We are

Our lives have been shaped by the dizzying pace of change that has seeped into every aspect of our existence. We are very different from the generation of our parents. And, if the world continues to change at its present rate, we will be unbelievably different from our own children. Every generation feels alien to the preceding one. But the factor of rapid change has increased this sense of alienation between our generation and the previous one to such an extent that the "generation gap" has become an issue of our times. What makes us feel that we are such a unique generation? What are the changes that have influenced our growth? How do we feel about ourselves and the world around us? Saga 1971 attempts to describe the children of change.

the children of change

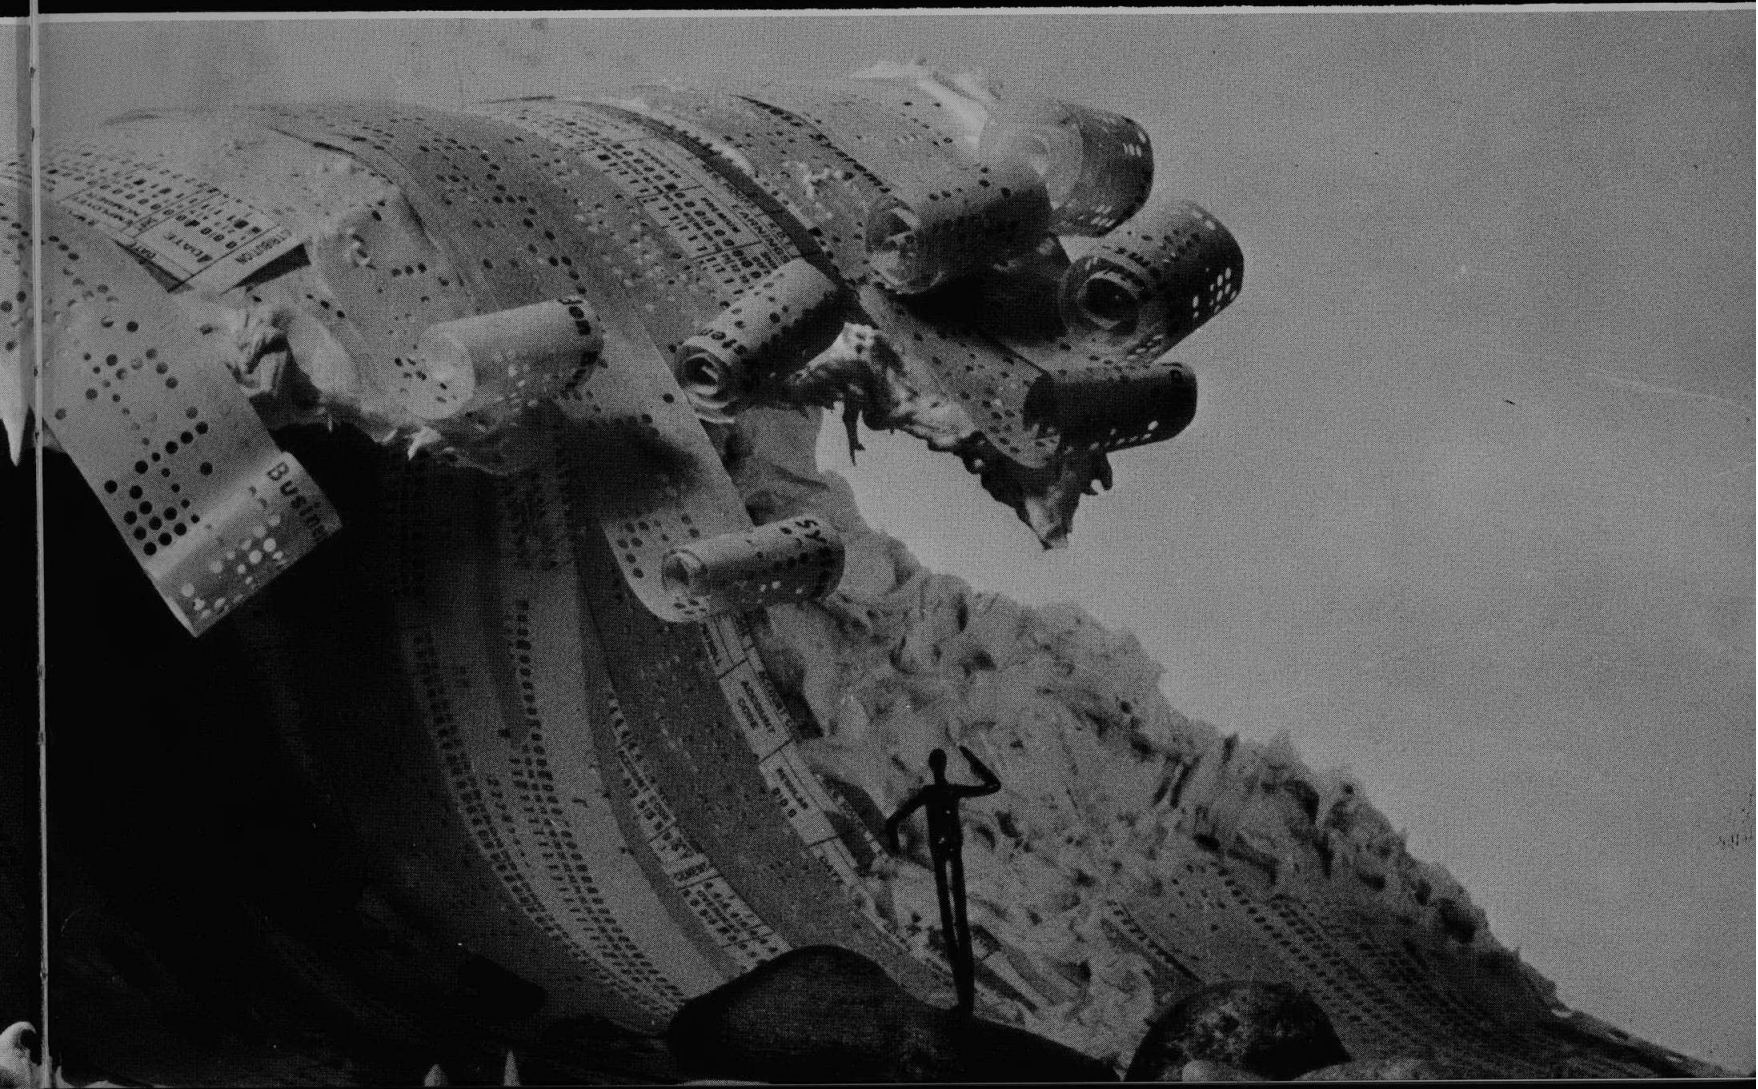

We are being overwhelmed

In our short years we saw the first man-made satellite leave the earth's atmosphere and watched man walk on the moon. We witnessed science improve upon the human memory and package it in the form of a computer. We watched, television develop from a fuzzy black and white picture into a multi-million dollar industry. We saw the romantic movies of the fifties transform into films mirroring our cultural revolution. The media reflect our changing attitudes toward violence, drugs, sex, politics, freedom and the relationships between people. But are we being overwhelmed by a world of change? We do not know if this hectic pace will lead us to disaster or the first vision of utopia.

by the pace of a rapidly changing world

We are individuals with a variety of faces

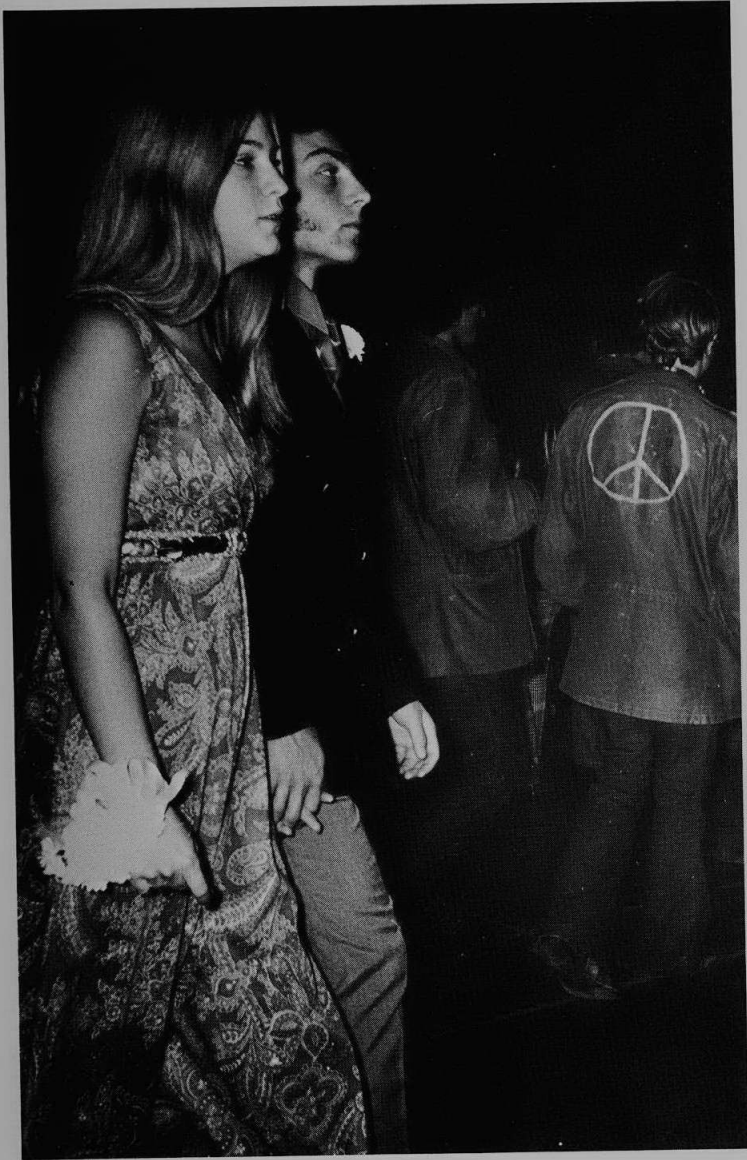

We distinguish ourselves from past generations with our unique tastes in clothing and hairstyles, but we also differ among ourselves in our appearance. We wear mini, midi and maxi dresses, vest suits and bell bottoms as comfortably as we relax in our blue jeans and army jackets. We can be found with hair from two to twenty-two inches long. But collectively we represent the children of change.

