jake had tested positive, his other tests were all normal.

I told Dr. Stiehm that I could not live without telling my friends. They had been following Ari's illness since Miami, and their support and concern had been crucially important. Paul and I decided we had two choices. We could tell some friends or we could pick up, sell our house and begin our life all over again someplace else. The life we had known was over. I had to stay strong so I could save my children. Our first steps were perhaps the hardest.

Paul and I decided to confide in only a handful of friends. I told my women friends in person, one by one, and made each of them promise not to tell anyone except their husbands. For some, whose children were playmates of Ari and Jake, finding out that we had AIDS was like finding out that for years their children had been in imminent danger. Most of our friends wanted to stand beside us, but they also wanted assurances that there was no risk to their children. In May of 1986, answers were in short supply and there were no guarantees.

At first, no one would allow their children to come and play at our house. Some friends refused to let my kids come to their homes at all. Some said their children could continue to play with mine, but only at the park. Some dropped out of our lives.

The day after I told my yoga teacher about our diagnosis she called to tell me that she never wanted to see me again. We asked a therapist to see if a child psychiatrist would work with Ari when and if we felt it was appropriate. I was later told that psychiatrists would not see my child, because they were afraid if word leaked they would lose too many other patients.

People were responding so fearfully that I started to feel dangerous myself. The doctors said there was no reason for fear, but that meant nothing because our neighbors and our friends were not doctors. Every time I went into the supermarket, I envisioned everyone slowly and silently moving away as if they had just seen a rattlesnake. It would be nine months before the Surgeon General would appear on television to say flat out that you can't get AIDS from saliva or kissing. And with that information, our lives slowly regained some normalcy.

When we told people, we forced them to enlist in a conspiracy of silence. The quality of our lives now hinged on the ability of our friends to keep quiet. Were word to get out, we knew we would be treated like plague victims for no reason. All of us were very afraid and confused.

What could have stopped the fear and hysteria was strong leadership from the Reagan administration. But in those early years of the epidemic, that leadership was absent. AIDS may one day cost me my life, but community reaction right away cost me the right to live the rest of my life the way I choose. That was my first fight.

It was a time that would almost be unimaginable if we hadn't lived it. It is what all families battling AIDS had to face then. You are told that you and your children may die. You are told that there are no answers now. And then as you are struggling not to completely fall apart, you realize that very few people are going to reach out to help or comfort you. We felt so alone. We wished for an angel who would help us get through it all. But at that time it seemed we had no angels watching over us.

One of the telephone calls I dreaded most was to Crossroads Elementary School, where Ari had been accepted. Both Paul and I desperately wanted her to start kindergarten that fall. It was one of the few direct links we had to the future, and it meant so much to Ari. Paul Cummins, the school's headmaster, had no idea why I'd walked into his office. He seemed both confident and relaxed. I took a deep breath before I began.

"We were planning on having our the following year, after the Crossroads board had agreed to admit children with AIDS. Says Elizabeth: "It was another hard lesson in how little could be taken for granted."

While I was fighting my battles, Paul was coming to grips with his own private war—a battlefield on which he might lose all those he loved. It was a difficult struggle for him then and it still is now. He worked as much as he could, as that gave him the strength to keep going. Sometimes it is hard for me to believe that my life is real, but trying to imagine being Paul is even more difficult.

Ariel was doing well. Each morning I would sit with her and pick out the hair ribbons she would want to wear. We would stand in front of the bathroom mirror and I would brush her hair 100 times to make it shine. As her hair glistened, silent tears would fill my eyes and my heart would break, knowing that I might lose her. It became impossible for me to ever feel really happy without feeling achingly sad.

That autumn, I kept wishing for things that never seemed to happen. I wished Ari would be invited to someone's house for a sleepover. I wished one of Jake's friends would invite him for a play date. It would be lovely if Paul and I were invited to a dinner party.

At that point in our lives, coping with fear was far worse than coping with AIDS. The fear of rejection or exposure was with us at all times. Most people have nightmares when they sleep, but when you are a family facing AIDS, the nightmare begins fresh each day. Sleep is the only time when I feel just like everyone else. Often I wake up in the morning having forgotten for an instant about AIDS, but that lasts for only a blink of an eye.

In the fall of 1986, the doctors still had no answers. Naively, I thought we were ahead of the game. Since none of us was sick or deteriorating, I felt that maybe if we could just stay strong, doctors would find a cure. Ari was already five years old, while most children with AIDS died by the time they were two.

I felt I had every right to be angry. But what good was it going to do? Would it daughter, Ariel, start kindergarten here in September," I said. "But I just found out that she, my son and I are all infected with the AIDS virus." I started to cry. I was sure he would send me away and tell me to find another school. Paul Cummins walked over and put his arms around me. "You are part of our family," he said. "We want you here." He held me as I cried. I left his office feeling both relief and joy. As long as I could see that not every door was going to be closed to us, I could hope.

Ari had spent just one week at Crossroads when Cummins met with the Glasers to explain that the school's board was about to draft an AIDS policy. He was concerned that Ari's presence in the school might jeopardize its passage. So Ari was uprooted and transferred to a nearby public school that already had an AIDS policy, where she remained until make Ari well? Would it make Jake live longer? I couldn't stop myself from being angry, but I could keep that anger from being trapped inside my body. I would think of a room with two doors. If the anger came in one door, I tried to be sure there was always another door so the anger could get out.

I had to learn to forgive. I had to forgive the blood donor. I had to forgive the doctors, the hospitals, the schools, and I had to forgive fate. I had to forgive God, if there is one, and I had to forgive my friends, who had to forgive me. Right away Paul saw that we would have to forgive everyone, that we would have to let the anger pass right through us. He helped me to learn this. It was bitterly hard. Anger is a poison that will seep into your system and want to stay.

But I still get angry. Sometimes when I am alone in my car I scream, "If you are there, God, I hate you! I hate you for making this my life. I hate you for letting Ari get sick. And I hate you because I don't really think you are there." My throat hurts when I'm done, but I usually feel calmer.

I would feel a painful jealousy whenever I saw people who seemed to have normal lives and healthy children. I would feel an excruciating envy toward strangers and my friends who could have what I never could. And then I would feel very, very sorry for myself.

I learned to let go of all of these emotions that depleted me. I am never going to be able to have what other people have. At some point you begin to accept that this is your life. I've learned that you often have no say in what happens to you, but you can choose how you bear the consequences.

Paul had finished directing Running Man in the spring [of 1987], and we had decided we would make our annual summer trip to Maine. We were swimming, boating, hiking or picking wild blueberries on Pleasant Mountain. At night we would make a fire and toast marshmallows. Simple and intense delight. But Ari started to seem weak, and I sensed for the first time that she was beginning to fail. Her appetite diminished and she complained of stomach pain. In past summers she had always been eager to go in the canoe and be by the water, but now that eagerness was gone. As a mother, I knew instinctively that I was losing her.

I called Dick Stiehm in Los Angeles. "We've got to get AZT now," I said. "She's starting to fail." In 1987, AZT was the only treatment that seemed to be effective against AIDS.

"It's not ready for children," he replied.

"What do you mean? It's ready for me!" Although I hadn't needed to start taking it yet, I knew it was available.

"AZT hasn't been approved for pediatric use. It's just not ready."

"We've got to find a way to get it and use it."

"Elizabeth," he said, "we don't even know the dose to give her. We can't just experiment. It could kill her."

"When will it be ready?"

"In the fall."

I took a deep breath and prayed that we could hold on until then.

By the time we got home, Ari was thinner and weaker, but Dr. Stiehm felt she would still be able to start school. She had her heart set on beginning first grade. It didn't work. Although Ariel looked beautiful with her shiny hair and luminous blue eyes, she frequently had outbursts of ghastly pain. She was a valiant fighter but was only able to finish two weeks of first grade.

As the pain increased, Ari and I became more and more like one person. In her worst moments, my eyes would start to fill with tears and I would say, "Oh, Ari, I wish I could take all your pain into my body. I wish I could make it all go away." She would look right into my eyes and very slowly answer, "But you can't, Mom." We both knew it was true.

We would cherish the good moments more than ever. Paul would take Ari to the end of the block to feed the pigeons, and at night he would lie beside her in bed and make up wonderful fanciful stories.

In the fall parents started getting curious about Ari's long absence from school. Rumors were raging and several parents asked the school's director if Ariel Glaser had AIDS. Each time we found out that someone was asking, our anxiety soared. Paul and I still felt the risks of going public clearly overshadowed any gains. As awful as it had been for us to shoulder the massive weight of the secret for the previous year and a half, we dreaded even more the risk that our children might experience any of the hysterical fear that still surrounded AIDS in many parts of the country.

Paul and I had stopped going out, except with the few who were pledged to secrecy. Our friends worked as hard to protect our privacy as we did. At night, Paul and I would climb into bed exhausted by the strain of just being us. If we talked about our fears, we felt overwhelmed. If we talked about our hopes, it felt like pie-in-the-sky dreaming. So usually, we didn't talk at all.

▲ Avid skiers, the Glasers vacationed en famille in Park City, Utah, shortly after Jake's birth in 1984.

Some nights I would just lie there and think how trapped Paul must feel. How hard it was to live with us and how impossible it would be to leave. If he walked away, everyone would think he was such a "bad" guy. But I knew he must have wanted to run away at times. Part of me would have wanted that. But he never said it, we never shared what we were thinking. It was too scary. On a good night we would fall asleep in each other's arms.

Ari was getting weaker and weaker. We had been waiting for AZT all that year and each month it wasn't ready. Paul and I were silently praying that something would change the course of our lives, working hard to keep optimistic.

Shortly before Thanksgiving 1987, Ari was hospitalized with acute pancreatitis. She was released after four weeks but had to continue being fed through an elaborate intravenous system, which Paul and Elizabeth mastered so that they could care for their daughter at home. Ari began taking AZT orally right before Christmas, but the drug had no positive effect.

Through January of 1988 Ari became more confined. By February she stopped walking completely. We didn't know why. The doctors had no answers. I carried her everywhere. She was unable to speak, but we both remembered the words that had already been said. We would still go for long walks. I would put her in the stroller, from the hospital, Elizabeth discussed her intentions with Paul.

Paul was silent for a long time and then with great gentleness he said, "I'll support you in whatever you have to do." I gave my husband a big hug and felt a smile spreading across my face. I knew this was the moment when I was taking that hard first step. I didn't know it at the time, but it was the step that has kept me in motion ever since.

As a member of a family struggling with AIDS, I learned that few wanted to help enough to change a system that had become strangled by red tape. The ones who tried were often ignored because AIDS was something many refused to deal with.

Dr. Stiehm had already tried to get AZT in that form for several of his patients but had failed because it was still only available for trial testing. Elizabeth returned home and refused to give up until she was able to obtain the intravenous drug for her daughter in May 1988.

I sat in my den, relieved that we had succeeded in getting the drug and furious at the inhumanity of a system that cared more about rules than lives. Did I love my child any more than the mother in Harlem, Miami or Newark loved her child? Absolutely not. Did Ari deserve a chance any more than their children? No. Every child with AIDS deserves a chance. And what about the children who had no one to speak for them?

Then, three weeks to the day after we started intravenous AZT, I walked into Ariel's room in the morning and she looked up and said, "Good morning, Mom. I love you." I could hardly believe it. Ari was back! The sky had opened up. I had to find Paul. Maybe miracles did happen. Maybe one was going to happen in our house.

Ari continued to improve over the next six weeks. The intravenous AZT was unwinding her cocoon of paralysis, and her 6-year-old self was still underneath. The whole world had started spinning again.

◀ Last fall, Helen Hayes honored Elizabeth and gave her a donation on behalf of a Manhattan hospital.

▶ Ari, on a Martha's Vineyard beach, in 1987. By then, she had started napping every day.

cushioning her with pillows and wrapping a blanket over her legs. Despite the pain and the weariness that she always felt, she never failed to respond to the beauty around her.

In March 1988, nearly two years after our initial diagnosis, the guillotine fell. Ariel got pneumonia and we were back at UCLA again. We learned that her brain had severely atrophied. The doctors said it was irreversible. It was one of the central nervous system complications of AIDS that is quite common in children, though not in adults.

After four days, Dick Stiehm solemnly sat us down and told us that Ari had probably 48 hours to live. She was breathing weakly, but what none of us knew then was that she hadn't given up.

It was not until the doctors told us that there was absolutely no hope that I confronted the possibility of Ari's death for the first time. I sat with a friend and lit one cigarette after another. I was shaking and not yet able to talk. "No one cares if we all die from AIDS," I said. "Something is very wrong. I have to get to the President."

It was in that moment of honest desperation that I realized I could no longer sit quietly in Santa Monica. A mother's job is to save her child; it's a basic animal instinct. But I was failing. I had to do more.

Propelled by anger and frustration, Elizabeth considered ways to take a more active role in AIDS issues without compromising her family's privacy. Ariel survived the pneumonia, yet her health seemed ever more fragile. The day the Glasers brought their daughter home

Someone had to care enough to be willing to shake things up, but I didn't know who it would be. I realized my country was failing me. The compassion as well as the moral and ethical foundations of our society were being tested, and from my point of view, America had let me down.

Determined to educate herself about AIDS as a national issue, Elizabeth met with physicians, politicians and friends to plan an assault on policymakers in Washington, D.C. Her first goal was to explain that AIDS affects children differently than adults and then to persuade legislators to make federal funds available, specifically for pediatric AIDS research. During her visit to the capital six weeks later, Elizabeth also met Dr. Phil Pizzo, chief of pediatrics at the National Cancer Institute in Bethesda, Md., who had launched the first federal study of AIDS in children. When he learned that Ari had been taking AZT orally with no favorable results, he recommended that she take the drug intravenously.

In March we were told to prepare for a funeral. By May we had a shot at second grade. If Ari could make it, we were all going to make it.

In June, friends arranged a meeting between Elizabeth and the Reagans at the White House, where she appealed to the President to lead the nation on this urgent issue. Although the Reagans welcomed her warmly, their private concern had no positive impact on public policy. The more Elizabeth learned about the government's indifference to the issue of children with AIDS, the more determined she became to form a private foundation to raise funds for pediatric AIDS research.

July 1988

It was one of those beautiful Los Angeles days when the sun, air, sky and sea all seem perfect. I asked Ari if she would like to go down to the Santa Monica pier, which has rides and an amusement arcade with cotton candy and stuffed animals for prizes.

Ari and I went on the Ferris wheel together, around and around, waving wildly, queens of the sky and sea. For a moment, I was experiencing the thrilling unadulterated joy of just being a mom. Maybe there was some part of Ariel that knew this was the last day that she was really going to get to be a little girl.

Two weeks later Ari was readmitted to UCLA hospital. Her white blood cell count had fallen too low, and we had to take her off the intravenous AZT. She was having fevers that we couldn't break. But I persistently believed that this was just another crisis that we would somehow survive. I have never been able to accept endings that I don't like. I fight to make life the way I want it to be, and because of that I never believed that Ari was going to die.

We had Ari's seventh birthday party in the hospital, and Dick Stiehm gave her a UCLA T-shirt and told her it was what she would wear on the day she went home. But Ari had regressed greatly. In a few weeks, we had slid back down the mountain we had climbed since June. Her care was intricate and complex, but all I wanted was to take her home.

Three weeks later, on Friday, Aug. 12th, 1988, we were packing up her things. Ari was lying in her bed and I said to her, "We have to see if you can sit in your stroller, honey." And Ari said, "No, Mom, I'm going to walk home." She couldn't move her legs. I looked at her and said, "Give me a break." Ari said simply, "No, Mom, I'm going to walk home." "All right, Ari," I said. "Go for it."

Paul and I continued getting her things together. It was not until the last 10 minutes of her life that I knew she was dying. And then very quickly she was gone. She was never supposed to die. It was too short a time to have had her. Paul wept and I cried, "Noooo!" It was a "no" that wanted to turn back time. It was a "no" to a world that had failed me. Our beautiful daughter had died. Ariel Glaser had been on the earth for seven years and eight days.

That Sunday, the Glasers held a memorial service for Ariel at home, and on Tuesday, Aug. 16, their daughter was buried next to Paul's father at a cemetery in Boston.

We have left Ari's room just as it was when she was alive. Paul and I decided we couldn't imagine changing it. We each find our way into her room at different times and in different ways to tell her we love her. Her door is always open. It's not maudlin; it's just life. Ari's room remains though Ari is gone and her spirit fills our hearts.

As in the Absence of Angels continues, it chronicles Elizabeth's evolution from a desperate mother, crying out for action, to an impassioned advocate, in charge of her life and determined to help others. For a look at Elizabeth today, please turn the page.

AFTER THE TRAGEDY, A CALL TO ARMS

Today Elizabeth Glaser finds fresh purpose in her tireless crusade to save the children

By Kristin McMurrin

Tomboy trim, with a broad smile and an easy laugh, Elizabeth Glaser walks into her sun-filled Santa Monica living room with a glass of milk in one hand and a slice of wheat toast slathered with jam in the other. A silky golden retriever pads along at her heels. In the kitchen Elizabeth's husband, Paul, is meeting with a group of California legislators. Phones ring, doors slam, visitors and deliveries come and go. The Glasers' home pulses with life.

"There were times after we were given our diagnosis when I thought it would be easier to take everyone into the garage and turn on the gas," says Elizabeth. "But as helpless as it felt at those moments, I knew that the next day might not feel hopeless at all, so I made the decision to choose to live."

It was a choice that seemed almost beyond her grasp following her daughter Ariel's death in August 1988. "When I learned I was HIV-positive," says Elizabeth, "as much as I was frightened and did not want to die, I felt I had lived every day fully and had no regrets. But after Ari died, I felt dead too. I spent a lot of my time lecturing myself, saying you've got to move forward, but I could no longer see any beauty in the world."

In a gradual and very private process of recovery, Elizabeth reclaimed her will to live. She has been buoyed by Ari's presence in dreams, and she has the loyal support of a regiment of women friends, along with her husband. "Paul is intrinsically more private than I," she says. "He's not comfortable speaking about private family issues. He's an artist, a writer and a director, and it's important for him to be doing his business, but when I need him to be there for me, he's there. He's a very caring, supportive member of this family."

Elizabeth speaks frankly about how tragedy can unhinge a marriage: "Many people think the loss of a child brings a couple closer, but in real life it's very hard to go through so much pain together. You're both scared, tense and angry. You're filled with feelings; one of them is love, but it's not unusual to feel estranged from everyone. That's a normal reaction to a crisis." Isolated from one another in their grief following Ari's death, the Glasers consulted a therapist to help regain a balance in their marriage. "Other men would have walked away," Elizabeth writes, "but not Paul."

More than nine years after contracting the virus, Elizabeth remains in stable health. She has regular aerosol pentamidine treatments, which help ward off the pneumonia that strikes so many people with the AIDS virus. She has also been taking the drug DDI since developing a toxic reaction to AZT in 1989. Son Jake, too, is well. "My son is a healthy, normal 6-year-old, living a full life with many friends,"

▶ "There is no map for life; unfair things happen," says Elizabeth. "The challenge is what you do with these things." Her household includes Georgie, with her on a Santa Monica beach walk.

Elizabeth works out regularly in addition to weekly jogs and tennis games. "I love life," she says. "I've found a way to regain joy."

says Elizabeth. "He's a great athlete; he has a really cute way of meeting the world and he's just a joy."

Since going public with her family's story in August 1989, Elizabeth has grown more visible in her crusade on behalf of children with AIDS. "I realized that the greatest good would come from the federal government in terms of money and leadership," she says, "but that it was going to take too much time, which families with AIDS don't have. So I thought there would be a role for a small foundation that would fill the gap until the government took over its responsibility."

The Pediatric AIDS Foundation, which Elizabeth started with two close friends, Susan DeLaurentis and Susie Zeegen, may be small but its ambitions are mighty: to raise money quickly, channel it directly into research and save lives. The foundation was formally launched in 1988 with a $500,000 donation from Paul's aunt, Vera List. Disney CEO Michael Eisner got actively involved and now sits on the foundation's board along with Steven Spielberg and Kitty Dukakis, among others. Producer-philanthropist Ted Fields and his wife, Susie, have made generous contributions and opened their Santa Barbara ranch to doctors from the U.S. and abroad for a series of creative think-tank sessions to determine where funding is most urgently needed.

In the past 16 months, the foundation has raised more than $4 million and funded 38 research grants and nine scholar awards. More than 80 percent of the money goes to basic pediatric AIDS research, with much of the focus on studies of the central nervous system (which AIDS affects differently in children) and on finding ways to prevent infected mothers from passing the virus on to their babies in the womb.

Last summer doctors identified an antibody that could potentially block transmission of the virus from mother to fetus, and the foundation is racing to raise more funds for that kind of crucial research. "We need $1.5 million by next month," says Elizabeth, "and Uncle Sam has more money than my friends. The government needs to do its share."

Glaser spends most workdays in a rent-free room in Santa Monica that is just big enough for eight desks and three computer terminals. The sweet faces of children claimed by the epidemic stare from posters tacked on the walls, next to bright kiddie drawings and a flurry of photos and Post-its. Seven full-timers—all three co-founders work without salary—and a handful of volunteers feed computers, stamp envelopes and field nonstop phone calls. Singer James Taylor is on line 1 for Elizabeth, whose eyes fill with tears when she speaks to him. (Taylor made a special lullaby tape for Ari when she was ill and is participating in a celebrity lullaby album, For Our Children, due this spring.) The foundation supports a national emergency assistance plan for hospitals treating pediatric AIDS patients. It also has helped design a program to educate parents whose children are already learning about AIDS in school, and Elizabeth is hoping to find a corporate sponsor to underwrite the program so that it can be offered free.

The foundation has made great strides in its short life, but Elizabeth and her team urgently press forward. "Fifty percent of America is better educated, but if you're living next door to the other 50 percent, it means nothing," says Elizabeth, who never loses sight of her power as a champion for families who lack her influence. "Like most people with AIDS, I feel aligned with the have-nots," she writes. "When I meet people in power, it's usually because they think I'm one of them. I look the same, but my goals are not their goals. They want a kinder and gentler America for themselves. My family needs an America that is kinder and gentler to all."

Elizabeth is as ardent a mom as she is an advocate and arranges her office hours so that they are in sync with Jake's schedule. When he is not playing with friends after school, Jake and his mother sometimes ride bikes or bake brownies and usually read stories before bed. "There's no real way to describe my life," she says. "It's sort of existential. All I think about is today and tomorrow."

Although Elizabeth sees a therapist weekly, when she most yearns for comfort she calls to mind the lessons she learned from her daughter. "At times when I'm not feeling strong enough to meet all my challenges," she says, "I want to be someone of whom Ari would be proud, because I was so proud of her. She would settle for nothing less than my best effort because that's what she gave. So in my weaker moments, I think about her, and I say, 'Ok, Ari, you're right. I'm going to move on. And who knows what tomorrow will bring. I've always been someone who fought; happy ending. Even though I cannot see the death of my child,' she adds, "and doing right now is giving my best shot at fighting for a happy ending." □

An AIDS-infected Marine who fought for years to make the federal government pay for the deaths from AIDS of his wife and son died yesterday, less than a month after he finally won a $3.8 million settlement.

Martin Gaffney died at 3:27 a.m. at Massachusetts General Hospital, where he had been hospitalized since Sept. 17, said Martin Bander, a hospital spokesman.

Gaffney, 42, was diagnosed in September with lymphoma, a form of cancer that sometimes occurs as a result of the AIDS virus.

At the South Weymouth Naval Air Station, where Gaffney served as a chief warrant officer until being hospitalized, fellow Marines were shaken.

"There's probably 150 Marines just sitting around here with tears in their eyes," said Marine Capt. Laurence Jewett. "These are some combat-hardened U.S. Marines, but this one hurts."

In a court battle that lasted more than four years, Gaffney charged that doctors at the Long Beach, Calif., Naval Hospital botched his wife's pregnancy in 1981 by failing to give her a Caesarean section. She was two weeks late delivering the baby, and required a blood transfusion, which was tainted with the AIDS virus.

The infant was stillborn. The couple had another son, who died of AIDS at 13 months. Gaffney's wife, Mutsuko, died of AIDS in 1987. His 8-year-old daughter, Maureen, now lives with Gaffney's brother in Lowell.

In April, U.S. District Court Judge Rya W. Zobel awarded Gaffney $3.5 million, plus $315,000 to cover future medical costs. In October, the U.S. attorney's office filed notice of a possible appeal, giving the U.S. solicitor general time to make a final decision about whether to proceed with the case.

But several days later the government announced it would not appeal, and the money was paid Oct. 21.

"To represent Marty was an honor," said Jackie McKenney, Gaffney's attorney. "He was a person of absolutely rock solid values. The way he approached his battle with the government was the way he approached his battle with cancer — with unbelievable courage and dignity."

Gaffney had accused the government of dragging out the case as he grew sicker. He said he sought the money so his daughter, who does not have AIDS, will have enough to live on when he is gone.

A US District Court judge yesterday awarded more than $2.7 million in economic damages to a man whose wife and child died of AIDS after his wife received a tainted blood transfusion.

Judge Rya Zobel had awarded $750,000 in emotional damages in November to Marine Chief Warrant Officer Martin Gaffney, whose wife Mutsuko received the AIDS-tainted transfusion in a Navy hospital in Long Beach, Calif. in 1981.

Gaffney, 41, a computer specialist at the South Weymouth Naval Air Station, had originally sued for $55 million. He has tested positive for the HIV virus that causes AIDS but has not yet developed signs of the disease.

Gaffney said after the ruling he thought the government got off lightly. "It's not the amount of the award," he told WCBV-TV. "The amount of the award, I had hoped it would be more — it's the experience that you go through. And there's still injustice."

"I came out with a victory, but there was a lot I lost," he said. "I don't like the fact that they concluded that the first baby was not a person."

Zobel ruled a year ago that the federal government was liable for Gaffney's infection with HIV and the deaths of his wife and son. Gaffney said Navy doctors had mishandled his wife's pregnancy by not giving her a Caesarean section when she was overdue. Mutsuko Gaffney received two units of blood when she gave birth a week later to a stillborn baby boy.

Navy physicians were found negligent in giving the tainted blood, Zobel ruled last year, because if a Caesarean section had been performed in time a transfusion would not have been needed.

Mutsuko and a younger son, John, who was born in 1985, were diagnosed with AIDS in 1986. John died in 1986 and his mother in 1987. Gaffney's other child, Maureen, 7, has not tested positive for the AIDS virus. Gaffney had said previously that he had been seeking the money to provide for his daughter.

"I hope she gets an education," Gaffney was quoted by the Associated Press. "I hope she is provided for."

Part of the case on Gaffney's future medical costs is still pending. He had asked for $6.75 million in economic damages, but Zobel awarded only $2.74 million.

GRAHAM—Russell, age 51, National Sales Manager for Perry Ellis Men's Signature collection died Saturday in Silver Spring, Maryland from AIDS related pneumonia. He was born in Washington, D.C. raised in Silver Spring, Maryland and lived in New York. He started with Salant (then Manhattan Industries) in October 1981 as Sales Manager of specialty stores for Henry Grethel. He joined the Perry Ellis Men's division in 1985 as national sales manager for the Signature Men's collection. Before Salant he was Director of Visual Merchandising for Korvettes for 13 years. The charities which Russell was involved with were Community Research Initiative, Pines Conservation Society, From the Pines with Love, and AMFAR. Survived by his loving family, his mother, Helen, brothers David and James, their respective wives, Karen and Kathy, his nieces and nephews, Julie, James, Michael, Ken, and his grand niece, Jessica. He will also be missed by his many loving friends. The family requests that in lieu of flowers, donations be made to: AMFAR (American Foundation for AIDS Research) Pines Conservation Society, Friends in Deed. The family will hold an open house in Silver Spring, MD this Saturday March 7, from 5-8 pm to celebrate his life. There will be a memorial service in New York at a later date. 3-3-92

GERARDI—Silbert Jack, 37, on September 30, 1991, formerly of Caracas, Venezuela, Senior Political Officer of the United Nations Department of Disarmament Affairs, whose devotion to the work of bettering our world was boundless. He was much beloved and admired by his companion, Allen Munday, his parents, his brothers and sister, and countless relatives, friends and colleagues in Venezuela, the United States, the United Nations and around the world. He will be greatly missed by all who knew his gentle and noble spirit. A memorial service will be announced in the near future.

Robert Gladstein, 49, West Coast Choreographer

5-5-92

By JACK ANDERSON

Robert Gladstein, a West Coast choreographer, ballet master and choreography reconstructor, died on Tuesday night at his home in San Francisco. He was 49 years old.

He died of cancer, said a friend, Martin Devin.

