CHECKING IN CHECKING IN

1. On my first day at Niles West I $\square$ got locked inside my locker by a senior.
$\square$ brought treats for my homeroom.
$\square$ accidentally went into the wrong bathroom.
$\square$ spent the day in BAC.
2. The first time I parked in the student lot I $\square$ backed into 285 pound Joe Schmoe's brand new Porshe.
$\square$ was allowed to park in the handicap space due to a broken pinky.
$\square$ found out that I was in the teacher's lot, thus obtaining a ticket.
$\square$ hit Dr. Ring's car before turning into the lot, giving me another day in BAC.
3. Before school every morning I watch $\square$ the weather.
$\square$ the Thundercats.
$\square$ Tom and Jerry.
$\square$ the time pass in BAC.
4. The first time I went to see my dean I $\square$ cried hysterically and begged him not to give me a detention.
$\square$ shook his hand and introduced myself.
$\square$ called my mom to come in with me.
$\square$ got assigned to BAC.
5. Dressing myself for school was easy because I $\square$ coordinated a perfectly matched outfit the night before.
$\square$ wore the same thing every day.
$\square$ grabbed the closest thing on my floor.
$\square$ came in my pajamas.
6. My first time at the Homecoming dance I $\square$ stood in the corner waiting until most of the seniors were off the dance floor.
$\square$ showed off my incredible dancing talents, giving me a spot on the next Dance Fever.
$\square$ fell asleep because the dance started an hour past my bedtime.
$\square$ talked to the chaperons about my BAC's.
7. In the cafeteria I
$\square$ studied diligently for my next class.
$\square$ patrolled all of the tables to make sure everyone threw away their garbage.
$\square$ waited politely at the end of the lunch line for my turn.
$\square$ bought a cellophane wrapped sandwich and took it back to BAC with me.
8. At the first basketball game I ...
$\square$ scored for the other team.
$\square$ won the game for us by scoring all the points.
$\square$ fell off the bleachers and broke my toe.
$\square$ was assigned to another BAC for threatening the other team's cheerleaders.
9. Every morning in homeroom I
$\square$ sat in my seat attentively and made sure not to miss any announcements.
$\square$ fell asleep.
$\square$ made 101 excuses for being late again.
$\square$ got called down to BAC.
10. My locker was
$\square$ empty (because I carried all my books around with me.)
$\square$ covered with pictures of my hearthrobs.
$\square$ equipped with a mirror for periodical grooming between classes.
$\square$ a complete disaster.
11. On my first date I
$\square$ spilled a drink on my date.
$\square$ got something black stuck between my teeth.
$\square$ burped in a fancy restaurant.
$\square$ talked about school (and all my BAC's).
12. After school I usually $\square$ stayed after for extra curricular activities.
$\square$ went straight to the library to begin studying.
$\square$ raced home to watch the last 5 minutes of General Hospital.
$\square$ left the BAC room and headed for room 140 to serve my detention.
13. During a fire drill I
$\square$ fainted from excitement.
$\square$ scanned the school looking for the fire.
$\square$ told on the person who pulled the alarm.
$\square$ remained seated in BAC until my dean thought of my punishment for pulling the alarm.
14. The day before holiday break I.
$\square$ caught the chicken pox and stayed in the entire 2 weeks.
$\square$ baked Christmas cookies for all of my teachers.
$\square$ started my vacation early by not coming to school at all.
$\square$ completed my list to Santa Claus instead of doing homework during BAC.
15. The first thing I did when I got up in the morning was $\square$ looked at myself in the mirror and wondered why they call it "beauty sleep".
$\square$ put on my Mickey Mouse slippers.
$\square$ used the toilet.
$\square$ turned on the lights because I'm afraid of the dark.
16. When I stayed home sick I $\square$ watched Scooby Doo.
$\square$ went shopping.

Sophomore Gloria Catanese and junior DEanielle Singer cuddle together to keep warm during a football game. Dedicated Indians fans faithfully attend sporting events regardless of the weather.

