Teacher Birdie Bowman loved third grade

Birdie Bowman

Birdie Knowles Bowman taught school for many decades, and, at 81, says, "I still love doing work for those in need."

She is in her sixth year working at Memorial Hospital. She handles mail in the business office, and escorts patients and visitors.

Bowman graduated from high school at Cameron in 1930, and from junior college at Cameron in 1935. She attended Southwestern at Weatherford, and later attended Central State University.

She was married to the late Eugene

Bowman, a Lawton builder, and she is the mother of two stepdaughters.

She taught five years in rural schools, including two years at Ash Grove. For 30 years she taught mainly third grade students in Lawton schools. She taught five years at Flower Mound, seven years at Howell. Then Roosevelt needed a third grade teacher, and she went intending to stay one year and stayed 17. She taught five years at Sullivan Village.

"I loved the third grade more every time," she said. "Teaching was the greatest thing I ever had."

Portillo's careers exceed childhood dreams

Retired Marine Lt. Col. Raymond C. Portillo, 73, of Irving, Texas was born in Walters. When he was enrolled at Fort Sill Indian School during his elementary years, he attended a football game between Cameron Junior College and the Fort Sill Indians (the highest grade at the Indian school then was the ninth.)

"Never did I dream I would someday attend and play football at Cameron," he said.

Neither did he dream that he would lead Marines storming the Okinawa beaches in World War II, or that after a career as a Marine he would have another career with the Texas Rehabilitation Commission.

Portillo, five-eighths Comanche Indian, was born Nov. 17, 1917. After Fort Sill Indian School he attended high school at the American Indian Institute, Wichita, Kan. from 1932 to 1934. He graduated from Alma High School and was valedictorian of his class in 1936.

He attended Cameron Junior College in 1936 through 1938. He was all-state junior college quarterback both years. He also played basketball and track, and his Cameron relay team set a new record in the 880-yard relay at the Kansas Relays in 1937. Other members of the team were Speck Sanders, Gene Hancock and Jess Ferrell. His football teammates, Sanders and Riley Matheson, both were later outstanding back and lineman in the national professional football league. The Cameron coach was the late Julius "Ju" Johnston.

Portillo was president of the sophomore class and made the dean's honor roll at Cameron, and continued winning athletic and scholastic honors when he attended Oklahoma State University. He taught and coached one semester at Pond Creek, Okla. then joined the Marine Corps in 1941.

During World War II he served in the South Pacific, fighting at Guadalcanal and elsewhere. He was executive officer of the 2nd Battalion, 1st Regiment, and led the first of the Marines onto the beach at Okinawa. He was awarded the Bronze Star for the Okinawan campaign.

He retired from the Marines in 1961. He was a Texas state parole officer in Dallas for five years, then transferred to the Texas Rehabilitation Commission where he worked 16 years before retiring in 1982.

In 1947 he and Lucille Stark of Pennsylvania were married. They have six children. Bruce was an all-Southwest Conference linebacker at Southern Methodist University. Randy is a field representative for industrial rubber products and lives in Richardson, Texas. Their twin daughters are Denise, a registered nurse in California; and Raynee, of Honolulu, a 20-year flight attendant with American Airlines. Nanette is a cosmetician and lives in Richardson, Texas. Dave is in USMC flight training at Pensacola, Fla. and recently soloed.

Colleagues heap honors on Coach Bill Whiteley

Coach Bill Whiteley

Bill Whiteley, athletic coordinator at Eisenhower High School, graduated from Cameron in 1977, where he majored in physical education. His wife, Kim, also attended Cameron from 1978 to 1981. His father, Lou Whiteley, was employed at CU from 1972 to 1985 as director of housing, and in 1986 assistant director of financial assistance. Bill Whiteley was born in 1954 at Ringling, and graduated from Lawton High School. After graduating from Cameron he was a teacher and coach with the Norman public schools in 1977.

He has been a teacher and assistant football coach and boys head track coach at Eisenhower since 1978. He has been the athletic coordinator since 1984. His achievements include the Oklahoma Secondary Schools Activities Award in 1980, 1984, 1985, 1986, 1990 and 1991. He was Oklahoma Coaches Association coach of the year in 1986, region track coach of the year in 1986, and Oklahoma Track Coaches Association coach of the year in 1991. He and his wife are the parents of a son, Ryan, age 7.