Mr. Gladstein danced with major companies on the East and West Coasts and staged productions around the country. But he was primarily associated with San Francisco and was an assistant director of the San Francisco Ballet. He was proud of the area's dance heritage, and did much in recent years to preserve works by San Francisco choreographers.

Mr. Gladstein was a native of Berkeley, Calif., and studied at the San Francisco Ballet School, joining the company in 1960. He made his choreographic debut in 1962 by creating "Opus One," to music by Prokofiev, for the company's summer workshop. From 1964 to 1971 he was married to Nancy Robinson, a member of the company.

Mr. Gladstein moved to New York in 1967 and joined American Ballet Theater. He returned to California in 1970 as a principal dancer of the San Francisco Ballet; in 1975 he was appointed the company's ballet master and, in 1980, assistant director and artistic coordinator, posts he held until 1986. He was ballet master for the Dallas Ballet from 1986 to 1988.

Works Bountiful and Diverse

A choreographer of more than 30 ballets, Mr. Gladstein created such varied works as "N.R.A.," a tribute to the 1930's, and "Symphony in Three Movements," an abstraction to music by Stravinsky. When the San Francisco Ballet appeared in 1980 at the Brooklyn Academy of Music, Anna Kisselgoff, the chief dance critic of The New York Times, praised Mr. Gladstein's "Psalms" for being a "sensitive view of an Israeli generation caught up in a state of war."

Mr. Gladstein was a member of the dance advisory panel of the National Endowment for the Arts from 1981 to 1986. At the time of his death, he was a board member of the San Francisco Archive for the Performing Arts. For the San Francisco Ballet's 50th-anniversary gala in 1983, he reconstructed excerpts from "Ballet Mécanique," an Expressionist work of 1933 by Adolph Bolm, the company's founder.

As coordinator of the Christensen Collection, Mr. Gladstein revived choreography by Lew Christensen, who became director of the San Francisco Ballet in 1951 and helped the company achieve international importance. After Mr. Christensen's death in 1984, Mr. Gladstein staged many of his ballets, under the Christensen Collection's auspices, for such troupes as the Louisville Ballet, the Pennsylvania Ballet, the Milwaukee Ballet, State Ballet of Missouri and Ballet Omaha.

Mr. Gladstein's companion was Bart Rawlinson.

Mr. Gladstein is survived by a son, Marcus Gladstein of Los Angeles; his mother, Wilda Gladstein of Novato, Calif., and a sister, Sally Gladstein of Berkeley, Calif.

GOODFRIEND—Stephen P., on July 17, 1992. Lifetime companion of Matthew Amtrano. Beloved father of Wendy. Devoted brother of Gloria Ren. Dear son of George Goodfriend. Survived by beloved ex-wife Susan Resnik. Uncle of Nancy Richards and Richard Gellman. Service Sunday, July 19, 12:30 PM at Frank E. Campbell, 1076 Madison Ave at 81st St. Interment Mt. Pleasant Cemetery, Valhalla.

GOULET—Jeffrey Roger. On March 29, 1992. Veteran of Navy Special Forces. While in New York he was involved with ACT UP, PWA Coalition, The Living Room and GMHC. Survived by his parents Roger and Nancy Goulet, brothers Matthew and Paul Goulet and his sister Michele Alloux. Private services will be held.

SILROY—Michael Shawn. In Rochester, New York on July 19, 1992. Beloved son, brother, uncle, companion, Actor's Equity member and friend to all. Contributions may be made for AIDS health care to Community Health Network, 758 South Avenue, Rochester, New York 14620 or to Special Olympics of Monroe County, 1 Olympic Street, Pittsford, New York 14534. Memorial service at Mull Funeral Home, Waterloo, New York, Thursday, July 23rd, 7:30PM.

GAZZANO—Robert Joseph. Age 43. Of Manhattan and Long Beach, New York. On July 4, 1991. Loving son of Angelina and Julian. Step son of Carolyn. Loving brother of Julian. Brother-in-law to Rose. Uncle to Lisa, John and Dennis. Dearest friend of Harry and Bob. Reposing Frank E. Campbell, 1076 Madison Avenue at 81 Street, Saturday and Sunday, 5-9PM. Mass of Christian Burial church of the Holy Family, 315 East 47 Street, New York City Monday, July 8th, 10AM. Interment Holy Rood Cemetery, Westbury, New York.

GREEN—Jeffrey C. Beloved son of Maurice B. and Judith S. Green, also Gloria and Louis Green, dear brother of Dale, Richard, Marion and Laura, loving uncle of Eric, Cheryl, Steven and Melanie, cherished friend of Mitchell Kassman and many others. Funeral services Friday, 11:45AM, July 5, at the Riverside Memorial Chapel, 180 West 76th Street, New York, N.Y. Interment Riverside Cemetery, Rochelle Park, New Jersey.

John Good Jr.

John Richard Good Jr., 38, of Washington, D.C., died on Thursday, November 5, 1992, at his home. According to his friend Christopher Mann of D.C., Good died of complications associated with AIDS.

Good earned a bachelor of arts degree in 1976 from Penn State University, and later studied at the International Center for the Study of Architecture in Vicenza, Italy. Mann said Good in 1980 received a master of business administration degree from Penn State with a major in real estate. Good was a native of Pittsburgh, Pa.

Early in his career Good worked in Chicago, Ill., for American Invesco Corporation, a condominium developer. There he designed a computer database on real estate in the Midwest, according to Mann. Good later worked for the Realtors National Marketing Institute where he developed a computer software distribution network.

While working for the National Association of Realtors headquarters in D.C., Good was promoted in 1984 to the position of computer networks director. Also, Good was a consultant to the International Real Estate Federation. As a consultant, Mann said, Good traveled extensively in the U.S. and Europe.

Good began working in 1986 for the International Telecommunications Satellite Organization, a 124-nation cooperative based in D.C. that operates the world's largest commercial satellite network. He was manager of computer software development for the management information services (MIS) division. When he retired this year, Mann said, Good was senior adviser to the MIS division. Good was actively involved with his condominium association, Mann said.

In addition to Mann, Good is survived by his parents John and Caroline Good of Sunset Beach, N.C.; and a sister, Susan Andrews of Okemos, Mich.

Good's remains were cremated.

Robert E. Grady
 April 11, 1951-March 5, 1992

Bob Grady was born into eternal life on March 5. Bob died at Youville Hospital of AIDS, surrounded by his loving mother and brother, and the dedicated staff of Five East.

A 17-year member of Dignity/Boston, Bob was a former vice president, chair of Liturgy committee, and choir member. He was known for his involvement with issues of social justice ranging from Central America to the Folger's boycott to lesbian and gay rights. This was reflected in his numerous published letters to various newspapers and public prayers. He was at the forefront in his support for the full participation of women in the Roman Catholic Church as a member of the Women's Ordination Conference, whose protests at ordinations he regularly joined. He was a strong supporter of women in Dignity/Boston.

Bob attended St. John's Seminary and received a degree in teaching from the former Boston State College. He taught in the Quincy Public School system and later worked at local hospitals and for the city of Boston.

Bob was a man of great goodness of spirit. He had a wonderful sense of humor and was a born mimic; among his alter egos were Rose Kennedy, Star Market's Kay McCarthy, and his late Eminence, Richard Cardinal Cushing. Friends also remember his appearance as Lady Liberty at a Harbor cruise celebrating her 100th birthday. Bob was an accomplished musician and floral designer—and expert coffee drinker!

Bob is survived by his mother, Elizabeth (McDermott) Grady; his brothers, Thomas and John; and many loving friends. He will be remembered for his wit, his social activism, his faith and the love he shared with family and friends. Bob's voice is silent now, but we who love him will always hear him in our hearts.

A memorial liturgy celebrating Bob's life will take place on Saturday, April 25, at 1:00 p.m., at the Church of St. John the Evangelist at 35 Bowdoin Street, Beacon Hill. Interment of Bob's ashes will follow in the church garden.

Ramiro José Gaviria

Ramiro José Gaviria left us with our memories of him on January 2, 1990. Ramiro was born October 14, 1942 in Bolivar, Columbia and came to the United States in 1971. He worked in interior design and landscaping. He touched numerous homes with beauty and brought new life to many offices in the Boston area. Most will remember him best as he worked in his Fenway garden. His impish grin and infectious laughter were his trademarks and will be greatly missed.

Partings are a real part of life but a summer Sunday without Ramiro bringing me an arm load of flowers for my apartment seems inconceivable. I will miss his constant ability to make me laugh and even his passion for bean and rice. I feel privileged to have been holding him when he finished his struggle with AIDS.

According to his wishes there will be a memorial party at a friend's home later in February. Because of all the love, support, and understanding he received from the staff of the Hospice at Mission Hill, a memorial donation would be greatly appreciated.

Ramiro José Gaviria

Be at peace, Ramiro. We are sending you back to Colombia with all our love. Your sisters will place you with your mother in eternal rest. We will be holding you in our thoughts with much warmth and love as we begin to work on your panel for the AIDS quilts. □

Stanley Garrott

Neeley Stanley Garrott III, 36, died on Monday, March 1, 1993, at his home in Middleburg, Virginia, of complications associated with AIDS, according to his longtime friend, Phillip Mathews of Middleburg.

A horseman and equine insurance broker, Garrott was the principal agent for show horses and grand prix jumpers at Taylor Harris Insurance Services in Middleburg. Garrott, who began riding horses as a child, trained as a junior rider with Olympian George Morris and later with the U.S. Equestrian Team, according to Mathews.

Garrott moved to Middleburg in 1984 to train horses for show and sale, and to train junior riders. Seven years ago, he shifted to the equine insurance business. His work for Taylor Harris took him to the top rated horse shows on the East Coast, Mathews said.

A native of Memphis, Tenn., Garrott attended the University of Tennessee and graduated from Fairleigh Dickinson University in Teaneck, N.J. After graduating, he worked in New York City as a stockbroker and advertising executive before he turned full-time to the horse business.

A memorial service was held in The Plains, Va. Garrott's remains were interred in Memphis.

In addition to Mathews, Garrott is survived by his mother, Dorothy Garrott; two sisters, Lucy Woodson and Peggy Peters; and two nieces, all of Memphis.

A memorial fund in Garrott's name was established to benefit the Upperville Horse Show. Contributions may be sent to the show at PO Box 1288, Warrenton, VA 22186. Contributions also may be made to the Whitman-Walker Clinic, 1407 S St., NW, Washington, DC 20009.

By BRUCE LAMBERT

Alison L. Gertz, who contracted AIDS in a single encounter with a man at the age of 16 and drew international attention by telling her story as a warning to heterosexuals, women and teenagers, died yesterday afternoon at her family's summer home in Westhampton Beach, L.I.

She was 26 years old and lived in Manhattan. Her parents, Jerrold and Carol Gertz, said she died of AIDS.

When Ms. Gertz first publicly told her story, in an interview with The New York Times in 1989, the AIDS epidemic was widely perceived as confined to homosexual men, intravenous drug abusers and blood-transfusion recipients.

She fit none of those categories. Her story was all the more dramatic because of the privilege she was born into, with artistic talent, affluence, private schools and social prominence.

The New York Times, 1989

Alison L. Gertz

Public Crusader

Ms. Gertz turned became a crusader, speaking at schools, colleges and public events. She appeared on the cover of People magazine, Esquire named her woman of the year and her story was printed overseas.

Her many television appearances included "20/20," "Good Morning America," "Sally Jessy Raphael" and "Joan Rivers." Some celebrity interviewers became concerned friends. A film she recorded for the World Health Organization was first shown at the United Nations on World AIDS Day in 1989 and has since been shown internationally.

Molly Ringwald portrayed her in "Something to Live For: The Alison Gertz Story," a two-hour ABC network special that was broadcast on March 29. It prompted 189,251 calls to the Federal AIDS telephone line in 24 hours, a record. A majority of the calls were from women.

Dr. Mathilde Krim, co-founder of the American Foundation for AIDS Research, called her a pioneer in educating middle-class heterosexuals.

Dr. Louis W. Sullivan, the United States Secretary of Health and Human Services, has praised the ABC movie and said Ms. Gertz delivered "a powerful message to all Americans about the realities of AIDS."

Beauty, Grace and Wealth

An only child, Ms. Gertz was born in Manhattan and grew up on Park Avenue. Her father, the grandson of a founder of Gertz department stores, is a real-estate investor. Her mother co-founded a national chain of fashion stores, Tennis Lady.

Educated at Horace Mann School, Ms. Gertz studied art at Parsons School of Design. At 22 she was beginning a career as an illustrator.

"I was just, as they say, starting out in life," she said, with hopes of marriage and children.

But she began suffering puzzling ailments that eluded treatment. Finally she checked into Lenox Hill Hospital for tests in 1988. The ultimate diagnosis of AIDS was a devastating shock.

The mystery of how she had become infected remained; her boyfriend at the time and a previous one tested negative. Eventually she looked up an old friend with whom she spent one romantic evening six years earlier, when AIDS was virtually unknown. He, it turned out, was bisexual and had since died of AIDS.

With medication, Ms. Gertz recovered from her initial illness and started on her mission.

"Unfortunately, a lot of people just flip by" AIDS reports about gay men and addicts, she said. "They think it doesn't apply to them. They can't turn the page on me. I could be one of them, or their daughter, and they have to deal with this."

Encouraged Others

She received thousands of letters from around the world. She encouraged others who made their cases public, including Elizabeth Glaser, the wife of a television actor, who addressed the Democratic National Convention, and Mary Fisher, a former aide to President Gerald R. Ford who will speak to the Republican convention.

Friends of the Gertz family founded Concerned Parents for AIDS Research and have raised more than $1 million, and Ms. Gertz's friends hope to carry out her idea for an AIDS care program named Love Heals.

She is survived by her parents, who live in Manhattan.

Paul Gregoire

Paul Stephen Gregoire, 28, of Washington, D.C., died on Saturday, February 20, 1993 at his mother's home in Alexandria, Virginia, of complications associated with AIDS, according to his partner, John Abbot.

Gregoire was born in Norfolk, Va., and grew up in Gales Ferry, Conn. After he graduated in 1982 from high school, Gregoire came to D.C. to attend George Washington University. He also attended Arizona State University in Tempe, before returning to D.C. and working for a number of restaurants and hotels in the city. Most recently, Gregoire worked at the Inter-Continental Hotel in D.C. as a purchasing agent. Previously, he managed Bootsie, Winky and Miss Maud restaurant, which is no longer in business, and worked at a number of local restaurants and hotels, Abbot said.

In addition to Abbot, Gregoire is survived by his mother, Anne Gregoire; father, Guy Gregoire of Fairhope, Ala.; two brothers, Phillip of Alexandria; and Guy of New York, N.Y.; close friend, Thomas Zutic of D.C.; and many other friends and relatives.

A Mass of Christian Burial will be held on Feb. 26 in Gales Ferry. Gregoire's remains will be interred in Gales Ferry.

A gathering of family and friends will be held in Washington in the spring, Abbot said.

Contributions in Gregoire's name may be made to Food and Friends, P.O. Box 70601, Washington, DC 20024.

Lucius Allen Grooms Jr., 48, a longtime D.C. resident who was recognized as an expert on AIDS and drug addiction issues, died on Thursday, December 3, 1992, at the Veterans Affairs Medical Center in Northwest, according to his friend, Ed Alwood, of D.C. Grooms died of complications associated with AIDS.

From 1986 until 1989 Grooms was a member of both the Mayor's Advisory Committee on Alcoholism and the Red Cross AIDS Conference Committee, according to Alwood. In 1986 he chaired the Red Cross committee.

Grooms also served as the AIDS Liaison at the Washington Area Council on Alcoholism and Drug Abuse (WACA-DA) from 1985 to 1988. In 1986, as a representative of the Council, he testified on addiction and AIDS-related issues before the D.C. Council and the U.S. Senate Committee on Health and Environment, according to Alwood.

Grooms also worked for WACADA as a senior hotline counselor.

Certified as an alcohol and substance abuse counselor, Grooms was the resident manager of the Scott-Harper House, an addictions halfway house run by the Whitman-Walker Clinic, from 1988 to 1990.

Grooms, who studied at Union Theological Seminary in New York, N.Y., from 1979 to 1980, served as the regional coordinator of prison ministry for the Metropolitan Community Church of Washington from 1977 to 1979, according to Alwood. He was a founding member of the congregation's Church of the Disciples, in Northwest, and was the church's director of AIDS ministry until the time of his death.

Born in Greenville, Tenn., Grooms served in the Navy as a Petty Officer, 3rd

Class, from 1965 to 1968. During the Vietnam War he served on the staff of the Commander of Naval Forces in the Marianas Islands in the Pacific, and was decorated for outstanding service, Alwood said.

Grooms moved to D.C. in 1972. In 1979 he completed his undergraduate studies with Antioch University, earning a degree in psychology. Grooms studied at the D.C. campus of Antioch, which is based in Yellow Springs, Ohio.

Grooms is survived by his mother, Ruth Davis; brother and sister-in-law, Nathan and Suzette Grooms, all of Lincolnton, N.C.; and many friends in the D.C. area.

A memorial service is scheduled for Saturday, Dec. 19, at 3 p.m., at St. Thomas Episcopal Church, 1772 Church St., NW.

Thomas F. Garnica

July 25, 1955—June 4, 1993

Thomas, formerly known to some here as "Rico," and known to me always as "Boc," died peacefully at 8:15 a.m. on June 4, after bounding back from many hospitalizations for AIDS.

Thomas was born and grew up in Davenport, Iowa, lived in San Francisco in the mid-1970s, and returned to live here twelve months ago. He also celebrated living in Honolulu, Los Angeles, Palm Springs, and ultimately, Chicago.

Thomas will always be remembered by beloved friends in these places for his laughter, beautiful eyes, thick dark hair, enjoyment of the party of life, unquenchable spirit, and loving nature. In a quiet moment, we'll be able to hear him: "Girl ..." ▼

Edward H. Gottesman

Artist, 41

Edward H. Gottesman, an artist and designer, died on Monday at the Kaiser Permanente Hospital in Oakland, Calif. He was 41 years old and lived in nearby Berkeley.

He died of an AIDS-related illness, his family said.

Mr. Gottesman was a painter of watercolors and oils and a designer of theatrical sets and neo Art Deco furniture. His work is in the Denver Art Museum, the Oakland Museum and San Francisco Opera House.

He designed the stage sets for "Quis-bies" at the Kennedy Center in Washington in 1990 and for "Theater Rhinoceros" in San Francisco in 1989.

Mr. Gottesman was born in Queens. He graduated from Columbia College in 1972, then moved to California.

Surviving are his parents, Doris and Nathaniel Gottesman of West Palm Beach, Fla.; three brothers, Daniel, of Vancouver, British Columbia, Robert, of Stony Brook, L.I., and Jonathan, of Manhattan. 9-28-92

Rusty L. Guyette

Oct. 27, 1952—Feb. 17, 1993

Rusty passed away peacefully at his brother's home in Midvale, Utah at approximately 2:30 a.m. on February 17 from complications due to AIDS. He was 40 years young. His brother Dennis, and mother Rita Guyette, were at his bedside.

Rusty was born in Iowa, but also hailed from Minnesota, Florida and Switzerland, although Rusty's love for San Francisco was well known.

Rusty was always a delight to be around and the best housekeeper one could ever have. He will be missed by his friends and acquaintances.

Although private family services will be held elsewhere, donations may be made to Project Open Hand, 2720 17th St., SF 94110. ▼

Peter Gingrich

Peter Lee Gingrich II, 37, of Tampa, Florida, and a native of the D.C. area, died on Thursday, February 4, 1993 at Memorial Hospital of Tampa of complications associated with AIDS.

Gingrich was raised in the Washington area, growing up in Alexandria, Va., and Silver Spring, Md. He graduated in 1974 from Springbrook High School in Silver Spring. He attended York College of Pennsylvania, receiving a bachelor's degree in 1978 in engineering management and an associate degree in math. He graduated cum laude.

Gingrich returned to the Washington area after college. He worked for the Department of Defense as a computer information analyst from 1980 to 1982. Then, for the next five years, he was a computer programmer at IBM Corporation. In 1987, he moved to Tampa and began working for GTE as a member of the technical staff.

Gingrich, who retired from GTE Data Services in Tampa in 1989, wrote in an obituary he prepared, "My retirement years were difficult and wonderful, trying to assign meaning to my life. The amount of support I received from my friends was of the utmost value to me."

"Please know that my life was wonderful!" he wrote. "Every one of you who knew me touched me in such a way that goes beyond the bounds of human experience. Wherever I am now, I am thinking fondly of you."

Gingrich was active in the Gay rights and AIDS movements, writing many letters to officials and organizations "challenging them to go beyond their limitations and be more tolerant of other people and their differences," he explained. Gingrich wrote these letters in support of the American Civil Liberties Union, Gay and Lesbian Alliance Against Defamation, ACT UP, and other organizations.

Gingrich is survived by his husband, Stephen Burckure; good friends, Mark Amen; Spencer Morgan; Dorece Norris; Joe Callen; John Imboden; and Helen Levine, all of Tampa; Jerry Carriger of Fredericksburg, Va.; Fred Fishman; and Larry Neff of Washington; Ericka Grav of Boston, Mass.; parents, Lillian and Lee Gingrich of Palm Harbor, Fla.; brother, Bruce of Jacksonville, Fla.; and Burckure's parents, Betty and Mike Burckure of Largo, Fla.

A celebration of Gingrich's life will take place on April 3 in Clearwater, Fla.

Steven J. Graham

April 4, 1955-March 1, 1993

Steven passed away after a long struggle with AIDS. For the last several years he made a full-time job of taking care of his health and educating himself about his illness and current treatments.

He spent his early years growing up in Ithaca, NY, and later in Springfield, Missouri. He attended school at the University of San Francisco and at Peter Kaump's Cooking School in New York City.

Steven was proud of his six years of continuous sobriety in AA and Al-Anon and will be missed by many members of meetings that he attended who were treated to his unique way of communicating.

He loved the arts, especially theatre. His idea of heaven was one of his perfect creme brulees, or spending hours creating other taste treats in the kitchen. He was a true intellectual and not a little eccentric at times, but he always remained open to new ideas and the opinions of others.

He was grateful for the loving support of his mother, Maxine Graham, especially during his last months. He is also survived by his sister, niece and nephew, Susan, Cassie and San Faren, all of Springfield. He was preceded in death by his father, James S. Graham.

A celebration of his life will be held at Most Holy Redeemer Church on Saturday, March 13 at 11 a.m.

In lieu of flowers, donations may be made to Project Open Hand, 2720 17th St., SF 94114, or the MHR Support Group. ▼

Daniel Kevin Grace

Feb. 23, 1954-April 30, 1993

Dan passed on peacefully to another life in his mother's arms Friday evening, in Denver, CO., of AIDS-related illnesses. Never will a more handsome, friendly, compassionate, loving, stubborn, humorous man walk this planet.

All who knew him loved him deeply. His loss is a black hole in all of our hearts, that will never heal. He was a beacon of light and love for us all in this mad, dark world, which now shines for those on the other side.

Daniel is survived by his mother, Patricia; father, Harry; brothers, Michael, Tim, and Terrence; sister, Meg; five nieces and two nephews and in the hearts of all who shared his time on earth. He will never be forgotten. He was the best. ▼

Ronald Gonzales

Ronald J. Gonzales, 46, of Fairfax, Virginia, died Tuesday, April 20, 1993, at Fairfax Hospital due to complications associated with AIDS, according to friend Jackie Shaffer, of Falls Church, Virginia.

Gonzales worked over 12 years in the hotel industry, representing Guest Quarters, Fairmont, and Loew's hotel companies. For the past seven years he was associated with Westin Hotels & Resorts' D.C. corporate sales team.

Gonzales in June 1992 was awarded the Distinguished Service Award from his peers in the Hotel Sales and Marketing Association (HSMA). He served on the HSMA through the fall of 1991.

"Continuing to share his strength and hope with others, he volunteered to speak about his 'living with AIDS' to high school students in the local community. Ron possessed an inner glow which fully expressed his joy of living/loving life," Shaffer said.

Orleans and a master's degree in education from the University of Houston. He previously worked as a developmental instructor at the University of Tennessee with an emphasis on athletic instruction.

"He was a multifaceted individual, having special interests in musical theater, modern dance, traveling, and entertaining friends in his home. He was a man of a thousand smiles, filled every room with contagious laughter, and dedicated himself to serving and helping others. His love for people and music, (especially Barbra Streisand), were among the constant wellsprings of strength, supporting his positive attitude throughout his battle with AIDS," said Shaffer. "Ron considered each person in his life a most important gift, and he felt blessed by their presence. When you met Ron once, you remembered him always ... as a living Gonzales earned a bachelor's degree in science from the University of New Orleans. He was a devoted and happy, 'full-of-life' human being."

In addition to Shaffer, Gonzales is survived by his longtime companion of 11 years, Randy Creasman, of Fairfax; and his mother, Earline Todd, of Metairie, La.; a sister, Terrie Watson, of Albion Springs, La.; a brother Gregory Gonzales, of Covington, La.; and additional relatives living in the Greater New Orleans, La., area.

His remains were cremated on April 21, and graveside services were held April 24 in Covington.

A memorial service will be held at 6 p.m. on Tuesday, May 11, at St. Thomas Episcopal Parish at 1772 Church Street, NW.

Contributions may be made to Food and Friends, P.O. Box 70601, Washington, DC 20024; or to Pets-DC, 2001 O St., NW, Washington, DC 20036.

Richard Greenway

Richard Lee Greenway, 34, of Washington, D.C., died on Wednesday, January 27, 1993, at his home of complications associated with AIDS, according to his longtime friend, Richard Daly of Washington.

An architect, Greenway worked for the last seven years for Bell Atlantic, helping plan, design, and provide construction services for properties owned by the company. Previously, he was employed by the Architect of the Capitol, working on a number of restoration projects.

Greenway came to Washington to attend Catholic University of America. In 1980, he received his degree in architecture. Greenway was a member of several professional organizations, including the American Institute of Architects, Washington Building Congress, the Capitol Hill Restoration Society, and the Design Industries Foundation for AIDS.

Greenway had a passion for traveling, was an avid gardener, and enjoyed renovating houses. He also liked anything Italian, Daly said.

In addition to Daly, Greenway is survived by his parents, Barbara and LaRue Greenway; sister, Joyce Danneker, all of Pennsylvania; and brother, Howard of California.

A memorial service will be held on April 17 at Tudor Place, in Georgetown, at 1 p.m.

Donations in Greenway's name may be made to the Whitman-Walker Clinic,

Jeffery K. Garia

Jeffery Garia died from complications due to AIDS on April 3, in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania. He was 38. ¹⁹⁹³

Jeffery was born and raised in Verona, PA. He lived in Boston during the mid-80s and worked as a hairstylist for some of the top salons. Jeffery moved back to Pittsburgh and opened his own salon, J. Garia and Company, having accomplished one of his many dreams.

Jeffery leaves his parents, Shirley and Michael, his brother John and sister Joyce. Jeffery also leaves his three girls, Simone, Amber and Soukt, and a tremendous network of friends who will never stop loving him and who will keep his memory close to our hearts. And lastly, Jeffery leaves a closet full of habits.

Funeral services were held April 5 in Pittsburgh.

James Joseph Gonzales

On May 20, a group of friends journeyed to the sea to celebrate the passing of a very special person, James Joseph Gonzales.

"As we scattered his ashes, they joined with the sea, creating a luminous glow which lit up the ocean's depths. As the current carried his ashes away, we felt the pulse of life at its completion.

"We love and miss you. Signed, your 'real family.'"

Paul Michael Greely

June 28, 1953-March 27, 1993

Paul Michael Greely, of San Francisco, known as the "man with a heart," died peacefully in the early morning hours of March 27, 1993 in the beautiful home of his beloved friends, Kevin Wadsworth and Paul Johnson, of Placerville, CA.

Mike, a giant of a man who will be remembered for his many friends and "family" for his even bigger heart and generosity, was born on June 28, 1953, in Washington State. He served eight years in the United States Army and was a construction foreman and master carpenter by trade. An absolute perfectionist and expert in concrete and steel, he was very proud of his work and took pride in the quality of his craftsmanship. His favorite jobs included the Bonneville Dam on the Columbia River Gorge and various assignments with Cahill Construction and Frank Silva Construction companies in San Francisco.

Mike is survived by his many friends and "family," Pulquerio Silva, Doug Steele, Tony Crown, Nina Porcella, Charles Brewer, Bona Joseph Leake, Lisa Francis, Steve Eichenbaum and many more "magical" souls. A celebration for Mike will be held at Uncle Bert's Place on 18th Street in San Francisco at 3:00 p.m. on April 10th. We love you, Mike! You will always be remembered as the man with the heart.

