

No provocation?

Isn't it interesting how it took two years for the Nazis to obtain a permit to march in Skokie, but it was only a matter of hours to obtain a permit for a countermarch?

People were under the impression that attempts were being made to prevent the Nazi march because of its alleged provocation of violence. Apparently, the countermarch (as seen by officials who tried to stop the Nazi march) in no way provokes violence.

Rich Osiol Jr., Schiller Park