

Gang of 20 Attacks Gay Man in Cleveland, Ohio

By Daniel Reynolds.

A gay man was assaulted by a large group of men on Sunday, and police are calling it a hate crime.

Jared Fox was walking to Cocktails, a gay bar in Cleveland, near midnight on Saturday, when 20 men surrounded him and began to shout antigay epithets, according to WKYC, a local NBC affiliate.

After asking if Fox had any money or valuables on his person, the group began to throw punches at the 26-year-old man before knocking him to the ground.

"They said, 'What's in your pockets?' and I said, 'I got no money, I'm broke,' and they said, 'Oh, so you're one of those broke faggots?' And then they just started swinging." Fox told WKYC.

The group stole his cell phone, forcing Fox to call for help at the bar. Fox, who was bruised and suffered hearing loss from a ruptured eardrum, said the men knew he was gay because they recognized his destination.

In addition to Fox's call, three additional calls were made that night to report disturbances around Cocktails, according to police. They are still searching for suspects.

Anyone with information about the attack is encouraged to call First District detectives at (216) 623-5118.

BLUEBARN Theatre celebrates 25th Season

The BLUEBARN Theatre goes "OVER THE EDGE" for its 25th Anniversary Season as it announces the 2013-2014 lineup of shows. The season, which begins in September with the opening of the TONY Award-winning play, God of Carnage, marks a milestone as the theatre produces three regional premieres and the return of a holiday favorite.

The BLUEBARN also celebrates next season with the announcement that, in addition to local talent, professional Equity actors will be engaged for every production. In keeping with The BLUEBARN's core value of producing professional theatre in Omaha, Nebraska, the theatre pays all actors, directors, designers and technicians – local and professional – who work for the BLUEBARN, a practice which the BLUEBARN will continue into its next 25 years and beyond.

Jacob Marley returns to The BLUEBARN as a re-mount of the wildly successful 2010 production! "Marley was dead, to begin with..." — and what happens to Ebenezer Scrooge's mean, sour, pruney old business partner after that? Chained and shackled, Marley is condemned to a hellish eternity. He's even given his own private tormentor: a malicious little hell-sprite who thoroughly enjoys his work. Desperate, Marley accepts his one chance to free himself: To escape his own chains, he must first redeem Scrooge. So begins a journey of laughter and terror, redemption and renewal, during which Scrooge's heart, indeed, is opened; but not before Marley—in this irreverent, funny and deeply moving story—discovers his own.

MCC Food Pantry News

I would like to thank all the "Food Fairies" who have donated food and/or toiletries to our pantry this year. The angels who have dropped food items off at the church without leaving their names. You all do such wonderful work, Thank You so much for all your help! I would really love to thank each of you in person, but I do enjoy the surprise packages I find when I walk in to the pantry.

MCC Serves Lunch to 161 of our Neighbors

On Saturday, August 31st we not only served the Community Meal but we hosted it on our lawn. We managed to get sub sandwich "Lunchables" from the Food Bank which included a bottle of water. We also cut up some Honeydew Melons, had chips & popcorn, tomatoes, tea, coffee and lemonade. We served 161 meals under a cloudy sky that soon turned in to a sunny day. Some of the early arrivals helped set up tables and carried the food outside. Then we were blessed with a thunder storm that night to wash away all the spilled drinks!

MCC belongs to Neighbors United, a group of local churches and other organizations, which serve the Community Meal every Saturday at 1st Baptist Church on Harney and Park Avenue. We all take turns preparing the food and serving it 4 times each year. We hosted the meal because 1st Baptist is having some remodeling done and we couldn't use the building.

Thanks to all the wonderful volunteers that helped make the day go easier.

Taco Rice

With summer tomato canning season upon me, I'm up to my armpits in tomato pulp. I'm looking for a quick dinner fix, and Taco Rice fits my criteria. This is actually one of the very first things I learned how to cook so very many years ago. It's quick and easy and saves you a trip to Taco Bell.

Speaking of Taco Bell... My wife and I don't eat fast food very often, but when we do, Taco Bell seems to be our #1 pick. Omaha was a test market for the Taco Bell breakfast menu about 7 years ago, and I fell in love with the Bean and Egg Burrito. Much to my delight, they brought the breakfast menu back to a few test markets again, with Omaha and Council Bluffs being one of the chosen few. Last weekend we tried the Steak and Egg Burrito - it's yummy and loaded with steak. Even though it's not on the drive thru menu or nutritional menu online, you can still order my Bean and Egg Burrito! Whooooooie! Unfortunately, due to extreme popularity, they were out of the new Yogurt Parfait, so maybe I'll sneak off and try that this weekend...