We are part of a changing school community

We see a revolution in the traditions of education in Northi 1970-1971. We meet the 30 mod day, resource centers and open labs, while taking on increased responsibility for our own education. We eat breakfast in school and leave for the day before lunch. We attend the Homecoming dance to find tradition replaced by the "Voice of Change." We teach our own mini-courses. We watch a new superintendent bring a new philosophy of education into office. PTA becomes PTSA — an association of parents, teachers and students talking about the problems of education.

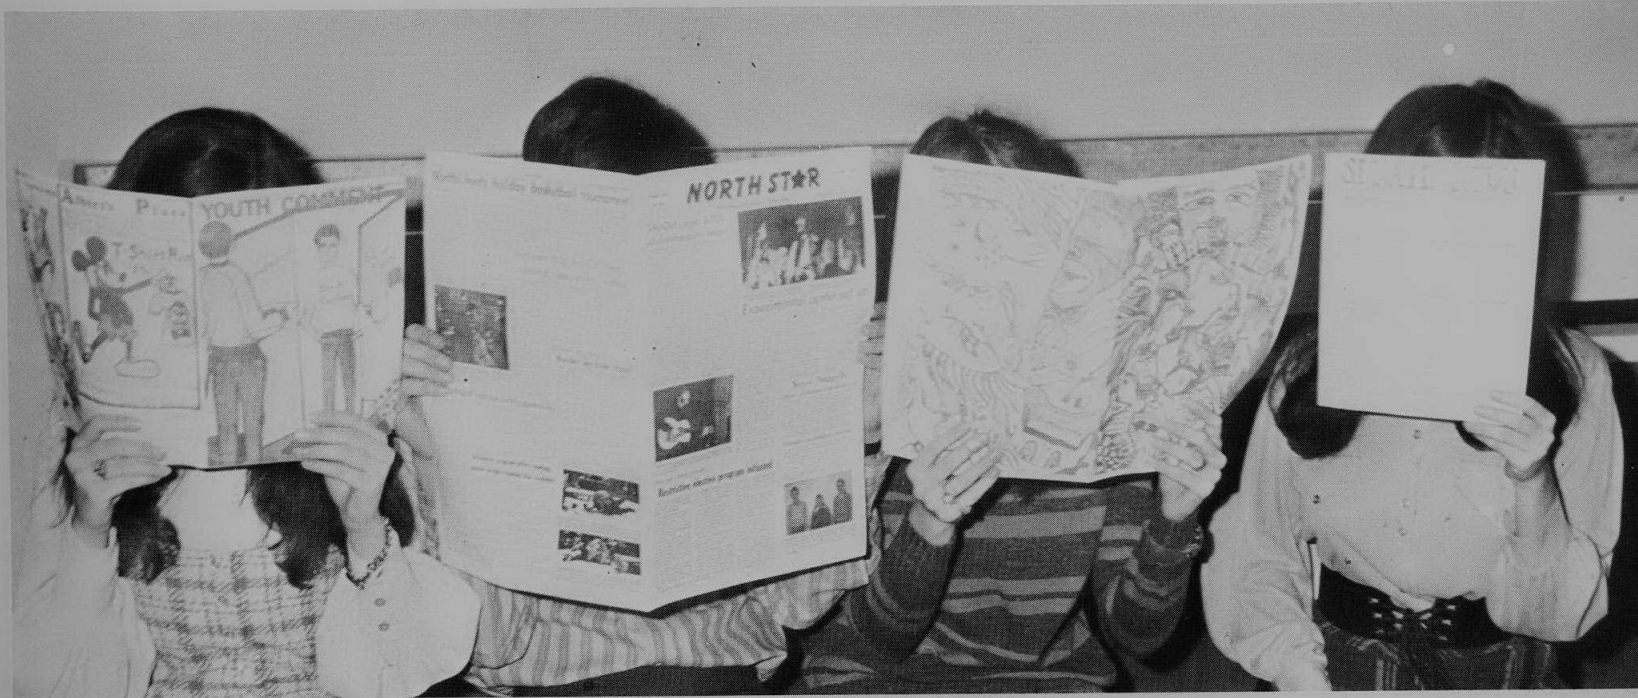

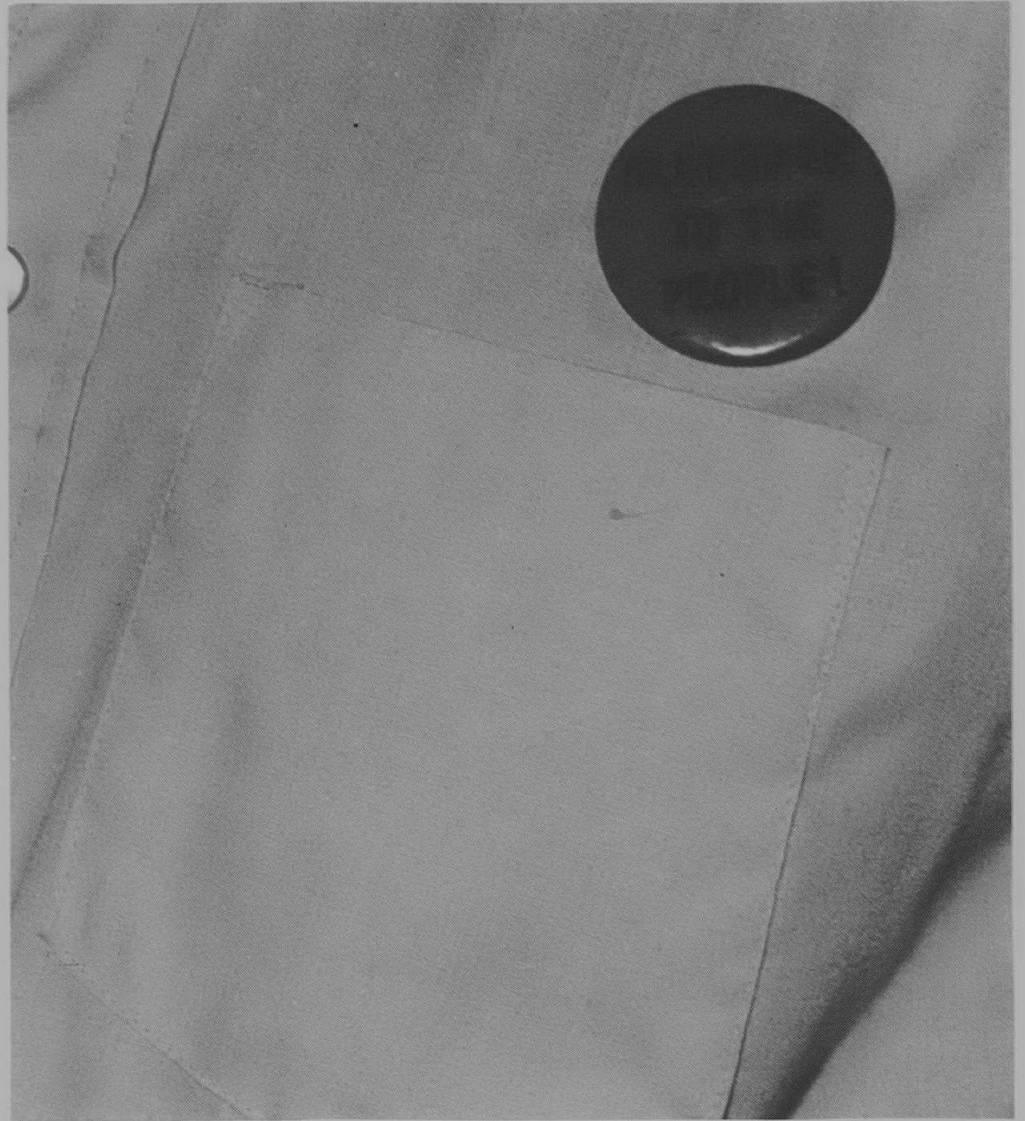

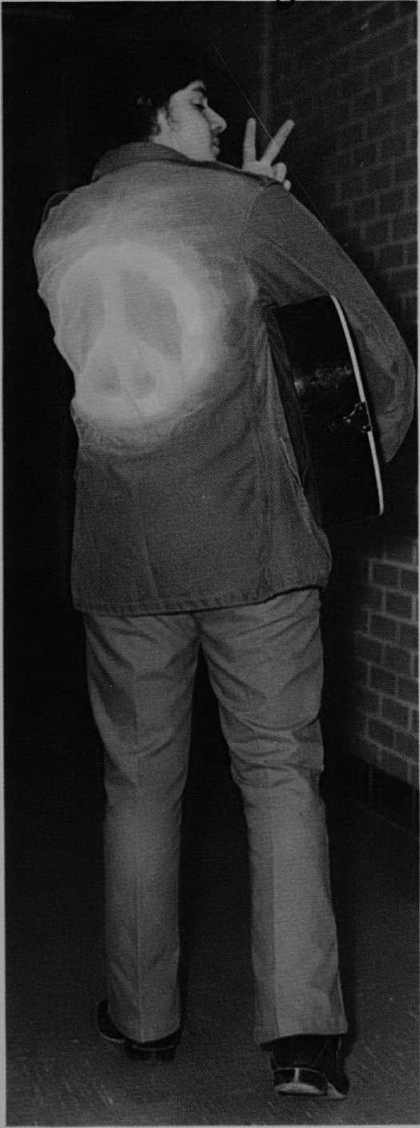

We write, speak

Our opinions must find expression, and each of us attempts to communicate our thoughts and feelings through the most effective means available to us. By leafletting in the community, a "Project 18" member expresses her convictions on the 18-year-old vote, while a Student Senate member debates the merits of open campus at Niles North before school board members. Many students find that school publications, both school-sanctioned and otherwise, are useful in airing their own views and informing others of new modes of opinion. Symbolically, we can display our hope for the future.