GARRAMBONE—Joseph. Died at home on Sunday afternoon, August 29, after a long and very courageous struggle. Joe will always be alive in the hearts of his friends and family, his father, Carmelo, and his wife, Jennifer, who loved him most of all. He taught us much about living, and changed us with his passion, grace and humility. Joe sang to us, made us laugh, and gave us the gift of love. Contributions in his name may be made to the Actor's Fund. A memorial service will be planned.

German (Herman) Gonzalez

Feb. 21, 1962-April 27, 1993

German crossed over his bridge at home with his lover, family and friends by his side after a brave fight with AIDS.

German was born in Guadalajara, Mexico. He moved to the East Bay at the age of seven and then to San Francisco, the city he loved, in 1982. German worked in many restaurants, including Max's and the St. Francis. He will always be remembered for his big open heart, beautiful eyes, the most gorgeous smile ever, plus the undying love he shared with his family and friends.

Grieving his death are his large family, friends, and lover, Daniel Bergerac. German wanted to thank the following people for helping during his crossing: Connie, Christine, Mario, Bill, Roger, Bruce, J.K., Raquel, Cloisa, Amy, T.P.C., Mary Kay, Wendy, Dr. Price, Davies Medical Center and Walgreen's Pharmacy at Castro and 18th.

Mass and memorial service was held on Friday, April 30, 1993, at 11 a.m., at Most Holy Redeemer.

ZOLTAN A. GRAY

August 16, 1960 -
March 7, 1993

Zoltan passed away in New York City after a lengthy battle with AIDS. Always the center of attention, Zoltan will be remembered for his radiant smile and joyful spirit.

Originally from Maryland, Zoltan served in the Navy in San Diego and spent considerable time in Los Angeles pursuing an acting and modeling career. San Francisco however, was unquestionably his home.

A skilled performer, Zoltan appeared in many commercials, films and music videos. He loved to travel and socialize and spend time with friends.

Cremation and services were held by his family in Maryland.

A gathering for those who knew and loved him will be held at 6:00PM on June 24th at 3362 - 16th Street. For details, please call Michael at 552-7883.

Saddened by his loss, his memory will be cherished and held dear by the many who loved him, especially Scott, Michael, Kevin, Mark, John, Bill, Chris, Don, Ginny, Jack, Carolyn and his beloved Pirate.

Jerry Lynn Glenn, Pianist

Feb. 17, 1953 - April 9, 1993

Dear Jerry:

You took a terrible pounding these last few years. It was very painful to stand by helplessly when your world came apart. It was even more hurtful for some of us who attempted to help.

You lost your dearest ones: your mother, your father, your lover, one after the other. You fought a losing battle with a powerful illness. Then, finally, AIDS took you away.

You were a staunch and loyal friend. You were a person of many exceptional qualities, not easily found on this planet.

You will live on in those of us who were so fortunate to have been the beneficiaries of your lovely and loving spirit.

Robert (Bert) W. Grabow

May 2, 1950 - July 6, 1993

Robert (Bert) W. Grabow passed away of AIDS on July 6 at 2:15 p.m. at Mercy Hospital.

Born in Illinois, Grabow served in the U.S. Navy and received an honorable discharge.

"We met as strangers in August of 1992 at the City Deli restaurant in Hillcrest. I was sitting at a small booth having coffee when he walked in, just out of the hospital with pneumonia. He asked me if he could join me, and I said, 'Yes, please sit down.' He was desperate for help and wanted to pay me $20 to do his dishes. I said I would but didn't want any money. He started to cry. He had no one. He said I was his guardian angel and saved his life. I said I was just there at the right time as I needed someone also," said his friend Trevor Snow.

"I stayed with him all the way, and he told everyone I was his guardian angel. He was not only my best friend, but my brother that I lost. He will be missed by me ever so much and by those whose hearts he touched.

"I'm glad I was able to become part of his life for almost a year. He now is at peace at Fort Rosecrans Cemetery.

"I'll always love you, Bert, and you will never be forgotten. I told you, you would be in the Update, and here you are," Snow said.

R. T. Gatchell, 50; Produced Musicals For Lloyd Webber

By WILLIAM GRIMES

R. Tyler Gatchell Jr., a theatrical general manager and producer long associated with the musicals of Andrew Lloyd Webber, died on Thursday en route to Kennedy International Airport. He was 50 and lived in Manhattan.

The cause was a heart attack, said his companion, Mark Shannon.

Gatchell & Neufeld, the management and production company that Mr. Gatchell founded with Peter Neufeld in 1969, managed or produced more than 100 shows in the United States and abroad, many of them on Broadway. The company's association with Mr. Lloyd Webber dates from the Broadway opening of "Jesus Christ Superstar" in 1971.

Mr. Gatchell and Mr. Neufeld served as executive producers of "Evita," "Cats," "Song and Dance," "Starlight Express" and "Aspects of Love," and of two Lloyd Webber musicals headed for Broadway. These are a revival of "Joseph and the Amazing Technicolor Dreamcoat" and the new "Sunset Boulevard," which Mr. Lloyd Webber has dedicated to Mr. Gatchell's memory.

Mr. Gatchell was born in Princeton, N.J., where he attended Princeton High School and worked at the McCarter Theater. He took his senior year at the Professional Children's School in New York City. After working as an assistant casting director and as the assistant box-office director of the Sheridan Square Playhouse in New York, he was hired by the production company Wolsk & Azenberg, where he met Mr. Neufeld.

In addition to Mr. Shannon, Mr. Gatchell is survived by his father, R. Tyler Gatchell of Princeton; his mother, Patricia Leadley of Denver; two sisters Alix Leadley of Denver and Lucy Gatchell of Princeton, and a brother, Harry D. Gatchell of Princeton.

Richard Burton Gilbert

Nov. 5, 1948 - Dec. 8, 1992

Ric arrived in San Francisco in the summer of '69, possessions lost in New Orleans along the way, in his old beat-up T-Bird, his dog Sgt. Pepper at his side. A Founding Father, a real father and lover, Rick leaves his godson Shanti and his lover of 20 years, Sean (with whom he raised Shanti). Ric was a cornerstone of the early alternative movement in The City. He was an Angel-of-Life-Rainbow-Family-Gay-Hippie! His influence helped to create the San Francisco of diversity we know today.

He met Sean Roherty at Fanny's in 1973 and together they found Yosemite and each other and Family. Everything in their lives changed each time they went to Yosemite. Ric spoke to the mountains and they answered him. He taught his family a reverence and love for those mountains, nature, the Rainbow Tribe and Native Americans and their land. This foundation led Ranger Ric to become a Rainbow Warrior and was a leader each year at the Rainbow Family gathering. Ric taught patience, understanding and love and lived his beliefs. His gentle but sure leadership and the patient effort he always gave teaching unconditional love are sorely missed.

This gentle giant gave new meaning to live and let live by caring deeply for all nature and its wonder and those he met along the journey.

His advice is now no doubt sought by the Great Spirit!

Ric is survived by mother Miriam; Sean, who cared for him before his death; brother Barry; sister Cheryl; Dennis, Gilbert, Cleve, John, Blossom, and Alan. His family wishes to thank the wonderful staff of caregivers at Garden Sullivan Hospital for their kind work for Ric at the end. Good stories and hope, and on to another gentle journey! ▼

Michael Gorman

May 14, 1993

Michael Gorman of 725 Corbett Street died at Davies Medical Center on May 14, 1993. He was 51 years old and had been ill for nearly a year.

He had numerous friends and acquaintances who all loved him for his good looks, joyful personality, and heart of gold.

It is doubtful that anyone ever met Mike who didn't immediately like him.

His burial took place in Lowell, Massachusetts, where he was born and where family members still live. ▼

Howard D. Goldberg

Talent Agent, 40 S-23/23

Howard D. Goldberg, a talent agent and founding partner of a Hollywood agency, died on Sunday at Sherman Oaks Medical Center in Los Angeles. He was 40 and lived in Los Angeles.

His family said the cause was complications from AIDS.

In 1982, Mr. Goldberg and Scott Harris founded the agency Harris & Goldberg, which became Innovative Artists last year. Mr. Goldberg has represented such actors as Anthony Hopkins, Don Ameche, Frank Langella, Liam Neeson and Roddy McDowall.

Born in Brooklyn, he graduated from the State University of New York at Binghamton in 1974. He went to Hollywood as an actor in 1976 and decided he preferred representing actors. He worked with the Henderson-Hogan Agency and Gersh Agency in Los Angeles.

His survivors include his companion of 15 years, Jim Bean; his father and stepmother, Martin and Janet Goldberg of Howard Beach, Queens, and two brothers, Steven of San Antonio and Robert of Brooklyn.

Brian J. Gordon, 30

Transport company salesman

Brian J. Gordon, a former Billerica resident and salesman for an East Boston international transport company, died Tuesday at Beth Israel Hospital of an AIDS-related illness. He was 30.

Born in Lowell, Mr. Gordon attended Lowell and Billerica schools and Brigham Young University in Provo, Utah. He spent two years in Taiwan as a missionary of the Mormon Church.

Returning to Boston, he worked as a bartender at Mario's in Bay Village. At the time of his death, he had worked for two years for Seajet Express of East Boston.

Mr. Gordon leaves his father and stepmother, Richard A. and Roberta Gordon of Lady Lake, Fla.; two brothers, Gary of Lowell and Mark of Nashua; three sisters, Robin Moloney of Lowell, and Greer and Kelly of Lady Lake; and his companion, David Denett of Boston.

The funeral and burial will be private.

Thomas Edward Gore

Tom Gore died May 25 of complications from AIDS in Los Angeles. He was 32. The Florida native, a distant relative of Vice President Al Gore, worked as a waiter and photographer in New Orleans and Chicago before moving to Los Angeles. A rafters bartender, Gore participated in the West Hollywood tent city erected by Queer Nation in 1991 in support of AB 101. He later went to Sacramento to protest the governor's veto of that bill; some of his photographs from the demonstration appeared in Frontiers. He is survived by his grandmother, sister, niece and two nephews. 1993

Roy Gonsalves

Roy Gonsalves was born Oct. 5, 1959 and has ascended with our Savior on July 10, 1993.

Roy graduated from English High School and furthered his education at Emerson College. He was a teacher in both the Boston and New York public schools.

Roy was also a writer, visual artist, therapist and literary performing artist. He has performed at the Studio Museum in Harlem, the Bleeker Street Cinema, Medger Evers College, Third National Black Writers Conference, Giovanni's Room, A Different Light Book Store, Foundation for the Vital Arts, Massachusetts College of Art, Syracuse University, Harvard University, D.C.'s Black Lesbian and Gay Pride Day, Brooklyn Public Library, Outwrite '92, the Publishing Triangle, the Center for Lesbian and Gay Studies, Rutgers University, Yale University, and Emerson College.

Roy's book of three stories and poems, "Perversion" was published in 1990. The book was nominated for the 1991 Gregory Kolovakos Award for AIDS. He has been included in Essence magazine, Other Countries, Black Gay Voices, Bay Windows, the Pyramid Periodical, The Road Before Us: 100 Gay Black Poets, Evening Sunshine, Playguy, First Hand, Thing, Queer City and gay Community News.

Roy founded and edited the Pyramid Poetry Periodical and EBONI magazine at Emerson. He was the managing poetry editor of the Other Countries Journal.

Roy has had his art displayed at Northeastern University's African-American Masters Artists in Residency Program, the Public Image in New York and the Boston Center for the Arts. Recently, Roy became the recipient of the Bessie Smith Award for Creativity by the Greater Boston Lesbian/Gay Political Alliance.

Roy leaves behind his mother, Jean Marie (Fernandes) Gonsalves; his father, James J. Gonsalves; his brothers, Steven Francis Thimas; Eddie Francis Thimas and Manual Gonsalves; his sisters, Yvonne Kim Carpio and Delores Jean Gonsalves; his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Manuel Fernandes; many aunts, uncles, nieces, nephews, cousins and an abundance of personal friends, all he loved dearly.

A memorial service was held July 14.

Walter Grammatica

September 16, 1993

Walter, a.k.a., "Wally" relinquished his "Fight of All Fights," against AIDS last Thursday morning, September 16, 1993. He was home with his soul-mate Tom Lashbrook at his side.

Wally's unyielding spirit to overcome each calamity that came along from this horrid ailment was an inspiration to behold. He refused to give up the battle each step of the way.

Walter's monument to this world is for all who suffer from HIV or any other so-called "terminal" illness, not to give up and just let it happen! Learn all you can about the illness, do everything possible to help your body help itself before turning to drugs that may open one door but inevitably closes another. There are alternatives!

Wally was fortunate to be surrounded by a loving, caring circle of family, friends, and hospice care-givers. He was never alone.

Walter was cremated and his ashes were spread over the waters of California, the place he called home for many years. To us this is not the end, its just a fond farewell 'till we meet again. He will be missed.

Anyone wishing to remember Walter can do so by donating to the San Francisco AIDS Foundation, 25 Van Ness Ave., SF, CA 94109, and tell them it's for Walter. ▼

William (Billy) E. Gautier

April 29, 1941-June 21, 1993

Billy passed away at 52 in his home with his best friend Jeff at his side the evening of June 21, 1993.

A native New Yorker, he relocated to S.F. in 1987 when he left the printing trade and began his career as a chef.

Billy also volunteered at the local YMCA as a fitness consultant.

We will remember his easy laughter and his readiness to extend his warmth and genuine caring to his friends and family.

Billy is survived by his loving and supportive mother, Eloisa; his brothers, Richard Louie, Bob, and Ed; and sister, Kitty.

He will be especially missed by Jeff, Emi, May, Linda, Howard and Ed.

Now you're perfect again. We wish you peace.

A celebration of Billy's life will be held on August 8, 1993. For further information, contact Jeff at 626-1241.

Stephen Gainer

September 17, 1993

On September 17, 1993, partner, friend, brother and son, Stephen Gainer died at home with grace. Cared for by partner, Jamie; sisters, Monica and Sandy; friends Darnell, Patrick and Peter.

We will miss his talents, creativity and sharp humor. He was always there when you needed a friend. Stephen will be remembered by family and many loving friends.

Stephen, you were a special person and will live forever in our hearts!

Family and friends are invited to a memorial service on Tuesday, September 21, 1993, at 1 p.m. at the Neptune Columbarium on 1 Lorraine Court, San Francisco. Contributions preferred, in lieu of flowers, to the Shanti Project, 525 Howard St., SF, CA 94105. ▼

James F. Gordon of the South End, vice president of The Boston Company in the advanced technologies and architectures group, died Saturday at the Brigham and Women's Hospital in Boston of complications from AIDS. He was 39.

Born in Pontiac, Mich., he was educated in the Clarkston, Mich., public schools, and was a 1976 graduate of the University of Michigan, earning a degree in finance.

From 1976-78, he worked at Broder's Bookstore in Ann Arbor, Mich., creating a computerized book inventory system. He came to Boston in 1978 and went to work for the Bank of Boston. From 1981-85 he was a consultant for Monchick-Weber, a software company, writing applications for the mutual funds industry. From 1985-88, he was a manager in management consulting at Coopers & Lybrand.

Mr. Gordon enjoyed literature, theater and traveling. He was an avid swimmer, competing in the annual Provincetown Harbor Swim for Life for several years.

He is survived by his mother, Genevieve (Conder) of Clarkston, Mich.; a brother, Greg of Plymouth, Mich.; two sisters, Claudia Bigelow of Waterford, Mich., and JoAnne Gordon-Anderson of Greenville, Mich.; and eight nieces and nephews.

A memorial service will be held Saturday, April 27 at 2:30 p.m. at the J.S. Waterman & Sons and Eastman-Waring Funeral Home, 495 Commonwealth Ave., Kenmore Square, Boston.

Burial will be private.

Thomas Russell Grow

June 26, 1957-May 10, 1993

Tom peacefully let go after living with AIDS for five years. He was at home with family members. He joins his cherished lover Ted and many dear friends.

Born in Philadelphia and raised in Levittown, Pennsylvania, Tom spent most of his adult life in San Francisco. He worked for Pacific Bell until the spring of 1987, earning the respect of co-workers and her operator, "Stella."

Tom lived life to its fullest. Most important of him, after himself, were the people he loved. He was a vibrant and giving man no matter what difficulties he faced. Tom's inner strength amazed us all.

He loved shooting pool, travelling in "Heather," beading, listening to Janis, collecting frogs and hanging out with family or friends. Favorite places were his flat, friend's homes, the Cliff House, the Rose Garden and, yes, Pilsner Inn. "Rack'em, Girl!"

Tom is lovingly remembered by his mother, Betty; father, Frank; brother, Jim; sisters, Beverly and Karen; his beloved nephew, Ian; and many friends from all walks of life.

Memorial services were held for Tom on Wednesday, May 12. Gifts in his memory may be given to Visiting Nurses and Hospice of San Francisco, 1390 Market St., SF 94102. ▼

Michael Lynn Green

June 16, 1954-May 20, 1993

"MY SON"

What have we gained with the world

if all we have given are material things? Money and things cannot replace the loss of my son. I could not see what he saw and he could not see what I see.

Everything has a time and place for growth; without soul growth we remain nothing. From ashes to ashes, dust to dust, we leave just like we came. But the greatest legacy man can leave on this earth is what he gave openly, willingly and unselfishly — the greatest gift of all. The spiritual growth will remain and continue to give, without the pain and suffering.

Is it worth it to gain the world and not have the spirit of giving and loving? No soul growth will leave you suffering and pain, and no gain.

I had to let him go — he isn't there anymore. Jesus said, and I quote, "Those who believeth in me, will have love and life everlasting." He came for Mike's spirit a while ago, to leave that pain and suffering. We can rejoice that his is in a better place.

I'd give everything that I have to have him back, but that is a selfish wish which wasn't meant to be. Now I'll have two guardian angels to give me a nudge, both of them walking beside me to protect me — my father and my son. Thank you God for the wonderful years I had with them both because they were so special to me. No greater love have I to return them to thy fold, in which they will be waiting for me when it's my time. ▼

Rod Goebel

April 18, 1946-Sept. 14, 1993

Rod was born in Austin, Texas. He passed away in Taos, New Mexico.

"Painting has always been my life force. The creating of a varied body of work both in subject and style has been a catalyst for my self-discovery.

My process is to give up my control and preconceptions in order to achieve a sense of freedom and trust — which I believe are the highest goals toward which mankind can aspire...

"A work of art, in whatever form, only has value if it speaks of human passion and feeling. A portrait should be alive and have the power to engage the viewer in a dialogue of wonder and self-discovery. I strive to portray a common humanity rather than a specific personality. I do capture my subject but seek a recognition of the person rather than merely a representation of the face. It is my desire to portray the loving spirit we share. I hope my work helps in bringing all of us together." ▼

(Edward) Jeff Glenn

Nov. 9, 1956-May 21, 1993

On May 21, 1993, the talented loom of fiber artist Jeff Glenn was stilled after a long fight. The fourth of six children, he is survived by them and his parents in the East. In San Francisco he leaves behind his lover of 11 years, Jayson Barron and their schnauzer, Max. Jeff also will be remembered by dear friends from near and far.

A creative child, Jeff was always doing something with his hands, a habit that continued to the end. As a young adult he grew from craft beginnings to recognized and commissioned fiber artist. An honor Student, Jeff graduated from California College of Arts and Crafts with a Bachelor of Fine Arts in Textiles in 1987.

Jeff Glenn's beautiful work combined fine arts and craft traditions by his use of painted canvases that were then woven into rich patterns and textures. His work was recognized nationally; Jeff's pieces are in the permanent collections of the Oakland Museum, The American Craft Museum (New York), The Missoula Museum of Art (Missoula, Mont.) and in many private collections. Jeff was also a contributing writer to Fiber Arts magazine and Surface Design Journal and lectured throughout the Bay Area about fiber arts and his work.

On Sunday, June 6, a Celebration of Jeff Glenn's life and a showing of selected works will be held at Rami's Cafe, 1361 Church Street, San Francisco, from 4 to 7 p.m. His work will remain on display through the month of June at Rami's Cafe. Donations in Jeff's memory are encouraged to go to Hospice By The Bay. ▼

Greg Graham

Aug. 27, 1950-May 6, 1993

Greg died of AIDS-related complications.

At the time of his death, Greg was surrounded by the love of his family and friends.

We miss him very much. A life-long Bay Area resident, Greg was fortunate to find a career that allowed him to express his genuine concern for people. As concierge at the Queen Anne Hotel, Greg's warmth and generosity made travelers feel at home, he turned "guests" into "friends."

Greg is survived and remembered by his mother, Betty; sister, Kaycee; his nephews and godchild, Matthew; his brother, George; his godmother, Elizabeth ReMello; his friends, Trish, Jim, Mark, and Charles, and many other friends, co-workers and guests.

Donations in Greg's memory may be made to the S.F. AIDS Foundation, 25 Van Ness Ave., SF 94142.

Roberto Galindo

Sept. 14, 1950—Sept. 8, 1993

On September 8, 1993, in the early evening hours, Roberto Galindo became one with his creator. Surrounded by his Lover of 17 years, Michael, along with his friends Sue, Gary, Warren, Bob, Dale, Kristopher, Del, Eileen, and Peter, Roberto transcended this life to become one with the universe.

Roberto fought a short but valiant fight against PCP in the Kaiser Hospital on Geary Street. A caring and loving staff made the fight much easier.

Roberto was an employee of Pacific Bell for over 14 years. He was also very proud of his six years of being clean and sober.

Because of you, Roberto, our lives have been enriched. You have filled the missing link between living and existence. Thank you for sharing your hands, your heart, your life, and your faith.

The world has been a better place because of you. Spiritual understanding and loving till the end you gave to the many who gave to you. You will be remembered and loved by many friends and family. Your beloved dogs Espe and Killer will miss those long walks.

Roberto, though he died before his time, will find rest. Length of days is not what makes age honorable, nor number of years the true measure of life. Understanding, this is grey hairs, untarnished life, this is ripe old age.

A memorial service will be held October 2, 1993, at MCC San Francisco, 150 Eureka Street at 1 p.m. Donations may be made to the Aids Assistance Fund of MCC San Francisco. ▼

Michael I. Gardner, 47

Was social worker for the state
9-7-93

Michael I. Gardner of Dorchester, a former social worker for the Massachusetts Rehabilitation Commission, died Tuesday in Beth Israel Hospital of complications from AIDS. He was 47.

Mr. Gardner was born in Boston. He earned his bachelor's degree at Kentucky State College and a master's degree in social work at Adelphi College.

He worked in a placement program for Southeast Asians conducted by the YMCA of Boston. He also did home placement work for the Massachusetts Rehabilitation Commission before illness forced his retirement in May 1992.

Mr. Gardner loved the outdoors and maintained a log cottage in the woods of Maine. He was also an enthusiastic photographer who visited the San Diego Zoo last February to take pictures of the animals.

He was the adopted son of the late Meyer and Annabelle Gardner-Goldberg of Worcester. He leaves his birth mother, Mildred Shore of Boston.

A memorial service will be held at 4 p.m. Sept. 19 in the Arlington Street Church, Boston. Burial was in B'nai B'rith Cemetery, Worcester.

GREENSPAN—On May 23, 1994, Donald Bruce Greenspan of Boston. Formerly of New York. Son of Ruth (Baltuch) Greenspan, and brother of Richard, Bill, and Chet Greenspan. Best friend of Thomas C. Burke and Gary R. Fredericks of Boston. Funeral services will be held Tuesday, May 24, 9:30 AM, in the Celestial Chapel of the J.S. Waterman & Sons, Eastman-Waring Funeral Home, 495 Commonwealth Ave., Boston. Interment Private.

Jon Gould

August 17, 1993

Jon Gould died in Los Angeles on August 17, 1993, at age 39. Jon was a natural-born humanitarian whose generosity had no concern for recognition, always loving humankind unconditionally. He was a co-founder of Project Angel Food, an organization in L.A. that provides hot meals for homebound PWAs. Jon was a generous supporter of many political and social causes.

Jon lived in San Francisco from 1978 to 1984, where he attended Antioch College and earned a Masters Degree in counseling. He worked as a counselor at a public clinic in the Tenderloin. But he was best known for his extraordinary culinary talents as a caterer and chef at Pasta Bella in Embarcadero Center.

Jon lived in Los Angeles since 1984, where he created the successful restaurant Pasta Etc. He will be dearly missed by his mother and stepfather, Lenore and Gerald Breslauer, his sister Nancy, step-sister and stepbrother Susan and Robert, and most of all, he will be treasured in the hearts of Gardiner Gilles, Tim Veness, Mark Herman, and all his loving friends. ▼

Robert Good

Dec. 15, 1967—July 5, 1993

Robert died peacefully at home, aged 25 years, after a short, sharp battle with AIDS-related herpes. He was born in Munich, Germany, and lived most of his life in San Antonio, Texas, before coming to San Francisco in 1989 with nothing but the shirt on his back. He went to work at a fast food restaurant as a night drive-through window clerk where he remained until he was no longer able to work. Robert was honest, kind and loving, and deserved better than he got.

Robert is survived by his grandparents in Baytown, Texas; his mother, Jan, and his niece, Jennifer, whom he adored. His friends, Ken, Albert, Pam, Verah, Christie and Millie, and Joe and Kathi, will scatter his ashes off the Mendocino Coast in mid September. Mr. Bowzer and Checkers miss him terribly.

He spent three of his last six months on Ward 5 where he received wonderful care, especially from Cecilia, Lewis, Adrienne, Ricardo, Dr. Kathryn Resenbrink and Dr. Linda Liu. Also to be thanked are Marilyn Wall, Dr. Laura Worth, and the entire staff of Ward 86 who care so much for all of their charges. Gene Gore and the staff of Visiting Nurses/Hospice went well above and beyond the call of duty. Thanks also to Rita Rocket, whose Sunday brunches were a wonderful break in the hospital routine.

Memorial contributions may be sent to Visiting Nurses/Hospice, Rita Rocket, or to any organization promoting safe-sex awareness among teenagers and young adults. ▼

True Friends Are Always There

The following letter is from the parents and brother of Michael Gilbert. Michael's partner of 17 years, Roberto Galindo, passed away on Sept. 8, 1992.

Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert are elderly and in poor health. They are unable to travel. They were very much concerned about their son being alone at this time of sorrow; however, they have been relieved and grateful at the way his brothers and sisters in the gay community have responded with love, caring and support.

This letter is their way of expressing their thanks to those directly involved with Michael's loss and those who have responded to the many losses this community has endured in the truest spirit of love:

Our heartfelt thanks to all of our son's friends who have been so very supportive of him during his time of crisis. It means so much to us as parents to know there are so many people beside him taking our place. He was so excited trying to tell us on the telephone the names of all those who were with him and Roberto at the time of Roberto's recent death.

I wish I was smart enough to write it up as a story for a movie. The general public has no idea how the love of brothers and sisters erupts all over the place in the time of need.

Why weren't we there? We are unable to travel, but we were there in spirit.

(Brother) Larry

GERARD—Rick. On November 2, 1993, he was thirty-three years old, and was born November 3, 1959 in Chicago, Illinois. He died as a result of cardiac arrest due to an AIDS related lung infection. Rick is survived by his sister, Tatiana Decker, his aunt, Mrs. Alex Pisarski, and his beloved friends Antonia Rigopoulos, Eddie Hinson, and Calvin Remsburg. For further information Pierce Brothers Westwood Village Mortuary.

GEORGE—Raymond. A native New Yorker passed away 4/27/94 at home after a long and courageous battle with AIDS. He worked for the past fifteen years with the association of American Publishers, most recently as a project manager for PUBNET. He leaves behind Shadow, his cat, and many loving friends.

Vincente G. Garcia

A celebration of the life of Vicente "Chico" Gonzalez Garcia, who died on June 2 in Hollywood Hills, Calif., was held at Lemuel Shattuck Hospital in Jamaica Plain on June 29. 1993

Garcia, who grew up in the South End, died just as he wished — peacefully and in the company of his devoted lifelong friend and domestic partner, J.L. Guétin d'Alvares. He now joins his mother, Ana, sisters Miriam and Zenaida, two nephews and his "brother" Mike.

His death was caused by respiratory failure due to pneumonia brought on by AIDS.

Garcia was born July 19, 1951, in Aguadilla, Puerto Rico, and was the second of 13 children born to Ana and Ramon Garcia. He received most of his schooling and spent much of his early life in the South End.

He served in the U.S. Marine Corps from 1958 to 1970, and was awarded the National Defense Service Medal and the Rifle Marksman Badge M-14.

At Camp Pendleton, Calif., in 1969, he and d'Alvares met and began their lifelong commitment to each other. Their commitment, with the full acceptance and support of both their families, continued for 24 years.