ROTC honors desert vets

Twelve Cameron ROTC cadets called to active duty during Desert Storm were honored during the Cameron ROTC fall awards ceremony. The vets received letters of commendation from Maj. Gen. Wallace C. Arnold, commanding general of Cadet Command.

Also recognized at the fall ROTC awards ceremony were summer camp graduates, scholarship winners and cadets who completed summer airborne, air assault and master fitness training.

The Cameron contingent of 16 cadets took first place among five competing Oklahoma universities at the ROTC advanced camp at Ft. Lewis, Wash. last summer. CU outdistanced the University of Oklahoma, Oklahoma State, East Central State and the University of Central Oklahoma.

CU rated second at the camp among all schools in the Oklahoma/Arkansas/Kansas brigade. Competition included rifle marksmanship, land navigation, physical training, tactics, and overall leadership ability.

English version of French musical highlights Cameron's Year of the Renaissance

This April 23, and continuing through May 2, 1992, Cameron University will celebrate in a unique way the Quincentenary of Christopher Columbus' historical voyage. The School of Fine Arts has been busily preparing for this event for over a year, and has launched a project of such magnitude that the entire country is talking about it!

The event is the smashing new musical, Christopher Columbus, a Parisian sensation which has garnered for its youthful composer-librettist team the distinguished Moliere Prize for the best French musical of 1991. How does this affect Cameron University? Fine Arts Dean Jack Bowman, in a discussion of the new work with composer Louis Dunoyer de Segonzac, wished aloud for the opportunity of a production of this calibre for our school. Off the dock, so to speak, was the project, as Cameron personnel began the challenging task of translating the French text and setting the new English words into the rhythmically challenging music. The combo accompaniment was re-orchestrated for full chamber orchestra, the technical requirements were researched, and negotiations with the artistic team were underway. Handwritten manuscript is now a computer generated score. Music and drama students are already vying for a place in the cast. The composer Louis Dunoyer and writer Jean-Marie Lecoq will join us at Cameron for the gala opening and meet with community patrons, students and faculty. And so, the christening of the world premier of the English language version of Christopher Columbus is underway at Cameron University.

About the voyage...

The story of Christopher Columbus' discovery of America becomes a musical fantasy, a tale told through music richly colored with sounds of the middle ages, flavored with exotic flamenco dance rhythms. Bright colors and rich textures enhance the stunning costumes of the Gypsies, the court of Ferdinand and Isabella, and Indians of the new world. Historical fact is so neatly woven into visual spectacle and dream sequence fantasy that the show transports the audience to another time and place.

The play is set in 1492 at the time of the exodus of the Jews from Spain. A clan of Gypsies, chased from Seville, makes camp in the hills. A stranger, in search of a monastery, stumbles into the camp, and before the men can rob him, the fortune teller persuades them to let her read his palm. She finds his hand completely blank, void of any destiny. Frightened by the ill omen, the Gypsies struggle to kill the stranger. Estrella, the fortune-teller, sights a dove flying overhead, which she reads as a sign of his destiny. She then vows to trace for him a fortune and guide him to greatness.

The next scene finds the stranger, Christopher Columbus (Colombe means "dove" in French), transported to the court of Ferdinand and Isabella. The strange court seems familiar—the King, Queen and courtiers are none other than the Gypsies themselves! Christopher proposes his new plan of travel to the Indies, entering into great debate with the philosophers and scientists. A particularly funny musical number evolves from attempts to prove the earth is round (Tango of the Egg).

In hopes of becoming very rich, the King grants Columbus permission to make the voyage, and he embarks on his journey with a crew of (Gypsy) sailors. After a frightening storm, the caravel is badly damaged. Estrella appears in an effort to change the destiny of the mission. We have a new awareness of the magic involved in this chain of events as Estrella continues to contrive Columbus' destiny. A flock of doves leads the sailors to land.

Upon his return to Spain, Columbus presents the king with plants and tobacco. Only interested in gold, the king speaks through an interpreter to the Indian chiefs who have returned with Columbus. Mistaken meanings result in a hilarious interplay of miscommunication. Meanwhile, back in the Gypsy camp, Estrella sees dangers which lurk ahead for Columbus. She realizes that his destiny is no longer in her hands.