and use symbols to express our thoughts

We develop a music-oriented subculture

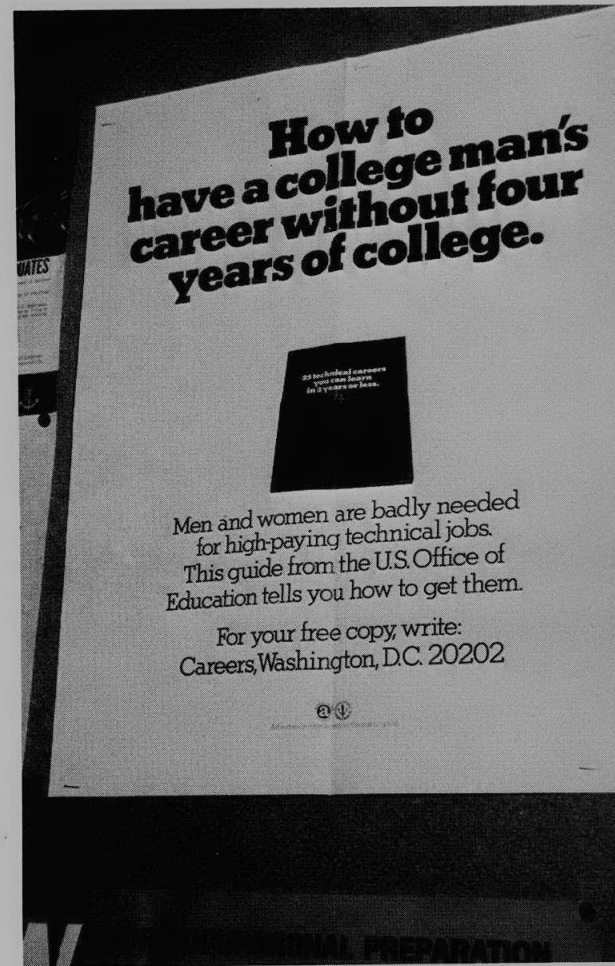

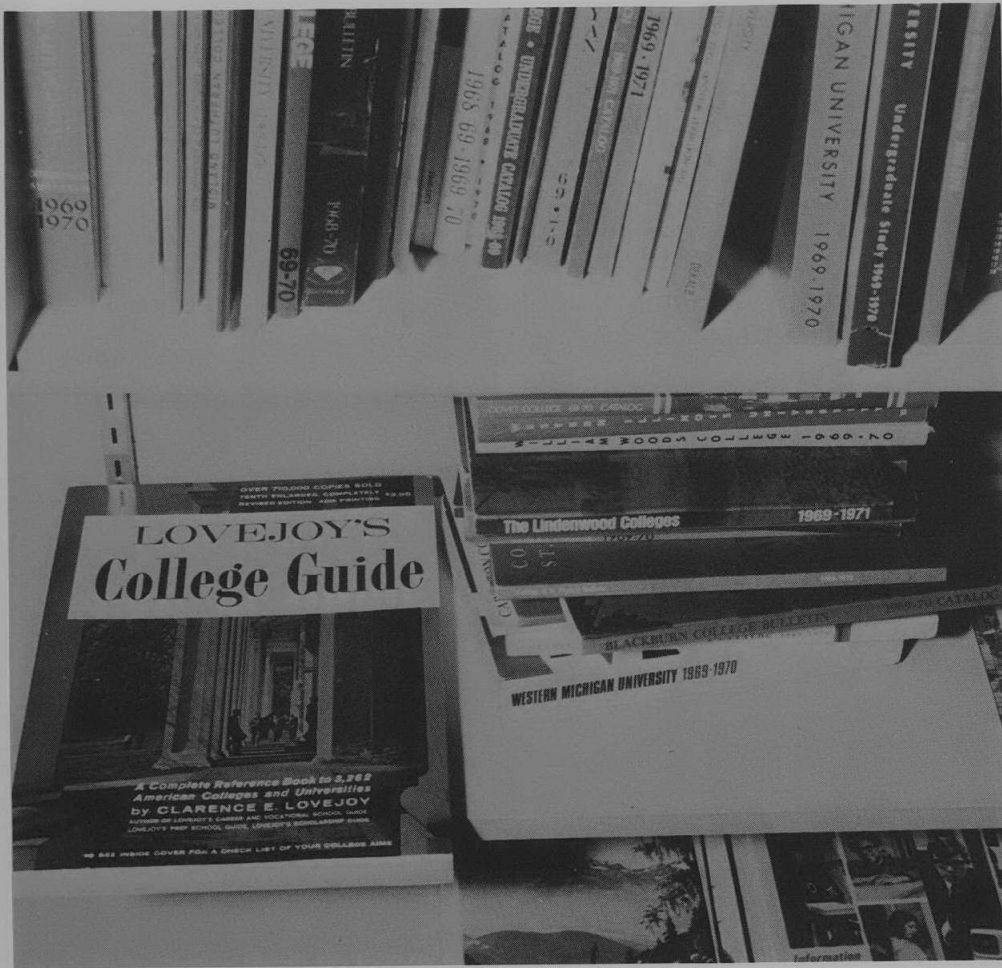

The guitar — a symbol of the Age of Rock. Like drugs and drinking, music offers an escape. We find it hard to resist the temptation to turn on the radio, play a record or listen to a tape. Music permeates our lives to such a degree that we identify ourselves with our kind of music — a rock generation. We hear Chicago, James Taylor, The Who and even our friends express the creed of the rock culture. Song lyrics expound our ideas on almost every aspect of the world situation. Rock, more than a musical genre to us, is a culture, a way to communicate.

We react differently towards school life

Most students have difficulty defining the role of school in their lives. To them, it is an unalterable fact of life. "That's the problem," says one student. "These people are the real silent majority. School has killed initiative at an early age. In kindergarten, kids draw something wild and the teacher says 'Why don't you draw a house or a tree? That doesn't look like anything.' I'm lucky, I survived. Most kids don't, which is the sad part." Complaints students have about school are often overshadowed by the fact that they can't imagine life without it. "About 75% of the things I do are connected with school," says a typical student.

We are molded by the family, influenced by the community

Our community. A nice place to live, say some. Not so good, says others. "I feel like a hypocrite," says one student. "I don't like the materialism associated with the suburbs. But, I like the cleanliness; it's a good place to live." "We aren't close enough with each other in the suburbs," criticizes a student. "I would like to live in a small settlement designed for groups of people who want to live together." Another student opts for a community where the pace of life is less hectic. But one person says, "Our community is good because it offers plenty of opportunities for involvement in activities and part-time employment."

Family life influences the development of the individual. It is just a question of what kind and how much. "I'm not home a lot. I sleep there and change clothes there but that's about all the contact that I have with my family during the school year," says one student. Another says, "My family is great. We come to a mutual agreement on every issue that comes up." Admitting his family's influence on him is hard for one student: "I like to let my parents influence me as little as possible, but I've been raised to accept the fact that they're a superior force. I've been molded into the image of my parents," he concludes.