They lived in Hollywood, where Garcia ran a sewing machine repair business, and later in the Boston area, but most recently in Hollywood again.

In 1972, he was blessed with the birth of his daughter, Tanya, but after her birth he did not see her again until 1990 when she visited him during his most recent prison incarceration.

A gregarious, tender person who loved all things beautiful, he was a self-taught artist and avid collector of self-appealing curios. He had a great love for music and dabbled at playing trumpet in his spare time and frequently jammed with friends.

In 1990, while he was confined in a Massachusetts prison, Garcia was told he had full-blown AIDS. Garcia was sure he had contracted the virus during his life of extensive drug abuse, prior to his 1985 incarceration.

Garcia refused to give in, participating in Boston's "From All Walks of Life" in May 1992 and, behind prison walls, the Walk for Hunger in 1991.

He decided that to suffer and die in a hospital or hospice was not for him. He wanted to be cared for and eventually die in his own bed in the home he and d'Alvares made together.

He wanted no funeral with sadness or remorse, but a celebration of life and love.

He leaves his domestic partner and eternal companion, d'Alvares; his daughter, Tanya; his granddaughter, Tiffany; his father, Ramon Sr.; 10 sisters and brothers; and many other relatives, friends and loved ones.

Murray Gitlin, 67 A Former Dancer

6-29-94

Murray Gitlin, a dancer and stage manager, died on Wednesday at St. Clare's Hospital. He was 67 and lived in Manhattan.

The cause was AIDS, said his cousin, Frances Jacobs, of Syosset, L.I.

Mr. Gitlin, who was born in West Hartford, Conn., studied with Hanya Holm, Alwin Nikolais, Martha Graham and José Limón, and danced with the New York City Opera, the companies of Mr. Nikolais and Pearl Lang, and in such musicals as "The King and I," "The Golden Apple," "Can-Can" and "Irma la Douce."

He was stage manager for Off Broadway revivals of "On the Town," "The Boys From Syracuse" and "Private Lives," and was production stage manager for "The Boys in the Band" from its first workshop production throughout its initial Off Broadway run and first national tour. He was also production stage manager for the Broadway revival of "The Spirit."

He is survived by his mother, Anya, of Boynton Beach, Fla., and a brother, Milton, of West Hartford.

Alan Golden

1942-1993

Alan Golden passed away May 18 in Santa Barbara, CA., from complications with AIDS. He was 51.

Born in Woonsocket, R.I., April 17, 1942; where he attended school in his senior year, he was voted "best looking." He graduated from Boston University with a B.A. and later a law degree. He was a member of the Massachusetts Bar Association and later the California bar.

Alan moved to San Francisco in the early '70s and enjoyed one of the truly golden ages of the city. In 1984, he moved to Santa Barbara and spent many happy days sailing with his friend John and trusty dog Jasper. He loved his family and friends, had a good heart, and was always a reliable friend!

Al passed away quietly and peacefully with his sweet family at his side, his parents Harold and Evelyn Golden and sister Arlene Gilbert, all of Cumberland, R.I. Also present was his long-time best friend John Wilson, and friend Bubba Geiger.

Robert J. Gray

June 16, 1994

A memorial and celebration of the life of Robert Gray was held in Armstrong Woods in Guerneville on Sunday, June 26, at 2 p.m. Bob died peacefully at home with his partner, Wayne Skala, from AIDS-related complications on the afternoon of June 16. His cat Walter and his friend Suzanne also shared his final moments.

He is survived by his mother and father, Helen Joyce and Marshall Gray; his grandmother, Helen L. Landrith; and six brothers, Larry, Richard, Gary, Steve, Ron and his twin, Bill.

Bob's passion was his music. He was an active Bay Area recitalist on both the flute and the harp. He received his B.A. in music from Cal State Hayward and earned his performance certificate from the Royal Conservatory of Holland.

Bob faced his death as he had his life, with great courage and quiet determination. He touched people with his loving spirit, his gentleness, and his dry sense of humor, even when he was very ill. We will miss him. ▼

Pianist and Singer, 37

Peter Alan Gloo, a pianist and singer of popular music at Manhattan nightclubs for a decade, died on Dec. 3 at St. Vincent's Hospital and Medical Center of New York. He was 37.

The cause was AIDS, said his mother, Joan Gloo, of Mohawk, N.Y.

Mr. Gloo, who lived in Manhattan, was a founding member of Hearts and Voices, a group of performing artists who entertained in the AIDS wards of New York City hospitals. He graduated from Williams College in 1978.

In addition to his mother, he is survived by his father, Donald Gloo of Mohawk; four brothers, Stephen, of Herkimer, N.Y., Theodore, of Utica, N.Y., Donald, of Arlington, Va., and James, of Mohawk, and two sisters, Donna, of East Hampton, Conn., and Ellen, of Boston.

GLASER—Anne, beloved wife of the late Nathan, devoted mother of Eugene and Rosalind, adored grandmother of Blair and Alexis, cherished sister of Sylvia Fishman and the late Morris Krauss. Her elegance, style and wit will be sorely missed. Graveside ceremony Tuesday, May 4, 11 AM at the Washington Cemetery in Deans, N.J. In lieu of flowers donation in Anne's memory may be made to: Concerned Parents for AIDS Research, 733 3rd Ave, NY, NY 10017

David Goble

David Bastein Goble Jr., 41, died Thursday, July 8, 1993, at his Washington, D.C. home of complications associated with AIDS, said his Whitman-Walker Clinic "buddy," Kevin McGilly.

Goble was born November 2, 1951 in Richmond, Va. He was the son of an Army officer and his family lived in various cities of the U.S. and overseas, including Fontainebleau, France, and Mannheim in the former West Germany.

Goble graduated in 1969 from Prince George's High School, near Richmond, Va. He graduated from Hampton University in Hampton, Va. Afterwards he worked as a cook at the Hyatt Regency Hotel in Richmond for several years. Goble also worked in food service management at the University of Richmond.

Goble moved to Washington in 1982. He worked at various restaurants and bars, including Clyde's of Georgetown and Rumors of D.C., which no longer exists. In 1984, Goble worked in the Regent Hotel's kitchen. The Regent later became the Grand Hotel of D.C.

"He worked there until 1991, when he was forced to retire due to his disability," according to McGilly.

Goble's hobbies included fine food, good cooking, painting, and travel. Goble's travels included visits to Amsterdam, Acapulco, and Puerto Rico. He had a "wide circle of friends" which included "fellow regulars at Mr. P's on 2147 P Street, NW," according to McGilly. Goble, when he was younger, was an avid collector of electric trains. One dream Goble was unable to fulfill in his lifetime was to fly on the Concorde, according to his parents.

In addition to McGilly, Goble is survived by his parents, Madolyn and David Goble Sr.; brother, Bruce Goble; grandmother, Tessie Hicks; all of Hampton; brother, Michael Goble of Sierra Vista, Ariz.; and many aunts, uncles, cousins, and friends across the country.

A memorial service was held in Hampton on July 15. His remains were cremated and the ashes will be scattered under a tree he planted in his parents yard, according to McGilly.

Neal Grams

Neal A. Grams, 29, died Friday, January 28, 1994 at his home in Washington, D.C., of Addison's disease, according to his friend, Michael Nicosia of the Atonement Friary in Washington, D.C.

Grams was born on October 5, 1964, in Beaver Dam, Wis. He was diagnosed with Addison's, a disease affecting the adrenal glands, in early childhood. In 1982, Grams graduated from Westbend West High School in West Bend, Wis.

Grams attended Marquette University in Milwaukee. In college, he volunteered for a hospice and helped prepare meals for the elderly. After graduating in 1986, he trained as a paralegal at Milwaukee Business and Technical Institute. He moved to Washington in 1988.

At the Lepon McCarthy legal offices, Grams worked as a paralegal until 1992, when he began work as senior paralegal at Drinker Biddle & Reath, a D.C. law firm.

At the time of his death, Grams was pursuing a master's degree in business administration at George Washington University.

Grams was an avid reader and enjoyed long nature walks, theater, old movies, art, music, and dancing. He attended Mass with D.C.'s chapter of Dignity.

Neal is survived by his parents, William and Beverly Grams, of Nashotah, Wis.; brother and sister-in-law, Michael and Sue Ann Grams, and their children, Jakob and Gretchen, all of Milwaukee; brother and sister-in-law, Timothy and Brenda Grams, and their children, Melissa, Matthew, Elizabeth, and Benjamin, all of Merrill, Wis.; grandfather, Herbert Tesch, of Juneau, Wis.; and his cousin, Dana, and her husband, Stan Stigdon of Alexandria.

In addition to Nicosia, Neal is survived by friends, Carla Calobrisi of northern Virginia, Ana G. Morton of Alexandria, Va.; Pam Wroten of Arlington, Va.; Wendy Elliot of Silver Spring, Md.; Sandy Spell of District Heights, Md.; and Filippo Zucchi, Michael Hummel, Bill Weeks, and Philip Buckley, all of D.C.

On Feb. 4, the Rev. Kent E. Schroeder officiated at memorial services in St. Matthew's Evangelical Lutheran Church in Oconomowoc, Wis. Grams was buried that evening at Glenview Memorial Gardens, Ixonia, Wis.

IN MEMORIAM OF Gary "Giraffe" Schwarz (3/13/62-7/23/93). Our memories of you are too great & also painful to be forgotten because we had shared a lot of moments, good & bad times as "Three Deaf Musketeers." We have been thinking of you everyday. You are always in bottom of our hearts. Miss you very much. Love, Danny Carbonell & Chris DiGiovanni.

GUARDIOLA—Barnaby W. 95 Succumbed to AIDS on Sunday, February 12th. His many loving friends and family members will miss him and his humor deeply. A memorial service will be held on Friday, February 17th, 7 PM at Holy Apostles Church, 296 Ninth Avenue. Donations in his memory can be made to GMHC.

John Joseph Garcia
July 5, 1948 — May 24, 1993

Los Angeles native John Joseph Garcia passed away May 24 in the emergency room of Queen of Angels Hospital after a long battle with AIDS.

He survived by his parents; his sisters, Carol and Gloria and his brother, Martin; an extended family and many close and loving friends.

After attending Hamilton High School, Garcia studied theatre at Los Angeles City College. He was stage manager for the Laguna Opera Festival, taught technical theatre at the Utah Shakespeare Festival and designed sets at the Delray Beach Playhouse in Florida.

Garcia was a member of I.A.T.S.E., Local 33 and worked at CBS in Hollywood for 17 years. He worked on many shows, including The Tim Conway Special, The $100,000 Pyramid, Jokers Wild and The Bold and the Beautiful. He was head propman for The Price Is Right.

Friends say of Garcia, "John not only loved to party, but he always saw to it that there were proper decorations. The world was his, and he participated in all its celebrations, attending the first screening of many motion pictures, parades, concerts and any occasion made special by the appearance of the Pope, the triumphant Dodgers, or any marching band. He knew all the special places in Los Angeles and delighted in sharing this great city with friends and visitors from out of town. He will be greatly missed."

Stephane Gaudin, 15, Blood Scandal Victim
1993

PARIS, June 3 (AP) — Stephane Gaudin, who with his brother became a national symbol of France's blood transfusion scandal, died of AIDS on Wednesday. He was 15.

Stephane's brother, Laurent, 11, died last year. They were among 1,200 hemophiliacs who in the 1980's were given transfusions of blood products known to be contaminated with the AIDS virus. About 300 have died.

When the brothers were found to be HIV-positive in 1989, their father began capturing their last years on videotape. The tapes and interviews were broadcast last year, and Stephane and his parents recently published a book about their suffering, "The Price of Blood," which has become a best seller.

He played for hours with his personal computer and expressed a desire to design programs. But most of all, he wanted to someday fly the airplanes that are used to dump water on forest fires. He managed to get one step toward that goal by earning a license to fly an ultra-light aircraft.

Laurent died on Jan. 31, 1992. Stephane died of complications from salmonella that his AIDS-weakened body could no longer fight off.

The Gaudins' third son, Alexandre, 5, is not a hemophiliac.

CHRISTOPHER GILLIS, 42, CHOREOGRAPHER & DANCER

Christopher Gillis, a choreographer and longtime leading dancer with the Paul Taylor Dance Company, died of AIDS August 7 at his home in Manhattan. He was 42.

Born in Montreal to the Olympic skiers Gene Gillis and Rhona Wurtele, Christopher Gillis studied with modern-dance choreographers May O'Donnell and Norman Walker, as well as Mr. Taylor. He joined the Taylor company in 1976, performing leading parts in "Profiles," "Arden Court" and "Speaking in Tongues" and the role of the detective in Mr. Taylor's version of "Le Sacre du Printemps."

He also performed with his sister, Montreal choreographer and dancer Margie Gillis, and with the companies of May O'Donnell and Jose Limon.

An obituary by Jennifer Dunning in The New York Times described Gillis as a "prototypical Taylor dancer, with a compact body and a boyishly serious manner through which a glint of humor often showed." Anna Kisselgoff, the Times' chief dance critic, wrote of his "serene muscularity full of nuance, unassuming wit and acute rhythmic training" in a review of his 1990 "Curbs and Corridors."

Christopher Gillis began choreographing independently in the early 1980s, later showing his works as part of the Taylor company's repertory. Mikhail Baryshnikov's White Oak Dance Project, the Repertory Dance Theater and the Fairfax Ballet repertories also include his dances. Among his major works are "Andalusian Green," Farewell," "Icarus at Night," "Luv's Alfabeto" and "Homeward." His final piece, a solo meditation on death entitled "Landscape," was performed last January by Margie Gillis at the Joyce Theater.

Jack Graham, 43, executive dir. of Homeless on the Move for Equality, died Aug. 24 from AIDS complications. A former jail guard, he was left homeless in 1988, and ran for the Illinois General Assembly in 1992, while homeless. He served on the executives committees of the National Coalition for the Homeless and the Illinois Coalition to End Homelessness. Survivors include a father and four sisters. 97

Michael E. Gallagher
Jan. 28, 1947—Sept. 7, 1993

Mike died peacefully at 8:00 p.m. on September 7, 1993 at his home in Alameda, Ca., after suffering a AIDS related stroke on June 1, 1993. His partner, his parents, his good friend Ken Ireland, and his beloved cat Boots were present when he passed away.

Mike was born in Bonne Terre, Mo., moved to Los Angeles in the early '60s after serving in the U.S. Army as a Medical Corpsman, and settled in San Diego where he was the manager of "The Hole" for some years. He was active in the San Diego gay community and member of the Cycle Men South MC. Mike moved to the Bay Area in 1983, where he changed his career and became a valued member of the technical support staff of G.E. Calma, Teradyne, and lastly, Wind River Systems.

Mike met his life partner Jim Kestler soon after moving to the Bay Area and they celebrated their ninth anniversary with friends on July 10, 1993. On June 20, 1993, Mike was ordained as a Zen Buddhist Priest at Hartford Street Zen Center and served on the Board of Directors of both the Hartford Street Zen Center and Maitri Hospice.

Mike is survived by his life partner, Jim Kestler of Alameda, Ca.; his parents Bill and Mable Gallagher of Sullivan, Mo.; his brother Tom Gallagher of Sullivan, Mo.; and his sister Susan Sachen of Kansas City, Mo. He will be remembered by his many friends for his love, devotion, grace, serenity and that Mike never spoke badly of anyone.

Special thanks go to Dr. Robert Scott and Henry Quinones; the staff of Alta Bates Hospital; his caregivers at home: Mary Flint, Phyllis Holmquist, Noble Dulaney Lowe, Erlene Young, Peggy Shultz, Sal Archini and Richard Hardy; to his friends: Karl Kempin, Ken Ireland, Aaron Mazria, Phill Gonder, Walt Weatherly, Euletta Johnson, Carolyn Seid, Bill and CJ. McMann; and to his friends and co-workers at Wind River Systems who provided so much love and support during Mike's transition to his next life.

A memorial service will be held to honor Mike at the Hartford Street Zen Center, 57 Hartford Street, San Francisco, on September 19 at 1:00 p.m. Donations should be made to the Maitri Hospice, 61 Hartford Street, San Francisco, CA, 94101. ▼

Mark Gilmore
June 24, 1946—June 4, 1993

Mark Gilmore of San Francisco died Friday, June 4, at the home of his brother, Peter, in Beverly, Massachusetts, of complications related to AIDS. He was 46 years old.

Born in New York City on June 24, 1946, he was educated in New York City schools, receiving his Bachelor's degree from the City College of New York.

He worked as a legal secretary for the firm of Whitman and Ranson in New York City, and later for the firm of Frandzel and Share in San Francisco. His most personally meaningful work was for the San Francisco AIDS Foundation, where he served as head of Editorial Production for BETA (Bulletin of Experimental Treatments for AIDS), and as a counselor for people living with, and/or wanting information about AIDS.

He was an avid sci-fi reader and Trekker, and a lover of theater (especially musicals), opera, and teddy bears. He was deeply and actively committed to the belief that gay people can and should be openly accepted by family, friends, and co-workers, and was himself a devoted and vital family member, friend, and worker.

Mark is survived by his longtime companion, Sherman Clerke, of San Francisco; his loving parents, Adele and George Gilmore of Sunrise, Florida; his devoted brothers, David of San Francisco, and Peter of Beverly, Massachusetts; nieces, Rachel, Jennifer and Meghan; nephews, Joshua and Benjamin; his loving aunts and many cousins; and many loving friends.

All participated in his care during his last six months, especially his nieces and nephews and his primary care partner and sister-in-law, Elane. Everyone benefitted deeply from his love, his unique wit, and his courage, in his life and in his passing.

A celebration of Mark's life took place on Monday, June 7, at his late residence in Beverly, Massachusetts.

Mark would appreciate donations in his memory to an AIDS organization of choice, or the City of Hope, Nob Hill Chapter, Sunrise, Florida. ▼

David Gillespie, 53; Studied Relationship Of Genes and Illness 12-26-93

By WOLFGANG SAXON

Dr. David H. Gillespie, a genetic researcher who advanced the understanding of cancers, AIDS and other diseases, died Sunday in an auto accident near his home in Glenmore, Pa. He was 53.

At his death, he was the Barry Ashbee Professor of Basic Research at Hahnemann University in Philadelphia. His work involved searching for viral "footprints" in human and animal cancer tumors.

Among his accomplishments was the development of a test to analyze cancer-causing genes and monitor genetic changes in blood, bone marrow and tumor cells during treatment. A variation of the test is used to monitor the effectiveness of treatment of AIDS patients.

At his death, Dr. Gillespie was involved in research on the role of retroviruses in the development of cancer. Writing in the journal Blood in May, he reported there was evidence of a genetic clue that could identify people at high risk for cancer.

He had published more than 125 articles in scientific periodicals like Genetics, Nature and The Journal of Molecular Science.

Dr. Gillespie, a native of Stoneham, Mass., was a science graduate of Tufts University and earned a Ph.D. in biology at the University of Illinois, Urbana, in 1966. From 1972 to 1974, he headed the section of nucleic acids at the Biotechnics Research Laboratories in Bethesda, Md. He then worked at the National Cancer Institute in Bethesda.

He joined the Hahnemann faculty in 1980 as a professor in the department of hematology/oncology, which is now called the department of neoplastic disease. He was also an adjunct professor of virology at the University of Pennsylvania and its Veterinary School from 1980 until his death.

Dr. Gillespie is survived by his wife of 23 years, Sally; two sons, William and Robert, both of Glenmore; his father, Edward, of Boynton Beach, Fla.; a sister, Carol Weber of Dunstable, Mass., and one grandson.

Juan González, 51, Painter in Tradition Of Realism, Is Dead 12-24-93

By ROBERTA SMITH

Juan González, a Cuban-born realist painter who taught for nearly two decades at the School of Visual Arts, died on Friday at his home in Manhattan. He was 51.

The cause was AIDS, said his daughter Maria Schleifman of Manhattan.

A creator of meticulously rendered, often sumptuous paintings and collages infused with a sense of fantasy and religious symbolism, Mr. González was adept at restating Renaissance and Baroque styles in contemporary terms. Some of his paintings took AIDS as their theme; others dealt with the complexity of human relations and frequently depicted family members and friends.

Designed Sets for Lorca Plays

Mr. González was born in Camagüey, Cuba, on Jan. 12, 1942, and immigrated to the United States with his family in 1961. In 1972, after earning a Master of Fine Arts degree from the University of Miami, he moved to New York City and had his first solo show, at the Allan Stone Gallery. Since 1975 he has been represented by the Nancy Hoffman Gallery in SoHo, where his most recent exhibition was presented in 1991.

Mr. González designed the sets for two plays by the Spanish writer Federico García Lorca: "Blood Wedding" for the Great Lakes Festival in Cleveland in 1988, and "As Soon as Five Years Pass" in 1991 for Southern Methodist University, which also organized a traveling retrospective of his work. He is represented in numerous public collections, including the Art Institute of Chicago, the Hirshhorn Museum and Sculpture Garden in Washington, and the Metropolitan Museum of Art.

Mr. González's marriage ended in divorce. In addition to Mrs. Schleifman, he is survived by a second daughter, Teresa Katz of Jacksonville, Fla., and by his parents, Juan and Enelia González of Miami.

GILMORE—Robert H., 46, of West Palm Beach, FL, formerly of New York City, on February 6, 1995 of AIDS-related causes. Retired partner of Snow Becker Krauss P.C. He is survived by his domestic partner, Barry Kloda, New York City; mother, Evelyn Kanouse, of Junction City, KS; brothers, William and Jay, Private funeral. Memorial service March 19, All Saints Episcopal Parish, Hoboken, NJ, at 4 PM. In lieu of flowers, donations may be sent to PWA Health Group or God's Love We Deliver.

GALT—Michael, Age 36. Died on January 2, 1995 of complications from AIDS. He was President and Founder of Benefits for Life, Inc, and was beloved by family and friends and his cats Culp and Christine. A Memorial Service will be held on February 26, 1995 at Friends In Deed, 594 Broadway at 2PM. In lieu of flowers, donations to Friends In Deed would be appreciated.

Burton R. Glaser, 40

Architect in Philadelphia, Boston

A funeral service will be held today for Burton R. Glaser of Marblehead, an architect, who died of complications from AIDS Sunday in Salem Hospital. He was 40.

Mr. Glaser was born in Waltham. He graduated from the Commonwealth School in Boston and earned a degree in architecture at Yale University.

From 1974 to 1980 he practiced in Philadelphia, where he designed the interior of the Federal Reserve Building. From 1980 to 1987, he practiced in Boston, where he was a pioneer in the field of passive solar heating and was on the design team that won a US Department of Housing and Urban Development grant for the Fenway Building on Westland Avenue. In 1987 he moved to Seattle, where he was job captain at GMS Architectural Group responsible for the construction of Thundarlara Apartments and several commercial developments. He had recently moved to Marblehead.

He leaves his parents, Lester E. and Barbara (Sandler) Glaser of Marblehead; and a brother, Alan S. of Somerville.

In lieu of flowers contributions may be made to GMHC, 129 West 20 Street, New York, New York 10011.

Frank Giammatteo Jr.

Frank Giammatteo Jr., 48, died July 3 of complications due to AIDS.

Giammatteo was featured in 1990 on "Provincetown USA," a WGBH documentary, as a person with AIDS. His contribution to social history was his portrayal in that film as an able, active person living — not dying — with AIDS, said his close friend and fellow AIDS activist, John Perry Ryan.

"Until then, they always showed someone lying in the bed breathing their last breath or dragging their IV down a hospital corridor," said Perry Ryan.

In that respect, Mr. Giammatteo, a Provincetown and Woburn resident, was an enormous inspiration to many people, said Seth Rolbein, the documentary filmmaker. In a time before Magic Johnson, Giammatteo taught the public a lot about the disease, said Rolbein.

Born in Winthrop, Giammatteo was a 1964 graduate of East Boston High School. A graduate of Rittners School of Floral Design, he went on to win awards for his floral arrangements, said Perry Ryan. He owned and operated Arlington Flower Shop until 1976, and then went on as head designer at Cass Florist in Watertown.

Giammatteo moved to Provincetown in 1988, where he became an early board member of the Provincetown People With AIDS Coalition and of ACT UP Provincetown.

Giammatteo was a member of the Italian/American Club in Provincetown.

He is survived by his mother, Anna DeFronzo Giammatteo of Winchester, a sister, Maryann Nappi of Woburn; and two brothers, William Giammatteo of Woburn and James Giammatteo of Winchester.

A life celebration will be held in Provincetown on July 30. The time will be announced. A celebration in Boston will be held on July 16 at the Bigelow Chapel, Mount Auburn Cemetery, Cambridge. Cremation and arrangements by Watson Funeral Home, Cambridgeport.

William G. Greenough

William G. Greenough, age 40, died at his South End home May 18 following a courageous struggle with AIDS.

Born in Boston he was a 1972 graduate of Roslindale High School. After graduation he served in the U.S. Army as a Service Telecommunication Specialist for three years, and received the rifle marksman and hand grenade marksman badges.

Bill was employed as an administrative assistant with the Boston Teachers Retirement Board, for 10 years retiring in May 1993 due to his illness. Bill, an avid Boston Bruins fan, was goalie for the Eagle Street Youth Hockey Team in his teenage years. He studied jazz and Hip Hop dance at the Jeanette Neil Dance studio in Boston, and performed in their yearly recitals.

He leaves his father, Roland C. Greenough of Norwood; four brothers, Frank, Edward, Michael, and Robert; four sisters, Carol, JoAnne, Patricia, and Mary Lou. Bill is lovingly remembered by his chosen family and caretakers, David J. Froais, Gerry Fisher, Jeanette Heatley, many devoted friends, nieces and nephews.

A celebration of Bill's life will be held June 19 at 4 pm in the Immaculate Conception Church, Jesuit Urban Center, South End. Visiting from 3 to 4 p.m. Cremation by Watson's Cambridgeport.

Remembrances to Community Servings, 1353 Dorchester Ave., Dorchester, MA 02122, would be appreciated.

LARRY GONDA It seems like only yesterday since you left this world to "play with the angels" last February 1, 1995. The gardens you tended live on, as does the love so many have for you. You are remembered & missed a "whole big bunches." Love, Brian.

Christian Geelhaar, Curator and Writer On Art, Dies at 54

By ROBERTA SMITH

Christian Geelhaar, a former director of the Basel Kunstmuseum and one of the most respected art historians and curators of his generation, died on Friday at Bethesda Hospital in Basel, Switzerland. He was 54 years old and lived in Basel.

The cause was AIDS, said his sister, Anna-Marie Schweingruber, of Bern, Switzerland.

Mr. Geelhaar, who was born in 1939 in Bern, was a Picasso scholar and an advocate of postwar American art who was also at home with the art of the Middle Ages and the Northern Renaissance. His first interest, evident in drawings that he began making while quite young, was in shoe design. Immediately after graduating from high school, he was hired by Bally and spent five years designing shoes in a London studio.

In the mid-1960's, he returned to school, studying art history at the University of Bern, where he wrote his dissertation on the work of Paul Klee. In the early 1970's, Mr. Geelhaar worked in museums in Bern and Cologne, Germany.

Museum Director at 41

Mr. Geelhaar was named curator of modern art at the Basel Kunstmuseum in 1977. In 1980, when he was only 41, he succeeded Franz Meyer as director of the museum. During this period, he gained attention among Picasso scholars for establishing that Picasso's monumental proto-Cubist still life, "Bread and Fruitdish on a Table," of 1909 (collection Basel Kunstmuseum), was based on an earlier study for an unexecuted picture of a banquet scene.

At Basel, Mr. Geelhaar organized or collaborated on major exhibitions, including "Jasper Johns: Working Proofs" (1980), "Picasso: Theme Cycles of the Late Work, 1964-72" (1981), "Monet: Les Nymphéas" (1986), "Douglas Cooper and the Cubist Masters" (1987-88) and "Paul Cézanne: The Bathers" (1989). During his tenure, the museum acquired rare early works by Mr. Johns, Frank Stella and Barnett Newman, as well as paintings by Delacroix, Renoir, Monet, Rubens and Hans Holbein the Elder. Mr. Geelhaar resigned from the directorship in 1990.

In addition to his exhibition catalogues, Mr. Geelhaar published "Paul Klee and the Bauhaus" (1973) and "Paul Klee: Life and Work" (1974). His most recent book, concerning Picasso and his collectors, was published in Switzerland last year.

In addition to his sister, he is survived by a brother, Bernhard, of Bern.

Christopher

Charles Gerdes

May 28, 1962 - Jan. 5, 1994

Mr. Gerdes died Wednesday, Jan. 5 at the San Diego Hospice in San Diego of complications arising from AIDS.

