Benson challenges graduates to serve

Spirits were high in spite of cloudy skies and rain as some 850 degrees, including masters, bachelors, and associate degrees, were conferred on May 6. Due to the weather, the commencement exercise was moved from the traditional outdoor event at Cameron Stadium to inside the Great Plains Coliseum. To accommodate the crowd, the graduates were divided into two groups for a morning and afternoon ceremony.

Representative Loyd Benson, Cameron alumnus and 1995 Cameron commencement speaker, told graduates that life is meaningless without service to your fellow man. He challenged them to give no less than their very best. He said we can't all be presidents, doctors or nobel prize winners, but we are all citizens and human beings.

"We - each of us - have an obligation, a duty, a commitment to one another. We are not islands. We do not stand alone. We are all part of a larger society. As part of that larger society, each of us has certain common responsibilities and challenges. We all have an obligation to make our little corner of the world a little better than when we found it," he said.

Benson has been majority leader of the Oklahoma House of Representatives for five years and a state representative since 1984. After receiving an associate degree from Cameron in 1960, he received a bachelor of arts in government and economics and a juris doctorate degree from the University of Oklahoma. He served in the Army as a captain, and upon his release in 1967, he joined Howard McBee in Frederick in the practice of law. He received Cameron's Distinguished Service Award in 1993 and the Cameron University Alumni Association's Distinguished Alumni Award in 1986.

State Representative Loyd Benson

"Life is meaningless without service to your fellow man," said Loyd Benson

He said the roots planted at Cameron have been important to the direction of his life and he considered it an honor to be asked to deliver the commencement address. He decided to pursue a legal career while attending Cameron and had his first contact with politics as president of the Student Senate.

President Don Davis presented silver Revere bowls to two retiring Cameron professors: Dr. Bob Vowell, dean of the school of science, math and technology and Bennie B. Doane, assistant professor of agriculture.

$600,000 pledged to Sciences Complex

Pledges and funds received for sponsorship of the various facilities to be included in the new Sciences Complex now total over $600,000. Dr. Don Sullivan, Cameron's vice president for development said, "We are excited about the positive response we have received to help furnish and equip the new Sciences Complex. There is still a need for additional funds, and friends of Cameron University have the opportunity to make a contribution toward the new Sciences Complex and be honored in a lasting way."

Major donors for the project and the amounts they are contributing, as of June 20, 1995, are: Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company, $200,000; McCasland Foundation, $150,000; Sarkeys Foundation, $150,000; Phillips Petroleum Company, $60,000 of in-kind contributed equipment; Public Services Company of Oklahoma, $36,000; Arkansas Louisiana Gas Company, $21,000; and Dr. R. Mark Russell, $15,000.

Donors' names will be placed on permanent plaques in the facility they are sponsoring. A plaque in the atrium area will recognize all sponsors. A list of donors to date is below.

Friends of Cameron Percussion formed

Cameron University Foundation, Inc. has announced the donation of a vibraphone to Cameron University music students by the recently formed support group, Friends of Cameron Percussion.

Created this spring under the umbrella of Cameron University Foundation, Inc., the group initiated its activities with a gala reception following the Cameron University percussion ensemble concert in March. With additional donations from pledge cards, a garage sale's receipts, and designated contributions through the President's Partners program, funding was made possible to purchase a major new percussion instrument, a Musser Pro-Vibe, for use by Cameron University percussion students.

Members of the Friends of Cameron Percussion steering committee who contributed their time and expertise to this combined effort include Dr. Thomas Leckman, Diane Gaskins, Dr. Pamela Murari, Max Sasseen, Carolyn Anne Love, Gay Bartley, Doris Lambert, and Steve Lile. Over 48 individuals and businesses contributed to the fund to make this first project a reality. This is the initial contribution of an ongoing effort by the group whose mission is to assist percussion studies at Cameron University through financial assistance toward student scholarships, new instrument purchases, percussion ensemble touring, and attendance at percussion recitals.

For further information on Friends of Cameron Percussion, contact Jim Lambert, Department of Music, Cameron University, Lawton, Oklahoma 73505, or call 405-581-2807.

Broadcast students win honors

Cameron University broadcast students brought home 11 awards for outstanding achievement in student broadcasting at the annual meeting of the Oklahoma Association of Broadcasters. The awards were presented by both the OAB and the Oklahoma Broadcast Education Association.

Out of 17 participating schools, this was the third year in a row that Cameron has placed second highest among Oklahoma institutions offering broadcasting. In addition to the awards, Steve Adams, an assistant professor at Cameron, was elected vice president of the OBEA for the coming year.

