

In common with Nazis

Skokie is trying to prevent Frank Collin & Co. from speaking in Skokie because of what they might say. The legal and moral implications of this attempt to stifle free speech should be obvious to everyone and therefore should be rejected, no matter what one feels about the Nazis and their ideas.

Those who would destroy the right of others to express unpopular ideas have more in common with the Nazi philosophy than they realize or would care to admit.

Raymond Todd, Skokie

Daytime nightmare

I wonder if all the non-Jewish finger-wagging First Amendment defenders who approve the proposed Nazi march in Skokie could imagine their most horrifying nightmares magnified a thousand times, come to life, marching down their own streets in broad daylight, and then still say, "Yes."

Roberta Markbreit, Skokie