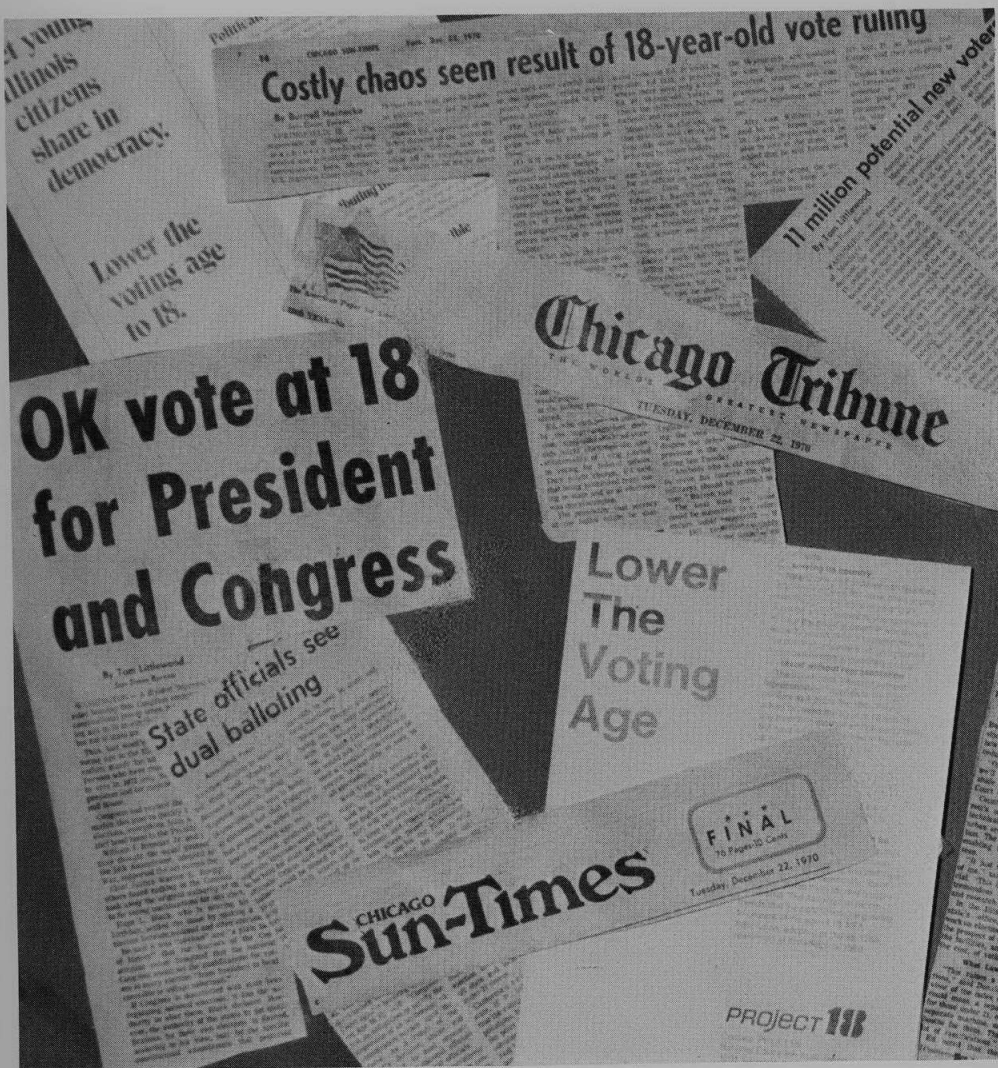

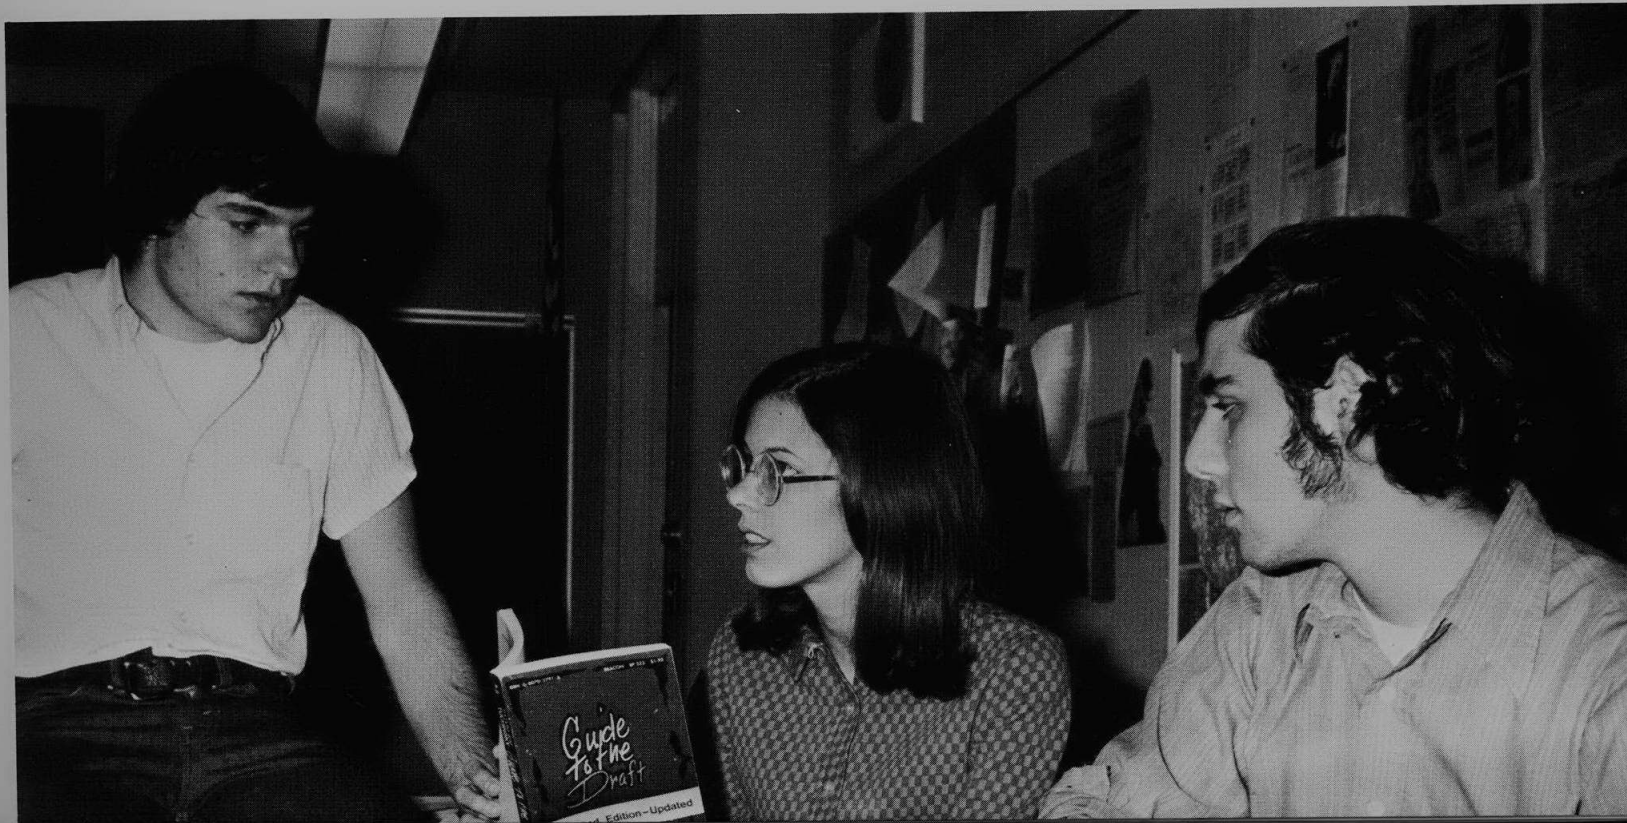

Students read the newspapers and listen to the news. Although many say that they aren't as aware as they would like to be, almost everyone has opinions on current issues. Pollution is cited as the top issue most often. Frequently, students hold the government responsible for it because they feel it is not harsh enough with offenders. One student places the blame on ourselves. "We acknowledge the problem but feel someone else will take care of it," he says. On the drug issue, many people find it hard to form opinions because of the lack of adequate research. While people can accept the use of marijuana, few condone the use of hard drugs. One student says, "Everyone has something to contribute to the world. You ruin what you have to contribute by taking drugs."

We voice opinions on today's major issues

The 18-year-old vote was a major issue this year. Almost no one denies that 18-year-olds should have the right to vote. But some express concern about young people using their voting privileges. "After the trouble kids went through to get the vote, many of them won't show up to register," says one senior. Students are split on the issues of war and the draft. "You can't abolish war. It's needed to keep the balance of power," remarks one student. Others are concerned with the human issue involved. "Sending people to take a machine to kill someone else is like taking a machine to kill yourself — you're as human as the guy who's being killed," a student says. Many students advocate an all-volunteer army but few say they will resist the draft.

We hold the future in our hands

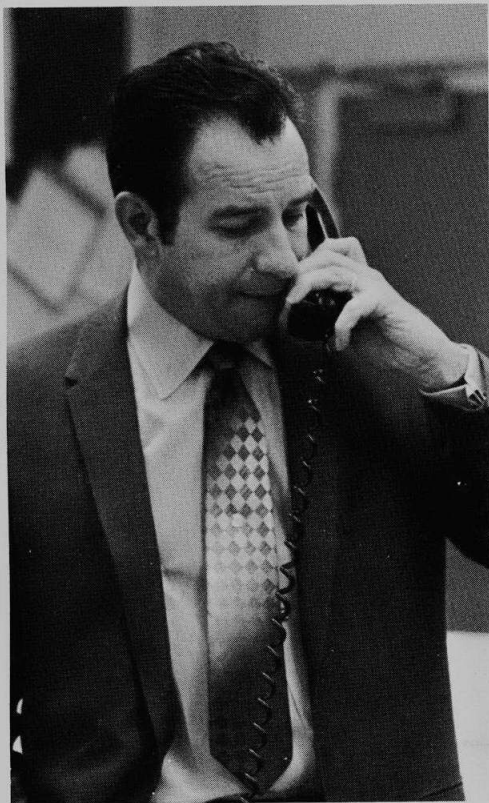

Confronting an uncertain future, we find ourselves responsible for its outcome. Molded by the developments of this era, we prepare to journey forth upon a virgin sea. "We have the power to make this the best generation in the history of mankind, or to make it the last."
— John F. Kennedy

Niles schools greet Superintendent Gibbs

LINES of concentration crease the brow of Dr. Wesley Gibbs as he listens to a caller.

Dr. Wesley Gibbs joined District 219 with a broad educational background. His primary goal for the year was decentralizing the district, giving more independence to each building. He created a less structured organization in order to permit rapid changes and easy communication between administration and schools. Parents, students, and faculty were involved in their own educational experience through participation in problem sensing groups.

MR. FRED LIFTON addresses the audience on the problems of drug use at a School Board meeting.

The Niles Township Community High School Board of Education is composed of concerned members of the community who wish to establish individualized educational opportunities for pupils of all three Niles schools. In trying to accomplish this, different systems of learning were instituted in each building. Issues were initiated or discarded on the basis of the varied requirements of each school. Modular scheduling and open lunch were put into action at North. Efforts were made to encourage involvement of students and teachers in discussions. In addition, textbooks, budget, new personnel and curriculum were attended to. The School Board showed a desire to support constructive changes that made each school more appropriate to current needs.

Northi administration views new approaches to education

DR. WELDY presents a football signed by the varsity gridders to Homecoming Queen Sue Rambert.

Having great interest in the efforts of both students and faculty in their adjustment to modular scheduling, Dr. Gilbert Weldy strived throughout the year to discover flaws in the new system and find ways to correct them. By detecting the differences between the two modes of scheduling, he was able to alter his methods of handling various situations to better suit the needs of the school. Working closely with the administration, Dr. Weldy spent long hours discussing and planning programs which would help to create a more relaxed school atmosphere. As a result of these conferences, open campus and the pass-fail system were put into effect.

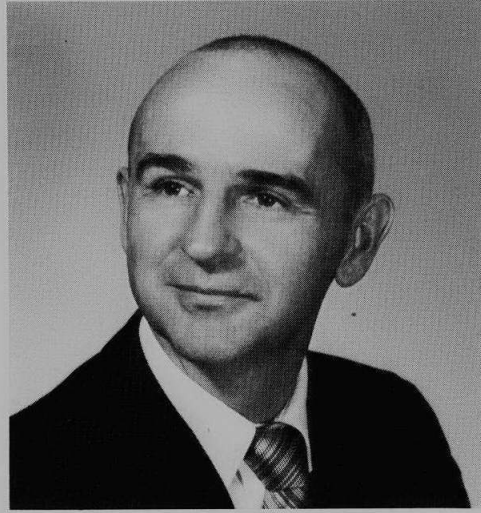

Finding time in his busy schedule, Dr. Weldy served as a coach for the forensics team. He assisted team members individually with the speeches. This brought him in closer contact with the student body and gave him the opportunity to learn about their goals.