A parody of the Inquisition follows, then Columbus appears imprisoned and in chains! He is accused of being a Jew. A cry of "Columbus" rings out as the Gypsies and Estrella come to break the spell, which only lasted one night. Columbus is freed, and the poet reads from the scroll of the future which announces the expulsion of the Gypsies from Spain in 1499. Having heard this prophesy, the Gypsies disappear into the dark hills.

Other voyages...

The Bahamas Quincentennial Commission has issued an invitation for project proposals to implement their 1992 celebration. (Columbus' first landfall was in what is now the Bahamas on the island of San Salvador.) In conjunction with our proposal to mount the production in Nassau, a Bahamian student, Bryan Thompson, is studying music and theatre at Cameron University this year and will be cast in our April production. In addition, several major universities across the country will be renting our sets, costumes and translation for their own productions of Christopher Columbus.

1992, the Quincentenary of Columbus' discovery, is an important year for the world, our nation and Cameron University. Don't miss the exciting world premier of the English version of Christopher Columbus, right here in Lawton. Bring your family and friends to celebrate with us!

President Davis hosts Renaissance opening

President Don Davis on Friday, Sept. 20 hosted a grand opening of Cameron's Year of the Renaissance.

The Boston Renaissance Ensemble made an appearance, and the Cameron Marching Band played during the opening at the University Theater.

Music of the 15th and 16th centuries was performed by the ensemble during the week. The ensemble also served as accompanists for classes taught by Charles Garth, president of the Historical Dance Foundation and artistic director for the Court

Dance Co. of New York.

The ensemble opened a year-long celebration that will draw speakers and scholars from across the world. Academic disciplines will emphasize both the historic renaissance and the resurgence of learning as society prepares for the new century.

An academic conference April 23-25, 1992, will include six international scholars as keynote speakers.

They are Gene Brucker, Ph.D., Department of History, University of California - Berkeley; David Buisseret, Ph.D., the Newberry Library, Chicago; Janet Fireman, Ph.D., Chief Curator of History, Natural History Museum of Los Angeles County; Werner Gundersheimer, Ph.D., Folger Shakespeare Library, Washington, D.C.; Arthur L. Loeb, Ph.D., Department of Visual and Environmental Studies, Harvard University; and John R. Woodhouse, D.Litt., Magdalen College, University of Oxford.

In April, the American premiere of the French musical comedy, "Christopher Columbus," will highlight the Renaissance year.

KCCU seeks 200 new members

KCCU is kicking off its fall membership drive during October with a goal of adding 200 members. KCCU needs the additional members to help provide the financial base necessary to purchase the National Public Radio programming and other KCCU programming.

KCCU is a member supported public radio station and needs to raise $50,000 per year to purchase programming. Cameron University provides the remaining funds for the station's operation.

Last year KCCU received $14,000 from individual members. Underwriting provided $14,000 for station operations. Foundation support, which is critical to the operation of the station, provided $18,000 worth of financial support.

Mark Norman, director of KCCU, said:

"KCCU'S audience has doubled in the last year according to Arbitron. We hope these additional listeners will consider supporting the station financially. If they do, we should be able to reach our goal of $50,000."

As a "thank you" to current members and to welcome new members, KCCU is offering several premiums during the October membership drive. The premiums consist of items such as cups, coffee mugs, insulated mugs, farmers almanac and t-shirts. The prizes awarded are based on the amount of the individual's donation, and category. KCCU conducts two membership drives each year, in October and April. Some members elect to give once a year. Others give twice a year. Some KCCU listeners give on a monthly basis.

KCCU will contact each member twice a year with a personal letter. KCCU will mail each member a program guide/newsletter four times each year. To receive membership information call the station at 581-2474.

Mark Norman displays KCCU'S membership premiums

CU's radio station audience doubles

KCCU-FM, Cameron University public radio station, has increased its number of listeners 42 percent, according to Arbitron ratings.