A native of Portland, he was born May 28, 1962, growing up in the Laurelhurst neighborhood and attending Glencoe Grade School and Washington High School. He was a baptized and confirmed member of St. Paul Lutheran Church, and belonged to Boy Scout Troop #24. He had lived in San Diego since 1985 and had battled the disease for the past seven years.

He is survived by his parents, Ellis (Eli) Gerdes and Bettie Gerdes and his two sisters, Claire and Elisabeth.

Disposition was by cremation.

At his request, the interment was at the Old Green Mountain cemetery, located just west of Rainier, Oregon on a high bluff over the lower Columbia River. Mr. Gerdes wished to be placed in the same grave as his beloved grandmother, Clara Willmaser, who is buried beside her parents, John and Rhoda Zwemer.

Family and friends attended a memorial celebration service for Christopher Charles Gerdes at 2:00 p.m. on Sunday, Feb. 6 at Colonial Heights Presbyterian Church in Portland. There was a small reception following the service.

GEOGHAN—Celeste M. (nee Pomar) suddenly on March 14, 1995. Beloved wife of William F.X., loving mother of Mary Celeste Walters, William F.X. III, Theodore John and James Andrew. Adored grandmother of Nicholas, Scott, Andrew, Caitlyn, Keith and Schuyler. Devoted mother-in-law of Arthur, Jeannie and Peggy and sister-in-law of Helen. Visiting at the Fairchild Sons Chapel, 1570 Northern Blvd., Manhasset, Thursday and Friday 3-5 and 7-9PM. Funeral Mass 9:45AM, Saturday at St. Mary's Church, Manhasset, in lieu of flowers donations to the Long Island Association for AIDS Care, Huntington Station, Huntington, NY or Mount Monrosa Retreat House, Staten Island, NY would be appreciated.

Ted Galeza

Dec. 10, 1949 - Feb. 2, 1994

Ted met his maker at 8:30 in the evening of February 2, in the presence of his family and friends at Coming Home Hospice. A Mass of the resurrection was offered at Most Holy Redeemer on Monday, February 7. He is survived by his father, Ted; his mother, Kay; his sister, Julia; cousin, Kathleen; and several other aunts, uncles, and cousins. Born in Glassport, Penn., Ted studied architecture and jewelry design at Carnegie-Mellon University in Pittsburgh and received his BFA in architecture and design in 1973.

Ted's long and illustrious career in the jewelry and fashion industry led him to many places, and through his work, he made many friends. His career included efforts for such notable firms as Texas Instruments, Avon, the Franklin Mint, and ultimately, Monet before embarking upon an independent venture in New York.

Ted came to San Francisco to work as design manager for Laurel Burch in 1990. Ted made his home in the city and made many friends here.

Ted was blessed with a singular creative vision which he imparted to every aspect of his life, from his exquisitely decorated home and custom-colored pink Miata, to the home he built on Long Island. His latest house was filled with things which he collected and loved, including innumerable pigs, for which Ted had a great fondness. He also enjoyed the Friday night poker games he organized last year. Ted inspired all of us with his appreciation of quality, style, beauty and fashion. He never appeared anywhere without being well-dressed and accessorized.

Many friends and family came to be with Ted near the end of his life. His extended family came to his side from near and far, including San Francisco, New York, Key West, and Pittsburgh. Ted's friends and family would like to thank the Visiting Nurses and the staff of Coming Home Hospice for all their support and compassion. In lieu of flowers, donations should be made to the Coming Home Hospice in San Francisco or an AIDS charity. ▼

PAUL GRANATA, 39, an interior designer and former owner of Barney's Restaurant, died Jan. 19 from AIDS complications. His interior design work as owner of Paul Granata Interiors was frequently cited in magazine and newspaper reviews. 95

T. Allan Gates III

Nov. 7, 1960 - April 15, 1994

Allan passed away on April 15 at his home in Albuquerque, New Mexico, of AIDS-related complications. With him during his last days were his best friend, Pat Sanchez of Belen, New Mexico; his parents, Anne and Ted of West Richland, Washington; his sisters, Ginny of San Jose, Nancy of Fort Lauderdale and Margaret of Rockville, Maryland; and many, many caring friends.

Allan had resided in many cities, including San Francisco, Seattle, Chicago, Dallas and Albuquerque, his most recent home. During the past 15 years, he worked in several professions, most frequently as a counselor for troubled teens.

Allan was Mr. MNM Drummer 1992. He was also a member of the Motorcyclemen of New Mexico, and was 1994 president of the club, an office held for too brief a time.

Allan was most known for his sense of humor and his caring for all those around him. He was a creative and tireless fundraiser for local AIDS support groups. A celebration of his life was held April 17 at the Belen home of Pat Sanchez, where many of Allan's friends paid tribute to his generosity of spirit, his sense of fun and his "blondness." Peace be with him. ▼

Allen Dwayne Gilbert

June 11, 1964 - May 6, 1994

Allen Gilbert, formerly of Ames, Iowa, died of cancer May 6, at his home in San Diego. Mr. Gilbert was born in Des Moines, Iowa. He graduated from Hueytown High School in Alabama and received a double Bachelor of Science degree in sociology from Iowa State University. He was a member of several academic honor societies: Phi Theta Kappa (1988), Outstanding Students of America (1989), Golden Key (1990) and Phi Kappa Phi (1990).

He is survived by his life partner, Roy Higginson of San Diego, parents Julie and Larry Gilbert, sister Connie (Brent) Gaegle, brothers Larry, Terry and Jim, and their wives Kim, Celeste and Candy. He is also survived by his grandparents, Dorothy and James McCauley and Mildred Gilbert.

Kenneth Goggin

Kenneth Bruce Goggin, 39, died Monday, January 17, 1994 of complications associated with AIDS at his Alexandria, Virginia home, according to Carl Fisher, his companion of nine years.

Goggin was born on May 20, 1954, in Gardiner, Maine. He graduated from Hall-Dell High School in Hallowell, Maine, in 1972. He later received business training at a vocational school in Portland, Maine.

In 1975, Goggin moved to Washington. He worked at the Environmental Protection Agency, before joining the staff of the McChesney, Duncan, and Dale law firm in 1983. At McChesney, Goggin administrated the firm's computer network and worked as secretary to a partner of the firm. He retired on disability in 1992.

Goggin was a member of the D.C. Sports Association. He was particularly active in volleyball and served as the association's volleyball commissioner. He owned two pet cats.

Along with Fisher, Goggin is survived by his parents, Thelma E. Brooks of Waterville, Maine, and William G. Goggin of Yarmouth, Maine; brother, Chester W. Goggin, stationed with the U.S. Navy in Naples, Italy; sister, Donna E. Goggin of Vacaville, Calif.; and grandmother, Elizabeth Nash of Hallowell, Maine.

A memorial service was held Jan. 22 at Grace Episcopal Church in Alexandria. His remains were cremated and the ashes will be buried in Calais, Maine, on what would have been Goggin's 40th birthday, May 20, 1994.

Donations in Goggin's memory may be made to Northern Virginia AIDS Ministry, 413 Duke St., Alexandria, VA 22314, or Whitman-Walker Clinic of Northern Virginia, 3426 Washington Blvd., Ste. 102, Arlington, VA 22201.

GRAYSON—Arlene (nee Altschuler), of bone cancer at her home in Los Angeles, California on June 1, 1995. She is survived by her loving parents Estelle and Al Altschuler of the Bronx, New York. Arlene was a producer on the television series "Boy Meets World" and Production Stage Manager for several Broadway shows including "K2," "Noises Off," "The Dresser," "Rose," "Night Mother," and the revival and European tour of "West Side Story." She was a member of the Directors Guild of America and Actors Equity Association. In lieu of flowers the family suggests contributions be sent to Equity Fights AIDS or your favorite charity. Private services were held at Mt. Sinai Memorial Park in Los Angeles.

Timothy J. Guilfoyle

Timothy J. Guilfoyle, native of Stoneham, resident of Winthrop, passed away surrounded by family and friends on Saturday, March 26 from complications related to AIDS. He was 28.

Tim was a graduate of Stoneham High School. After working in various hospitals in the Boston area, gaining skills in the health care field, he moved to California in 1989. There he worked at the South Bay Hospital and as a unit coordinator at the Torrance Memorial Medical Center. He returned to Mass. in 1993.

He leaves behind his devoted partner of eight years, Paul T. Craig, his beloved mother, Roberta W. Guilfoyle (McAleenan) of Stoneham, brother to Dennis of Stoneham, Joseph of Nashua N.H., Brian of Cambridge, Peter of Woburn and sister Janet of Winthrop, loving aunt Madeline C. Oliver of Winthrop, two nieces and two nephews, and members of Craig family.

A memorial service was held on March 30 at the Union Congregational in Winthrop.

Remembrances may be made to the Children's AIDS Program, 253 River Street, Mattapan, MA 02126.

David Alan Guy, 33, of Silver Spring, Maryland, died Friday, July 2, 1993, of pancreatitis and complications associated with AIDS at Holy Cross Hospital in Silver Spring, according to his partner, Richard C. Van Os Keuls of Silver Spring.

According to Van Os Keuls, Guy was born into a military family in Shirley, Mass., and lived in several places as a child, including two American Army bases in West Germany. He graduated in 1978 from high school in Spartanburg, S.C. Guy attended Clemson University in South Carolina where he received a bachelor's degree in 1982.

Guy enlisted in the U.S. Navy in 1984 and became an electronics technician in its nuclear power program. He was honorably discharged from the Navy in September, 1988, according to Van Os Keuls, due to the discovery of his HIV positive status and the presumption by the military that he was Gay.

Guy's hobbies included lighthouses, photography, Elton John, bicycling, pets, and collecting pottery and quilts. Guy was "an avid gardener," said Van Os Keuls, "who to the astonishment of his neighbors, transformed an ordinary suburban lawn into a field of wildflowers."

In addition to Van Os Keuls, Guy is survived by his mother, Iris Stafford Guy of Spartanburg; father, Bobby Joe Guy Sr. who lives outside of Spartanburg; two sisters, Nancy Miller of Roebuck, S.C.; and Kemberley Douglas, also from the Spartanburg area; two brothers, Bobby Joe Guy Jr. of Inman, S.C.; and John M. Guy of Spartanburg.

Guy's remains were cremated and placed in the columbarium at Arlington National Cemetery, where military honors were performed in his memory, on July 7.

Henry (Hank) Goul

Feb. 17, 1953 - Dec. 9, 1994

Hank passed away peacefully Friday morning, December 9, at his San Leandro home, with his lover and family by his side.

Hank had a positive impact on everyone he met, and all who knew him loved him. Though he will not be seen here again on Earth, he will forever be felt in the hearts of many. Hank would not want us to be saddened by his departure, but rather to rejoice in his spirit which watches over us all.

He will also be remembered by many as a great friend and a great bartender at Bill's Eagle in San Leandro, where he brought smiles and laughter to everyone he served. When you think of Hank, smile - for he is now in the hands of God, up there, watching over us.

We love you, Hank. ♥

Immortality And Horror With AIDS

By JENNIFER DUNNING

Neil Greenberg's new "Not-About-AIDS-Dance," presented on Thursday night at the Kitchen, manages to convey, without sentimentality, not only the horror of death, illness and disappointment but also the meaningful ways in which life does doggedly continue.

But Mr. Greenberg is not into uplift. By integrating dance, snatches of music and sentences projected on the back wall of the stage, he has simply created a spare replication of a life. In the process, he has also created an important, moving and very beautiful work about the experience of living in the age of AIDS.

Mr. Greenberg was putting together a dance that would draw on performers' unspoken thoughts when six friends died within two months, one of them his brother Jon. He incorporated those deaths, the sudden death of the mother of one of his dancers and a devastating professional disappointment experienced by another dancer in the same time span. The work makes clear that some of the deaths were from AIDS. Mr. Greenberg also lets his audience know, by means of the projected text, that he has had the AIDS virus since 1987, though he wonders endearingly why he is sharing that information.

His brother's final coma is quietly depicted. Standing before the audience, Mr. Greenberg simply shuts his eyes, raises his arms and moves a finger, slowly plucking at air. This image of approaching death is at first shocking, then full of love and benediction. There are teasing reflections on his dancers' everyday lives and the "mysterious experience" of life itself.

Johan Elbe

"Not-About-AIDS-Dance" simultaneously charts the course of real-life events and of the piece itself, weaving in quotations from previous dances by Mr. Greenberg. The piece also suggests that to be human is to be more than the sum of one's sadness. "This dance is clearly my latest immortality project," a projection reads toward the end. "I wonder if it will work." It is hard to imagine anything but a nod to that speculation.

"Not-About-AIDS-Dance" was performed by Mr. Greenberg, Ellen Barnaby, Christopher Batenhorst, Justine Lynch and Jo McKendry. Michael Stiller created the impressive lighting.

GEIERHAAS—Franz, 65, Psychologist and Arts Director. Died on Wednesday at Mercer Medical Center in Trenton, N.J. after a long battle with cancer. Born in Germany in 1929, he attended the Universities of Heidelberg and Mainz. In 1949 he was awarded a U.S. Department of State Stipend to attend the George Peabody College in Nashville, TN. In 1955 he finished his graduate studies in Psychology at Michigan State University. Mr. Geierhaas was an Associate Professor of Psychology at Trenton State College from 1958 to his retirement in 1992. The College honored him with the associate professor emeritus of psychology award in 1993. In addition to his career as a Professor of Psychology, Geierhaas was deeply involved in the arts. He was a trustee of the Friends of the New Jersey State Museum in Trenton. Geierhaas founded the International Print Society in 1965. During the past thirty years, IPS published over 200 limited edition prints by such artists as Warner Drewes; Jacob Landau, Clare Romano, John Ross, Jorg Schmeisser and Richard Kemble. Through the International Print Society, Geierhaas curated exhibits at Museums in Greece, Germany and the United States. In 1984 Geierhaas wrote "The Creative Act: Paths to Realization". This book, a series of interviews with 15 artists was later followed by a series of 10 Television Programs on the artists included in the book. Working closely with the Media Center at Trenton State College, Geierhaas also produced television documentaries on such 20th century art personalities as the painter Clarence Carter, the woodworker George Nakashima and the former head of publications for the Museum of Modern Art Monroe Wheeler. Geierhaas is survived by his companion, Victor Rivera and a sister Anne Marie Heinman of Karlsruhe, Germany. A memorial service will be scheduled in the fall.

Manager and AIDS educator

A funeral Mass will be said today for James A. Grillo, an AIDS educator and retired merchandise manager who died Thursday in New England Medical Center of complications from AIDS. He was 38 and a resident of Boston.

Born in Southington, Conn., Mr. Grillo received his bachelor of arts degree from Northeastern University in 1978. He worked as a merchandise manager for Carter-Rice Paper Co. in Boston for many years.

After he was diagnosed with AIDS, he worked for Planned Parenthood as an AIDS educator, speaking to students at Boston University, Harvard and many other colleges and high schools. Mr. Grillo also was instrumental as a volunteer for a monthly dinner for men and women with AIDS, "Last Tuesdays," held at the Jesuit Urban Center in Boston.

Mr. Grillo leaves his mother, Janet, of Southington; a sister, Patricia Bruzzese of Florida; and several aunts, uncles, nieces and nephews.

The Mass will be said at 11 a.m. in the Jesuit Urban Center in Boston.

DAVID LYLE GIEBERT

10-17-93

This letter is to remember a wonderful spirit, a talented designer, and a dedicated lover—David Lyle Giebert. He made his transition two years ago, leaving behind family, friends and myself. We were not together at the time of his passing; however, we remained friends. I have never met a person with such a forgiving heart and gentle nature. I did not realize then that God sends only one person like that in a lifetime, and he was mine. I know heaven has redecorated from top to bottom because he would have it no other way. I'll always love and miss him!

Donald Gimbert

June 16, 1994

On June 16, 1994 Donald Gimbert died of complications from AIDS, ending his long and courageous fight quickly and peacefully in his home. Donald was born in Jersey City, N.J. and moved to San Francisco after graduating from college. For the past six years he was Senior Technical Librarian for Bank of America at their Technical Center in Concord.

Donald will be remembered with love and affection by his entire family and by his many friends who reside on both the East and West Coasts.

Donald's passion for living life to the fullest was extraordinary and an enthusiasm he shared openly with his family and friends in New Jersey and "down the Jersey Shore" and with his friends here in the San Francisco Bay Area. His warmth, charm, honesty and compassion engulfed all those around him. His passing leaves an emptiness in many people's lives.

In addition to his loving family, many of Donald's friends helped him through those difficult past months; Noreen "His Buddy," Marj "His Nurse," Joseph, Bruce, Christopher, Beverly, Keith and Barb, Nancy, Joanne, Robin, Sophie, and Diana; as well as Jane, Kit and Charlene (from back home in New Jersey). Donald's sparring partner and long-time friend, Felix, was there through both the good times and the bad, sharing his unflinching wit, humor and support. And Debra, Donald's "California Sister," was always there giving him encouragement and making him smile; sharing her compassion, love and commitment to him when he needed it most.

Donald was preceded in death by his father, Walter Gimbert, and a brother, Robert Gimbert. He is survived by his life partner for over 12 years, Russ Walton; his mother, Norma Gimbert; and sisters, Jean, Nancy, Linda, Norma and Louise and brothers, Walter, Norman, Charles, Ronald and George.

No memorial service is planned but rather his family and friends will gather for a pool party celebration at his home later this summer. Contributions in Donald's memory would be appreciated and should be addressed to San Francisco AIDS Foundation, Donald Gimbert Memorial Fund, P.O. Box 426182, San Francisco, CA 94142-6182, Attn: Jane Breyer, Development Director.

The pain that we feel now may fade in time . . . but Donald, you are in our hearts forever and life will never be the same. We'll miss you, Donald.

*And I stand upon the cliff, With the storm behind my back.
And I cry with all my heart in to the wind.
And the spirit comes to me, Filling every single cell.
And I come to find my way back home again.*

Robert E. Griswold

March 16, 1948 - March 9, 1995

My lover, my baby, my best friend, Bob, made his last decision to move on to his next life.

Revered as "Mr. Blanche," Bob treasured fine food, close friends, "sick" humor, cocktail hours and his favorite felines, Petie and Felix.

Bob worked for a variety of airlines over the years and most recently was employed by American Express Travel.

Bob will be missed by his life partner, Gary Gasper; mother, Mary Griswold; sister, Sandy Griswold of Pennsylvania; and friends both in San Francisco and Philadelphia.

Special thanks to Bob's caregiver Scott, the home care team of Visiting Nurses and the staff of CPMC. Donations can be made in Bob's memory to Visiting Nurses & Hospice of San Francisco, 3360 Geary Blvd., SF, CA 94118.

A celebration in honor of Bob's life is planned in the near future. I will love and miss you until we are together again. - Gary ▼

Tommy Guarini

December 1, 1994

Tommy, 39, died on World AIDS Day, December 1, of AIDS complications after a long illness at the Princeton Medical Center, Princeton, N.J.

Born in Bayonne, N.J., he grew up in Edison, N.J.; graduated Edison High School in 1973; and moved to San Francisco in 1980. Until his return to New Jersey for health reasons in 1992, Tommy worked for Lucky Supermarkets in Burlingame for 10 years while living in San Francisco. He was active in AIDS-related causes and fundraising.

Tommy is survived by his mother, father, three brothers and two sisters, all in New Jersey. Following cremation, a private memorial service was held at St. James Episcopal Church in Edison. Tommy requested donations be sent to AmFAR (American Foundation for AIDS Research), 5900 Wilshire Blvd., Los Angeles, CA 90036. His ashes will be scattered over San Francisco Bay, next to the city he loved so much. ▼

David Garrick, at 57; consultant, activist in church, AIDS groups

David D.P. Garrick of Provincetown, a retired computer consultant, died Aug. 18 from complications due to AIDS. He was 57.

Born in New York, Mr. Garrick attended public schools in New York City before moving to Gallatin, N.Y., where he graduated from Pine Plain Central School.

He graduated from Harpur College, now the State University of New York at Binghamton, in 1958. Between 1959 and 1961 Mr. Garrick served in the Navy. He joined Bankers Trust Co. in New York City, where he became a vice president.

In the mid-1970s he moved to Boston and worked for Commercial Union Insurance Co. and later for Shawmut Bank. He was a partner in the original Buddies on Boylston Street in Boston until it was destroyed by fire.

In 1982 he moved to Provincetown. At the time, he was employed by Data Architects, now Data Logica of Waltham, as a computer consultant. Before his retirement in 1991, he reorganized the computer system of New York Life while commuting weekly from Provincetown to New York City.

He was received into the Edisco-

Edward Medina Guerrero

Sept. 30, 1958 - Oct. 11, 1994

Daddy - a leader. When we couldn't find the answer, you were there to tell and show us how. A man - a gentle man - your strong hand holding ours. A lesson to each of us left behind to find the love and compassion, the beauty of living life as you did, oh so eloquently!

Edward was the founding member, president emeritus of the Knights of Malta, Cable Car Chapter, San Francisco. He's within each of us every time we face a trial and smile and overcome our fears. We live, and so does the legacy of a leader.

Edward Medina Guerrero was born in Fresno, California. He leaves in his wake his father, Edward; mother, Sylvia; brother, Roderick; and his beloved husband/boy/wife, Scott Karnuth; to live onward, embrace each day, and become "good at life."

A memorial service will be held November 5 at 3:30 p.m. at the Unitarian Church, 1187 Franklin Street, San Francisco. Donations can be made on Ed's behalf to the UCSF Gift Administration Dept., 44 Montgomery St., Ste. 285, San Francisco, CA 94104. Please specify your donation is for AIDS research. ▼ pal Church in St. Paul's Cathedral, Boston in May 1990. He was a member of the vestry of The Church of St. Mary of the Harbor and was elected treasurer in 1993, serving until his death.

As a co-chair of the church's long range planning committee he was instrumental in making the church fully accessible to the handicapped and frail elderly. He was active in St. Mary's community meals ministry and served as coordinator of the winter lunch program in 1992.

He was a client and supporter of the Provincetown AIDS Support Group, a former member of the Circle of Friends of the Boston AIDS Action Committee and the Gay Men's Health Crisis Organization in New York City.

He leaves his mother, Mary (Regan) and a sister, Mary Bartolotta, both of Livingston, N.Y.; and two brothers, Thomas of Gallatin, N.Y., and James of Nunda, N.Y.

A memorial eucharist will be held Sept. 2 at noon in The Church of St. Mary of the Harbor, Provincetown. His ashes will be interred in the garden of The Church of St. Mary. 94

Peter Goddard

March 30, 1945 - Oct. 5, 1994

Last week, while a thunderstorm caused San Francisco to look upward at the sky filled with lightning, sound and winds seldom seen, Peter passed from AIDS in Manchester, England, with his family.

Born in England, Peter left as a young man when he joined the Royal Navy to travel the world, finally settling in Sydney, Australia. He was well-known as the manager of "The Oxford Hotel," Sydney's best-known gay bar. In SF he was known as the good-looking "Aussie" bartender at the Bear Hollow on Castro Street for many years. Later, he and Don Dennerline, his true love, operated a landscaping business together. Don and Peter were always together - in San Francisco, Australia and finally England.

Peter carried the banner for San Francisco in the 1988 March on Washington with friend and roommate, Jimmy Carter, and was recently honored by the mayor "for his tireless devotion to building this community" in honor of Stonewall. Peter loved his friends, art, politics and cats. He will be truly missed by so many, in so many places, but nowhere more so than San Francisco, where he always returned - home.

More Sorrow for a Minnesota Family as a Third Son Dies of AIDS

Gimmer Family

KASOTA, Minn., Oct. 1 (AP) — For more than a decade, the Gimmer family has endured one sorrow after another as they lost one son to suicide and two others, both hemophiliacs, to AIDS. On Sept. 23, the family lost a fourth son when Les, also a hemophiliac, died of AIDS on the eve of his 40th birthday. 94

"It's a relief," said his mother, Jeanette Gimmer, before a memorial service for Les on Tuesday in this town of 650 about 59 miles southwest of Minneapolis. "That's a terrible thing to say, but hopefully this is over now for a while."

In 1985, on the same day, Les and his brother Scott were told that they had AIDS. There was a similar diagnosis for Donnie, a third brother. The Gimmer brothers are thought to have contracted the virus that causes AIDS from infected blood products for hemophiliacs in the early 1980's, before screening and treatment of blood for the virus became routine.

Charlie, a fourth Gimmer son with hemophilia, killed himself in 1981 at age 33. Ms. Gimmer said pain in his joints, a common problem for hemophiliacs, and other problems became too much for him to bear.

Ms. Gimmer's fifth son and her three daughters are not hemophiliacs.

In 1990, Donnie Gimmer became the first brother to die of AIDS, succumbing at age 24.

Scott, to whom Les was particularly close, died a year ago at age 40. Their ashes were buried together in a private ceremony on Tuesday.

The Rev. Ken Stuber, who officiated at services for Scott and Les, said he had never been close to anyone with AIDS before he came to First Presbyterian Church in Kasota about 18 months ago.

Les, an aide who worked at a hospital with the mentally ill and retarded, had been looking for a church where he would feel comfortable. He and Mr. Stuber were the same age and shared musical tastes.

Mr. Stuber said: "I said to him, 'I don't care how you got AIDS; I just think it's not fair.'"

Until Les's health deteriorated, the two men would go to movies together or for walks at the campus of Mankato State University, which Les had attended.

"Les and I put a sermon together a few months after I moved here," Mr. Stuber said. "I was comparing AIDS to leprosy back in Jesus' day and Les helped me with the AIDS part."

Mr. Stuber was on his own on Tuesday, trying to find words to comfort Les's friends and relatives. He played a song that Les had listened to often during his illness, and then he quoted a few lines from the song "Bohemian Rhapsody," sung by Freddie Mercury of the group Queen:

*"It's too late, the time has come, sends shivers down my spine.
Body aching all the time,
I don't want to die."*

For a family that has lived with death and dying for so many years, it was not until then that tears flowed unchecked in the tiny, packed church.

Joseph Mark Georgulas

Sept. 27, 1959 - Sept. 13, 1994

Mark died peacefully on September 13 after living with AIDS for two years.

During Mark's final months he was attended by his life partner, Gene Kelly; mother, Virginia Georgulas; sister, Renee Georgulas; friends, Bruce Van Horn and Fred Behrman; and his physician, Jason Tokumoto. Mark is also survived by his father, George P. Georgulas, Jr.; sister, Anne Trammel; and brothers, David Georgulas and George P. Georgulas III.

Born in Baltimore, Md., Mark moved with his family often, graduated from Leilehua High School in Hawaii, and received a degree in economics from the University of Santa Clara. Mark settled in San Francisco in 1980 because he loved the city. In 1988, Mark entered recovery through 12-step programs. He became a popular presence at meetings and the Castro Country Club, where he worked and enjoyed playing cribbage with Gene. Mark also worked for a time at Baker New Place and Acceptance Place. He celebrated six years of continuous recovery on August 29, 1994.

We will miss Mark's humor and friendly presence, but we are grateful he is at peace. A memorial service will be held October 15. Please call Bruce at 552-5291 or Renee at 731-4176. ▼

Kenneth J. Garcia

July 26, 1964 - Oct. 9, 1994

Ken, 30, of Ventura, Calif., passed away at the Ventura County Medical Center on Sunday, October 9, of AIDS complications.

Ken was born in Santa Paula, Calif., and graduated from Santa Paula Union High in 1982. He attended Ventura College and was an air cargo specialist in the U.S. Air Force.

Ken is survived by his mother and stepfather, Hilda and William Muller; father and stepmother, Pete and Emma Garcia; sister and brother-in-law, Arleen and Gino Garcia; brother and sister-in-law, Randy and Lisa Garcia; brother, Steve Garcia; maternal grandmother, Maria G. Sanchez; and numerous other relatives.

Ken moved into Christopher House the day it opened, June 27, 1994, and was very happy there. We gratefully acknowledge Tim Rawle, Kathy Powell, Ed King-Ellison and the wonderful staff and volunteers at Christopher House for their loving, compassionate care.

At Ken's request, in lieu of flowers, donations may be made to Christopher House, 856 East Thompson Blvd., Ventura, CA 93001. Ken will be forever in our hearts and dearly missed by all who knew him. ▼

Antonio "Tony" Gagna II

Sept. 4, 1957 - Dec. 3, 1994

On December 3, Tony took his final bow. As the curtain fell on the second act of his life, friends were gathered and held hands to give our beloved friend his last standing ovation. No one who ever met Tony could resist his infectious laughter or his dedicated enthusiasm for theatre.

Born in Norfolk, Va., Tony moved with his family to California in 1958. He graduated from Vallejo High School in 1975, and he immediately went on to Bjorn's Academy, later working in the cosmetology field for 18 years. Tony retired this past summer from I. Magnin's hair salon when KS made it impossible to work any longer.