The Niles North administrators have worked to organize the modular scheduling system into a beneficial framework for progressive education. After detailed planning on various committees to prepare for this new system, they coordinated the many aspects of academics into one educational unit. Hall principals Raymond Carrell, George Baptist, Harold Trapp, and Jack Morris worked together to maintain the various new policies throughout the school while Miss Virginia Landwehr, director of student services, handled the guidance procedures. Dr. George Bauer, director of physical welfare, helped to integrate the physical education program into the flexible modular system.

MOD SCHEDULING initially proved to be confusing, but quick adaptation to the system was easily accomplished due to student-teacher cooperation.

Modular scheduling brought to North ideas not unlike those practiced in many of the nation's progressive schools, but certainly radically different from methods of more conventional institutions. The school day was reorganized. Instead of the traditional nine period day, the time was divided into 30 mods of 15 minutes each. Greater responsibility was given to the student body due to the addition of open-campus programs and the further development of work study.

LARGE group scheduling allows teachers to give one lecture to several classes and provides a convenient opportunity for administering tests.

SMALLER groups offer an opportunity for discussions and time to work on assignments.

Unique relationships evolve

A new student-teacher relationship developed as a result of the greater flexibility in the organization of the school day and the informal basis on which students and teachers could meet under modular scheduling. Both students and teachers utilized their self-scheduled time to work with each other outside of class. Some courses, such as Individualized Reading and Individualized Composition, were based largely on personal relationships between teachers and students.

Yearbook staff members tried to capture the changes within our school system in SAGA '71. The transition from the traditional nine period a day schedule to modular scheduling and the institution of such programs as open lunch and APEX English formed the basis for Saga's theme, "Children of Change." The opening section tried to relate changes outside our school to those within. The different atmosphere in the school building and the increased use of outside resources were emphasized in the academics section.

North Star revises makeup, introduces pollution series

"There's a five inch hole on page three! . . . The photographer took pictures of the football game without any film in the camera . . . That's impossible! You couldn't have made Quill and Scroll in one issue" . . . This year the NORTH STAR staff overcame the basic problems encountered while trying to publish a newspaper and put out a publication which received an All-American rating for the fifth consecutive year. The make-up was changed to interlocking style in order to have more variety from issue to issue. This year the first issue of the NORTH STAR had a "Welcome Freshmen" section. Striving to create student awareness of the problems of today, the NORTH STAR ran a series on pollution for the first semester.

SENATE OFFICERS and assistant advisor Mrs. Elaine Roth ponder over a suggestion made to help improve communication between Senate and the student body.

Student Senate aimed for better communication in an informal atmosphere. All representatives participated in group dynamics during the first week of meetings so that they could enhance their ability to work among themselves.

Proposals were written concerning decreasing the value of final exams and having students choose their own teachers. Programs initiated through committee work included a coffee house where teenagers could meet and listen to live entertainment and Friday night movies. A campaign to cleanup the cafeteria was also a major concern of Senate this year.

"Senate attempted to inform and educate the students," says Ted Phelus, president of Student Senate.

Junior Class Board successfully reached its goal when Prom '71 was held on May 28.

Displaying their courage, Freshman Class Board attempted to collect class dues in order to establish a foundation in their treasury. Freshman Board had their first taste of bake sales, car washes and school dances. They acted as class leaders by establishing unity and helping the freshmen feel at ease and a part of Niles North.

Sophomore Class Board started off the year's varied activities by sponsoring the "Freshman Kick-off Dance." Hall Councils broaden interests through

A car which won second place in the homecoming parade was the first of many activities which Hall A Council sponsored this year. Later in October they sponsored a candy drive for the men stationed at the Great Lakes Naval Base Hospital. Secret Admirers' Day was continued this year. On this day people could send flowers anonymously to anyone in the school.

"Magical Connection" was chosen by Hall B Council as the theme for the fourth annual Turnabout Dance sponsored in December. The council also sold "I'm from Hall B" buttons and sponsored a booth at the carnival. A donation was given to the James Weil Scholarship Fund at the end of the year.

Groups construct models, collect records

Northi students' varied interests resulted in the formation of three new clubs this year.

Boys interested in building and flying model airplanes joined the Model Airplane Club. Meeting every two weeks, the club worked on the problems encountered in model building and attempted to fly their airplane models in the spring.

Model Railroad Club members were able to buy and sell trains. Several movies were seen and discussions revolved around the history of railroads. The club's major project was the building of their own model railroad.

Interested record buffs joined Hi-fi Club. The group took a field trip to a record manufacturer. They also planned a hi-fi show with booths sponsored by stores and manufacturers.

They also supplied technical assistance during homeroom presentations, concerts and community events held in the auditorium. Additional duties of the club included running movies and operating the stage whenever necessary during school as modular scheduling brought many classes to the auditorium.

Members of Radio-Electronics Club attempted to learn more about their common interests by exchanging ideas and watching several movies. Operating their amateur radio station, they were able to speak to radio operators in almost all of the 50 states and Canada. Club members were allowed to use any of the equipment in the radio-electronics room and could work on individual projects during their free mods.

THESPIAN Cynthia Dalesman applies makeup to a cast member of "Alice in Wonderland."

To become a member of National Thespian Troupe 113 a student must receive ten Thespian points by working 100 hours in at least two areas in the theater. The student must then stay active in the drama department to remain a Thespian. This year Thespians sponsored various fund-raising activities, including a "fancy flower" sale, so that they could take a field trip to see a theater production in downtown Chicago. The year culminated at the annual Thespian banquet where awards were given to outstanding Thespians.

Drama Club worked on improvisational theater as a major project this year. They progressed from theater games and trust exercises to improvisational scenes. Club members also worked on scenes from individual plays.

Orchestra members organized a candy sale to raise money and took over their own instrumental repair and cleaning. On the community level they participated in various orchestras including the Chicago Youth Symphony, the Chicago Civic Orchestra and the Skokie Valley Symphony.

Young Sounds, a new vocal group, completely arranged their own music. "They show what kids can do when they're left on their own but are highly motivated," comments Miss Wilcox.

The Viking Male Chorus is another new addition to Northi's music department. Under the direction of Mr. Louis Magor, they performed special arrangements for male choruses.

Concert Choir sang classical music during the winter and spring concerts. They also sponsored a float in the homecoming parade which won first place.

JUDY BLOCK, president of Students for Israel, introduces guest speaker Rafi Goldman, midwest coordinator of Students for Israel, before he addresses the group.

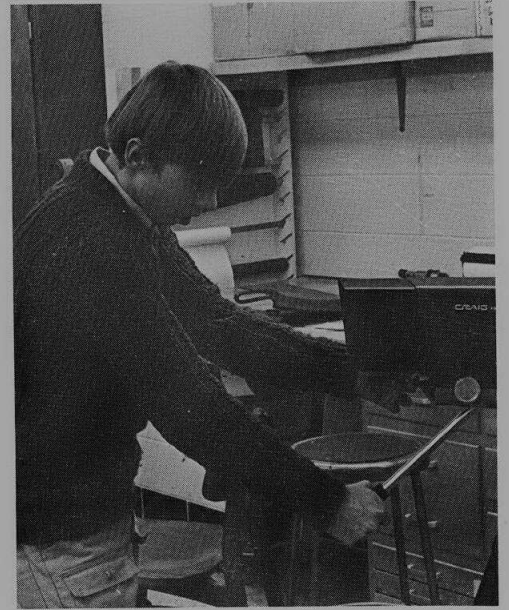

The scope of Niles North's activities was expanded this year with the addition of two organizations devoted to off-campus causes.

Students for Israel educated themselves on pro-Israeli arguments through outside readings and speakers in order to form a speaker's bureau. They planned to visit social studies classes to present their views. To raise money, the group sponsored an Israeli cafe where Israeli food was served and folk dancers entertained.

The ominous threat of environmental pollution sparked the formation of Students for Environmental Action. "We realized as a relatively small group we couldn't end all pollution so we decided to concentrate one area — solid waste disposal," says Mark Stein, SEA chairman. To eliminate the problem of non-returnable bottle and can pollution, the group set up areas in the community where these products were disposed.

HALL B FRESHMAN Mitchell Zvolner and his dragon companion look in the direction of the judges while anticipating the final tally.

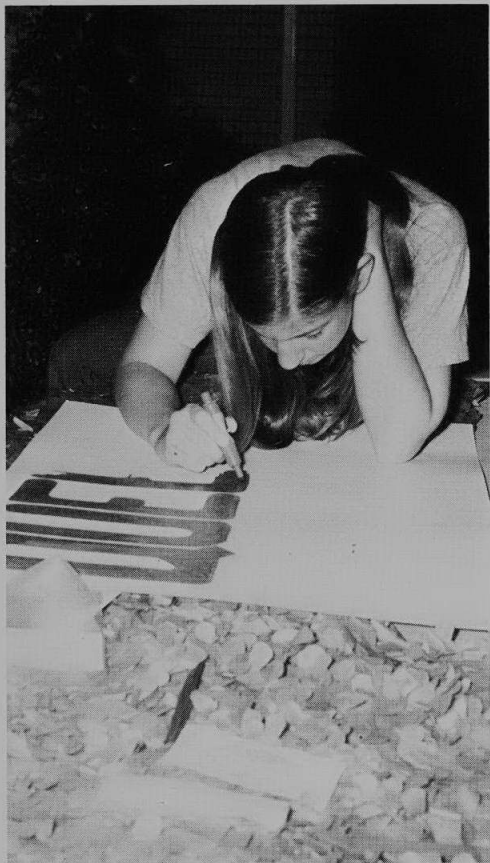

"Stop the Warrior Machine," Homecoming 1970, was a time for all students to participate and express school spirit. Activities started with an all-school pep assembly where varsity football players and members of the Homecoming court were introduced. Enie Rasenick, student director, invited all students to attend the week's well-planned festivities and introduced the Homecoming chairmen.

