

Presented by Mary Geil To Jacob Geil Virginia

A large, intricate geometric drawing of a double-lined eight-pointed star (an octagram). The star is filled with various handwritten phrases in cursive, such as "I will say though I will never to be a slave", "Bereaved of heart", "The has undesigned stole my heart away", and "I have never to much since I have seen". Interspersed within the star's points are small, hand-drawn illustrations of flowers and leaves, including a red rose, yellow daisies, and purple and yellow buds. The star is set on a cream-colored background with faint grid lines. The overall style is that of an early 19th-century decorative manuscript.

Remember me when far away
Remember me the parting day
Remember me when love is sweet
Remember me till next we meet

Written by Mary Geil to Jacob Geil