Tony is survived by his sister, Gloria; father, Antonio I; stepmother, Lorraine; brother, Randy; niece, Bev; two great-nephews; a great-niece; and William "Billy" Triplett of San Francisco.

A fund has been set up to purchase a "chair" with a name plate in Tony's memory at the Regional Center for the Arts in Walnut Creek. Donations may be sent to Contra Costa Music Theatre (CCMT)/Tony's Chair, P.O. Box 3147, Walnut Creek, CA 94598. ▼

In Memory Of: Glenn James Goodhue

As Jesus said, "Love one another as I have loved you."

GLENN JAMES GOODHUE

His title was not one of nobility, but one far more important.
He carried titles of son, brother and friend.

Glenn was our friend, but in our hearts he was more like a brother to my family and me.

Glenn had many good qualities.
He was a quiet, caring, talented, gentle man.
Those of us that knew him well enjoyed his great sense of humor.
With his quiet ways - when he had something to say - Everyone paid attention -
For he could make a room full of sad people break out into laughter.

He had an extraordinary artistic talent that most would envy.
But, Glenn was very shy about sharing his talent with others.

During one of my many conversations with Glenn, he told me how much he loved the people he was close to - friends and family alike.
He considered his friends as his family. He loved deeply and sincerely all those close to him.

Those of us that knew and loved Glenn will truly miss him.
His body will leave this earth, but his spirit will live on in our hearts.
After we all say our own private farewell to Glenn - always remember.

GOOD - as in Kind HUE - as in Color

When you hear the word GOOD - think of Glenn When you hear the word COLOR - a memory of Glenn should enter your heart.

I am proud to have had the opportunity to have known and loved Glenn. I will think of him with a smile and not with tears, for I know that's what he wanted, and I also know he is happy in heaven with God.

Ronald B. Griffith

July 17, 1951 - March 3, 1995

On the afternoon of March 3, Ron passed on from AIDS-related complications. During his final days his mom and dad were at his side, as were several dear friends: Bud, Dave, Joseph, Kathleen and Leslie. Ron was born in Lakewood, Ohio, and grew up in Dover, Delaware, and Cherry Hill, New Jersey. He attended college at the University of Maryland and received his degree from SFSU after he moved here in the mid-70s. He was employed with Market Insight Corporation and Security Pacific B/A, where he managed a residential appraisal office.

During the last two years of Ron's illness, he volunteered his time with the AIDS Food Bank, AIDS Memorial Grove and Visiting Nurses & Hospice. He was active at MCC and often did the Sunday readings. He loved the outdoors - hiking and camping. He loved music, art, gardening, politics and people.

Ron had a joyful sense of humor and will fondly be remembered for his ability to make people laugh. We all will miss him more than words can say.

Donations may be made in his name to Visiting Nurses & Hospice, the AIDS Memorial Grove or Project Inform. ▼

Lawrence Campbell Glasser

Feb. 16, 1952 - March 6, 1995

At his home on Monday evening, March 6, Larry Glasser, 43, passed peacefully into the next phase of his existence after a three-year battle with AIDS. With him were his loving mother, Jessie Allison, and his friends, Sandy Paganucci and Paul Chieming.

The noblest, sweetest man, Larry gave copiously of his love and understanding to all who knew him. Throughout his life he gained a deep spirituality and became the person he always wanted to be, seeking out and helping others despite the travails of his illness.

Larry was born in New Jersey and moved to San Francisco in the early 1970s. He was a popular bartender at several area bars, including Fife's in Guerneville.

Larry is survived by his loving family: parents, Jessie and Robert Allison; sister and brother-in-law, Heather and Art Cornielusen; brother and sister-in-law, William and Kathy Glasser; numerous nieces and nephews; his two best friends, Sandy Paganucci and David Salinas; his loving friend, Paul Chieming; and his adoring dog, Orbit.

A memorial service celebrating Larry's life was held at the 7th Avenue Presbyterian Church March 9. Donations may be made to Alcoholics Anonymous and Visiting Nurses and Hospice of San Francisco. ▼

Johnie A. Garcia

April 24, 1947 - Jan. 11, 1995

Johnie moved to San Francisco from his native Los Angeles in 1975.

After a long, courageous fight with AIDS, Johnie passed away peacefully, surrounded by his loving family and his leather daddy, Alan Selby.

Johnie was a very special man, who was loved by so many people and who cared very deeply about the community. He helped get the M.H.R. AIDS Support Group established and worked tirelessly for them until very recently. He also was an intake volunteer for the AIDS Emergency Fund.

Johnie was a shy man who never sought the limelight, but just wanted to be in the background and work to help others in every way he could. He did this with a dedication that would make any daddy proud. He wanted to be known as Alan Selby's boy. He was the most thoughtful, kindest man that anyone could ever wish for; he will be greatly missed.

There will be a celebration of Johnie's life on the SF-Eagle patio, which was his last wish, on Saturday, January 21, 7-9 p.m. In lieu of flowers, donations may be made to Marty's Place, 1165 Treat Avenue, SF, CA 94110.

Rest peacefully, Johnie. I will love you and hold your memory in my heart forever. All my love, Daddy Alan ▼

Roy Scott Gatehouse

April 11, 1958 - April 5, 1995

Scott was born in Washington, D.C., and raised both there and in Maine. He was a graduate of Georgetown University in international studies. Scott was an employee of Pacific Bell in San Francisco and Hawaiian Tel in Honolulu. He returned to San Francisco for its exceptional health care. Thank you to the gang at the Infusion Center, especially Iris.

Scott's social nature often found him and his friends sitting around a table, if not gorging themselves, then playing cards. His intense love of Spades made him both a shrewd partner and a worthy adversary. His passion for food was greater yet. By watching CNN he maintained an active interest in international and current affairs.

Scott's warrior spirit kept him fighting long after the battle seemed lost. To the very end he would not accept death as an option. His boundless positive attitude is the light he leaves behind. With the help of conventional and alternative therapies, Scott was able to enjoy the remainder of his life with dignity.

Scott is survived and missed by his devoted mom, Lois; dad, James; brother, Gary; sister, Jamie; niece, Krystal; nephew, Gary Jr.; and many friends both on the Mainland and in Hawaii.

AIDS activist Glaser dies of disease at 47

LOS ANGELES — Elizabeth Glaser, wife of actor Paul Michael Glaser and one of America's foremost AIDS activists, died of the disease at her Santa Monica home yesterday, a spokeswoman for the Pediatric AIDS Foundation said. Glaser was 47.

She riveted the 1992 Democratic Convention with her poignant story of how she and her two children became infected with HIV, the virus that leads to AIDS, through a blood transfusion she received in 1981. 12-4-94

Glaser received tainted blood in 1981 when she was nine months pregnant with her daughter, Ariel, who died of the disease at the age of 7.

She is survived by her husband, best known for his role as Detective Ken Hutchinson in the hit ABC television series "Starsky and Hutch," which ran from 1975 to 1979 and which is now in syndication, and their son, Jake, 10, who is battling AIDS. □

William Duff-Griffin, New York Actor, 54

William Duff-Griffin, an actor who frequently appeared in productions by the New York Shakespeare Festival, died on Nov. 13 at the Manhattan home of his companion, the actor Robert Joy. He was 54. 94

The cause was prostate cancer, Mr. Joy said.

Mr. Duff-Griffin was a versatile actor who was equally at home in Shakespeare and avant-garde works. He first became involved in the theater in the mid 1960's at La Mama, as a production manager and then as a performer in several productions by Tom Eyan and Andrei Serban. Among the plays in which he appeared were "The Greek Trilogy," "The Good Woman of Szechuan" and "The Cherry Orchard" at Lincoln Center and many New York Shakespeare Festival productions, including "Measure for Measure," "Twelfth Night" and "The Taming of the Shrew." He also appeared in several movies, including "The Hudsucker Proxy" and "Basic Instinct," and was seen on television in "Murphy Brown," "The Kennedys of Massachusetts" and other programs.

Mr. Duff-Griffin, whose original name was William Joseph Duffy, was born in New York City.

He is survived by Mr. Joy.

Stephan Charles Guintard

Aug. 14, 1950 - July 20, 1995

Stephan died of AIDS in San Francisco nearly 45 years after his birth in New Orleans.

He lived with HIV for more than a third of his life, and felt strongly that he would have survived longer had our government responded to the HIV crisis with the urgency it deserved.

Stephan will be remembered with love by his mother, father, brother, life partner and many friends. A gathering to remember him is planned. If you wish to attend, contact his partner, Dennis Billeaudeaux, at (415) 621-1604. ▼

Gene Grusenmeyer

Nov. 20, 1932 - Feb. 12, 1996

Gene made his transition on Feb. 12 at 2:30 p.m. He was living at the time in a long-term care facility in Franklin, N.C. His brother Tommy and Tommy's wife Anita were at his side.

Gene had been HIV positive for 18 years and for most of that time had no serious illnesses. Since the beginning of the epidemic, he had facilitated groups for persons with HIV/AIDS at both Shanti Project and UCSF AIDS Health Project. His skill and dedication were evident to everyone he worked with.

Gene will be missed by his many friends in San Francisco and will be welcomed home by others. ▼

Saddest Love

When I go to sleep
And dream of you holding me in your arms
I wish I could sleep forever comforted by your charm.

I never thought you would leave me.
Your love was so untrue.
You told me we would always be, loving me loving you.

Setting free our love that showed
Was the saddest love
I've come to know,
The love I spent with you.

JANUARY 23, 1995

Last week was not only meaningless, but meaningless in a shade of dirty dishwasher grey. Last week human beings were toxic scum, and your destiny was a random sequence of events leading to a whole bunch of different nowheres. Last week, in short, was put on this earth to make all other weeks look fabulous by comparison.

And yet now the whims of the gods seem to have mutated. Suddenly, life is baited with enticing leads. Human beings are kaleidoscopic puzzles, and every day seems to bring a new sign to draw you deeper into the delicious mystery.

Robert J. Grace

June 3, 1939 - July 17, 1995

Bob finally stopped his five-year struggle with AIDS. He died peacefully in his sleep in Stockton in the company of his family and dearest of friends and teaching companion of many years, Mary Clarken, of Belfast, Northern Ireland.

Bob was a teacher's teacher and a friend's friend. He taught all over the world, including Concord, California; Madrid, Spain; St. Michael's School in Kobe, Japan; Seoul Foreign School in South Korea; and at the time of his death, Bear Creek High School in Stockton. He was a superb linguist, fluent in Spanish, Czech and German, and proficient in Japanese and Korean.

Bob received superb care from his caregiver and personal friend, Bob Jennings, under the auspices of the San Joaquin AIDS Foundation of Stockton. Memorials can be given to that very worthy organization's Client Fund.

Bob is survived by brother Dick Grace and family of Seattle; sister Elizabeth Powell and family of Chehalis, Wash.; Aunt Elizabeth Grace of Seattle; and more friends than can ever be named here.

Jack, Greg and Jim are particularly heartbroken at our loss of you, dear friend and confidant of 25 years. The angels lead you into paradise.

Bernard "Gene" Guenther

May 18, 1995

Bernard "Gene" Guenther of 442 Joost Street is now at peace in the Lord's hands after a courageous battle with the AIDS virus. He died at Hillhaven Hospital. Especially talented in music and art, he will leave a void both at work (the S.F. Unified School District) and among friends and relatives.

Gene was a founding member of the San Francisco Gay Men's Chorus, went on its historic 1981 national tour and sang in many concerts in the years thereafter. Shortly before passing, he won an award from the Harvey Milk Child Development Center for his dedication to the preschoolers there.

A graduate of San Francisco State, he received a BA in music in 1987, along with an associate degree in clerical studies.

Survivors include his parents, Jeanine Marquette and George Guenther of Antigo, Wisconsin, and eight brothers and sisters. They mourn his passing, as do Gene's many friends in the Bay Area.

BRUCE GRAINGER, 42, assistant principal bassoon of the Chicago Symphony Orchestra since 1986, Professor of bassoon at DePaul University and a member of the Chicago Chamber Musicians, died May 14. The Seattle native had recorded on the Centaur label. Survivors include his 12-year companion Keith Conant, and family.

Thomas C. Gehring

December 21 1994,

Thomas C. Gehring forfeited his battle with AIDS Wednesday, December 21, at the San Diego Hospice.

Thom began his life in Cincinnati, where in high school as an excellent student, he was Debate Team member, won the All Ohio High School Fire Baton Tournament, and was a member of 1973 St. Xavier College Preparatory National Scholastic Swimming and Diving Team.

Thom launched his career at the early age of 16 as a springboard diving coach, producing two YMCA National Diving Team titles. Over the course of his 18 year vocation, he produced numerous age group diving progenies, securing college athletic scholarships for most of them.

Thom studied communication arts at the University of Cincinnati, and then claimed a coaching position at Georgia Tech in Atlanta. While in Atlanta, he also became a Table Captain in several of the finest dining rooms, regularly serving notable personages, from Newt Gingrich to President Jimmy Carter and his wife Rosalyn. Thom started road racing in Atlanta, completing 12 marathon competitions, innumerable 5k and 10k races, including Atlanta's prestigious Peachtree Roadrace in which he was seeded elite.

In 1989, Thom moved to San Diego at the behest of a friend to return to springboard competition at the master's level. He won the third place Bronze medal in the Synchronized Diving event at the International Pan Pacific Aquatic Championship that year.

The following year, he was a Bronze and Silver medalist at Gay Games III, in Vancouver, BC.

In addition to his rigorous training schedule, which included running, weight lifting, tennis, bicycling and diving in UCSD's Dive San Diego Program, Thom was also an on-deck volunteer coach with the beginners program.

Until his retirement in the summer of 1992, Thom managed the popular Gathering Restaurant in Mission Hills.

In the last year of his life, Thom strove to survive, and to successfully dive at Gay Games IV in New York City in June of 1994, and in the National Masters Championship in Ft. Lauderdale in August. In both competitions he far exceeded any previous attained scores, landing all of his dives sevens, eights and nines.

Afterward, he rapidly declined.

Known to his intimate friends for his passionate views and his caustic wit, Thom was a voracious reader, and he was vociferously anti-establishment. Curiously, he collected esoteric Christian religious art which adorned his modest abode.

In one of his last lucid sentences he remarked, "I am proud of whom I have been."

Thom leaves his devoted companion of nearly five years, Chris Van Deirse, his close friend Thomas R. Long of San Diego, his friends Kevin and Brian of Cincinnati, his friend Bill Lauch of New York, his beloved brother Paul, his parents Robert and Rita of Blue Ash, Ohio, brothers Bob and John, sisters Barb, Betsy, Patty, Martha, and Joyce, all of Cincinnati. He cherished them all.

Thom was dispersed at sea January 8, 1995.

David Green

David Anthony Green, 31, of Washington, D.C., died Saturday, March 11, 1995, of complications associated with AIDS at the Washington Home Hospice Care Center in D.C., according to his former lover, Mark-Antony Wesley of D.C.

Green received a law degree from Georgetown University in the late 1980s. At that time, he went to work for the copyright office at the Library of Congress. Green then began working for the State Department as a trade specialist in international affairs, retiring in 1994.

During the late 1980s through the early 1990s, Green also worked as a sales representative for the Cingal retail chain. His work for Cingal gained him many praises and awards for sales, said Wesley.

Green's other interests included motivational speaking, admiring neoclassic architecture, enjoying poetry, listening to classical music, and watching the television show Melrose Place.

Green was born Aug. 5, 1963 in D.C.

In addition to Wesley, Green is survived by his parents, Lillian and the Rev. Elder Wendell Green; sister, Lydia Green; brother, Timothy Green; nephew, Amir Green; common law wife, Parvin Rees; and best friend, Alvin King, all of D.C.

A memorial service was held March 15 at the Johnson and Jenkins Funeral Home in D.C. Green's remains were interred at Harmony Memorial Park in Landover, Md.

Will Gallo

June 28, 1959 - Sept. 25, 1995

"The leaves I loved to see have all left the tree, but the river, my river, still flows on," and with that thought, our friend passed on Monday, Sept. 25. Will will be remembered for those gorgeous ice-blue eyes, that cutting wit and his rapier-sharp tongue! Will lived by the words of Alice Roosevelt: "If you have nothing nice to say about someone, come sit next to me and let's talk!"

Will had many friends in the area, but his mainstay was his good buddy and roomie, Jimmy Mason, who was there for him to the end.

We would also like to thank the staff and volunteers of Coming Home Hospice for their loving touch and support through these times. ▼

Peter Farnsworth Grasty

It is with great shock and profound sadness that the family and close friends of Peter Farnsworth Grasty note his passing on April 5, 1995. Peter died suddenly at the California Pacific Medical Center in San Francisco, CA following a brief illness. At the time of his death he was surrounded by those most dear to him including his beloved companion David Dao, his family and many friends.

Peter was born in Cincinnati, Ohio on April 14, 1956 and lived in many places including Summertown, TN, Miami, FL, San Jose, CA and Boston. He graduated from San Jose State University in 1989 and was the first engineering graduate of San Jose State to earn an advanced degree at M.I.T. In 1993, Peter moved with his partner from Boston to the Bay Area to attend a PhD program at UC Berkeley. Peter had recently embarked on a new career as a change management consultant at Anderson Consultants in San Francisco.

Peter is survived by his beloved life partner, David Dao of San Francisco, CA; parents Mary Jane and Robert Grasty of New Ipswich, NH; his brother, Thomas Grasty of Portsmouth, NH; and his sister, Sheila Cowing of Keene, NH.

He will be missed by his sister-in-law Sara, brother-in-law Chris, his nephew Keith and nieces Molly and Jesse. Peter also leaves behind many friends throughout the U.S including many friends in Northern California and Eastern Massachusetts. A memorial service was held on April 8, 1995 at the Skyline Community Church in Oakland, CA.

Peter's unpretentious manner, his smile, his loving and generous spirit will always remain within those who love him and will continue to touch the lives of others.

Anthony Glaser, ex-Hub teacher

5-2-95
Anthony Joseph Glaser, former Boston-area high school teacher, bartender and business owner, died Tuesday from AIDS-related complications at his home in Naperville, Ill. He was 40.

Born in Chicago, he attended Moraine Valley College in Illinois, Loyola University, and graduated from Boston State College in 1978 with a degree in English. He completed the Teaching Certificate program at the University of Massachusetts, Boston, in 1986.

After moving to Boston in 1976, Mr. Glaser worked as a bartender in Boston bars under the name "Tony Chicago" until 1989. He also opened his own pet-grooming business, The Dog Center, on Newbury Street in 1978.

Mr. Glaser worked as an English teacher at Boston College High School, Matignon

Catholic High School in Cambridge and Hull Junior/Senior High School from 1986 to 1989.

In 1990, he moved to California where he worked as a math teacher at Long Beach Polytechnic High School between 1990 and 1993, where he was elected faculty president.

Mr. Glaser is survived by his partner Scott Anderson; two brothers, Ted of Tinely Park, Ill., and Tom of Palos Heights, Ill.; two sisters, Mary Margaret of Barrington, Ill., and Carmelity of Chicago.

Funeral services were held Friday in Payless, Ill.

Arrangements by John Sheehy & Sons, Palos Heights, Ill.

David Charles Godwin 1963-1996

Alexander Godunov, Dancer And Film Actor, Dies at 45

By JENNIFER DUNNING

Alexander Godunov, the swash-buckling Russian ballet dancer and movie actor, was found dead yesterday at his home in West Hollywood, Calif. He was 45.

Sheriff's Sgt. Bob Minutello told The Associated Press that paramedics called to Mr. Godunov's home yesterday morning found him dead, and that his death was described by his physician as of natural causes.

Tall and dramatic, with long blond hair that blew behind him during his soaring jumps and whiplash turns, Mr. Godunov was an instant star wherever he danced. He was not a virtuosic dancer, though he was capable of stunning tricks. There were times when acting a character seemed to bore him. But he was the sizzingly sexy center of attention whenever he performed.

Mr. Godunov joined the Bolshoi Ballet in 1971, as its youngest principal dancer, and was chosen by the legendary prima ballerina Maya Plisetskaya to be her partner soon after. In 1973, audiences — and dancers — took to him immediately when he toured the United States with the Bolshoi. Cynthia Gregory, a leading ballerina of American Ballet Theater, said later in an interview that she wished he would defect from the Soviet Union and become her partner.

In August 1979, Mr. Godunov did defect while on tour with the Bolshoi in New York. His defection was front-page news around the world, and became even bigger news a few days later when Lyudmila Vlasova, a Bolshoi dancer to whom he was married, tried to return to the Soviet Union. It was only after an airport standoff of many hours that she was able to convince American authorities that she was not returning under duress.

A few months after his defection, Mr. Godunov joined Ballet Theater. He performed with it until 1982, when he was let go by Mikhail Baryshnikov, artistic director of the company, who explained his action by saying that because of changes in the repertory Mr. Godunov would not have sufficient roles. He was then the companion of the actress Jacqueline Bisset, and he embarked on his own film career after a short tour by an ensemble called Godunov & Stars.

Mr. Godunov's first movie role was in "Witness," with Harrison Ford and Kelly McGillis in 1985. In a review in The New York Times, Vincent Canby described Mr. Godunov, who played an Amish farmer, as the film's "most riveting presence." "Mr. Godunov displays a kind of quiet, amused self-assurance that effectively steals every scene he's in," Mr. Canby wrote.

For a time, soon after joining Ballet Theater, Mr. Godunov had disappointed American audiences by attempting to tone down his natural flamboyance. A former colleague at Ballet Theater described him yesterday as an innocent in an unfamiliar world. And after his success in "Witness," he failed to have a similar impact in his other films, which included "Die Hard" (1989). In that movie, he played the villain, and Mr. Canby in a review described him as "a sight gag in his terrorist costume."

Boris Alexander Godunov was born on Sakhalin Island, and began studying dance at 9 at the Riga State Ballet School, where his mother enrolled him to prevent him from becoming "a hooligan," as he later put it. Mr. Baryshnikov was one of his classmates at the school and the two were friends. On his graduation, Mr. Godunov joined Igor Moiseyev's Young Ballet (later Moscow Classical Ballet) and toured with that company.

He talked his way into the Bolshoi by appealing to Yuri Grigorovich, its director, and soon after he joined, he danced Prince Siegfried, the lead male role of "Swan Lake" and won many rave reviews. Leading roles followed in "Giselle" and other classics as well as contemporary ballets by Alberto Alonso, Roland Petit and Miss Plisetskaya. He won a gold medal at the Moscow International Competition in 1973.

Mr. Godunov was marked as a troublemaker and potential defector on his return from the 1973 tour, in which his gifts had generally been praised by American critics. He was not allowed to leave the Soviet Union again for five years, and rarely danced during that period, though Mr. Grigorovich allowed him to learn the role of Spartacus, the rebellious slave, in his ballet of the same name. His performance in that role in 1979 was popular with New York audiences, symbolizing for many Mr. Godunov's plight with the Bolshoi.

Stan Fellerman, 1981

Alexander Godunov

Mr. Godunov danced lead roles at Ballet Theater in works that included "Giselle," "Raymonda," "La Bayadère" and "Don Quixote," as well as Mr. Petit's "Carmen" and José Limón's "Moor's Pavane." In 1981, he appeared with the Alvin Ailey American Dance Theater in a razzle-dazzle duet choreographed by Mr. Ailey for him and the Ailey star Judith Jamison.

His other films included "Money Pit" (1986) and "North" (1994).

Mr. Godunov became an American citizen in 1987, saying he planned to celebrate with "a hamburger stuffed with caviar."

Mr. Godunov's marriage ended in divorce in 1982.

Cynthia Ann Greene's Dying Wish Fulfilled

by Kent Brandley

When Cynthia Ann Greene died of AIDS complications at San Francisco General Hospital last Friday, June 16, the wish she made last Christmas was fulfilled. She was allowed to die in the embrace of her loving family, and not in a dismal and distant prison cell. 95

Greene was released just before Christmas last year after ACT UP, Catholic Charities, the Coalition to Support Women Prisoners at Chowchilla, and San Francisco District Attorney Arlo Smith acted in support of her compassionate release from Chowchilla Prison.

Greene, 41, was rapidly wasting away at the time of her release, authorities said, and was incapable of rendering any harm.

Greene's mother, Ann, was with her daughter until shortly before Cynthia Ann passed into a coma and died. She called the B.A.R. on Monday morning to tell of her daughter's passing and to thank those who had been helpful to the family, particularly the staff at San Francisco General Hospital who had cared for her daughter as death approached.

"They were so wonderful," Mrs. Greene said. "She was happy because she was with her family until the end."

Greene's case was one of those which led the legislature to consider AB 1408, legislation to establish compassionate release from prison for terminally ill inmates. The measure passed the Assembly with bipartisan support and will be considered soon by the state Senate. It has received wide support because it makes financial, as well as compassionate, sense.

Services for Cynthia Ann Greene will be held Friday, June 23 at 11 a.m. at Lewis and Ribbs Mortuary located at 6424 Third Street. The Reverend W.V. Hudson will officiate, according to Mrs. Greene. Arrangements were delayed so that family members from out of town could attend. ▼

Pride Gillis

Dec. 7, 1967 - July 25, 1995

Pride, a name you always had to say twice and spell to strangers, but you only had to meet him once to always remember his smile, warmth, sensitivity and, of course, good looks. You left this life far too early, and have joined Mike performing on stage with Garry, putting on a mask or living at Sugarbakers.

Pride's passing came as he wished, "Don't try to control me!" He died at home, shortly after talking with his mom and friend Don. His guardian angels came two weeks earlier to take away the fear of the last few years.

Pride is survived by his mother, Carol; sister, Kelly; nieces, Brittany and Shanna Lee, his namesake; sisters, April and Crystal; "baby" brother, James; his wife, DaKrina; and his many friends.

Thanks to Matt, Tom and friends for their help, the physicians and staff at SFGH, and the VNA of San Francisco. Contributions can be sent to the Visiting Nurses of San Francisco or plant a Gerbera Daisy in his memory.

A celebration of Pride's life will be held Sunday, August 6. All are welcome. Call 252-8380 for details. Pride, you will be sorely missed! Love, Mike

"I love to dream, because then I can see!" His positive attitude and joy. His love of living and singing. His family in Texas. His "family" - the San Francisco Gay Men's Chorus - for 14 years. His beloved 49ers and Texas Tech Red Raiders. His fighting spirit when it came to opening all closets that people find themselves in - gay or otherwise. Hawaii, travel, Star Trekking, skiing and Christmas Christmas Christmas with 999 lights on the tree. He was that last light. A real hero in the AIDS fight.

Even after going blind he could find humor and ways to enjoy what life offered. It kept him alive long past what was expected. He inspired us all. Still the end came too soon. But we know he is with the other 170 chorus angels organizing our Gay Pride contingent, eyeing and hugging the handsome hunks and once again "Ho-Hoing" as our perennial chorus Santa Claus.

Roomie, I miss your happy "Hey Hey" when I drag this old Ivan up the stairs after work. Your many friends, soulmate sister Susan and husband Wilber, sister GayLynn and Mom Lou miss you, too. 8-31-95

Paul Dewitt Gordon died August 9 from complications of AIDS.

A native of Arkansas, Gordon was a graduate of Southwest Missouri State University with a degree in education and a 1979 graduate of the Rutgers University School of Law. He served as chief legal researcher for then Chief Judge E.E. Wright at the Arkansas Court of Appeals and served in the same capacity for Justice Steele Hays at the Arkansas Supreme Court.

Entering private practice Gordon won the first lesbian child custody case brought in Arkansas, but lost his two-year bid to overturn the Arkansas sodomy statute in federal court. After moving to San Francisco in 1985, he worked with several legal firms, including the real estate firm of Niven & Smith. He was a Shanti volunteer for eight years and was still active as an emotional support volunteer, working with a client, at the time of his death.

Gordon is survived by his parents, Sara and Othello Gordon of Solgohachia (Conway County) Arkansas; a sister, Susan of Conway; a brother, John of Alvin, Texas; and nephew, Scott of Alvin. He was also close to his Aunt Lena Gordon Horton of Plummerville, Arkansas.

Richard E. Graves

Sept. 2, 1953 - Sept. 22, 1995

Richard passed away peacefully from AIDS-related lymphoma. He had many passions in life, but he was first and foremost an artist. He received a master's in fine arts from U.C. Berkeley.

Richard was a teacher and administrator at the SF Jewish Community Center for 17 years. He loved teaching children art, and left a creative legacy to the parents and teachers of the school.

Richard's garden in his backyard was only one way in which his artistic talents manifested themselves. His garden was an inspiration to his family, friends and neighbors.