Students worked diligently on floats all day Friday. The twilight pep rally, held that night, featured the announcement of the queen, a snake dance around the track and the dramatic burning of the effigy. Saturday's list of activities began with the parade, went on to the alumni brunch, and was highlighted by a spectacular Viking victory.

Large turnout, casual dress describes 'Voice of Change'

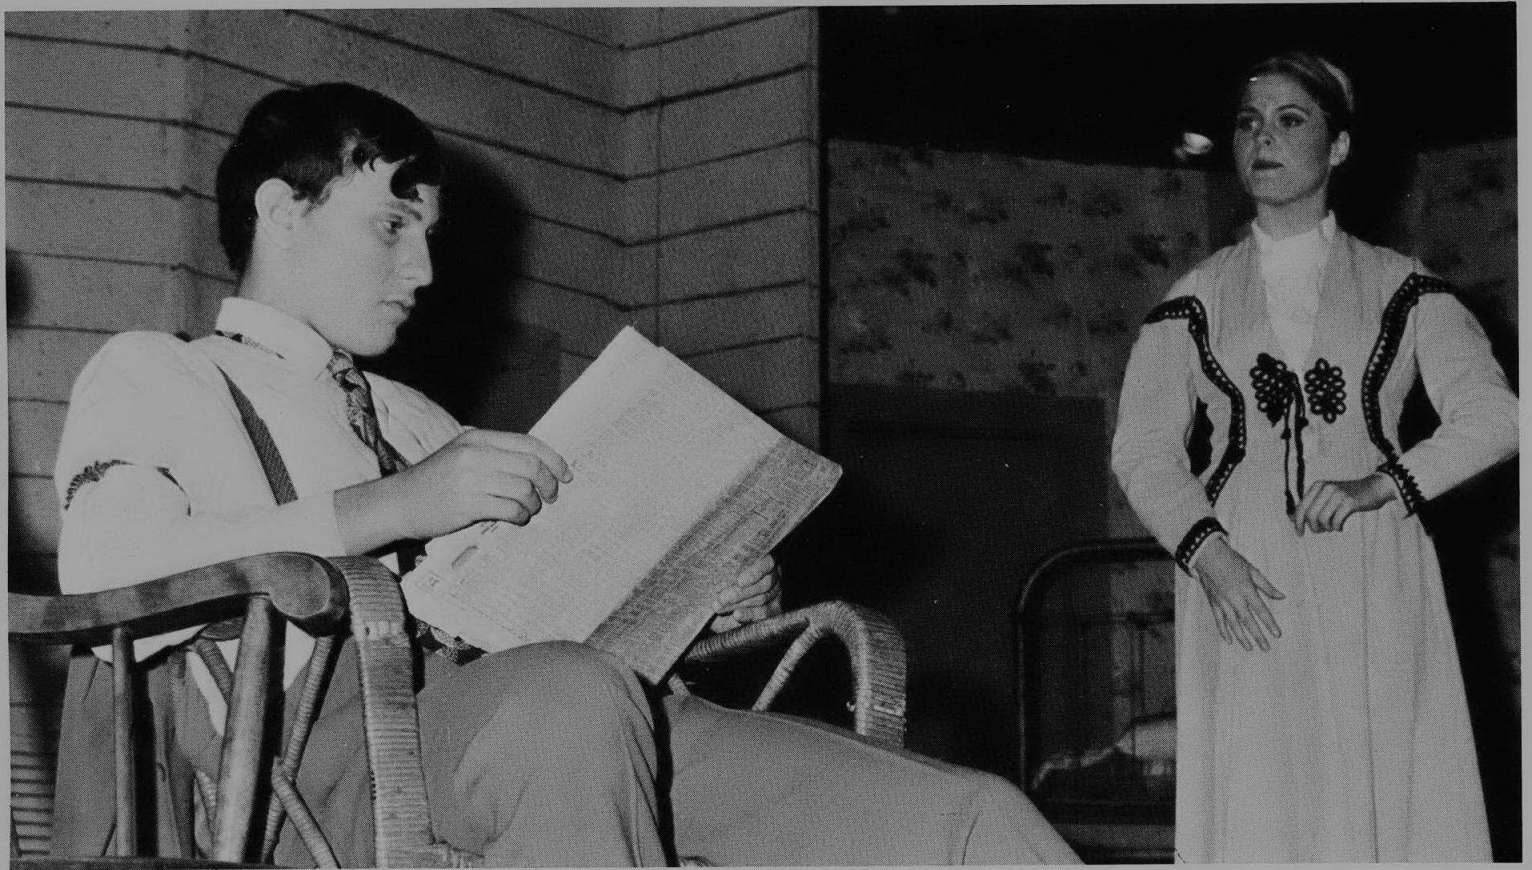

SUE RAMBERT smiles happily as she is crowned by last year's queen Lauri Lazarus.

This was a year of change at Northi, and the traditional homecoming dance was not left untouched. "Voice of Change," sponsored by Senior Class Board, was an experiment that proved to be successful as evidenced by attendance that more than doubled over last year. The majority of students and alumni dressed casually for the dance and the atmosphere was relaxed.

Entertainment was provided by the nationally famous country-rock group Mason Proffit, and Wagner and Little filled the number two spot. The Sound Manufacturing Company, a Northi group, was also featured. Students who sat and watched the groups perform contributed to a concert atmosphere.

The coronation of the queen and her court, which climaxed the weekend, was given a special touch by a shower of balloons that fell over the reigning queen as she approached her throne.

Homecoming '70 strived to involve the entire student body; "Voice of Change" seemingly accomplished that goal.

YOUNG EUGENE GANT falls in love with Laura James, a pretty new boarder from Richmond.

"Look Homeward, Angel," a play based on Thomas Wolfe's novel, was a tragic story of a Southern family that dissolves. The play was chosen partly because of the large number of characters of both sexes that it accommodates.

Stage-craft classes, taught by Mr. Richard Hashagen, built the entire set. The focal point was a twelve-foot marble statue of an angel located in Mr. Gant's stone cutter workshop.

"I want to find the world. Where is the world?" Eugene Gant exits with that hope. Is it not so far away from the hopes of people today?

It's Academic: annual battle of brains

It's Academic, a televised quiz show, always proves to be a challenging event for Northi. This year's team, consisting of three senior members, managed to maintain a close second place in their duel against Maine East and Glenbard West. The team was leading through the first three rounds but could not keep up during the final grab bag section. Just thirty points separated the first place team, Main East, and Niles North at the completion of the game.

VIKING fans congratulate the team members on their fine performance.

Teach-ins expound on life, love, brotherhood, religion

THE RANDOM SAMPLE entertains Northi with a medley of popular and religious tunes.

Teach-ins at Northi witnessed a change this year — they became less formal and more entertainment-oriented. Human relations committee sponsored a Viet Nam teach-in and presented both sides of the issue by inviting both hawk and dove advocates to speak.

"Help Close the People Gap," a teach-in sponsored by Campus Life, strove to do what its title implied. Jay Kessler, organizer for the nation-wide youth group, spoke on "Love in a Cruddy World" while Milt Richards, a professional football player, chose "There's More to Life than Gatorade" as the topic for his presentation.

"Sing Out for Betsy" was student-sponsored and student-executed. The teach-in was in memory of Betsy Smith, a senior at North who died in an automobile accident during Thanksgiving vacation. During the Sing-Out, students contributed to the Betsy Smith Memorial Fund which will award a scholarship to a Northi student who is active in the Niles North music department.

Willing suspension of disbelief is a quality that, if used, can make any story-book tale a living reality. "Alice in Wonderland," a tale of a little girl's vivid imagination which progressed through her dreams, is a play that requires a childlike curiosity from both audience and actors.

Miss Linda Balkin directed the show with this in mind. The cast played theatre games to help achieve authenticity in their roles. The crew built the set with the dream quality in its proper perspective. Both adults and children joined Alice on her journey to Wonderland.

Northi displays speaking, musical talents

Northi students demonstrated their musical and oratorical skills through various channels. Students in the music department presented a choral concert in March which included a Cantata by Bach as the major portion of the program. The newly-formed Viking Male Chorus performed "Bridge Over Troubled Waters," lending a more contemporary air to the concert.

The traditional Holiday Concert included a wide variety of musical selections. The concert band performed "Flower Drum Song" while the orchestra played pieces from Rumanian folk dances.

The annual speech contest, previously sponsored by the American Legion, celebrated its 25th year at Niles. Any student willing to write and deliver an oration was eligible to enter. Topics covered a wide range such as birth control, pollution and the horrors of the Cook County Jail. The contest drew ten contestants and prizes were awarded by the PTSA.

Over 2,000 people occupied North's gym on the evening of March 6. Parents and students sat anxiously awaiting the arrival of The Association, a renowned rock group. The Association concert was sponsored by Junior Class Board "who worked diligently to make it a success," said Arthur Simon, junior class president. "To see the faces of an enthusiastic audience made all our efforts worthwhile," he added.

The crowd was captivated by such Association hits as "Cherish," "Windy" and "Along Comes Mary." The Association, who have always had a reputation of excelling in live performances, did not disappoint Northi. They successfully created a personal attachment with the audience. The concert culminated with "Enter The Young" even though the standing audience demanded more.

and creativity

MUSIC DIRECTOR Bob Filler and co-chairmen David Bernstein and Gail Myers discuss the show.

Norsecapades, the annual talent show, innovated a new format this year. "Paint Box" was a collage of student acts that flowed together without the aid of an extraneous story line. The show featured three production numbers. The opening and closing numbers were written by student musical director Bob Filler. "Applause," a number from the Broadway musical, was also staged. Many members of the cast performed in more than one act, contributing to a more professional atmosphere.