The number of KCCU listeners increased from 6,000 to 8,500 in the total survey area. In the Comanche County metro area, KCCU rated a cumulative audience of 6,500, raising its percentage of listeners from 4.4 in the spring of 1990 to 6.8 in 1991. In each 15-minute time period from 6 a.m. to midnight, KCCU listeners increased from 300 to 600, twice the number of the average quarter hour in 1990.

In Comanche county alone, where 6.8 of all radio listeners were tuned to KCCU, the average time spent listening to the CU station increased from six hours per week to 8.9 in the metro area. KCCU earned a greater share of its market audience than did two major public radio stations in the Oklahoma City area. KCSC, Edmond, rated a 3.9 percent share, and KGOU, Norman, rated a 2.6 percent share.

Other Arbitron results showed:

- KCCU's largest audience share is with adults ages 35 to 64.
- In the market area, a total of 12 percent of listeners between ages 35 to 64 are tuned to KCCU.
- A total of 11.2 percent of all adults 35 years or older listen to KCCU.
- A total of 9.8 percent of all adults 50 years or older listen to KCCU.
- In the 25-to-54 year age group, KCCU drew a 9.4 percent listener rating.
- KCCU had 8.5 percent of all female listeners 18 years old or older.

All figures represent the cumulative audience for KCCU Monday through Sunday, 6 a.m. to midnight.

1991-92 ALL SPORTS PROSPECTUS

FOOTBALL

Second-year coach Frank Crosson will have his team ready to rebound from last fall's 2-8 season. Fourteen returning starters and a new one-back offense should make for an exciting season. Among Crosson's returnees are academic all-conference picks Marty Malone and Daniel Henry, and Tommie Taylor, an honorable mention pick on last fall's Coaches all-LSC team. We are proud to welcome one full-time and three part-time coaches to our staff. Greg Porter, former graduate assistant at Southwest Texas State, has been hired full-time to oversee the offensive line. The part-time staff includes Mitch Elspeger, Charles Betts, and Herman Stevenson.

VOLLEYBALL

Second-year coach Kim Vinson has all six starters returning along with the luxury of seeing her first full year of recruiting come to its fruition. Among the returning starters from last year's 8-20 team are four players who will earn their fourth letter, Amy Dreier, Stacey Fogel, Gretchen Houston and Lisa Follet are pictured on the volleyball pocket schedule. Fogel was a second-team all-LSC pick last fall and Dreier was a unanimous choice on the LSC all-academic team. The conference schedule has returned to a round-robin format and the Lady Aggies should be a contender for the LSC title.

WOMEN'S BASKETBALL

Third-year coach Laina McDonald had what was by far her best recruiting season, which included the signing of Sterling all-stater Nancy Jacobi and Western Oklahoma Junior College transfer Pat Thomas. Other signees include transfers Dutchess Brown, Shenna Anderson, Trish Lenzer and Lauri Harmon, and freshman Sara Gage. The departure of West Texas State from the Lone Star Conference should open up the league race with Cameron as a legitimate contender. Phoebe Dunn, last season's Lone Star Conference Player of the Year, will be McDonald's student assistant coach.

MEN'S BASKETBALL

Third-year coach Jerry Stone and assistant Aubrey Green have been quietly scouting top-notch talent and should see an improvement even from last season's club, which finished 19-10 and was the only team in the conference to win a playoff game on the road. Eric Wiley, Sean Thomas and Dexter Bass return and will be complimented by signees such as Guthrie High School standout Russell Wakefield and Southwestern transfer Ronald Leggins, among others. Like the women's conference race, the LSC men's title will be up for grabs with the Aggies very much in the picture.

GOLF

With established returning players and talented newcomers, Jerry Hrniciar's golf team should remain right where it has been for the last decade -- in the national spotlight. Replacing all-district performer Tim Lawson will be difficult, but Mike O'Connell, Dustin Wigington and Tres Newton all return with national tournament experience. The newcomers include Lawton MacArthur product Ross Parmley and transfers Brad Stephens and David Stewart. After yielding to a red-hot Abilene Christian team at the LSC tournament last year, the Aggies will be ready to reclaim the title they had either won outright or shared the two previous seasons.