CHECKING IN CHECKING IN

$\square$ called all my teachers to find out what homework I missed.
$\square$ celebrated for missing a day of BAC.
DEC 2005
17. When I had my phone number written on the bathroom wall I $\square$ told the dean.
$\square$ covered it with liquid paper.
$\square$ stayed home from school.
$\square$ got caught while writing it and received another day in BAC.
18. When I was assigned homework I
$\square$ wrote it in my Chandler's immediately so I wouldn't forget it.
$\square$ got the answers over the phone from my classmates.
$\square$ didn't bother doing it at all.
$\square$ did it while sitting in BAC.
19. During a test I
$\square$ concentrated and took my time.
$\square$ copied the answers off my shoe.
$\square$ fell into a deep sleep and snored loudly.
$\square$ got caught cheating off of the smartest person in the class, therefore ending up in BAC.
20. When I got to school every morning I $\square$ went straight to the bathroom to fix my hair.
$\square$ ran to my first class since I already missed homeroom.
$\square$ sat in the cafeteria socializing with friends.
$\square$ went to homeroom at 7:00 sharp to get a good seat in in the first row.
21. During the Back to School pep assembly I $\square$ studied.
$\square$ cheered for the wrong class.
$\square$ kept screwing up "the wave".
$\square$ threw toilet paper at a dean, and therefore got sent to BAC.
22. The first time I forgot my locker combination I $\square$ stole someone else's books.
$\square$ went out to lunch instead of going to class.
$\square$ cried while I waited for my locker partner to come open the locker.
$\square$ saved myself the trouble and went directly to the BAC room.
23. The dumbest thing I ever did was ...
$\square$ color coordinated my spirals with my folders and textbooks.
$\square$ wrote down all my teachers birthdays so that I could buy them presents.
$\square$ brought my parents with me to a school dance so they $\square$ could take pictures of me and my date.
$\square$ actually brought homework with me to BAC.
24. During gym class I
$\square$ always wore my uniform to receive all my points.
$\square$ volunteered to run the mile several times for extra credit.
$\square$ threw a basketball at my teacher and knocked him/her out.
$\square$ was sent to BAC for pushing a freshman into the pool.
25. My favorite class was $\square$ gym.
$\square$ lunch.
$\square$ study hall.
BAC.

Many students choose not to have a study hall, and therefore must complete homework during other free time. Senior Janet Till finds a quiet spot to catch up on some reading before her big test.

Students take time during study hall to check last night's homework. This way, they'll be sure to receive an A.

The Varsity cheerleaders join hands in celebrating a magnificent Indian victory. Hours of practice were dedicated by the cheerleaders to make their excellent performances possible.

Another exceptional pass is acknowledged by Midnight Pider members Lynn Pappas. Estelle Nikolakakis, Ivy Kron, and Stacy Lutz. Junior Midnight Riders enjoy their first year of being on the club.

As senior year approaches, college pressures become more demanding than ever. Ramel Failma and Craig Gramatis listen attentively to what is expected from them by the colleges of their choice.

Clever jailbird Lori Utanoff chains herself to Art Hortua and throws away the keys. Halloween brings about many distinct and startling ideas among students.

Senior class members take a field trip to the well-known Ed Debevics in downtown Chicago. Field trips offer a learning experience, as well as a change of pace, to everyday school life.

Many special moments are experienced throughout a student's four high school years Senior Caryn Berk and date hap pily share one of those special moments at the 1987 Homecom ing Ball.

The special night has finally arrived! Senior Karin Orsic anticipates a fun-filled evening while waiting for her date.

Karyn Elliott, one of the ten nominees for Homecoming Queen, and Craig Gramatis, nominee for King, enjoy a pleasant ride down Oakton street during the parade. Many clubs also took part in the parade with creative multicolored floats.

Along with the high ranked status of "the senior class" comes the privilege of being nominated to Homecoming court. King and Queen nominees anxiously await the results of the election.

Checking In

Early every weekday morning, the tranquil, undisturbed halls of NiWeHi undergo a remote transformation. Students begin to pile into the building by the dozens, and tranquility is suddenly replaced by an explosion of ear-piercing voices. "Checking In" has become a daily ritual of these high school students. It acknowledges the start of another challenging school day.
Students riding the school bus usually arrive first, thus enjoying a full 30 minute free time. They await the appearance of their buses at various stops throughout Lincolnwood, Morton Grove, Niles, and Skokie. More fortunate students, normally upperclassmen, have the privilege of driving to school. Students prefer to drive rather than take the bus because it means an extra half hour of sleep and a later departure from home. Nevertheless, even driving has its disadvantages. Arriving at school later often means searching for a parking space, and sometimes walking from the far end of the lot in bad weather.