Recipe

Ingredients:

1 lb hamburger
1/2 cup onion (cubed)
1 pkg taco seasoning
1 serving minute rice
Cheddar cheese
Optional:
Sour Cream
Black Olives
Diced jalapeños

Directions:

1. Brown and drain hamburger.
2. Make minute rice and add hamburger, onion and taco seasoning.
3. Top with cheddar cheese, sour cream and olives.

This will be the first time the president will speak with LGBT organizations in Russia, which has caused a storm of controversy with the passage of antigay legislation, a ban on so-called homosexual propaganda.

Under the law, both foreigners and Russian citizens can be arrested for disseminating or promoting homosexuality or LGBT rights. LGBT foreigners could also be deported, and that includes athletes of the upcoming Olympic games.

Last month Obama canceled a one-on-one meeting with Russian president Vladimir Putin scheduled during the G-20 summit due to the country's record on human rights, among other conflicts that have arisen, such as granting asylum to National Security Agency leaker Edward Snowden.

The meeting was canceled due to a "lack of progress on issues like missile defense, arms control, trade and commercial relations, global security issues, and human rights and civil society," White House press secretary Jay Carney said, according to the Washington Blade.

Tensions between the nations have heightened even further with the recent debate over the international response to the developments in Syria, where there civilian casualties and injuries from a chemical attack August 21, allegedly perpetrated by the government.

Russia has dismissed evidence presented by U.S. Secretary of State John Kerry and a recent U.S. intelligence report, which was called "absolutely unconvincing" by the country's foreign minister, Sergey Lavrov, in a statement released Monday. Russia has threatened to block any resolution from the U.N. on the issue.

Earlier this summer, Obama lambasted Russia's treatment of its LGBT citizens on The Tonight Show With Jay Leno.

"I've been very clear that when it comes to universal rights, when it comes to people's basic freedoms, that whether you're discriminating on the basis of race, religion, gender, or sexual orientation, you are violating the basic morality that I think should transcend every country," Obama said. "I have no patience for countries that try to treat gays or lesbians or transgender persons in ways that intimidate them or are harmful to them."

Using your IRA Money for a Home Purchase Down Payment

A traditional IRA does in fact allow you to withdraw up to $10,000 in order to finance a deposit for a first-time home purchase. Although it allows you to do this without paying an early withdrawal penalty (a standard 10% is usual) you may still have to pay income tax on the $10,000 withdrawal.

There are a lot of things to consider when attempting using IRA money for a home purchase down payment.

If you wish to avoid paying income tax on an IRA early withdrawal on a first-time home purchase you do have several options, there are certain qualifiers that allow you to withdraw $10,000 from a traditional IRA:

The first qualifier is based on age, you must be below 59 years old, and if you are below this age you are required to qualify for the next part. The second qualifier that you must pass if you wish to avoid paying taxes on your withdrawal = you cannot have owned a house for at least 2 years, and that you are only withdrawing a maximum of $10,000.

In order to qualify for a tax exempt withdrawal from your IRA you must pass the above qualifiers as well as passing the following requirements; you must ensure that the house you are buying is going to be your primary residence (no second homes or income properties). Another requirement is that the purchase of the home must be done within a set time limit. With this kind of withdrawal you have a maximum of 120 days to purchase the home, failure to do so will result in the money being returned to the IRA and that will be your life time limit used up until you hit the threshold again.

Careful consideration must be made when trying this because if the sale of the house falls through it leaves you vulnerable to legal issues.

With a traditional IRA you can only withdraw $10,000 in the lifetime of the IRA. The $10,000 limit means that once you have withdrawn this amount you cannot withdraw any more for other expenses that go along with purchasing a house until you have reached the IRA threshold. So it is important that before attempting to use IRA money for a down payment on a home you make sure that you are able to afford all of the other expenses that accumulate when purchasing property.

If you are withdrawing the IRA money for your child or your partner to buy their first home it is possible to do so without paying tax on the withdrawal as long as the above qualifiers and requirements are followed. When using your IRA money to help your loved one purchase their first home there is a time limit that you can take advantage of that often helps avoid the money being taxed. There is a 60 day payback clause that means that if you manage to get either a portion or all of the withdrawn money back into the account within 60 days the amount of cash put back in will not be considered a distribution and will not be taxable.