Those receiving awards include:

Myron Abernathy who won the OAB's Radio Student of the Year Award;

Andy Wallace, first place, radio feature news story;

Rich Dey, first place, radio DJ aircheck:

Danell Petrovia, first place, radio public affairs program;

Richard Curtis, first place, radio promotion;

Randy Brazzell, first place, TV promotion; and second place, corporate/instructional video;

Milton Paddlety, second place, TV promotion; and second place, TV commercial/PSA;

Shane Kelly, third place, radio sports coverage;

Deshawn Weekly, third place, TV public affairs program.

Stanley fulfills dream through writing

Dr. George Edward Stanley, chairman of the department of languages and communications at Cameron, always wanted to be a spy, but he has settled for writing about them... for both young people and adults. Stanley had good training for espionage work, though, majoring in foreign languages in college and living and studying all over Europe and Africa.

It was while he was in Chad, in central Africa, that Stanley began writing fiction. The only diversion he found available in that nation's capital city of N'Djamena was listening to the B.B.C. on his short wave radio. That led to his writing radio plays for World Service Short Story. Three of his plays were eventually produced. After returning to the United States, Stanley continued to write and publish adult stories, all of which were set in Africa.

When he married, George gained two brothers-in-law, who were members of the Detroit Police Department. As a result, he had access to sources for learning about how police use science to solve crimes. It was during this time that Stanley wrote his first children's short story, "The Saliva Solution," based on the solving of an actual crime. Child Life Mystery and Science-Fiction Magazine bought it and asked him to do a series. Over the next several years, Stanley wrote several series for Child Life, Jack and Jill, and other magazines in this field.

After writing and publishing over 200 short stories and articles, Stanley turned to writing books. He has written more than 30 books for young people and one book on writing, Writing Short Stories for

Dr. George Edward Stanley

Young People, published by Writer's Digest Books.

With the February, 1995, publication of "Rats in the Attic" (Avon/Flare), a collection of short stories for teenagers, Stanley has become one of the nations top horror writers. "Happy Deathday to You," another collection of short stories, will be published in September, 1995. Stanley has also helped develop Avon's "Spinetinglers," a horror series for middle-graders, written under the pseudonym M.T. Coffin. He will have three M.T. Coffin titles out in 1995: "Billy Baker's Dog Won't Stay Buried," Where Have All the Parents Gone?," and "Check it out and Die!." The year 1996 will see the publication of four more of Stanley's M.T. Coffin books: "Don't Get Sent to the Principal's Office," "The Dead Kid Did It," "Pet Store," and "The Haunted Museum." He is also working on an adult horror novel and an adult mystery novel.

Stanley has been teaching adults to write since 1965. In addition, he teaches foreign languages and has taught all of the Germanic and Romance languages, Albanian, Xhosa, and Zulu. He is a member of the Mystery Writers of America, Sisters in Crime, the Society of Children's Books Writers and Illustrators, and the Horror Writers Association.

Stanley says, "I am constantly thinking about stories and books to write. Quite often, I wake up in the middle of the night with the plot of a story. When that happens, I get up immediately to make notes about it."

"I hope to be able to instill that same excitement and dedication in my students, and to lead them down their own individual roads to publishing success."

Cameron hosts Elderhostel program

Participants in the national Elderhostel program gathered at Cameron in May for a week long program to learn and reminisce about the history, the music, the art, and the movies of the World War II era.

The theme for the session was "World War II: The Glory Years." Cameron faculty and the areas they taught were: Dr. Charles Smith, professor, department of history and humanities, history sessions; Dr. John Morris, associate professor, department of English, movie sessions; John E. Moots, assistant professor, department of music, music sessions; Dr. Barbara Scott, professor, department of art, WPA/New Deal art sessions.

Although sessions are taught by faculty, the Elderhostel programs have no exams, no credit, and no homework. The participants also toured the Cameron campus and the Wichita Mountain Wildlife Refuge; and at Fort Sill viewed a change of command ceremony with the 77th Army band performing, visited obstacle courses, and toured the Fort Sill Museum. Another highlight was a banquet complete with World War II decorations and musical entertainment from the era performed by Cameron voice graduate, Roxie Beishline.

The program was particularly meaningful for two of the hostelers who had met 50 years ago at Fort Sill during basic training. Several hostelers had been stationed at Fort Sill and were deployed to war from there.

There were 24 participants from 11 states including Arizona, New Mexico, Ohio, California, Michigan, Wisconsin, North Carolina, Florida, Texas, New York and Oklahoma.

In 1975, Marty Knowlton, a social activist and educator, linked the European hosteling concept with the residential emphasis of the Scandinavian Folk Schools and created a new kind of learning program called Elderhostel for adults 60 years and older. The Elderhostel program is publicized as an educational adventure for older adults looking for different ways to expand their horizons.

Elderhostel participants who attended "World War 11: The Glory Years" at Cameron in May.