Once inside the building, the majority of students lounge in the cafeteria. A manifold of loud, chattering voices echo throughout the cafeteria, Oakton Lobby, and hallways. Others prefer a more serene environment, choosing the library or resource centers to complete homework. An overabundance of students wait for their turn in front of the overcrowded bathroom mirrors, and the pounding of basketballs vibrate throughout the contest gym.

Finally, the $7: 30$ bell sounds. The previously crowded hallways are suddenly empty and peaceful. Only the familiar sound of the P.A. announcements can be heard. Another school day has begun.

A smile of satisfaction appears on senior Jinjer Brody's face as she completes a perfectly coordinated routine. As usual, the pom pon girls use creativity and skillful moves to impress their audience.

Junior Calvin Ramseyer enjoys the excess attention he receives after his unfortunate injury. Close friends and classmates take time out of their schedules to comfort him.

Checking Up On Vocabulary

Any intelligent student at Niles West knows the importance of a well developed vocabulary. No matter what class a student takes, vocabulary always plays a part. Vocabulary can even help a student relate to both past events, and new experiences. Every high school student should know these few terms:

Freshman (fesh/mən), 1. Undermostclassman. 2. A student who buys elevator passes. 3. A student who looks for homeroom grade on his report card. 4. Someone who brings home every book and studies them vigorously, even though homework wasn't assigned. 5. A student who wanders aimlessly.

Sophomore (sof/a môr), 1. Underclassman. 2. A student who thinks he knows what he is doing, but doesn't. 3. A student who rules the busses since juniors and seniors don't take them.

Junior (jun/yor), 1. Upperclassman. 2. A student who realizes college is around the corner. 3. A victim of the ACT and SAT.

Senior (sen/yər), 1. Uppermostclassman. 2. A student who knows what to do yet prefers not to do it. 3. One whose main function is laziness. 4. A student who knows, loves, and anxiously waits for David Letterman to come on. 5. A student who suffers from senioritis.

Senioritis (sen/yər itis), 1. The incurable disease of desiring to graduate from high school without working. 2. Disease can affect a senior only 3 . symptoms include: laziness, boredom, lack of sleep, and carelessness.

Junior Jenny Duda is deeply touched by a compliment she has just received from a friend. Sometimes a few simple words from others can brighten up a student's day.

Varsity football players Brian Buehling and Pablo Blanco receive explosive cheers from a rowdy audience. With that boost of confidence, players feel more secure about the upcoming game.

As Indian fans 'watch attentively from the bleachers, the Varsity football team prepares for another clever play. Daily practice is required of team members throughout the season.

Mobs of excited students support the Indians as they advance to another victory. School sporting events prove to be popular among NiWeHi students, and usually result in an abundance of attendants.

Sophomore punkers Denise Panoutsos and Lilliana Engel discuss how they obtain their lovely hair color. Many strange and unusual sights haunt the hallways on Halloween.

Suspense finally comes to an end as the Homecoming King and Queen are announced. Seniors Joy Grossberg and Anthony Irpino enjoy their reign of King and Queen.

Oral reports are often required of students in many classes. Arthur Khamis and James Lee listen attentively as Tim Ledwon reads his paper to the class.

Seniors

Regardless of how diverse each individual of the class of ' 88 was, they all shared one common trait - they were finally SENIORS!!! College applications flooded the desks of these students, and frequent visits with their counselors occurred. This was the exciting time they had patiently waited for. The discovery of the college they would be attending highlighted the entire year.

Other special moments added pleasure and enjoyment to senior life. This time more than ever students were certain to attend events such as the Homecoming dance, football games, Turnabout, and prom, knowing that this ## would be their final opportu-

 nitySeniors focused their attention upon possibilities for the future. Besides college, various other options were available. The Armed Forces made frequent visits and talked with interested students. Others chose the world of work as their future by searching for full-time ${ }^{\circ}$ jobs.

Seniors made their final year at West a memorable one by taking part in the student government, school sports, organizations, and plays. They were definitely a rowdy bunch, always making themselves known at school assemblies as they chanted loudly, "Senior! Seniors!"

Senior Jeannine DiModica and fellow classmate catch up on the latest West Word news. Students look forward to reading the school newspaper when it is distributed on Wednesdays.