With a traditional IRA you should be aware that there are disadvantages to withdrawing money that goes beyond tax. The biggest disadvantage is that if you tap into your IRA money it is no longer there for you to use on other things such as other investments that could be more lucrative than a first time home. It could also cause you problems by pushing you into a higher tax bracket.

Using money from an IRA can be quite complicated, so we always recommend that above and beyond anything you may have learned here, you seek the advice of a qualified CPA who can look at your own personal circumstances and can advise how best to proceed.

Life Beyond Therapy

I HATE CONDOMS

In my private practice, it is amazing how many Gay/Bi/Trans men tell me that they hate condoms. People say how much better anal sex is without them, it feels better, is more spontaneous...you've heard this too, I'm sure. Given all this, how can we make peace with condoms?

I suggest that you consider NOT seeing them as your enemy. Aim for neutrality. After all, they exist to help keep you HIV-negative. They perform a valuable function; they're not there to make your life miserable. A shift in your consciousness can make the whole condom thing a whole lot easier. You know how some older people freak out when they have to learn computers, and they just hate the computers and curse them? And how young people just don't get what the big deal is? Why do these elders resist the computers so much when the computers can make their lives so much easier once they learn how to use them? Well, condoms are like computers: you can resist using them or you can make peace with them and let them make your sex life so much healthier.

Try experimenting with condoms, especially when jacking off alone. Don't just use condoms when in intercourse, practice with them when you're masturbating. Get used to the feel of different ones. Once you jerk off with them a few times, it's a lot easier to use them during oral or anal sex. Become more familiar with them, know the ones you like and how to use them to best pleasure yourself. Try different lube/condom combinations. The object is to get very familiar with condoms and lube, letting them become part of your pleasure, not an obstacle to it.

At present, there appears to be no other way to avoid seroconversion but abstinence and sex with condoms. So if you want to stay HIV-negative, make peace with them. Or don't, and accept that your likelihood of seroconverting is high and that, over time, the odds are against you. Part of the problem with condoms is that people hate them and are attached to hating them. This, unfortunately, will get you nowhere. Rather than seeing them as the enemy, see them as saving your life rather than taking away your boner.

Many of my clients report it's harder to keep an erection with a condom. They see putting on a condom as an interruption of good sex, and then it becomes just that: a frustrating interruption. Men who successfully use condoms have made them a part of their sex routine. They make sure that they have their favorite condoms conveniently with them at all times; after all, you never know when and where good sex may present itself. These guys have also experimented with lube and found lubes they like.

I encourage you to work condoms into your sex life in a way that make it better, not worse. For example, ask your partner to put the condom on for you. Why not try different kinds of condoms? Experiment with different fits and sensations and textures.

You can continue to make condoms your energy or incorporate them into your sex life in playful and erotic ways: use your creativity. After all, are we not queer men?

Texas Military Forces Refuse to Process Same-Sex Couples' Benefits

By Daniel Reynolds

The Texas Military Forces, which includes the state's National Guard and other troops, are refusing to process requests from gay and lesbian couples for spousal benefits, ignoring orders from the Department of Defense that it should extend health care, housing, and other benefits to married gay and lesbian members of the military by today.

Maj. Gen. John Nichols (pictured), who oversees the Texas Army National Guard, Texas Air National Guard, and Texas State Guard, directed state-run facilities to comply with the state constitution, which does not recognize same-sex marriage, in a letter issued last Friday.

However, Nichols stipulated that the forces remain "committed to ensuring its military personnel and their families receive the benefits to which they are entitled. As such, we encourage anyone affected by this issue to enroll for benefits at a federal installation."

The directive creates an additional hurdle for gay and lesbian members of the military, who now must apply for benefits at a federal facility. In Texas, one of the nation's largest states, applying at a federal installation could require traveling a considerable distance.

The office of Rick Perry, the governor of Texas, later corroborated Nichols's claims that the Pentagon's orders conflicted with state law.

According to the Texas Family Code 6.204, a "marriage between persons of the same sex or a civil union is contrary to the public policy of this state and is void in this state."

The Pentagon confirmed to the Associated Press that Texas is the only entire state that is currently refusing to process benefit requests for same-sex partners, though some state-run offices in Mississippi have also refused to issue applications.

"It's truly outrageous that the state of Texas has decided to play politics with our military families," said Stephen Peters, president of American Military Partner Association, which advocates for LGBT military families. "Gov. Rick Perry should be ashamed. Our military families are already dealing with enough problems and the last thing they need is more discrimination from the state of Texas."