The non-profit educational organization offers inexpensive, short-term academic programs which are hosted by educational institutions around the world. The hostelers live on campuses and enjoy the cultural and recreational resources which accompany them. The program has grown from a few hundred participants to an international program with 1800 participating institutions in every American state and Canadian province and 45 foreign countries. In 1994, nearly 250,000 people enrolled in the programs.

An Elderhostel program is hosted annually through the educational outreach office at Cameron in late May.

Tink Glenn, programs coordinator for educational outreach says, "This is a great opportunity to visit the campus and have a fun educational experience at a reasonable cost." For further information contact, Educational Outreach, Cameron University, 2800 W. Gore Blvd., Lawton, OK 73505 or call the office at (405) 581-2282.

Women's tennis team hits nationals

"They realize now they can play with the best teams in the nation"

The Lady Aggie tennis team finished their most successful season in school history winning 23 matches and qualifying for the NCAA II National Tournament.

Cameron qualified for its first ever NCAA II
National Team Tournament after sending individual players to the National Individual Tournament three of the past four seasons. The Lady Aggies qualified for the NAIA National Team Tournament five times during the 1980s finishing as high as seventh during the 1981 season.

Cameron won a record 23 matches during the season surpassing the old record of 21 wins during the 1991 season. At one point, the Lady Aggies had won 12 consecutive matches from March 23 through April 12th. The only two losses during the spring season were to Oklahoma City University at the NAIA National Tournament.

The Lady Aggies started their quest for the National Tournament by gaining the No. 1 seed at the Midwest Regional held in Topeka, Kan. Cameron opened the Regional by defeating St. Cloud State (Minn.) in its first match 4-0, and then earned the trip to the National Tournament the next day by defeating Northwest Missouri State, 4-0.

Denver University was the first round foe for the Lady Aggies in National Tournament, which was held in Davis, Calif. The Lady Aggies could not get by the Lady Pioneers, losing 4-0, ending their season with a 23-4 record.

"We played well but they (Denver) were just too tough for us," Coach Joe Jones said. "Denver was ranked No. 1 in our region. It was a bad news-good news situation for our girls. The bad news of course is that we lost. The good news is that all but two of our girls will be back next year."

"No one gave us a shot at going to nationals because we were so young. But they (the Lady Aggies) realize now that they can play with the best teams in the nation."

Two Lady Aggies finished the spring season undefeated. Senior, Lisa Coomer ended the spring season with a 23-0 record, and sophomore, Kimbre Townsen finished her season with a 22-0 record. Sophomore, Erica Consen also had a successful season ending with a 21-2 record.

Cameron ended the year ranked 13th nationally and 4th in the Midwest Region. Individually, freshman, May Lee, ended the year ranked 35th nationally and 9th in the Midwest Region, and Erica Consen ended ranked 14th nationally. The doubles teams of Consen/Lee ended the year ranked 8th, and Coomer/Townsen ended ranked 9th, both in the Midwest Region.

Coach Jones quietly passed another milestone during the season winning the 225th match of his career in the Lady Aggies 4-0 win over Northwest Missouri State in Midwest Regional finals. Jones has won at least 15 matches per year during six of the past seven seasons, and ended the year with a career record of 225-78.

"These are great kids," Jones said. "I've never been around a bunch of kids that has worked this hard and dedicated themselves. I mean, we've run, we've worked, we've jumped rope, we've done all of the things while everybody else is in bed."

The cupboard will not be bare for Jones next season as he returns four of the six starters from this season's squad. Also added to the mix will be transfer Ellen Martin from Baylor University.

Shootout benefits athletics

The Cameron Athletic Department was the real winner at Cameron's Spring Shootout Fund-raiser held at the Comanche Skeet and Trap Club.

More than 60 people took part in the fund-raiser activities which included a trap shoot, horseshoes, and a barbecue dinner. More than 80 people made a donation which went entirely to the Cameron Athletic Department.

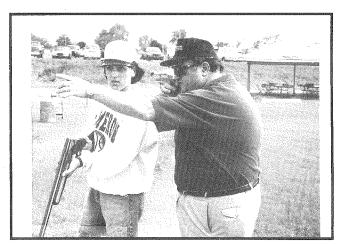

Dr. Dan Skarli took home first place honors in the trap shoot with Penn Rabb coming in second place and Scott Briggs bringing home the third place trophy.

"We would like to thank everyone for their continued support of Cameron Athletics" President Don Davis said. "We are looking forward to our move to the Oklahoma Intercollegiate Athletic Conference beginning in the 1995-96 season. We believe the reestablishment of traditional Oklahoma rivalries in the context of NCAA competition is a winning situation for Cameron. The support of the University's friends and athletic fans is particularly important during this transition period."

The fund-raiser was held to recognize Cameron's return to the Oklahoma Intercollegiate Conference.