Gina Bravos and Ken Munic are stunned by the gossip they hear from a classmate. Students find some free time in their schedules to spend with friends.
Let's hear it for the senior! Pablo Blanco participates in the excitement at the Homecoming Pep Assembly.

Indians Rock The House

Enthusiasm rocked the hallways, as school spirit erupted throughout NiWeHi! The feelings of suspense and excitement roared in the gymnasium during pep assemblies. Friends and enemies alike forgot their differences and set out for a common goal, to cheer out teams to victory.

The feelings of unity and enthusiasm were evident as thie flocks of student crammed into the gymnasium. Explosions of red and white bodies filled the once empty bleachers. Fans yelled, screamed, and of course, chanted the school spirit songs.

School spirit was not only shown at the pep assemblies, but throughout the entire week leading up to the games. The Midnight Riders displayed much school spirit throughout the season. They went on toilet paper frenzies at varsity athletes' houses to inspire positive winning attitudes.

Homecoming week arrived, bringing with it mobs of psyched Indians. Hundreds of painted students went on a spirit warpath to express their enthusiasm. Activites for the week consisted of dress up days which involved class levels wearing different colors and unusual styles of dress attire, contests for the best toga, greatest putting ability in golf, and the quick football uniform change contest. These were all held to boost spirit and morale. The dedication to school spirit will never die in the hearts of our true-blue, red and white Indians.

If one were to ask sen iors, "What's new at school?", they would probably answer, "Not much!" In fact, some would consider the absence of Nibs in the vending machines or the discontinuation of "the thought for the day" in the daily bulletin as the most significant turn of their high school careers; however, with time comes change, and during the past four years, the senior class has adapted to several transformations within the school. Some alterations were advantageous to students, while others forced students to adjust to different lifestyles at school. Each September, students returned finding at least one aspect of their school different. Some of these changes that the seniors saw during their four year terms were:
A NEWLY REPAVED PARKING LOT lacking speed bumps and potholes and providing a smoother ride for CARS. A CAR and numerous watches painted on the uninteresting cafeteria wall by several talented STUDENTS
THE STUDENTS' dream of a pop machine was finally realized in 1985 when one was installed in the hall outside of the cafeteria. For many students, the soda replaced school lunches and, hence, created disapproval among the ADMINISTRATION.
THE ADMINISTRATION decided to revoke students' privileges of free access in the halls after a series of senior pranks. A new system of closed hall-ways was incorporated to decrease disorder and CLASSROOM DISRUPTION.

 was a key reason for installing beige carpeting outside classrooms. Besides absorbing sound, it gave a neater appearance to THE HALLWAYS.THE HALLWAYS were painted pink to compliment the tiny bits of pink in the tiles which were covered a year later with CARPETING.

While each class might claim to have seen it all, every student will always see the new come in and the old go out. Each year, our school has continued to expand in hopes of creating a perfect environment in which students and faculty can learn and work.

College Pressures Push Seniors

O.k., we're seniors! We've struggled through the difficult years of high school. The so called "blow-off year" has finally arrived, right? Wrong! Plenty of hard work was still ahead for students in their senior year. College preparations made up the bulk of this hard work.

Many students failed to realize the importance of meeting application deadlines. "Colleges filled up so quickly, this year more than any. If you missed a deadline, they wouldn't even give you the benefit of the doubt," commented college counselor Frank Mustari.

Besides application deadlines, colleges pressured seniors to keep grades up and to choose challenging senior year courses. Colleges commonly refused to admit students who met class rank and test score requirements, but took "push-over classes" and let their grades drop during senior year.

Students who had been accepted to a college couldn't afford to let their grades drop either. Even after admission, the colleges kept a close watchful eye on the students' performance in the classroom until graduation.

College deadlines and requirements definitely put a strain on seniors. To cope with these pressures, seniors had to continue working as hard as in their previous high school years.

An Everlasting Tradition

Every year in May, something isn't right. The hallways seem more quiet and less crowded. Freshmen walk unharassed. The senior section of the cafeteria is suddenly uninhabited. Students notice that the seniors have disappeared. The big question is: Where have all the seniors gone??? For many years, seniors have banded together to blow off one day of school, know as Senior Cut Day. On this day, seniors gather together at a beach, the forest preserve, or other favorite outdoor spot to relax and party with their obnoxiously rowdy peers. When asked how long Senior Cut Day has existed, Mr. Albiani responded, "For as long as I ## can remember.