Tuesday was the first day these benefits were available to members of the military, following the Supreme Court decision that struck down a key section of the Defense of Marriage Act.

Kevin Rudd, Australian Prime Minister, Tears Apart Anti-LGBT Pastor

The Huffington Post | By James Nichols

Days before the Australian elections, Prime Minister Kevin Rudd (pictured) publicly and passionately defended same-sex marriage during a question and answer session.

A pastor of a local church who works for National Christian Radio Network attempted to pin Rudd down about his stance on gay marriage. "They [citizens] won't be voting for you because they're disillusioned because you seem to be chopping and changing your beliefs just to get a popular vote with regards to things like marriage," said the man.

After announcing in May that he supported same-sex marriage, many speculated that Rudd would lose a significant percentage of Australia's Christian vote. Rudd, however, sees his support as faith-based.

"I concluded in my conscience, through an informed conscience, and a christian conscience, that it was the right thing to do," said Rudd in the above Q&A, "and let me tell you why. Number one, I do not believe people when they are born choose

Vacation in Rome

A woman was at her hairdresser's getting her hair styled for a trip to Rome with her husband. She mentioned the trip to the hairdresser, who responded:

"Rome? Why would anyone want to go there? It's crowded and dirty. You're crazy to go to Rome. So, how are you getting there?"

"We're taking Continental," was the reply. "We got a great rate!"

"Continental?" exclaimed the hairdresser. "That's a terrible airline. Their planes are old, their flight attendants are ugly, and they're always late. So, where are you staying in Rome?"

"We'll be at this exclusive little place over on Rome's Tiber River called Teste."

"Don't go any further. I know that place. Everybody thinks it's gonna be something special and exclusive, but it's really a dump."

"We're going to go to see the Vatican and maybe get to see the Pope."

"That's rich," laughed the hairdresser. You and a million other people trying to see him. He'll look the size of an ant. Boy, good luck on this lousy trip of yours. You're going to need it."

A month later, the woman again came in for a hairdo. The hairdresser asked her about her trip to Rome.

"It was wonderful," explained the woman, "not only were we on time in one of Continental's brand new planes, but it was overbooked, and they bumped us up to first class. The food and wine were wonderful, and I had a handsome 28-year-old steward who waited on me hand and foot. And the hotel was great! They'd just finished a $5 million remodeling job, and now it's a jewel, the finest hotel in the city. They, too, were overbooked, so they apologized and gave us their owner's suite at no extra charge!"

"Well," muttered the hairdresser, "that's all well and good, but I know you didn't get to see the Pope."

"Actually, we were quite lucky, because as we toured the Vatican, a Swiss Guard tapped me on the shoulder, and explained that the Pope likes to meet some of the visitors, and if I'd be so kind as to step into his private room and wait, the Pope would personally greet me.

Sure enough, five minutes later, the Pope walked through the door and shook my hand! I knelt down and he spoke a few words to me."

"Oh, really! What'd he say?"

He said: "Who screwed up your hair?"

MY DADDY SLEEPS NAKED

"Late again!" the third-grade teacher sternly said to little Ranger.

"It ain't my fault this time, Miss Russell. You can blame this 'un on my Daddy. The reason I'm three hours late is my Daddy sleeps naked!"

Now, Miss Russell had taught grammar school for thirty-some-odd years. Despite her mounting fears, she asked little Ranger what he meant by that. Full of grins and mischief, and in the flower of his youth, little Ranger and trouble were old friends,..... but he always told her the truth.

"You see, Miss Russell, out at the farm we got this here low down fox. The last few nights, he done ate six hens. Last night, when Daddy heard a noise out in the chicken pen, he grabbed his double-barreled shotgun and said to my Ma, "That fox is back again... I'm a gonna git him!" "Stay back," Daddy whispered to all us kids!

"My Daddy was naked as a jaybird -- no boots, no pants, no shirt! To the hen house he crawled, just like an Injun on the snoop. Then, he stuck that double-barreled 12-gauge shotgun through the window of the coop. As he stared into the darkness, with a fox on his mind, our old hound dog, Rip, had done gone and woke up and comes sneaking up behind Daddy.

Then, as we all looked on, plumb helpless, old Rip done went and stuck his cold nose in my Daddy's crack!"

"Miss Russell, we all been cleanin' chickens since three o'clock this mornin'!"

their sexuality. They are gay if they are born gay -- you don't decide at some later stage in life to be one thing or the other. It is how people are built. And therefore, the idea that this is somehow an abnormal condition is just wrong. I don't get that -- I think that is just a completely ill-founded view."