Richard moved to SF in 1972, attending SF State University. He received a BA in fine arts and early childhood education. He loved living in the Castro and participated in many neighborhood events. Richard was an avid supporter of the International Lesbian/Gay Film Festival.

Richard's sense of humor and his caring gentle support will be missed by his mother, Carol; his sisters, Carol and Susan; his brother, Robert; and his friends, Frank, Elizabeth, Shannon, James Mark, James and Pat.

Donations in his name may be sent to Under One Roof, 2362 Market St., SF, where he volunteered. ▼

September 11, 1995

On September 11 Ken Gike passed on to his next journey, where he will enrich the lives of those he touches the way he enriched ours during his 41 years with us. He died peacefully at his home surrounded by his closest friends and his beloved husband Dan Lanzi by his side.

Ken was a native of Freehold, New Jersey. He graduated from Franklin & Marshall College with a bachelor's in economics. He retired from Seton Health Services in 1992, where he'd held the position of director and chief operating officer since 1987. Earlier, he was the capital campaign director for the University of California at Berkeley and the director of Major Gifts for Tulane University in New Orleans.

Ken is survived by his soul mate, Daniel Lanzi; his mother, Patricia Gike; a brother, sister-in-law and a nephew, Kris, Kathy and Keegan; a grandmother, Dorthey King; and countless relatives and friends across the country.

Memorial services will be held Sunday, October 1, 3-5 p.m., at the Archbishop's Mansion, 1000 Fulton St., SF. Donations may be made in memory of E. Kendall Gike Jr. to the San Francisco AIDS Emergency Fund, where he was a longtime volunteer and fundraiser. ▼

Jorge Guevara

A memorial service will be held Saturday, April 27 for Jorge Felipe Guevara, 34, who died April 8 at the home of his parents in Miami, Florida. Jorge was a noted dancer, teacher and choreographer in the Atlanta area. He touched many hearts and left many friends. He will be greatly missed. The service will be held at 2 p.m. at Kingswood United Methodist Church, 5015 Tilly Mill Rd., Dunwoody. 96

Jacques Girard, video producer, dies at 45

Jacques Girard, 45, a film and video producer who founded Girard Video Inc. in Washington, D.C., died Sunday, June 25, 1994 of AIDS-related complications in Ft. Lauderdale, Fla., according to his friend, Leor Bar-Haim of Washington.

In 1983, Girard founded Girard Video Inc., which produces films and videos for corporate and industrial clients. Girard Video has also produced two documentaries of Gay civil rights marches: the 1987 and 1993 Marches on Washington. The firm has made many short films for Gay organizations and causes, including the Whitman-Walker Clinic and the Human Rights Campaign Fund, and has been known to discount its services for Gay groups. Recently, Girard also produced Lives in the Balance: The Lesbian and Gay Movement in the 1990s, which aired on several PBS stations.

"As a Gay business-owner this is a wonderful position to be in, in the communications field," Girard said in 1993. "I think people are more receptive to changes now, so we've got to be an instrument of change."

Since childhood, the Canadian-born Girard had displayed a creative and entrepreneurial flare, according to his sister, Michele Girard of Boucherville, Quebec.

"Jacques was always in show business," she recalled. "When he was 14 years old, he rented a theater in our little town and he invited artists and produced their shows — he was always running something, even when he was young." Girard was also known to carry a camera around with him much of the time, his sister noted.

Girard was born Nov. 13, 1949 and raised in Asbestos, a small mining town in southeastern Quebec. He studied communications and cinematography at the University of Quebec, graduating in 1974. Girard then worked for the National Film Board of Canada, a Vancouver, B.C. television station, the Canadian Broadcasting Co., and the United Nations Department of Public Information. In 1981, Girard moved to Washington, where he worked as a camera operator in the French Programming Division of the Canadian Broadcasting Company.

"I always had someone I was working for that I felt didn't give me a chance to do all the things I could for them," Girard said in a July 1993 interview with the Blade. "And I thought, maybe I've got to do it on my own; maybe that's how it's going to work. I think I've always been an entrepreneur by nature."

Last fall, Girard moved to Fort Lauderdale. He sold Girard Video to its vice president, Andy Hemmendinger.

"Jacques loved running the company," said Bar-Haim, who worked with Girard at GVI. "The energy, enthusiasm, and optimism he had were irresistible and he brought out those qualities in everyone he came in contact with."

"He was very, very creative — and very responsible. He didn't just create, he involved a lot of people around him," said his sister. "I will remember him for his determination, for his ability to keep putting one foot in front of the other, even when he was sick."

In addition to his sister, Girard is survived by his parents, C.G. and Rejeane Girard of Sherbrooke, Quebec; and brother, Pierre Girard of Canmore, Alberta.

A memorial service was held for Girard in Washington on July 10. His remains have been cremated and the ashes will be returned to Quebec.

Girard's family requested that contributions in his name be made to the AIDS service provider of the donor's choice.

Neil Gnabasiak

May 12, 1961 - Oct. 9, 1995

Neil left this world peacefully on Monday, Oct. 9. His struggle with AIDS has ended, and in his final hours, he was comforted by his devoted parents and loving sister Colleen.

Neil's buoyant spirit and easy-going charm carried him through his adventures and endeared him to us all. He loved cartooning, rock and roll, and traveling across the country visiting family and friends. He spent many happy years living in Forestville, where he served the AIDS community volunteering at Food for Thought.

Neil is survived by his parents, four brothers, three sisters, and a loving extended family and circle of friends. Donations in Neil's name may be made to: Food for Thought, P.O. Box 1608, Forestville, CA 95436. ▼

April 4, 1951 - Sept. 1, 1995

A true friend, Steve was loved by many. Born in Everett, Massachusetts, he lived in Boston before moving to San Francisco in 1980. He follows his lover Rick, who died of AIDS in 1986.

Steve's last job was at Tully-Wihr printers in Union City. He volunteered at Project Inform in 1992, where he made many friends. He also was instrumental at helping to transform the card shop Does Your Mother Know in 1994.

Steve fought many tough battles with AIDS over the past five years, bouncing back from severe illnesses. His last few months were at Coming Home Hospice, where he was cared for lovingly.

Besides his many friends, Steve is survived by two brothers and three sisters. He was comforted in his last days by his dear sister, Dee Kelly, and his closest friends, Mark, Kerry, Jim, Gregg, Victor, Neil and Allen. A celebration of his life was held at Neil and Allen's on Monday, September 4.

In Loving Memory

Charles E. Garcia

June 4, 1944 - July 3, 1994

My lover, my mentor, my friend! How I loved you! How I miss you! That smile that could melt anyone's heart.

It is time to say "Goodbye". You will never be forgotten by me and many others.

There were so many who helped me during the time I was taking care of you. First - Betty Beard - you wonderful lady. John and Al from Palm Springs. The Moby Dick staff and patrons. Bert Hartlef from Amsterdam. The Edge staff and patrons.

There are a few people I want to thank individually. Scott Williams - how will I ever forget your pumpkin bread. He got to the point where he expected it and you never let him down. The Edge always put up with my sadness and my crying. Chuck, they were and are my family. Donna Sue (Gloria Hole), how will I ever say enough Thank You's to someone with the biggest shoulders in town. I don't think I could have ever gotten through my grief without you. You are truly one of the most wonderful human beings put upon this earth. With all my heart and soul I say "I Love You". Charles - You are missed. Sweet dreams my love!

John Michael Gaspardi, Jr.

John Michael Gaspardi, Jr. surrendered to AIDS on Sept. 2 at his Dorchester home. He was 36.

Born in North Adams Mass., he moved to Boston and graduated from U/Mass Boston. A tireless advocate for people's rights, he dedicated his career to providing service to people with disabilities. John started the Waverly Container Redemption Center at the Fernald State School in Waltham, which was recently dedicated in his honor. He also worked at various community programs and most recently was a service coordinator at the West Boston/Brookline Office of the Department of Mental Retardation.

An avid gardener, John won the award for the best home garden in his Dorchester neighborhood in 1994. He was a member of the building and grounds committee of the Arlington Street Church Boston and a volunteer of Goosebump Garden at the Fenway Community Health Center and served on their Consumer Advisory Board.

He is survived by his parents, John Gaspardi and Priscilla Marchegiani; four sisters, Cindy M. Lafond, Linda Febles, Karen Cantoni, and Billie-Jo Corbosiero; six nieces and three nephews; and many close loving friends. A get-together to celebrate his being will be held Sunday, Sept. 24 at 3:30 p.m. in The Arlington Street Church of Boston.

Cremation arrangements were directed by Watson Funeral Service, Cambridgeport. Remembrances to Fenway Community Health Center, 7 Haviland St., Boston are deeply appreciated.

John Gautraud

John Gautraud died suddenly and unexpectedly on Oct. 1 in his Charlestown home at age 38. He had experienced some heart weakness earlier in the year, but it was assumed he was recovering. John had a taste for adventure and a great love of the outdoors, and, true to form, had enjoyed a beautiful day of sailing on Boston Harbor just before his death.

John's other lifelong pursuit was in the arena of human psychology and the complexities of how we relate to one another; fortunately his deeply introspective, analytical side was well complemented by a playful, spontaneous, warm and outgoing alter-ego. Those closest to John mourn the loss of one of the most honest and challenging, yet supportive and compassionate friends they'll ever hope to know.

John was born June 29, 1957, and grew up in Lexington. He gradually earned his engineering degree at a succession of area colleges. He traveled world-wide, lived all over the Boston/Newton area and had been working at Raytheon since 1990.

John is survived by his dad in Florida; his sister, Nanette, in Quincy; his sister, Nicole, in Avon, CT; and his calico cat, Moleen. He is remembered also by those who met and knew him through AWWOB, Venture Out and Chiltern Jamboree weekends; by his co-volunteers in the "Tappers" at the AIDS Action Committee who knew him fondly as "Jack"; and by many, many others.

Let the non-medical record show that John had a good, strong heart. 95

Mark Graham

Services were held April 8 for prominent local lay religious leader Mark Emory Graham, 38, who died at home of HIV disease. 96

A member of All Saints Episcopal Church, where he served as head verger since 1985, Graham was very active in the Vergers Guild of the Episcopal Church. The Tampa native also served as regional vice president of Integrity, for gay and lesbian Episcopalians, and was co-dean of the 1995 National Integrity Convention held in Atlanta. He was presented the Louie Crew Award for outstanding service to Integrity and was honored with a stained glass window of St. Aelred, patron saint of Integrity, in the chapel of All Saints Church.

A former board member and treasurer of AID Atlanta, Graham was retired as a banking officer for Wachovia Bank.

Survivors include: mother, Mary O. Graham; father Lloyd B. Graham, Sr.; step-mother, Carolyn Graham; a brother, and a large and loving family of friends.

Contributions may be made to the Mark Graham Memorial Fund at All Saints Church, 634 W. Peachtree St., Atlanta, GA 30308.

A Thank You Note

As we prepared ourselves for Thanksgiving to give God thanks for the yield of the harvest, I would like to take this particular time to give special thanks to almighty God for the many wonderful people that were brought into my life through my son Maurice Gareau. My son, Maurice, lost the battle to Aids on February 2, 1995 but won the war to everlasting life with god.

A benefit was held at Colby's on St. Joseph Street on behalf of Maurice to help the family. This benefit was such a lovely tribute to him. I will never forget the love that radiated through the people that night. Maurice would have been so proud of his sisters for their excellent performances and hardwork to make the benefit such a success. He would have gotten a charge over Pepsi acting as MC with her wit and charm. I also want to thank every one who worked behind the scene for their hardwork and financial support. This was a truly a team effort and your working together made this benefit the success that it was. Maurice would have been in awe for all your love and support that you showed that night.

He was so moved on the last Sunday night he was at Colby's. He said "Mama I couldn't believe the people who came up to me and were so happy to see me and they even talked about giving me a benefit to help me out rather than wait until I was no longer here." He said "I didn't realize so many people cared". The reason I mentioned this is because I want everyone to know how deeply Maurice felt your love and how deeply you all affected him by your caring, love and support. Maurice was so fortunate to have such true friends. I was truly blessed by having such a loving son. He was my best friend, my comforter and he was such an important part of my life and he will always be. So thank you so much heavenly father for my son, my son, and for the beautiful new friends that you brought into my life.

with love,

Maurice's Mom

John Glover

John Dale Glover, 42, a resident of Arlington, Virginia, died Sunday, November 12, 1995 at his home due to complications associated with AIDS, according to his friend, Barry Goodinson of Arlington.

Glover was born Aug. 24, 1953 in Shelbyville, Mo. A 1971 graduate of North Shelby High School, Glover continued his education at the University of Missouri, where he graduated in 1975 with a degree in journalism.

From 1975-1980, Glover was editor and co-publisher of the Lawrence County (Mo.) newspapers, which published the Marion Free Press, Lawrence County Record, and Aurora Independent News.

Glover also owned J. Glover and Company Antiques in the late 1970s. According to Goodinson, Glover remained an avid collector of American country antiques.

During the early 1980s, Glover worked for the Columbia Daily Tribune where he served as a display advertising representative and was Coordinator of Publications for the University of Missouri-Columbia.

Glover next moved to Jefferson City, Mo. where he served as press secretary and personal assistant to then Missouri state treasurer Mel Carnahan. In 1985, Glover moved to the Washington area, where he served as press secretary to Rep. Harold Volkmer, from 1985-1990. According to Goodinson, it was Glover who penned, for Rep. Volkmer, the response to President Reagan's support of the Contras: "Mr. President, I too believe in the freedom fighters. But, to me, the freedom fighters are America's farmers."

In 1990, Glover became manager of government affairs and PAC administrator for NYNEX Corporation. He retired in 1994.

During his retirement, Glover was a volunteer at Northern Virginia AIDS Ministry's PlayCare Center and briefly served as a representative to the Regional HIV Planning Council.

In addition to Goodinson, Glover is survived by his parents, Charles and Nyda-Jo Glover, both of Shelbyville; four brothers and a sister; 14 nieces and nephews; and countless friends.

A memorial service will take place Saturday, Nov. 18, at 4 p.m., at St. Margaret's Church, 1820 Connecticut Ave.,

Paul Martin Gunn ("Rif-Raff," "Rif")

May 28, 1964 - Oct. 17, 1995

Paul was born in Seoul, Korea, and died in San Francisco on October 17, following a brief illness. He was adopted in 1965 and came to the U.S. at the age of 13 months. He attended school in Palo Alto and Santa Cruz, California. He was a resident of SF for the past 10 years.

Paul leaves his life partner, Shana Kreiner, a son, Martin Brennan; his parents, Jack and Karla Sue Gunn of Mounaloa, Molokai, Hawaii; his sisters, Connie Franks, Shirley Schuster, Mari Kauffman and Lara Fisher; and his brothers, Bruce and Jim Gunn. He also leaves numerous lovers and many friends.

Memorial services will be held Thursday, October 26, at 1 p.m. at Spirit Menders, 3397 26th Street (at Mission), and that same day at 4:30 p.m. at The Listening Post, Rm. 223, Ambassador Hotel, 55 Mason St. There will also be a memorial held in Hawaii at a later date to be announced.

Gifts in Paul's memory may be made to Shanti, Visiting Nurses Hospice, Lutheran Social Services, Catholic Charities, Network Ministries and Spirit Menders. Gifts may be sent care of the Ambassador Hotel, 55 Mason St., SF, CA 94102. ▼

Ramiro Gutierrez

July 5, 1956 - Nov. 30, 1995

Ramiro passed away with tremendous grace after a long and courageous struggle with AIDS. His lover Tom and many loving family members were with him.

Ramiro moved from Hollister to the Bay Area in the early '80s and lived in San Jose, Alameda and Oakland. He also spent famous times working and playing in the city he loved. For many years he worked in the home medical equipment business. He loved the interaction with people and took great pride in his work and his appearance.

Ramiro treasured his family and had many loving friends. Among those who loved and will miss him are his former lover, Jim; his companion in many adventures, Carlos; and his dear friends, Paul, Robert, Brian, Hugh and Gary.

Ramiro celebrated life with a passion for travel, dancing, clothes and certain herbs. Although, at times, his life was a challenge to those who loved him, the rewards were many. He will be dearly remembered for his boyish charm and kindness. ▼

Eric Garber

Nov. 25, 1954 - Oct. 8, 1995

Eric Garber, writer, historian and activist, was passionately committed to gay liberation and ending all forms of oppression. He was a founding member of the San Francisco Gay and Lesbian History Project and board member of the Gay and Lesbian Historical Society. His writings educated many about gays and lesbians of the Harlem Renaissance. Eric's science fiction anthologies and guides uncovered that genre's gay history. He actively supported and encouraged other gay writers. On the lighter side, he regaled friends with "Tongues Are Waggin'," an ever-changing chronicle of queer public and historical figures.

Eric loved travel, men, books and hemp. Most important to him were his connections with people. He left behind his chosen and biological families: "husband of his heart," Jeff Sunshine; parents, Chuck and Dorothy; brother, sister-in-law and niece, Craig, Lisa and Lane; a family of friends; and beloved pets.

It was Eric's wish that in lieu of flowers donations be sent to the Gay and Lesbian Historical Society of Northern California, P.O. Box 424280, SF, CA 94142.

A celebration of Eric's life will be held on what would have been his 41st birthday, Nov. 25, 1995. Contact Allan at (415) 469-9264 for more information. ▼

Gregory Lee Good

May 5, 1963 - Oct. 7, 1995

Greg Good passed from this life on Oct. 7, with his lover and friend, Michael Lewis; mother, Josephine Good; friend, Michael Applebee; and friend, Ted Wigger, at his side.

Born in Virginia's Shenandoah Valley, Greg then moved with his family to Alexandria, Va., where he graduated from Thomas Jefferson High School in 1982. He was proudly self-employed as an independent trucker before moving to Napa in mid-1990. He began working for the Treadway and Wigger Funeral Chapel, even past the point of being able.

He enjoyed country western dancing, camping, traveling, gardening and working on his many cars.

Greg is survived by his lover, Michael E.S. Lewis; mother, Josephine Good of Luray, Va.; father and stepmother, Carlton and Nancy Good of Casanova, Va.; sisters, Angela Dawn Sours of Luray and Vanessa Peck of Casanova; brothers, Jeffery Leo Good of Stanley, Va., and Justin Peck of Casanova; grandparents, Emma Mae and Walter Leo Good of Stanley; and niece and nephew, Tammy Joe Biller and Edward Biller, both of Luray. He was predeceased by his sister, Teresa.

Contributions to the HIV Network (5 Financial Plaza, Ste. 227, Napa, CA 94558) are encouraged.

Camille Griffin, church organist, dies at 44

Camille L. Griffin, 44, a church organist and lifelong resident of Washington, D.C., died Tuesday, November 21, 1995 at the Manor Care Nursing Home in Hyattsville, Maryland of AIDS related complications, according to Courtney Williams, a friend.

A member of the transgender community, Griffin was born Timothy Griffin in Washington, D.C. on Dec. 17, 1950 and was educated in the D.C. Public Schools. Griffin earned a bachelor of arts and a bachelor of science degree from the University of the District of Columbia.

Griffin was known throughout the D.C. metropolitan area as an outstanding pianist and organist,

Williams said. Griffin served as minister of music for the predominately Gay congregation of Faith Temple Church from 1987-91, and more recently as church organist. Griffin also played for other D.C.-based churches and choirs, such as the Greater New Hope Baptist Church of D.C., Refreshing Springs Choir, the Moye Ensemble, and Galbraith United Methodist Church.

Griffin was most proud of her role as musical director for a tribute to black Gay leaders at the 30th Anniversary of the Civil Rights March on Washington in 1993; her role as organist for the opening of Whitman-Walker Clinic's Elizabeth Taylor Medical Center; and as guest accompanist for the Washington Gay and Lesbian Chorus, Williams said.

Camille Griffin

Griffin was known as a skilled seamstress and hair designer, and was also a licensed real estate agent.

Griffin's was predeceased by her father, Alonzo Rush, and sister, Babella Robinson. She is survived by her mother, Maxine Griffin; sister Janie L. Pearson, both of Washington, D.C.; and several nieces, nephews, relatives, and friends.

A service was held Nov. 25 at the Greater New Hope Baptist Church. Interment was at Maryland National Memorial Park in Laurel. A special tribute to Griffin will be held at 1 p.m., on Dec. 7, at the Faith Temple, 1313 New York Ave., NW.

In lieu of flowers, memorial contributions may be made to the James S. Tinney Fund, c/o Faith Temple, 1313 New York Ave., NW, Washington, DC 20005.

LAURENT GASPERINI

Laurent Gasperini (standing), 79, one of the original founders of the Society for Individual Rights, died in Montreal on October 2 after a short illness, approximately one year after the death at age 89 of his beloved Michel Orandi. Laurent and Michel were two gay men who had been together for 34 years. After Michel's death, Laurent moved to Montreal to be near his nephew. Laurent served in the French Army during W.W.II and, after France's defeat, was sent to Germany as a forced laborer. He escaped and joined the underground French forces. After the end of the war, he and his family moved to the U.S.; Laurent met Michel in San Francisco. In 1974 the two of them moved back to France but returned to San Francisco five years later. Laurent worked at the City of Paris until it closed in 1974; he later volunteered and then was employed at The Street Shop, a used goods shop for the benefit of the Mental Health Association. He was interested in many topics, including history and culture and books of all kinds. Laurent often spoke of his youth in France, including how he and his family would go to the opera with a large basket of food and drink to be consumed during intermission. Laurent and Michel were always recognizable by their overcoats, berets, and wool scarves, no matter what the weather. Speaking of the San Francisco climate, Laurent would repeatedly caution his friends by saying, "The climate of San Francisco is like the climate of north Africa -- it can be warm during the day, but you must wear wool after five." He leaves his nephew in Montreal and many friends, relatives and acquaintances in the U.S. and Europe, who will always remember his Old World manners, his courtesy and his generosity despite limited resources. 95

Michael S. Gibson

Michael S. Gibson, 46, of Arlington, Virginia, died Friday, April 19, 1996 of AIDS-related complications at the Hospice of Northern Virginia, according to his friend, Walter M. Krofchik.

Gibson was born March 21, 1950 in Boulder, Colo. He and his family returned to the Maryland area shortly after his birth, where Gibson graduated in 1968 from Potomac Senior High School in Oxon Hill, Md. He then worked in office management and commercial banking before deciding to become a florist.

As a florist, he worked at a variety of area firms, including Blackistone, Chambers and, most recently, Floral Images of Georgetown. When he wasn't working with flowers, Gibson enjoyed going to Rehoboth Beach, Del., grooming pets, and painting water colors. He would give his finished paintings to friends.

In addition to Krofchik, Gibson is survived by three sisters, Elaine M. Comp-ton of Clinton, Md.; Daniella N. Harding of Brandywine, Md.; and Candy Serrano of Ft. Washington, Md.; and many other relatives and friends. He was predeceased by his parents.

A visitation service was held April 21 and a funeral service was held April 22 at the Arlington (Va.) Funeral Home. Burial was at the Resurrection Cemetery in Clinton, Md.

Kevin Francis Gage

July 22, 1954 - Dec. 12, 1995

Kevin ended his 11-year battle with AIDS in the company of family and friends. He died as he lived, peacefully.

A native San Franciscan, Kevin touched many lives with his laughter. No matter how bad things looked, Kevin could always find something to laugh about. While healthy, Kevin volunteered with the San Francisco AIDS Foundation Hotline and delivered meals for Project Open Hand. His generosity always exceeded his means.

Kevin spent the last few years of his life fighting the religious right, never accepting or understanding the hatred, ignorance and prejudice that spewed from the mouths of so-called "Christians." No one better exemplified the philosophy of love, understanding and forgiveness than Kevin.

A true 49er fan, Kevin was buried in the 49er jacket given to him by his love, Carlos Hernandez. In the breast pocket was a picture of Allie, the golden-haired basenji who accompanied him everywhere. He is survived by his partner, Carlos Hernandez; a loving mother and father, Frances and Curtis; grandmother, Dorel; and his four brothers and sisters. Kevin lives still and forever in the hearts and minds of those who loved him. ▼

Gary David Gilbert, known as "Gary D." to his radio listeners, died November 10 of heart failure, according to Associated Press. He was 60. ⁹⁵

Gay Washingtonians will remember the disc jockey for his on-air anti-Gay comments. After using the terms "queers" and "faggots" in a November 1983 WPKX-FM (106) broadcast, Gilbert was suspended for a day by station management, the Blade reported. A January 1984 Blade article, citing dialogue from Gilbert's radio program, reported that he had repented for his anti-Gay comments.

"The last thing I said before I went on vacation: 'I hope all homosexuals get AIDS.' I now take that statement back. Because God has come to me. God has spoken to me," Gilbert said in his broadcast.

Actually, Gilbert's reversal appeared to be less of a divine revelation than a common sense decision.

"[S]ome of my account executives and advertising agencies say that the Gays are a big important consumer group, just like the blacks are. They've organized and they're an important group in our culture and in our buying and spending, particularly here in Washington."

According to the Blade story, McDonald's and Giant Food were two major advertisers who pulled out of the show's slot. The show's local sales manager could not confirm why the companies reneged.

Later in January 1984, Gilbert met with six Gay activists to apologize for his comments. According to the Blade, Gilbert told the group that his previous anti-Gay statements were an attempt to satire bigotry.

According to Associated Press, Gilbert is survived by three sons, two daughters, and five grandchildren.

Frank Guevara

Postmodern choreographer Frank Guevara died June 30 of pneumonia in Los Angeles. He was 30. A native of East Los Angeles, he was a pioneer in the Latino modern and postmodern dance movement, creating the Dance Theatre of East L.A. in 1992, for which he served as its producer, artistic director, choreographer and lead dancer. He began dancing at age 5, and later studied modern dance, ballet and acting at the Plaza de la Raza, and later still at Cal State Los Angeles. At 17, he got his first television part as a featured dancer in a music video showcase. ⁹⁶

David F. Gentry

David chose his transition to occur on Christmas Eve while in the company of his partner of 19 years, Raymond. He leaves his mother, Anna Lee; sister, Anne; son, Jason, all of Pensacola, Fla.; and daughter, Davena, of Menlo Park, Calif.

Reared in Florida, David won awards in floral design and moved to New Orleans to pursue many other avenues of design. Shortly after moving to San Francisco, he gained great respect from his colleagues in the design community. He participated in the DIFFA Showcase that benefited Project Open Hand and other AIDS charities.

David enjoyed playing piano, collecting orchids and traveling. He now lives in the hearts of those who loved him for many reasons.

His family is most grateful to his doctor, Jason Tokumoto, the staff of UCSF and his many caregivers. For details about a memorial celebration, call Raymond at 415/487-1236. ▼ GIORDANO—Edward J. Vice President of Avery Boardman, Ltd. passed away suddenly on November 2, 1996 in Easthampton, N.Y. An active figure in the New York interior design community, Mr. Giordano served on the Board of the International Society of Interior Design. He was also very active in the fight against AIDS and greatly contributed to organizations such as DIFFA, God's Love, We Deliver and GMAHC. He is survived by his mother Mary, sister Louise and brother-in-law Ben, brother Michael and sister-in-law Heidi, and several nephews. A mass will be held on Tuesday, November 12th, 10:30AM at Saint Mel's R.C. Church, 154 Street and 26th Ave, Flushing, NY. A memorial service will be held at a later date.

David Gabby

January 9, 1996

David Gabby died peacefully January 9, here in San Francisco. He was a well-liked person who worked at The Motherlode, 'N Touch, Norse Cove and Without Reservations.

David was known for his flashy smile, positive attitude and his can-do mind set. Always a happy person regardless of how he felt personally, his joy and light will be missed by those who knew him.

This past year David went to clown school to become a clown and make children happy. His clown name was "Smiley." He was a man who fought hard until the end of his life to bring joy to the world.

David is survived by his family in Illinois and his good friends, Carole and Larry, who took him under their wing when he left home. He is also survived by his domestic partner, Timmy Timaio; Francisco and Kate; Randy; Linda; and Gary Johnson, his first partner.

Special thanks to the Coming Home Hospice staff for their love and care. To those who wish to remember David, we ask that you support Coming Home Hospice in any way you can. ▼ GOLDBLATT—Andrew, 32. Loving son, grandson, brother, and uncle, on Oct. 6, 1996, of complications from AIDS. Survived by his parents, Mary Goldblatt and David Goldblatt, his sisters, Amy Holtzer and Julie Kern, and their husbands, Mark Holtzer and Frank Kern, his nieces, Sarah and Talya Holtzer and Melanie Kern, his nephew, Jacob Holtzer, his grandparents, Arthur Saypol and Miriam and Joseph Goldblatt. Funeral services on October 8th, at 12:30 PM, at Westchester Jewish Center, Mamaroneck, NY. The family asks that those who wish to make donations in Andrew's memory make them to Jansen Memorial Hospice, Tuckahoe, NY or the AIDS charity of their choice.