Controversy has arisen over this tradition, and many efforts have been made to stop this unruly behavior. "I don't see anything wrong with Senior Cut Day," commented junior Estelle Nikolakakis. "Seniors deserve a day off anyway." However, the deans and administration feel differently about the situation. They have tried to deter this one day strike with extra long detensions and suspensions, but the seniors always seem to prevail. "I hope Senior Cut Day will still be a tradition when I'm a senior," stated freshman Geoff Pyter.

ALLISON was a RIVER instead of a BROOKS
ANGIE was a BLACK instead of a BROWN
KELLY was a JEANS instead of a CORDES
TRACI was a WASHER instead of a DREIER
ANN was a BOWLER instead of a FISHER
DANNY was a RED instead of a GOLD
LISA was a WEEKDAY instead of a HALLIDAY
HELEN was a STOMACH instead of a HART
BRIAN was an IRAQ instead of an ISRAEL
BRAD was a HOLE instead of a CAVE
JACK was a REEF instead of a CORAL
ANNA was a LEVI instead of a LEE
TOMMY was a JUNE instead of a MAY
BRIAN was a BUDWEISER instead of a MILLER

A Toilet Papered Town

Toilet paper, heaps and heaps of soft toilet paper, was found thrown over the trees and bushes. Senior Midnight Riders scurried silently in the darkness of the night. Every evening before a football, soccer, or basketball game, a group of dedicated senior girls took a couple of hours to bake cookies, make creative posters, and gather up rolls and rolls of toilet paper to decorate the players' houses. These acts boosted the spirit not only of the players, but also allowed these girls to actively participate in bringing spirit to all of NiWeHi.
Commenting on the spirited group are some of the senior Midnight Riders. "Midnight Riding allowed me to get involved in school spirit. It was a great feeling the next morning when the players told us that we did a great job teepeeing their houses. It made me feel appreciated and totally psyched me up for those Friday night games," stated Cathy Smith. Another senior rider, Amy Fullet, added, "Sometimes the players didn't get enough credit for all their hard work. Having their houses tee-peed let them know that we cared and appreciated all of their efforts.

Even though Midnight Riding was not always compatible with the Riders' schedules, this activity still allowed them to participate in school spirit, even after the school day ended at NiWeHi!

To Study, Or Not To Study

That was the question that every senior had to ask continuously during his or her four years at Niles West. Students either studied hard and had limited free time, or didn't study and depended upon pure fate and good luck.

When first entering high school, most students studied strenuously to get off to a good start. Like most freshmen, books were carried home by the dozen. Sophomore year, part-time jobs and other activities became part of the daily schedule, and students' free time was restricted to an even greater extent. Eventually, junior year arrived and students received the big warning. "Get your act together for college NOW!'"
This bit of advice was heard time and time again. Some chose to listen to these sincere words of wisdom, while others ignored them. PSAT's and ACT's came into the picture, and students began looking into college and career choices. Last, but never least, senior year appeared. Signs of "senioritis" were diagnosed among members of the senior class. Some of the more common symptoms included laziness, lack of interest in school work, and the downright urge to party! By the end of the year, most seniors hadn't a care in the world. They felt they deserved freedom from homework after three long tedious years of studying. This was their time to sit back, relax, and enjoy themselves for the remainder of their high school lives. They had finally fulfilled their requirements and applied to schools that they were interested in attending. All that was left to do was wait. So seniors waited for the day that they would become freshmen once again. Soon, they would have to ask themselves that same question one more time. To study or not to study, that is the question.

Those Crazy Teachers Of Nilles West!

Many teachers have familiar sayings that their students will always remember. Those same words, phrases, sentences and quotes are something we can all relate to. Some of these quotes will go down in the Niles West History book.

Mr. Schutt - "I'm not going to be your buddy, your pal, or your friend.
Mr. Strnad - "Teens are great!
Mr. Koch - "Join the band wagon.
Mr. Savage - "Join the track team and you'll get an automatic A.'
Mr. Hill - '"Hey tigers!'
Miss O'Reiley - "Come on chico." (Erase ... erase ...)
Mr. Dvorak - " 5,5 , or 1.
Mr. Lucas - "This year I'm going to get real strict with you girls.'
Mr. Boevers - "Oh sorry, I got sidetracked again."
Mrs. Hentz - "Alright . . . I'm wrong again.'
Ms. VanDorpe - "Hmmmm.
Miss Stevens - "25 extra points if you turn your outline in on Monday.
Mr. Galla - "Any comments, any questions, can you think of anything?"
Mr. Orr - "This year I'm not going to yell. If you want a fall delivery
Mr. Knaak - "Open your Warrener's.