Support for same-sex marriage in Australia has steadily gained traction this year with a July Parliamentary Inquiry finding that New South Wales could become the first state in the country with the political power to pass such legislation. Australian politicians not supporting the initiative have also come under fire lately, with Katy Perry publicly blasting Tony Abbot over the issue of same-sex marriage during a radio interview in mid-August.

The Australian federal elections are slated to taken place on Sept. 7.

Same-Sex Couples Apply for One Third of Minnesota's Marriage Licenses

By Daniel Reynolds

Nearly one in three marriage licenses issued in Minnesota in August were obtained by same-sex couples, according to a survey conducted by the Associated Press.

The survey found that at least 1,640 gay and lesbian couples have applied to be wed since Minnesota began issuing certificates August 1.

Since counties are not obligated to report this information, the news agency conducted its own study and received figures from 83 of Minnesota's 87 counties.

In its research, the AP also found that most licenses were obtained in urban areas, with the highest concentration occurring in Hennepin and Ramsey counties, which include the Minneapolis-St. Paul area. In 29 counties, no same-sex couples applies for licenses.

Officials estimate that 5,000 gay and lesbian couples will marry within the first year after marriage equality's enactment in Minnesota.

"This is the product of people who were living in the legal wilderness for so long, suddenly no longer being told their relationships are sub-standard," Scott Dibble, a state senator and a sponsor of the marriage equality bill, told the AP. "There's an excitement out there right now. I've been going to so many weddings lately, it's like I'm two years out of college again."

HEALTHY RESPECT FOR WORDS

(In my jobs as a teacher and a fitness trainer I have stressed the healthy importance of a strong mind and a strong body connection. The following encourages the importance of using words correctly to create that healthy you.)

The Associated Press changed their policy this past spring and will no longer use the term illegal immigrant. The AP stated that illegal should only be used to describe an action and not a person. This all but assures the profligacy of the term in a future Tarantino period piece movie.

Words are powerful and many journalists are happy to see this change and feel it reflects a more educated and proper approach to reporting. Too bad many more journalists are still struggling to realize the error of their ways with other words and their significance.

On her MSNBC show after the AP announcement in April, Melissa Harris-Perry applauded the change and said it came in the form of a tenth grade English lesson. She further stated that words and language matter and had various guests in her studio to explain that very importance.

I did find it quite ironic that one of Ms. Harris-Perry's colleagues, Toure, also expounded on the importance of words on the week of April 7th, but then used subject verb disagreement while proving his point. Indeed, he did prove his point... words do matter.

Subject verb agreement means that the subject and verb in a sentence must agree with each other. If a singular subject is used then a singular verb must be used. If a plural subject is used then a plural verb must be used. That sounds fairly basic... right?

The TV newsman Toure was to make this same subject verb agreement mistake again on a subsequent day when discussing a contentious Tennessee welfare bill. His Cycle co-host Krystal Ball also joined her wounded wordsmith by adding her version of subject verb disagreement on a segment about women in power in the military during the same week.

As a former teacher, I experienced the power of words and language every day. Subject verb disagreement was one of those areas that kept my red pen busy on numerous student term papers. College acceptance is based upon the importance of words and properly navigating grammar. SAT's and personal statements in the collegial application packets are proof of this.

As a current business owner, I am also aware of these disagreeable errors that occur on job applications and interviews with prospective employees. My hiring decisions are not only based upon skill set but also the effective use of words.

My supposed schadenfreude is not just associated with Toure and Ms. Ball or any of the other professionals at MSNBC. I have listened to similar grammatical gaffes frequently since April from journalists on Good Morning America, Fox News Channel, ESPN, our local news channels, and many more shows.

Some days it seems it is OK that we all surrender to the haphazard sentence structures that have become so prevalent on our airwaves. After all, we threw in the white flag with cactuses, octopuses, and hippopotamuses.

There's a lot of illegal immigrants in our country today seeking a better way of life. There are also a lot of undocumented workers in our country seeking a better way of life. Proper grammar is a good healthy start on the way to that better life.

The Associated Press believes our tired, our poor, and huddled masses should be allowed to yearn to breathe free from the restraints of inappropriate language. I hope all our journalists also are associated in unison and press forward with the correctness of our language as it relates to subject verb agreement.

Choose your words wisely and stay classy (and healthy) Omaha!

This article of word wielding wellness is brought to you by that guy with a sexy mind and a smart body. That guy of complete health is Ron Blake and he can be found diagramming sentences and doing pushups at myblakefitness.com.