SOFTBALL

After a see-saw 8-22-1 season that included an upset win over the University of Oklahoma last year, Kim Vinson and Peggy Simons will have a young but well-armed and talented team in the spring. Vinson signed seven new players over the summer, including four pitchers, a position that tends to dominate softball games. Thanks to generous donations and a lot of hard work, the softball facility has undergone major renovations which will be a great aid in future recruiting. Senior three-year letterwinner Jeanne Phipps will be a returnee to watch and the newcomers include pitchers Amanda Herndon, Sheryl Panek, Jennifer McGowen and Samantha Sundberg.

TENNIS

Veteran coach Joe Jones was rightfully named the Lone Star Conference Coach of the Year after leading his young team to a 14-3 record and a runner-up LSC finish to nationally-ranked Abilene Christian. Jones' No. 1 singles player, freshman Susan Shannon, qualified for the national tournament and fellow freshman Jennifer Olivares won the LSC title at No. 5 singles. Shannon's appearance at the NCAA tournament should pay dividends as the talented Lady Aggies are on the brink of receiving the national recognition they deserve. Jones' only loss was a big one - honors student Sarah Gant - but he has signed prep standouts Laura Hergenrether and Lisa Coomer to fill her shoes.

BASEBALL

Ron Ihler's teams have claimed mythical Lone Star Conference baseball titles for the last two seasons. But his 1992 squad will have a more tangible goal. With Eastern New Mexico joining Cameron, Central Oklahoma and Abilene Christian as the fourth (the minimum to declare a championship) LSC school to play baseball, the Aggies have their sights on the first-ever official LSC title. There are holes to fill in the pitching staff, such as the one left by 10-game winner and Pittsburgh Pirates free-agent signee Jason Christiansen. Returnees include all-region picks Diego Hernandez and Chris DeClerck.

Blind alumna to help others

Inez Kay Love

By Kelly Wray

"Life is wonderful if you perceive it that way."

So says Inez Kay Love, a 44-year-old blind alumna of Cameron University. Now she is trying to help others perceive life as wonderful.

Love, who graduated with a bachelors of science in psychology last May, is working towards a masters of social work at the University of Oklahoma in preparation for a career in counseling. She has the help of her family and a new seeing eye dog named Happy. She hopes to help other disabled individuals and their families make smoother adjustments to the new lifestyle they must assume.

"I'm not a 20-year-old kid with stars in my eyes, thinking I can change everything," Love said. "I'm old enough to know I can't change everything, but if I can help one person, it is worth it."

Families often have a hard time adjusting to the dependence of a disabled member. Family members may feel guilty about the disability. But many times, people have trouble releasing guilt, Love said. Therefore, they release anger, making the disabled member a target for bitter anger.

The biggest adjustment families have to face is losing the disabled member's contribution, having to help the disabled perform tasks he could normally perform on his own. Love's children often have to help her choose the correct colored clothing, something "mother" used to do on her own.

"In a sense, when one family member becomes disabled, the whole family becomes disabled," Love said. "The whole family system and structure changes, and there is a lot of stress during the adjustment period.

"When I could see, I could drive and take my children places. Then, when I lost my eyesight, things I had taken for granted I could no longer do."

Love, a diabetic, began having trouble with her eyesight in 1982. By November of 1983, she was declared legally blind from diabetes. At that time, she could still do some reading and see colors.

But one morning during February of 1989, while sitting in Cameron Student Support Services offices, Love noticed that objects suddenly appeared fuzzy and dark. She realized she was having a retina hemorrhage, her second. The diagnosis, doctors told her, was that her vision would continued to worsen. By the end of last spring, Love's sight had deteriorated to the point that she would sometimes get lost on campus.

At Cameron Love was able to study by listening to cassette tapes and tutors who read chapters to her. Love often recorded professors' lectures. Her textbooks were available on tape. Love typed papers on a home-computer, and her husband, Tom, proofread them.

Love, mother of three children ages 15 to 22, graduated from college the same year her son, Joe B. Love, graduated from high school. Love capped her college career with a 3.73 grade average. She was selected for Cameron's Who's Who list in 1991, along with being named one of the university's top 20 students. She was also named to Pinnacle, the university's top 10 list of nontraditional students.

