THE CITY ELECTION.

Reedsport, which has recently been incorporated and will from now on be known as a town under municipal government, held its first city election on Monday, July 21st, 1919, electing a mayor, six councilmen, a recorder, a treasurer and a marshal.

Considerable interest was taken by the citizens of the place in the election of councilmen and marshal, two tickets being in the field. The regular ticket, which carried by a vote of about two to one, was placed before the public at a mass meeting held a week before the day of election, at which a mayor, 11 councilmen, three for recorder, three for treasurer and two for marshal were nominated, to be chosen from by the voters on the day of election. This, apparently, did not satisfy a few who secretly met and made up a complete ticket for each office, calling themselves a "citizens' committee" for the avowed purpose as stated in posters quietly and secretly distributed during the night before election or early in the morning of that day, in which the "citizens' committee" stated that they were considering the "moral" and the "financial" welfare of Reedsport. The result was that the fathers of this ticket were beaten at the election over two to one, which proves that "star chamber" proceedings of would-be politicians, even in the government of as small a town as Reedsport, is not popular, and the great majority of the citizens last Monday at the polls declared by their ballots that those chosen to administer the affairs of the town in its infancy are the ones to trust to take care of the town's financial affairs, its morals, and establish a good, stable government. Now that the election is over all good citizens should put their shoulders to the wheel and assist the newly elected officers in the duties which they have assumed.