Norsecapades, like other school functions, ran on a low budget. The lack of funds did not hinder the show but forced more originality in costumes and set designs. Wooden blocks that could be moved to create multiple effects constituted the set.

"Paint Box," the result of eight weeks of work, was a creative and colorful display of both musical and theatrical talent.

Grads leave Northi to face new challenges

EXCITEMENT prevails as students pass through Northi halls, this time as graduates.

Daily homerooms and study halls, Viking Week and Friday night sock-hops — all are part of Northi's past. Through four years of high school, seniors have witnessed these and many other changes. The time passed slowly for some, swiftly for others, but all know it will never return.

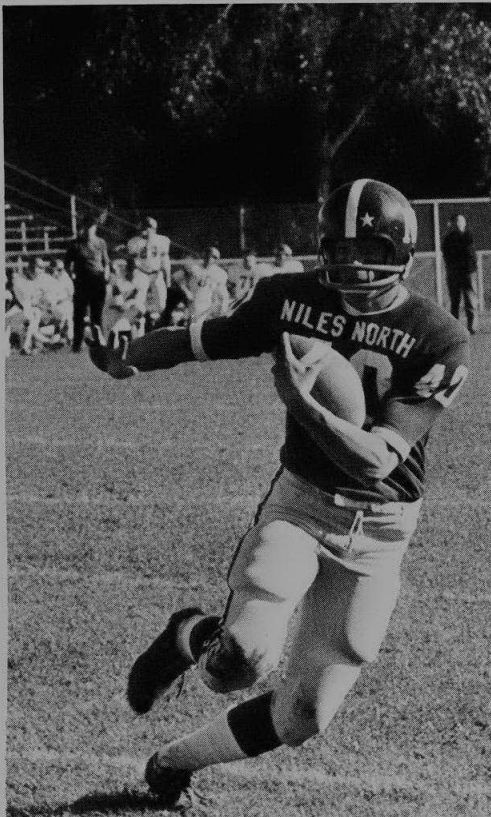

As the class of '71 reaches commencement, fond memories are all that remain. This class has overcome challenges and crossed many hurdles together. They have grown and changed along with Northi. They leave ready to confront situations of the outside world.

Harriers win control of township trophy

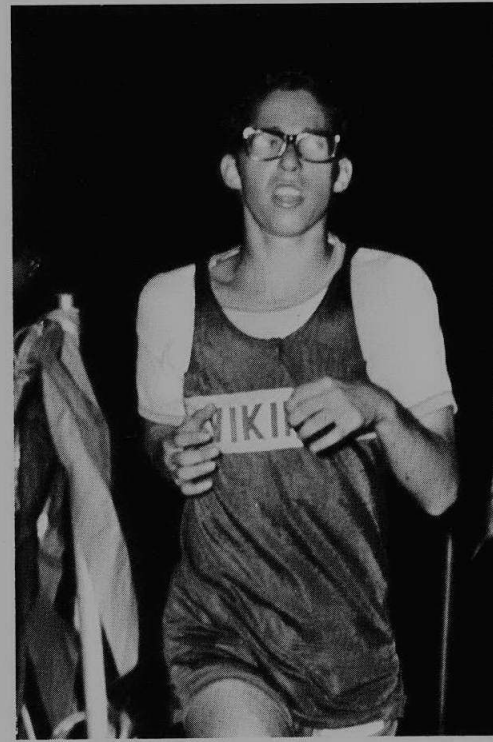

Beginning the season by placing sixth out of 23 teams at the Riverside-Brookfield Invitational, the varsity cross country team, under Coach Ralph Lyerla, went on to compile a 3-5 record. The harriers were recipients of the township trophy after winning the township meet for the third year in a row.

In other non-conference competition, the team placed eighth out of 18 schools at the Ridgewood Invitational, and at the Glenbrook Invitational Gil Berdine, Mitchell Brachman, Rory Packer and Fred Kuhn returned to Northi with medals. At the Central Suburban League Meet, the harriers took a fourth out of nine schools competing.

Roger Kuhnle was voted by his teammates as the most valuable member while Steve Dennen was selected as the runner who showed the most improvement. Fred Kuhn was elected the most consistent harrier for this year's team.

Coach Jim Lund's varsity cagers were a young team this year, having only three seniors on the squad. In CSL competition the Vikings achieved a 2-12 slate and a disappointing last place finish. High points of the season were the team's victories over Morton East, Niles West, and Glenbrook South. At the conclusion of the season, team members voted junior Keith Schirmer as most valuable player and chose senior Dan Rosenthal as honorary captain. Junior Dennis Cooper also proved to be a key member of the Viking squad.

N Club benefits athletics, boosts spirit

N CLUB president Alan Poznansky addresses the annual Spring Awards Night Banquet.

N Club members are individuals who have attained excellence in specialized athletic activities. As a group they establish goals which, when met, become great assets to the school community. An analyzer film projector was purchased with funds raised during North's first sweater sale. Alumni Fun Night, an annual event, and button sales are both N Club activities that serve to promote school spirit and raise additional funds for future goals. The purchase of a trophy case will be the club's next major project.

GAA furnishes broad range of activities, offers intramurals, sponsors co-ed nights

CARLA WEIL supplies the refreshments for Coach Ralph Lyerla at the GAA co-ed night.

By offering a variety of after school intramural activities, including basketball, volleyball, bowling, badminton, tennis and slimnastics, GAA enabled more students to participate in their favorite sports. GAA sponsored three successful co-ed nights, opening all gyms and the pool for activity. At the Eighth Grade Playday, girls from Old Orchard and Golf Junior high schools saw a demonstration by each of the GAA clubs. After presenting awards to active members at the awards banquet in May, GAA sponsored a camping trip to Michigan as its final activity for the year.

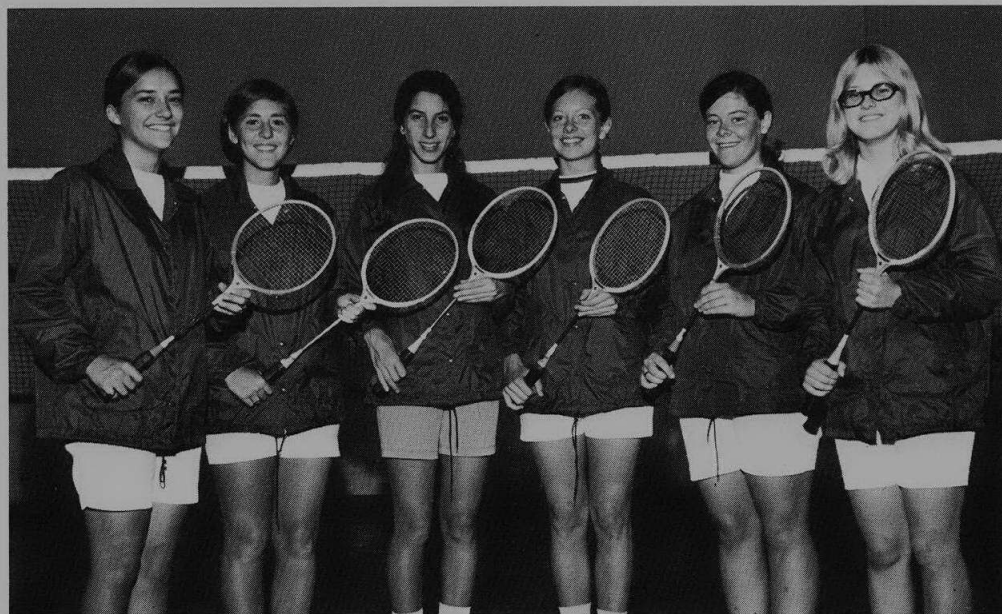

Tennis, badminton improve season records

BADMINTON team member Elaine Rosenberg practices in the gym for her next meet.

GAA's interscholastic competition finds its major participants in both the tennis and badminton teams. In both activities, the season's records profited due to the large number of changes that took place. The tennis team finished its season with the satisfaction of having improved over last year. The badminton team also experienced a rewarding season due to the return of its two top doubles teams.

Leaders and Timers are credited with performing invaluable services to the school. Girls who have completed the two years of leaders instruction become assistants to gym teachers. Timers are a necessary part of all swim meets as they take and record each swimmer's time. Both groups approached their jobs with a very professional attitude.

Cygnettes, the girls' swim club, provides the instruction for girls interested in learning the numerous strokes and stunts involved in this special form of swimming. The incorporation of grace and endurance with the skills was demonstrated in the Cygnettes' annual show, "Hats Off." Each routine in the show was choreographed by the club members. Auroris, the modern dance club, offers the development of agility and grace through the modern dance media. Group learning, dance techniques and exercises are also stressed. The annual show, "Dimensions," is a production that requires five months of constant energy by the girls. The choreography and costumes for each dance in the show were the responsibilities of individual members. Another GAA club, Gymnastics, began the year's activities with a demonstration held for junior high school students. The next major event was the annual Gymnastic show, "Spectrum." The perfection of skills for both the show and exhibition meets require an enormous amount of dedication on the part of the gymnast.