National Merit Semi-Finalists

"Make sure you have lead in your mechanical pencil." These words e 用- $^{\text {- }}$ compass the advice of senior Gail Gutterman to those preparing to take the PSAT. Gail, along with fellow seniors Lisa Halliday, Meena Ravella, and Nick Nafpliotis, was named a national merit semi-finalist.

To become a semi-finalist, a student must take the PSAT as a junior. Those students who score in the top 1.5 percent are semi-finalists and may try for the rank of "finalist." About 90 percent of the semi-finalists become finalists. Those who score in the top 4.2 percent are given the honor of "'commended students." The raw score for merit semi-finalists varies from year to year but is usually between 194 and 197. The cut-off this year was 197 for a semi-finalist and 180 for a commended student. Our four semifinalists easily made the cut-off with scores ranging from 200 to 208.

Once a student is named a semi-finalist, the next steps to become a finalist are to get a counselor's recommendation and to write an essay. The topic for this year's essay was simply to write about yourself. Our four merit semi-finalists approached this topic in many different ways.

Lisa focused her essay on her future plans and her extra-curricular activities. Nick wrote about his time playing football, his work on the mural on the cafeteria wall, and various jobs during his highschool career. Meena opted to focus her essay mainly on the subject of prejudice, and Gail wrote about how dissecting a frog affected her life.

Their academic goals are as varied as their essay topics. Meena is headed toward an economics major, while Nick is going into engineering. Gail plans to go into liberal arts with a pre-med major, and Lisa is moving towards marine biology.

One of the main benefits of becoming a national merit semi-finalist, and then a finalist, is that it opens up the opportunity of special merit scholarships to the students. At the very least, colleges are greatly impressed.
The main pieces of advice to future PSAT testtakers given by Gail, Nick, and Meena were to take practice tests and to study the vocabulary. Students should also try not to worry about the test too much, according to Lisa. And, most importantly, don't forget the lead for your pencil!

Fads And Fancies

Don't the constant whines of teenagers usually concern what they should wear to school tomorrow, or where they should go over the weekend? Everyone wants to be at the right place and do what is cool and accepted by everyone else. To put an end to this nonsense, a list has been composed for your reference. So the next time you're in doubt, don't panic. Check this out!

Not A Breeze

You're planning to take an A.P. course! Ask yourself these questions before you commit yourself. Are A.P. classes the most challenging courses at West? Can I cram for the essay test the night before? Even though the answers to these significant questions differ, one thing that all students agree on is the 20 hours of studying needed each week. Depending on the content, A.P. classes differ. All teachers conduct their classes in varying ways, and A.P. students have a variety of opinions about A.P. classes:

Memories

A congruent group, just as one. Our senior class shared lots of fun.
Together we started at a time not so near,
Appropriately named freshman year.
Meeting each other, such an easy start,
Not even a thought of our final depart.
Sophomore year developed with the name,
Our bunch of wise fools did not easily tame.
The games and antics were part of our spirit,
Too bad nobody else wanted to hear it.
Junior year started off with a blast,
Rockets glared, for we became upperclass.
College and preparation required some thought,
Without all these, most would have been caught.
At last senior year was finally achieved,
Along with the spirit on which we believed.
Together our class laughed, cried, and learned,
Obtaining the position we consistently urged.
Our spirit has leapt to soaring heights,
From here we will try with all our mights.

Where will you be after college graduation? Maybe you will be the next lotto winner, the new bass player for Bruce Springsteen, or maybe even the new Larry Bird. The future lies in your hands, shaped by your hopes and dreams. When Niles West seniors were asked what their after college plans were, they gave the following responses:
"I hope to be drafted by the Cubs.'

Brad Kave
"To vacation in Hawaii and become a physical therapist.'

Lilianna Williamson
"To be a D.J. for B96.'

