THE COVER PICTURE

This month's Link cover shows the 1949 Seahawk football team, the group which broke all existing offensive records in the 23 year football history of our school. They scored more points (254), won more games (7), and piled up the most yardage both passing and running. Their 7-1-1 record is the best in our history also. The only blue note in all this is that eighteen of the players are seniors.

OUR OWN "DAVIE"

by Thelma Biele Corey, '37

To know Dr. Lee Y. Davidheiser at all is a great honor. He is the kind of "big" man you can sit and talk to or sit and think with comfortably and without pretense. A man of infinite patience (and volatile temper), he has helped students scholastically and personally on numberless occasions.

Besides being informative, his chemistry lab. periods were fun and informal in their own way. But woe to the careless student! I particularly remember one fellow whose experiment blew up in everybody's face. (I combed glass out of my hair for weeks after.) There was no serious damage, but "Davie" was distinctly irritated -- and rightly so. He knew what damage we could do, in our novitiate state.

A complete gentleman himself, "Davie" was nevertheless much opposed to chivalrous tendencies which led the fellows to write up co-ed's' experiments for them. Every "man" for himself was the chem. lab. motto. As I remember "Davie," he was a stickler for detail and chemistry was an adventure.

As the first group of co-eds at Wagner, we were looked on as visitors (and curiosities) and were treated with much respect. In the chem. lab. we didn't have to do any of the dirty work; "Doc" always saw to it that the fellows did it for us.

Dr. Davidheiser's special love was the Debating Society. The first year I came to Wagner, a request was sent out for volunteers for the team, and since no specification was made as to male or female members, I went to the first meeting of the group. "Davie" doesn't floor easily, but he was momentarily non-plussed to see a co-ed turn out for what had been, up to then, strictly a male activity. He recovered very nicely, however, and soon had me working along with the rest of the group on various angles of good debating.

Just sketching in a background of vital statistics, let me give you a small idea of Dr. Davidheiser's wide experience. He received his A.B. degree from Ursinus College and his Ph.D. from Johns Hopkins University. He was a teacher and principal of a public school in Pennsylvania from 1904-1916 (before and while a student at Ursinus) and an instructor at Ursinus the following two years. (But he roots for Wagner these days.) After receiving his doctorate at Johns Hopkins, he became an instructor for two years and then went to Millersville State Teachers' College for six years as a professor of chemistry and head of the Science Department. In 1928 he came to Wagner and has served faithfully ever since.

When my family and I visited the campus several years ago, Dr. Davidheiser was one of the first to greet us. He has an excellent memory for names and faces. Ruth Davies Anstedt, with whom I talked over this article, bears me out on this. And she tells me that when she and Florence Grunow Gode were on campus they were so impressed by "Davie" that they got up very early one May 1 to hang a May Basket on his door.

It hasn't been easy to write this, to put into words the deep respect we all feel for Dr. Davidheiser. One must know him to love him and will love him more knowing him better.

The Link editors are not infallible (as if you didn't know). Last month we omitted the names of Fred and Marcia Boos, Bill Niebanck, and Hope Behar from the list of 1949 Loyalty Fund contributors. Our apologies are hereby offered.

WHERE DID THE NAME SEAHAWK COME FROM?

In response to inquiries from older alumni as to the origin of the nickname "Seahawks," the Link herewith tells the story as we got it from Ronald Reynier, originator of the name. The name grew out of a student body competition in the fall of 1947. It was felt that the nicknames often in use, "The Green Wave" and "The Hilltoppers," were not sufficiently distinctive.

Reynier was the winner of the contest with his suggestion of "Seahawk." He tells us, first of all, that there is no such bird as a Seahawk. The origin of the name dates back to the time of the great Spanish Main. A small band of English pirates, who operated in the Caribbean Sea and attacked the large ships of the Spanish, were given the nickname of Seahawks.

Taking Wagner's location, looking out over the sea, and the small school playing many large schools in sports, it seemed that Wagner had a close analogy to the original Seahawks. The name was submitted. The student body did the rest.

THE GLORY THAT WAS GREASE-PAINT

by John Devlin, '39

At first, on receiving the request to sweep the mothballs from the top of my memory and reminisce about Wagner dramatics from 1935 to 1939, I felt like someone left over from the days of Vitagraph or D. W. Griffith. Just for a prompter, I went to the Fibber McGee closet in the house, and holding down the family skeleton with one knee, I grabbed an armful of old Kallistas and playbills with the other.

Out of a student (sic) body of about two hundred, the dramatics society was usually built around a nucleus of ten or twelve genuinely interested people. Actors were also stage-hands, make-up artists, and advertising solicitors. Needless to say, this arrangement produced some interesting effects that were not always called for in the script.

One time John McDermott had a quick change in "As You Like It." He came off in a rush and in just as much of a rush a couple of the rest of us squeezed him into a borrowed pair of breeches and ladies riding boots, and just in the nick of time, with Mac's ample anatomy straining at every seam, we pushed him back on-stage to meet his cue. Then there was the time Arthur Klein had an animated speech as the pub-keeper in "A Bit O' Love" and had to wear a drooping mustache. During his big scene, because he had used some spirit-gum that was old and weak, his mustache fell off. With the poise that was a necessary part of our training, he turned his back to the audience and deliberately pasted it back on again. When he turned around he had the mustache on, but he looked like a Turk. It was upside down.