"THE GIFT OF FRIENDSHIP"

*Friendship is a priceless gift that cannot be bought or sold, but it's value is far greater than a mountain made of gold -
For gold is cold and lifeless, it can neither see nor hear,
and in the time of trouble, it is powerless to cheer -
It has no ears to listen,
no heart to understand,
It cannot bring you comfort or reach out a helping hand - So when you ask God for a gift, be thankful if He sends not diamonds, pearls or riches, but the love of real true friends.*

Helen Steiner Rice

"MAY MEMORIES COMFORT YOU"

*The tide recedes but leaves behind bright sea shells on the sand.
The sun goes down but gentle warmth still lingers on the land.
The music stops, and yet it echoes on in sweet refrains...
For every joy that passes, something beautiful still remains.*

- To my best friend, my oldest friend, and a close friend - I miss you all so much - my life has changed so much without your physical presence - but you will always remain in my life. I love you all.

Phillip Garey

Phillip Garey, 36, of Washington, D.C., died at Wellington Manor Nursing Home in Clinton, Maryland, on Friday, December 1, 1995, due to AIDS related complications, according to his uncle, Henry Lee Williams of Washington, D.C.

Garey was born in Bethesda, Md., on Nov. 25, 1959 and grew up in the Bethesda-Wheaton area. He earned a general equivalency diploma in the early 1980s and later enlisted in the U.S. Navy. He later received a medical discharge.

A talented cook, Garey graduated with honors from a D.C. culinary school in 1994, Williams said.

"He liked to experiment with different foods," Williams said. "He'd make anything from a souffle right down to roast beef and ham." Garey often baked cakes and sugar cookies, to satisfy his "sweet tooth," Williams said. Garey also enjoyed listening to classical music, rhythm and blues, and rap.

Garey will be remembered for his "friendly gestures, bright smile," and the "enduring love" he expressed to his family and friends, Williams said.

Garey also is survived by his children, Jessica Wade and Maurice Garey; fiancée, Carolyn Wade, all of D.C., four brothers, Robert Jackson of Kentucky, Tenn.;

James Greblowski

Oct. 10, 1952 - Jan. 14, 1996

Jim, 43, died at home due to AIDS complications. He was born in Chicago and worked as a computer operator at Chicago NW Railroad until retiring in 1988. Then he moved to San Francisco and Sonoma County in 1989.

Jim contributed immensely to the community after that, volunteering for Face to Face and Food for Thought, the Sonoma County food bank. He received honors for his generous, heartfelt volunteer service at Food for Thought. He was a founding member of the Russian River Volleyball Group.

Jim is survived by his partner, Steve Sanzi of Monte Rio, Calif., and his sister, Charlene Tukiendorf, who lives in Wisconsin. A memorial is being planned for the spring. For information call Randi Francis at 707/823-7550. Donations in Jim's honor can be made to Food for Thought (707/887-1647) or the AIDS emergency fund at Face to Face (707/544-1581).

"When you live in your heart, magic happens." Jim truly lived in his heart and made magic happen in the lives of those he touched. ▼

Robert Gandara

Robert Gandara, 53, a resident of Laurel, Maryland, died Sunday, February 18, 1996 of heart failure at George Washington Hospital Center in D.C., according to his friend, Joe Dudzinski of D.C.

Gandara was born Feb. 8, 1943 in El Paso, Texas. He was a Christian Brother of the Southern Province, a Catholic religious order. In 1966, he earned a bachelor's degree in English from the College of Santa Fe, N.M., and in 1976, he received a master's degree in teaching from Tulane University in New Orleans.

Gandara spent almost 20 years working as a high school teacher and principal. From 1969-78, he taught at DeLaSalle High School in New Orleans. He took a teaching job at St. Paul's School, Covington, La, in 1978. He left St. Paul's and returned to DeLaSalle in 1981. In 1984, he was principal of Catholic High School in New Iberia, La. He returned to St. Paul's in 1988.

In 1992, Gandara moved to Washington, D.C. For a short period, he worked at Prudential Preferred Properties as an administrative assistant. In early 1995, he accepted the position of Music and Liturgy Director at St. Mary of the Mill Catholic Church in Laurel, Md. Gandara was an active member of Dignity Washington, a local community of Gay Catholics, and he sang in the group's choir. He also volunteered at Whitman-Walker Clinic's Food Bank.

In addition to Dudzinski, Gandara is survived by his two brothers, Ricki and Barney, both of El Paso, Texas; and sister, Rebecca Gonzales of Las Vegas, Nev.

Funeral services were held Feb. 20 at St. Mary of the Mill Church. His remains will be buried in El Paso, Texas.

A memorial mass will be held Saturday, March 2, at 12 p.m., at St. Margaret's Episcopal Church, 1820 Connecticut Ave., NW.

Edmund Paul Greenwood, formerly of Columbus Square, Boston, died suddenly in Dusseldorf, Germany. He had been living in Germany for the past seven years working at the International School in Dusseldorf.

Paul leaves his devoted partner, Romeo Bryant, as well as many friends and family members in Boston, Winchendon and Dusseldorf.

A memorial service will be held for Paul on Monday, July 7 at the First Parish Church in Dorchester on Meeting House Hill. The service will be held at 7 p.m. and reception will follow.

Larry Grenier, 46; Danced for Tharp, Feld and the Joffrey

By JENNIFER DUNNING

Larry A. Grenier Jr., a dancer who performed with the Joffrey Ballet, Eliot Feld and Twyla Tharp, died on Wednesday at the Maitri AIDS Hospice in San Francisco. He was 46 and lived in San Francisco.

Mr. Grenier performed a wide range of dramatic and pure dance roles during his years on stage, which ended in the mid-1970's. But he is probably best remembered for the solo he performed as a Joffrey dancer at the end of Twyla Tharp's "As Time Goes By," dancing that captured his quiet, self-contained eloquence and musicality.

"I was dumbfounded," Ms. Tharp told Elinor Rogosin in an interview at the time, describing her reaction to Mr. Grenier's gifts in a rehearsal for the ballet. "I just sat there and said: 'Can I believe my eyes? Is this as exceptional as I feel it is? Is this really such a fine male lyric dancer?'"

Mr. Grenier trained at the Juilliard School and was a charter member of Mr. Feld's American Ballet Company, where he danced through 1971. He appeared that year on Broadway in "Two Gentlemen of Verona."

He joined the Joffrey in 1972, dancing roles that included Bottom in Sir Frederick Ashton's "Dream" and Iago in José Limón's "Moor's Pavane," as well as in Jerome Robbins's "N.Y. Export: Opus Jazz" and Ms. Tharp's "Deuce Coupe."

Mr. Grenier also danced with Lar Lubovitch, Kazuko Hirabayashi and Ms. Tharp before joining the staff of the San Francisco Ballet School, where he taught from 1973 to 1983. He also taught at the University of Calgary in Canada.

He is survived by his companion, Ben Janken; his mother, Ruth Grenier, of Waterville, Me.; his father, Larry Grenier Sr., of Oakland, Me.; three sisters, Betty Mead of Rochester, N.H., Pamela Lapera of Mahopac, N.Y., and Kathy Baron of Waterville; and two brothers, Paul and James John, also of Waterville.

Herbert Byron Griffith

February 2, 1946 - February 19, 1996

Herb Griffith died peacefully in his sleep at home in Madison on Feb. 19, 1996. The cause of death was complications due to AIDS.

Herb was born February 2, 1946, and his family moved often in response to needs of the U.S. Air Force, but he always considered home to be his paternal grandparents' farm near Orangeburg, S.C., and his maternal grandmother's home in Alma, Ga.

Herb served as as Air Force medical corpsman from 1964 to 1968, then managed National Shirt Company stores and worked for Armstrong Lock Supply in Atlanta.

Herb moved to Madison with his mother in 1987, to live in a small town and be near his best buddies, Richard Simpson and Rick Crown. He promptly set about filling his then-empty yard with trees, shrubs and flowers, and quickly became known in his neighborhood as someone glad to lend a hand, share a plant, or simply visit with friends.

He is survived by his mother, Mrs. Mildred Juanita Thompson Griffith of Madison, Ga.; his brother and family in Greensboro, N.C.; Rick, Richard, Steve and many more friends and relations. His loyal friend Dr. Jim Braude, and the excellent support he received from Peachtree Hospice, combined to make his final years as easy as is humanly possible.

A memorial service was held on Feb. 24 at St. James Catholic Church in Madison. Interment of his ashes was in Madison Cemetery, next to longtime friend Ronald Lyn Maloney. In lieu of flowers, contributions may be made to either the St. James Building Fund (562 Vine St., Madison, GA 30650) or to Peachtree Hospice (Silver Team, 3600 Dekalb Technology Parkway, Doraville, GA 30340).

Abel Galvan, Jr.

Sometimes you meet someone and a light goes on. Abel Galvan, Jr. was that light in the lives of many people. His beautiful smile and open, friendly manner made you feel as if you had known him forever. Abel was a devotee of Guru Maharaj Ji and traveled to India in 1972. He was also a member of Dunsmuir, a Scottish Highland and Country dance demonstration group with which he had won numerous awards. He was an early member of Different Spokes and participated in the first AIDS bike-a-thon. Abel was also a Vietnam vet and a member of The Alexander Hamilton Post, the gay post of the American Legion of Honor. He loved nothing more than getting together with his friends. Whether he was cutting hair, dancing or bicycling, Abel always did his best and gave everyone his full attention. He died at home on May 12, 1996, with David, his companion of 12 years at his side. He is survived by his mother Helen Tellez, three brothers and a sister, numerous aunts, uncles, nephews, nieces and cousins. In his last days, he was surrounded by family and friends.

Bill Goldsworthy, 5-time all-star in National Hockey League; at 51

ASSOCIATED PRESS

MINNEAPOLIS - Bill Goldsworthy, an original member of the Minnesota North Stars and a five-time NHL All-Star, died yesterday of complications from AIDS. He was 51.

Mr. Goldsworthy, who disclosed last year that he had the disease, was hospitalized about a week ago.

He played 14 seasons in the NHL with the North Stars, Boston Bruins and New York Rangers. He was diagnosed with AIDS in November 1994, and told the Saint Paul Pioneer Press in February 1995 that his health problems stemmed from drinking and promiscuity.

"There's a stigma that comes with AIDS that makes you think it's something that only happens in the homosexual community and to drug abusers who use dirty needles," he said. "It's more than that."

Mr. Goldsworthy was coaching the San Antonio Iguanas of the Central Hockey League when he was first diagnosed.

His NHL career began with the Bruins in 1964. He played with the North Stars from their expansion season of 1967 until 1977, and ended his career with the Rangers in 1978.

Mr. Goldsworthy scored 267 goals with the North Stars, becoming the first NHL player from an expansion team to top 250 goals. His No. 8 jersey was retired by the North Stars in 1992.

"He was a very colorful, charismatic guy that had great speed and strength and a great shot," said Lou Nanne, who played with Mr. Goldsworthy and later was a coach and general manager of the North Stars. "It was very unpredictable what he was going to do. He was one of the first real charismatic Minnesota athletes that we had."

He leaves a son, William; and a daughter, Tammy Lynn, 27.

Funeral arrangements were incomplete.

Bill Gooch

On Friday, November 24, 1995, Bill Gooch made the transition from this life to a more peaceful place. He leaves behind his lover Bob Hendricks-Gooch.

In the late '80s, he became involved with the leather community, and, with friends, began the Sacramento Leather Association. Bill began entering and winning contests like the International Cheeks and Chaps and Northern California Drummer competitions in 1991. That year, he placed first runner-up in the Mr. Sacramento Leather contest. To bring the various Sacramento leather communities together, Bill created the Leather and Feathers show and the Leather Trek.

Owing to his passion for leather, Bill started "Black Leather." He soon became well-known for donating his leather items to leather events and for his original pieces of Leatherwear. In early January, many of Bill's friends got together to remember him at Sacramento's Wreck Room. Dozens of photos brought by those who knew him reflected the different elements of his life. All his friends were able to remember and relive the good times. He will be missed.

William J. Godbout
March 17, 1954 – July 4, 1996

Bill Godbout passed away on July 4 at the Santa Rosa Hospital. He was born in Manchester, N.H., and resided in California for the past 20 years, most recently in Forestville and earlier in San Francisco and Richmond.

Bill earned a bachelor's in music from Lowell University/Mass. and a master's in music from the University of California at Berkeley. His 18-year career as a music teacher is a testament to his love and dedication to music.

Bill was predeceased by his companion, William Tobiasson, who passed away in June. The family includes his parents, Wilfred and Pauline; two brothers, David and Thomas; and two sisters, Jane and Ruth.

A memorial service will be held at a later date. Donations may be made to: William Godbout Instrumental Music Fund, c/o West Contra Costa Unified School District, 1108 Bissell Ave., Richmond, CA 94804.

Ken Gordon

After a heroic and inspiring 10-year struggle with AIDS, Kenneth C. Gordon entered eternal life on April 8, 1996, in Atlanta.

Ken was born on December 31, 1961, in Pullman, Wash. He moved to Richland, Wash., with his family in December 1965. Ken attended Richland Public Schools and graduated from the city's Columbia High School in 1980. He received an Associate of Arts degree from Columbia Basin College in 1983.

While in Richland, Ken became a prominent collector of comic books and was active in the Richland Chapter of the Society for Creative Anachronism. He moved to Seattle in 1984, where he became extremely active in AIDS awareness efforts. Ken founded Seattle Bartenders Against AIDS in 1985, and was a board member of the Seattle AIDS Support Group.

He won 1987 Mr. Seattle Leather, Mr. Northwest Drummer, and first runner-up in the 1987 International Mr. Leather contest. He attended Seattle University and graduated cum laude with a bachelor's degree in public administration in 1990.

Ken moved to Atlanta in 1991 to marry Hubert T. Alexander, Jr. While in Atlanta, he worked as the volunteer coordinator for Project Open Hand and conducted his own tailoring and clothing design business, Saguaro Clothing. He took great satisfaction from the design of embroidery and organizational logos.

Ken was a frequent volunteer with the Atlanta Pride Committee and also frequently a "Pride Widow." An accomplished gourmet, Ken took delight in serving and eating his wonderful creations. He especially enjoyed preparing Thanksgiving and Christmas feasts for large collections of friends and family in his Inman Park home.

Ken documented his struggle with AIDS via a series of e-mail messages called "Today's Note," beginning in July 1995 and continuing until the day before his death. He distributed the messages to "anyone at all who would wish to receive them." In this inspiring, autobiographical journal, Ken shared his innermost feelings about his daily struggle.

Ken approached life with great eagerness. His courage and spirit were indomitable.

Ken is survived by his husband, Hubert Alexander; two brothers, his mother, father, father's wife, and grandparents, all of Washington state; a sister in California; parents-in-law and a sister-in-law in Virginia; and many loving friends in Atlanta and Seattle.

A memorial service was held April 12 in Atlanta. Interment was in Williamsburg, Va. Donations in Ken's memory may be made to the Seattle AIDS Support Group, 303 17th Ave. East, Seattle WA 98112.

Jeffrey Michael Grossi

By Brian Caffall
PGN Contributing Writer

Jeffrey Michael Grossi, partner of composer Ricky Ian Gordon, and the inspiration for Gordon's opera, "The Tibetan Book of the Dead," died Aug. 1, 1996, in New York of complications due to AIDS. He was 32.

Gordon was introduced to the text of the work, a guide for the passage of the soul through the stages of death and rebirth, when Grossi asked his partner to assume the role of his reader. In Tibetan Buddhism, the text is read to a dying person by a loved one or teacher to ease the fears of death and to clarify the journey of the soul afterward.

Impressed by the solace and strength the book gave Grossi, Gordon decided to use the text as the basis for an opera. The piece, with a libretto by playwright Jean-Claude van Ittalie, was co-commissioned by the Houston Grand Opera and the Philadelphia-based American Music Theater Festival, and was presented in June in Philadelphia. Grossi was able to attend the premiere, which Gordon dedicated to him.

Grossi was born and raised in Wilmington, Del., where he attended St. Mark's High School. He later studied at the American Academy of Dramatic Arts in New York, and was employed by Air France. He and Gordon were partners for four years.

In addition to Gordon, Grossi is survived by his father, Francis J. Grossi; his mother and stepfather, Yvonne and Bob Nass; his sister, Paula Grossi; a niece and a nephew.

A memorial service was held Aug. 5 at St. Joseph's Church in Yorkville, N.Y. A star magnolia tree will be planted over Grossi's ashes at 11 a.m. Aug. 10 on the grounds of the Montessori School, Harvey Road and Interstate 95 in Arden, Del.

Memorial contributions may be sent to the Actor's Fund, Attention Karen Dwyer/AIDS Initiative, 1501 Broadway, suite 518, New York, N.Y. 10036. ▼

Stephen Robert Guyton

Stephen Robert Guyton, 39, died Friday, May 24, 1996, at his home in Asheville, N.C. A memorial service was held on Saturday, June 1, in the courtyard at Cathedral of All Souls in Asheville, with Ruby Hill officiating.

Mr. Guyton was born in Birmingham, Ala. He graduated from Mountain Brook High School in 1975. He attended Auburn University and The University of Alabama-Birmingham.

Mr. Guyton was general manager of Lafitte Guest House, his family's bed and breakfast in New Orleans, for eight years. He was a travel consultant for Travel Unlimited in New Orleans; office manager and rental coordinator from Great City Realtors in Atlanta; a customer service representative for Dupont Medical Products in Atlanta; and a travel consultant for Olympic Travel in Buford, GA.

Mr. Guyton was active in theater throughout his life. He performed in productions for Birmingham Children's Theater, Town and Gown Theater in Birmingham and the Alabama School of Fine Arts. His latest performances were with the Broadway Arts Center in Asheville and the Asheville Community Theater.

While living in Asheville, Mr. Guyton established the Living In Focused Empowerment (LIFE) Conference in Asheville. On May 21, he received the Outstanding Service Award for his work on the LIFE Conference from Community Liaison Organization for Support, Education and Reform.

He served on the Board of Directors of the Western North Carolina AIDS Project, and chaired the organization's client services committee. He served on the board of the People With AIDS Coalition, at which time he was chair of the LIFE Committee.

Survivors include his parents, Dr. and Mrs. Robert David Guyton of New Orleans and Birmingham; partner, Marc Hill of Waynesville, N.C.; companion, Richard Lethgo of Asheville; and sister Gigi Guyton of Charlotte, N.C.

In lieu of flowers, a memorial donation may be made to any AIDS service organization.

Relatives must buy memorials, Fla. paper says

TAMPA, Fla. — The Tampa Tribune, a daily newspaper in Florida, recently rejected a Gay man's effort to place a paid memorial notice following the death of his partner, saying newspaper policy requires that a family member place or approve such ads.

GLAAD Dispatch, a publication of the Gay and Lesbian Alliance Against Defamation, reported in its July issue that the Tribune refused the ad from Tampa resident Barry Adams even though Adams explained that his partner, Jack Girard, had not seen his relatives for nine years.

GLAAD reports that the Tribune's policy says paid memorials "may only be taken from a spouse or close family blood relative of the deceased" and that the only exceptions allowed are those approved by blood relatives. 8-9-96

Richard (Rick) M. Godlove III

Dec. 15, 1953 - Aug. 10, 1996

Rick was born in Topeka, Kan. After graduating from high school, he joined the United States Navy. He moved to San Francisco in 1978 and worked for California Dental Services. He also owned and operated a word processing business for many years, and was a home health care attendant.

Rick is best remembered for his jokes, his wonderful stories and his deep concern for those around him. He was there for many people when they were sick or in need. He loved beauty and worked to surround himself with it.

Rick passed away in Topeka, surrounded by his family and people he loved. He is survived by his parents, Vera and Nick; his sister, Patti; his brother, Larry; and his dear friend, Jenna. His ashes will be buried with those of his partner, David Carpenter, who died in 1989.

Memorial services will be at the AIDS Memorial Grove in Golden Gate Park on Sunday, August 25, at 2 p.m. Donations can be made to Visiting Nurses and Hospice of San Francisco, the SF AIDS Foundation or the AIDS Memorial Grove.

Alberto Gonzalez, convicted of using AIDS as weapon

SALEM, Ore. — Alberto Gonzalez, the first man in the United States convicted of attempted murder for having unprotected sex while carrying the AIDS virus, died Friday of complications from the disease. He was 33.

A jury convicted Mr. Gonzalez of attempted murder in 1992 after deciding he tried to use AIDS as a weapon against a 17-year-old girl. Earlier this year, she had still not tested positive for the virus.

Prosecutors said Mr. Gonzalez knew he was infected as early as 1988 and deliberately tried to infect the girl because he was angry and wanted to make others suffer. 8-23-96-AP

Douglas Robert Griggs

March 30, 1950 - Dec. 23, 1996

Doug will be remembered for his kind and gentle soul. Besides a special place in his heart for animals, he was a man with an unwavering love and affection for both family and friends. We who were privileged to have shared in his life are well aware that he was an exceptional human being who made our lives richer for having known and loved him.

Doug is survived by his friend and life partner, Mike Hoover of San Francisco; his mother, Mrs. Laureta Griggs Klepinger of Cape Coral, Fla.; his sister, Suzanne McKinney; her husband, Lynn Johnson, both of Springboro, Ohio; and his many loving friends. The world is surely a poorer place for his absence.

Albert Gasdor

Albert J. Gasdor, 68, who once worked as a stenographer for President John F. Kennedy, died of coronary artery disease at D.C.'s George Washington University Hospital on Tuesday, August 20, 1996, according to his employer, Stephen Miller of D.C.

Gasdor was born Jan. 28, 1928, in Philadelphia, Pa. After serving as a corporal in the U.S. Army, Gasdor began his career as a court reporter on Capitol Hill in 1950. He worked for a number of court reporting companies, where he covered White House press conferences, congressional committee hearings, presidential conventions, and traveled as a stenographer with President John F. Kennedy before he opened his own company, Gasdor Reporting Company, in the late 1970s. He closed the business in 1982 and took a job with D.C.'s Miller Reporting Company. He was employed there at the time of his death.

Gasdor coauthored Computer Compatible Machine Shorthand, a textbook on electronic stenography. He also worked as a consultant with Stentran, a northern Virginia company that is now defunct, to develop digital systems for court reporters years before computers were available. He was a frequent guest at stenotype schools, where he related his experiences as a court reporter in the nation's capital and encouraged young people to pursue careers as court reporters. He was a member of the National Court Reporters Association and the Associated Stenotypists of America.

Gasdor was also a music lover and an accomplished pianist and organist. At night, he traded in the metal keys of a stenotype machine for the ebony and ivory of grand pianos at upscale Washington restaurants, where he entertained diners throughout the 1950s.

In addition to Miller, Gasdor is survived by his friends and fellow employees at Miller Reporting Company.

His remains were cremated and will be interred at a graveside service to be held Saturday, Sept. 21, at 11:30 a.m., at Addison Parish, Seat Pleasant, Md.

Mark Gregory

Mark Wayne Gregory, 38, a one-time resident of Washington, D.C., died Friday, September 6, 1996, of AIDS-related complications at the University of North Carolina Hospital in Chapel Hill, according to his lover, Richard M. Addy of Durham, N.C. He was born Oct., 15, 1957, in Fayetteville, N.C. He graduated from East Rowan (N.C.) High School and attended Catawba College in Salisbury, N.C. After serving in the U.S. Air Force for four years, Gregory was discharged for being Gay, said his friend, Andrew Coile of Springfield, Va. He moved to Washington, D.C. in the late 1970s, where he attended Northern Virginia Community College.

He took a job at the Department of Justice as a clerk-typist. According to a Washington Post article, he was fired in 1988 because his participation in a National Institutes of Health AIDS treatment program resulted in frequent absences from work.

"The only reason they fired me is because I'm sick and because I have AIDS," he told the Post in 1988.

He appealed his dismissal and testified before the House Subcommittee on Civil Service, then chaired by Rep. Patricia Schroeder (D-Colo). Gregory and his attorney, William Bransford, eventually reached an out-of-court settlement with the Justice Department, Coile said.

Before moving to North Carolina in 1994, he worked as a manager of Crown Books at the Rockville and Germantown locations in Maryland.

Gregory was involved with community theater as both a performer and theater technician for more than 20 years. As an actor, he appeared as Johnny Casino in the Fairlington Players (Arlington, Va.) production of Grease; Johnny Brown in The Arlington Players production of The Unsinkable Molly Brown and A Little Night Music; and Pap in the Harlequin Dinner Theater (Rockville, Md.) production of Big River. Gregory was also a member of three singing ensembles: The Sunday Review, an Alexandria, Va. singing group he founded in 1988; Celebration, ensemble singers of Old Town, Alexandria; and DECO, a Gay cabaret group, which performed at several D.C. Gay nightclubs, according to his friend Gary Regan of Arlington.

In addition to Addy, Coile, and Regan, Gregory is survived by several family members in Salisbury, N.C.: his parents, Fred and June; a brother, Benny; a grandmother, Mildred Myers; nephews, Brandon and Nicholas; as well as many friends throughout the D.C. metropolitan area.

His remains were cremated. A portion of the ashes will be interred in Salisbury, and the remainder will be distributed over the grave of his former partner, Larry Edwards Jr., who died in 1988.

James A Weir-Galloway

James A. Weir-Galloway, a longtime resident of Mission Hill and Jamaica Plain, died in Lakeville on June 21 at age 42.

His fierce zest for life, love of travel, communication skills and engaging nature leaves his loved ones at a great loss.

A memorial service is planned for Saturday, June 27, at 11 a.m. at the Norton Memorial Funeral Home. In lieu of flowers, please send contributions to Boston's AIDS Action Committee, 131 Clarendon St., Boston, MA 02116.

John Guzauskas

John Stanley Guzauskas Jr., 50, died of AIDS-related complications at his home in Washington, D.C., on Thursday, April 11, 1996, according to Michael Scott, his partner of 11 years, and Wallis McClain, his close friend of nearly 20 years. Both resided with Guzauskas.

Guzauskas was born in Aurora, Ill., on Dec. 1, 1945, and graduated from Marmion Military Academy there in 1963. He graduated from Notre Dame University in 1967, and served in the Peace Corps for two years in Monrovia, Liberia, McClain said.

Guzauskas later moved to D.C., where he was a member of the Discalced Carmelite Friars from 1971 until 1975. In 1980, Guzauskas received a master's degree in social work from Catholic University and worked as a clinical social worker for the Mount Vernon Community Mental Health Association in Fairfax County from 1980 until his retirement in August 1995, McClain said.

Guzauskas also started a private practice serving the D.C. Gay community.

He studied piano and dance, appeared in a Washington Lyric Opera production in 1978, and had minor roles in performances at the Kennedy Center, said McClain. Guzauskas was also a parishioner of St. Thomas Episcopal Church in D.C. and enjoyed traveling, fine dining, movies, and listening to classical music.

"He particularly loved his house in D.C., where the three of us lived together as a family," Scott said.

In addition to Scott and McClain, Guzauskas is also survived by his mother, Helen Hansisak Guzauskas of Aurora, Ill.; his "devoted" cat "Ms" Davis; and many friends and relatives throughout the United States.

Lenny Gray

Linwood Gray, 40, a onetime resident of Arlington, Virginia, and a disc jockey at D.C. Gay dance clubs, died Tuesday, August 27, 1996, of AIDS-related complications at the Medical College of Virginia in Richmond, according to his friend Joey Oldaker of Arlington.

Gray was born April 9, 1956, in Richmond. As a young adult, he moved to Arlington and began working as a DJ at local Gay dance clubs, including Morgans and Exile, both now defunct.

A collector of dance music and a master remixer, Gray also owned and operated Disco-Tech Remix Service, a service which remixed top-40 songs for other DJs.

After he moved back to Richmond in 1993, Gray regularly drove to D.C. to serve as DJ at Badlands, a Gay dance club in Northwest D.C.

In addition to collecting music, he enjoyed watching movies, playing bingo, and spending time with his friends and his cat, Effie.

"[He] will be remembered by many for his wonderful work as a DJ in the D.C. metro area Gay bars. His smile and sense of humor will go on living in the hearts of many," Oldaker said.

In addition to Oldaker, Gray is survived by his stepmother and three brothers, all of Richmond.

His remains were cremated and buried Aug. 30 in Richmond's Riverview Cemetery.

A memorial service will be held Monday, Sept. 9, at 7 p.m., 3220 South 12th St., in Arlington. For more information, call (703) 979-0123.