Note The Difference

Many changes took place between freshman and senior year. Seniors walked around empty handed, while the naive babies of the school, the "'freshies," carried around their entire locker with a schedule in clear view. They had to be cautious of their every move, because humiliation seemed to follow them everywhere, whether walking into the wrong classroom, tripping up the stairs, or dropping trays in the cafeteria. These events caused enough embarrassment to last a lifetime, or so it seemed.

Sophomore year brought a relief from the pressure of freshman status. The worries of getting, or actually forgetting, how to get to the gym had disappeared.

Horray! The excitement of being an upperclassman came junior year when they were finally seated on the lower level for pep assemblies, received driver's licenses, and became part of varsity teams. As juniors, they began to think about post high school plans.

Seniors at last, they had made it to the top! They didn't have anyone to look up to anymore, just younger people to look at and impress with their new superiority. Seniors not only had the chance to feel "cool" this year, but also finally had to decide on the college they would be attending.

The following quotes by seniors reflect how they feel they have changed: ' 'I have

Wild 'n' Crazy Weekends

Partying, going to flicks, and cruising is how we, the seniors, spent our weekends. Even though we couldn't always find a happenin' spot, we always managed to find a way to have a fine time. Not everyone hung out with the same people, but within crowds. The more mellow student found himself more content just studying at home or simply relaxing. However, the majority of students found themselves searching for something new and exciting to do. Seniors felt that their weekends had changed entirely since their freshman year. Most say that they now have more freedom. The following list gives an idea of how the class of ' 88 spent their weekends.
Julie Wickell ... "I studied and went to church ... I think."
Frank Brodsky ... "I tried to block school out of my mind.'
Anonymous ... "I hung out at the Touhy McDonald's and squeeled my tires."

Lisa Meisner ... "I went out with Gus.'
Brad Carstens ... "I studied with Ducky.'
Ann Liosatos ... "I caught up on sleep.'
Kevin Lochner ... "I had a big tea party and watched the Smurfs.'
Roderick Pintang ... "I went to dances and to parties with my friends.'
Greg Rappin ... "I played in a band.'
Dawn Jacobs ... "I stayed home and studied with Ducky and Brad.'
Angela Hanga ... "I got chased by cops from one place to another."

Prom Preparations

Picture a lovely June evening. Imagine a fancy banquet hall where streamers drop from the ceiling and brightly colored roses decorate the tables surrounding a magnificent dance floor. Upon this floor a crowd of Juniors and Seniors dance to a seven piece orchestra and have the time of their lives at Prom.

Now picture a group of dedicated Junior Class Cabinet members pondering a theme, choosing the favors and arranging decorations for the Prom. These Juniors, along with the Sponsor, Mrs. Horwitz, create the glitter of Prom. The responsibilities of the cabinet include choosing the location, auditioning the band, and selecting the exact colors and styles of the bids and favors.

Students may ask why the Juniors, rather than the Seniors, arrange Prom. Cabinet member, Dawn Rugendorf explains, "It's like a present to the Seniors or a farewell party. By the time May comes along, Seniors are getting set for graduation and don't want all the responsibility of having to create their own Prom.'
Junior Class Cabinet members spend much of their first semester planning bake sales and card sales to increase the treasury so that by second semester, they can focus all their attention on Prom.
When the streamers come down and the last tables are cleared, the glitter of Prom Night slowly turns into a memory. But, the next year's Junior Class Cabinet will soon busy themselves with the plans and preparations of the next "Magical Night"

Midnight Riders stop at nothing when it comes to school spirit. Preparing for the Homecoming Parade are junior members Eden Rocklin, Danielle Singer, and Mindy Nudelman.

Junior porn pon members Jeni Duda and Jeannie Choi wait for their cue to begin the routine. The pom pon squad never failed to dazzle the audience during halftime

College Spirit

Taking a quick glance around the hallways, Niles West students might wonder if they are attending high school or one of the many colleges in the nation. A great number of students continue to wear sweatshirts. T-shirts and sweatpants with college logos printed across their chests (and sometimes their behinds)! These logos include various colleges and universities such as Harvard, Arizona State, or University of Michigan.
Frequently during the weekends, many NiWeHi students flock to the universities of Illinois, Indiana, Wisconsin, and lowa, among others, to buy out the local bookstore's supply of clothing, thus filling their empty closets back home. This habit may become extremely expensive for mom, but as junior Sundy Thompson states, "They are worth every penny." Most of the apparel comes from midwestern schools since many of the brothers and sisters of students attend these colleges and bring home wearable presents.