Cygnettes, Auroris, gymnasts demonstrate

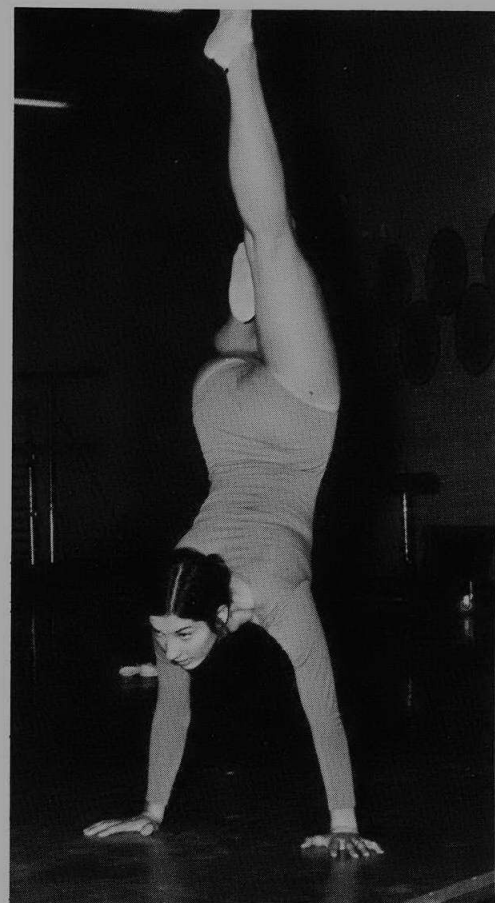

"SPECTRUM," the annual gymnastic show, called for perfection and grace. Marlene Wayne demonstrates this by executing an arabesque during her routine on the balance beam.

KAREN KAUFMAN closes her dance on a peaceful note in the annual Auroris show.

ONE OF THE most difficult positions to attain on the balance beam is the Japanese splits. Toby Wenger exhibits this pose in the gymnastic club's presentation of "Spectrum."

Twirler, Vikette squads entertain sports

Vikette and Twirler performances have become anticipated events at football halftimes. The Twirlers have increased the size of the squad and have changed their uniforms. Both add to the impressiveness of their routines.

Vikettes, North's pompon squad, has evolved progressively in its three year existence. The first year was a time of trial and error; the second, a year of experimentation and change; but past struggles have proven worthwhile in the club's third year. Favorable recognition by the student body is a constant reward to the eighteen-girl squad for the time that has been devoted to achieve a successful performing group this year.

AT THE WINTER sports pep rally, the varsity squad began the season on an optimistic note.

MASCOT Mark Goldberg helps to instill enthusiasm at most Viking sports events.

Spirit, skill characterizes varsity squad

Varsity cheerleaders began their roles as Northi's primary cheerleading squad when they attended the U.S.C.A. Camp last summer. This has become an annual event for the squad and the girls feel that the experience provides them with many new cheering techniques and skills. The varsity squad found it necessary to increase their fund raising activities this year to take care of camp expenses. Two car washes were sponsored and a Fall Sports Booklet was compiled and sold. The planning of most pep assemblies was the responsibility of the varsity cheerleaders. The pep assembly for Homecoming was highlighted by the squad's pom pon routine, "Let's Go."

HOMECOMING spirit remains with the varsity squad throughout the year's sports seasons.

Juniors: upperclassmen at last ... gaining new responsibilities ... selling homecoming mums ... working over the summer months planning for prom ... preparing for the future by taking college board exams ... having the first junior Victor Viking ... cheering their teams on to victory ... joining the rest of Northi in adjusting to modular scheduling ... becoming more secure with themselves as individuals ... developing their own thoughts and ideas without the assistance of others ... juniors ... children of change.

MERYL DOREN and Jay Tarshis take advantage of the good weather by relaxing in the cafeteria courtyard during their unscheduled time.

Sophs boast School Board representative

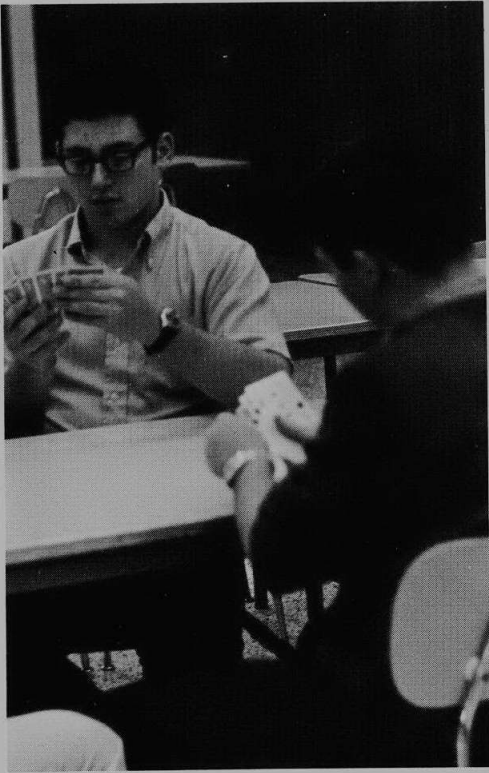

STUDENTS listen to a guest speaker in the auditorium. Modular scheduling permitted the homerooms to alter their programs to suit the pupils' needs.

Sophomores ... a class active in school events ... voicing opinions on the school board through Marty Zwick ... contributing talents to the school dramatic productions ... sponsoring Carnival '71 ... selling purple shoelaces ... organizing a sophomore cheering section ... training aspiring athletes for varsity level competition ... learning to operate a motor vehicle in driver education ... tackling the problems of geometry ... facing their pressures with a different outlook ... a year of experience ... sophomores ... children of change.

PROOFS and theorems presented in geometry pose a challenge to Donna Weitzman and Terry Keefe.

ALAN KALFEN and Bob Weisman make use of the new privilege of card playing in the cafeteria.

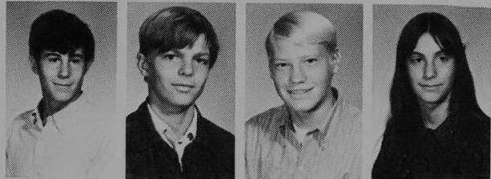

STRATEGY of the next play is explained to tackle Mark Schroeder by Coach Donald Browning.

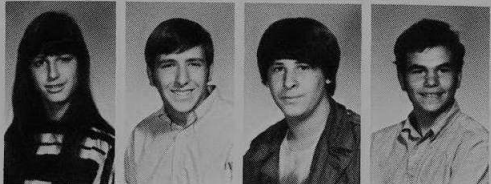

CATHERINE RANDELL'S pensive mood is complemented by the inclement weather outside.

RON DECHTER finds the new early bus schedules most convenient, especially with the initiation of modular scheduling and open campus.

Freshmen seek understanding of education

CONTEMPLATING the events of the ending day, Jeff Weber awaits the arrival of the bus.

Freshmen: making the change to a high school world ... experiencing new facets of education ... encountering the confusion of modular scheduling ... facing final exams for the first time with anticipation and fear ... becoming part of extra-curricular activities ... seeking involvement in student government to work for improvement at Northi ... making new friends while retaining old ones ... striving to unify themselves as the Class of 1974 ... freshmen ... children of change.

HOWARD SINGER, Mike Salberg and Mindy Turbov combine schoolwork with pleasure in the cafeteria.

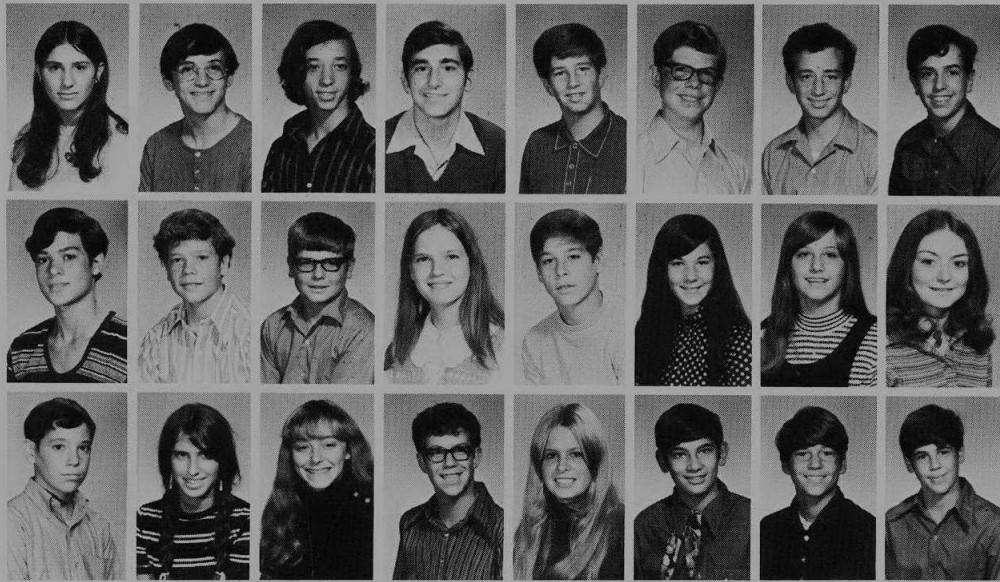

FINDING enjoyment in Girls' Glee are Jeanne Bavaro, Karen Mihina and Nancy Heether.

JEFFREY NEU experiences the trials of being a freshman as he looks ahead to the long hours of studying in the English Resource Center.

IN THE STILLNESS of the quiet study area, Sharon Soderberg prepares her French assignment.

1970-1971 Saga Staff

Now that it's all over . . .

Two hundred and seventy-two pages have miraculously been filled. In the process, we've used thousands of pieces of typing paper, carbon paper, layout sheets, the works. We've worn out a couple of typewriters . . . ourselves . . . and often, our parents. We've experienced a great deal of both cooperation and conflict. We've cropped our last picture of the year and rushed to meet a deadline for the final time . . .

We now pause to reflect on what we've witnessed during the course of the year. You may not like the SAGA 1971 for things either said or unsaid, for pictures included or excluded. If you feel like this, we sincerely hope that next year's SAGA will be more to your liking. We too, like all editors before and those to come, are both satisfied and disappointed with the end result. We exemplify the theme of "Children of Change" in that we have had to alter many of our original concepts from the beginning to the end.

In so doing, though, we received a great deal of help from many people. With this in mind, we owe a very special thanks to each member of the staff: to Phil Jacks, who created all of the artwork; to Mr. Michael Almeida, our link with American Yearbook Company; to all the Root Photographers, with special appreciation to Jim Morgan and Len Novak; and finally, to Miss Maureen Armbruster, our advisor, who invested an enormous amount of time in the preparation of this book. Thank you. Terri Smalinsky and Elisa Spungen, Co-editors-in-chief.