My own debut in Wagner dramatics was literally earth-shaking. As Tam Jarland, the villain in "A Bit O' Love," I was to be thrown bodily through a saloon window by an incensed minister (played by Bob Boettger). To make things a little easier, we placed a gym mat outside the window. But Boettger's aim was bad. Out of about eight tries between rehearsals and performances I hit the mat twice. The other times I either overshot it, undershot it, or caromed off the window frame.

However, much of it was not ridiculous and, although I may be biased, some of it approached the sublime. There are some plays and some performances that will be remembered by those who saw them. Such as Catherine Newton's tender and touching interpretation of Bridget in "Shadow and Substance," or her gentle Mary in "Lazarus" (by Professor Palleske). Or John McDermott's fiery and dynamic portrayal of the Irish school-teacher in "Shadow and Substance," and with his varied talents, the broadly comic role of the cockney lieutenant in "Journey's End." The list is long because we were fortunate in having such talented people. But space is short, so I must settle for a mere mention of some of my contemporaries - Eleanor Schmidt, Dagmar Aitchison, Everett Jensen, Tex Schneck, Al Keyser, Willie Freimuth, Lu Kirsch, and others who helped make it not only successful but pleasant. To borrow a thought from the late John Barrymore, my only regret is that I could not sit out in front and watch that group act.

We were aspiring. A list of some of the playwrights we tried includes Galsworthy, Andreyev, Shakespeare, Dickens, R. C. Sheriff, Paul Vincent Carroll.

We were ambitious. In the 1938 season we did about eight plays, at least four of which were full length.

We were sensitive to current trends and produced some anti-war plays when things were getting dark in Europe.

We were experimental. Shakespeare in modern dress; "The Blue Willow Plate," a Chinese drama done in the authentic native style; "Lazarus," an original verse drama by Professor Palleske; and other original things.

I mention these because it was a very fond hope of some of us in those days that Wagner College would one day have an experimental theater that would be famous. The physical equipment is there. Perhaps we will see it yet.

Some of us who have gone before have continued our interest in dramatics. John Neher is writing radio scripts. Catherine Newton was graduated from the American Academy of Dramatic Arts, but as Mrs. John McDermott, her biggest role to date is that of the mother of three lovely girls. Of course, those who have gone into the clergy are no doubt producing and directing plays in their various parishes.

Me? My dramatics at the moment are confined to enacting roles from fairy tales for my children. And really, I've never had such an appreciative audience. Why, frequently I send them off to bed screaming.

The only other outlet I have is trying to convince my wife that I was delayed with the boys at the office. But somehow, no matter how I turn it on, she keeps muttering something which sounds strangely like, "Once a ham, always a ham." Of course, I can't be sure,

CHAPTER DOINGS

The fall chapter activities got off to a strong start with a fine organization meeting in Buffalo on October 13. Thanks to the efficient planning of Ernie French, a group of forty persons were present to hear Dr. Walter C. Langsam tell of the latest developments on the Hill. Frank Kalmbach was elected president of the group which will be known as the Western New York chapter, with Mrs. Rita McGivney Kennedy chosen secretary.

November 18 the Hudson Valley chapter met at the Catskill Country Club. They heard Alumni Secretary Al Kraemer and saw "Beautiful upon a Hill," new Wagner movie. A similar program was presented in Boston for the Northern New England chapter on December 2. We hope for organization meetings in Jersey City, Connecticut, Washington (D.C.), and Albany in the month of December.

The Nursing Alumnae met at the college on November 15 to hear reports of the International Council of Nursing, and the Staten Island chapter has been busy with a community service lecture series. Whit Burnett, noted editor and anthologist, was presented on November 7, with Dr. Luther Woodward, psychologist, writer, and radio commentator, offering a program on November 21. This chapter also held a card party on December 8.

Early Loyalty Fund Returns

Early returns on the 1950 Loyalty Fund campaign are very encouraging, says Chris Holmstrup '39, chairman of this year's drive. To date 94 alumni and former students have contributed $658 and pledged $100 more. Holmstrup feels that this is a fine start, but reminds all of the alumni that we still have more than $2300 to go. He plans a follow-up soon.

The Hudson Valley chapter showed fine spirit by soliciting each of its members and turning in "the first 100% return from any chapter." Space limitations prevent our listing the 1950 contributors in this issue of The Link, but a complete list will be included in a subsequent issue.

C H E Y

Wagner alumni are going to see a lot of these four initials during 1950. They stand for Christian Higher Education Year, an appeal of the United Lutheran Church in America for its colleges and seminaries. The goal set is six million dollars, and solicitation is to be made in the synods and congregations of the ULCA from January 1 to April 30, 1950.

The goal of the United Lutheran Synod of New York is $750,000, of which $350,000 is to go to Wagner. The college authorities expect to use monies received to help build the new girls dormitory.

Your Alma Mater needs your full support for CHEY. Amounts like these are not raised unless there is full co-operation and plenty of hard work. Alumni will be called upon to act as speakers, committee chairmen, and, of course, donors. Don't say anything but an emphatic "yes" when you are called upon to serve.

The new dormitory will help to meet one of the most pressing needs on the campus. It is need that is genuine and real. Even if enrollment drops this dormitory will be an absolute necessity. Help Wagner achieve her goal. Speak up for CHEY. Support CHEY. It must be a success!

How come? Three alumni- Ernie French, Pete Dean, and Ted Gibson- all picked Homecoming Day, November 12, for their wedding dates. Or doesn't a mere husband have anything to do with choosing the date?