"Cameron allowed me to fulfill a dream I had all my life," Love said. "I had always wanted a college education. It gave me self-esteem. When I worked hard, I got a good grade. I found it to be the most challenging thing I had ever done."

Reclaim your placement files

Alumni who established open placement files prior to 1988 should reclaim them by Dec. 1 if they wish to keep them, said Suzanne Aplin, Cameron University director of placement and testing. In compliance with directives by the Archives and Records Commission, placement files will be maintained up to five years and then destroyed, she said.

Alumni are being afforded an opportunity to reclaim the files since some may contain items of sentimental value such as letters of recommendation, Aplin said.

The Placement Office has approximately 4,500 files in storage spanning a period of more than 20 years. Cameron placement files are categorized as active for a period of one year from initiation of the file and may be extended as active upon written request. Files will be held as inactive for up to five years. Alumni may re-establish their files at any time.

To reclaim your file, contact the Placement Office by Dec. 1, 1991. The office is located in Room 332 North Shepler, telephone 581-2206.

Tiny Blanche Beavers was Cameron giant

Blanche Beavers: "Teaching is its own reward."

By Paul McClung

"Teaching is one of the noblest professions there is," said Blanche Beavers.

She lived the noble profession 39 years, including 32 years at Cameron, six years at Ryan High School, and one year at Lawton High School.

She taught at Cameron from 1943 until 1975, when she retired and returned to her home town of Ryan to care for her mother. She weighs 90 pounds and stands five feet tall. She was so short she sometimes had to ask a student to erase the blackboard for her.

But her size did not deter Miss Beavers from becoming a giant of the Cameron business department.

She was never too busy to talk with students. She loves bright colors and jewelry and her colorful dress became one of her trademarks as a teacher. Her students said her personality made her classroom even brighter.

She was chairman of the Cameron business department from 1948 to 1968.

She organized contests that were forerunners of the giant high school academic contests conducted today.

Whenever she discovered a bright high school student, she would write a letter inviting him or her to attend Cameron. She worked to expand the curriculum, and the number of students mushroomed after World War II.

She was one of the first two teachers in the state to participate in a business teachers work experience project sponsored by the University of Oklahoma. She worked at Home State Life, learning and practicing workplace business methods, then returned to CU to pass information on to her students.

She cultivated a close relationship between the business department and the business community, encouraging students to work part-time for businesses. Each year she sent an evaluation sheet to supervisors to check the students' performance.

The late Lloyd Bendure was a staunch supporter of the students.

"For many years, he was the only CPA in Lawton," Beavers said. "He'd invite our students to his office for an evening of fun and learning. His entire staff would be present. We shared similar experiences with other professionals."

Beavers earned a B.S. degree from Oklahoma College for Women and an M. Com. Ed degree from the University of Oklahoma. She did graduate work from the University of Texas, Texas Tech University, and the University of Mississippi.

In 1963 she was named Cameron University Teacher of the Year. She received one of the nine Oklahoma Outstanding Business Educator Awards in 1975. In 1982 she received the Cameron University Distinguished Alumni Award.

The first Beavers Business Award, named in her honor, was presented to the top undergraduate business administration student in May, 1991.

She taught here during the regimes of five Cameron presidents. Business communications and report writing were among the subjects she most liked to teach.

"I just love the association with the teachers and the students -- and most of all, the reward -- seeing your students accomplish their goals" she said.

"Teaching is its own reward."

Two alums need transplants

Funds are being raised for bone marrow transplants needed by two CU alumni.

Approximately $25,000 of $96,000 needed has been raised for Rhonda Smith Maas, 1979 grad and a prize winning elementary teacher and mother of three in O'Neill, Neb.

She is battling an aggressive cancer and the transplant is not covered by her insurance policy. Donations are being collected in the Rhonda Maas (Smith) Fund, First National Bank, Elm Creek, Neb., 68836.

Across the country, former CU football player and 1986 grad Andy Warren of Danville, Va. is battling leukemia. The Warren fund for a transplant has raised about $60,000 of $100,000 needed. Donations can be made to the Andy Warren Fund at Lawton Teachers Credit Union.

His former teammate at Cameron, John Brandes, special teams leader with the Washington Redskins, said:

"Andy's always been a fighter. He's going to beat this thing."