While walking down the hall, students should take notice of this popular craze and try to confirm if they really do attend Niles West or some elite college.

Pressures, Hardships, Burdens

Headaches, hand cramps, and late night studying qualify as a few of the hardships many students go through in their junior year. The pressures of bringing up class rank, taking SAT and ACT's, and urging from parents and counselors to look at colleges would make any junior want to pull up the covers and go back to sleep every morning.

Junior year puts a burden on a student academically. but also provides upperclassmen with the best year socially because most individuals obtain their licenses to cruise around on Friday and Saturday nights with their friends, finally getting into the long awaited senior parties and being eligible to at-

What A Nightmare!

Slowly rising out of bed, Joe, the typical NiWeHi student, stumbles across the dark shadowy hallways to the shower when a thought jumps his mind: TEST, or more accurately, remorse for forgetting to study for a test. At 7:00 a.m. Joe hurriedly dresses, with suds still in his hair and stubble on his cheeks and chin. While running down the stairs, eating breakfast, and even proceeding to the bus stop, Joe tries to absorb the material from his previously untouched book for his third period class. Purposely missing the first two classes of the day, he tries to cram more information into his head for the test, and as a result, receives two more hours of detention. Arriving for the dreaded test, Joe hears his teacher announce that the test will not be administered until a later date. At this point, Joe, ready for a doctor, or at least a pass to the nurse, hears a highpitched ring interrupting his nervous breakdown. The scream of his alarm clock causes Joe to bolt straight up in bed as he realizes that this fiasco has only occurred in an extremely bad dream.

Hoping that he will gain the final point needed to win, Calvin Ramseyer concentrates on his serve. Tennis was one of the many options available to students in gym classes.

Waiting for the bus has its share of disadvantages, like cold weather. Matt Karlesky finds that his jacket is the next best thing to a blanket.

Students find the front stairs to be the ideal place to make plans for the coming weekend. The front lawn and courtyards are among the favorite spots to hang around when the weather is warm.

Juniors - AT LAST!!

Ah, junior year! The title of "underclassmen" has finally vảnished. Nevertheless, not a day goes by that juniors don't look back on their rise from naive freshmen to the exalted rank of upperclassmen. Juniors often reminisce about the time, just a few years ago, when they used to:
*get up an hour earlier to get a good seat on the bus.

* carry books.
*dread getting a dean's slip.
*wait their turn in the cafeteria line.
*listen to the announcements.
*color coordinate clothes a week in advance.
"raise their hands to answer a question.
*study two nights ahead for that People and Their Cultures test.
*go prepared to class.
"get excited when acknowledged by an upperclassmen.
*study in study hall.
*look up to seniors.
*pray for junior year to come so they could get rid of the "underclassmen" title.

Reflecting upon freshman and sophomore years, upperclassmen remember the foolish things they did. But even upperclassmen at some time could not wait for their freshman and sophomore years to be over. Having reached this status, they now cherish many great memories.

Varsity cheerleaders Danielle Chams and Megan Goldish take a well deserved break. Sideline cheers encouraged the crowd to participate in the game.

A

Junior year ranks as one of the most dreaded, but important years of high school. During this year, planning for the future and setting goals for life, serve a major role. Counselors and teachers warn students, "Junior year remains as your year to shine." Two great ways to sparkle are acing admissions tests and improving class

Year In The Making

status through grades. Admittance to the desired college, or any college at all, depends upon these two aspects.

Tests and grades weigh heavily on juniors toward the end of the year when laziness starts to set in. During this same period, with ACT and SAT testing and class ranks released, students feel a great deal of pressure. Two or three points on the ACT can mean the difference between a Big 10 and a junior college, and two or three places on the class rank list can place a student in the top third or top quarter of the class. All of the pressures of junior year plus the trials and tribulations of taking college testing and achieving good grades make junior year a rough experience.

Although junior year challenges students, most see this time as a surmountable obstacle because their future depends upon their accomplishments during this critical year.

Edward Lee and Jim Ciemny try to create an original excuse for their tardiness as they stroll to class. No wonder the hallways were so emply!

Junior and senior girls listen to instructions from their teacher before attempting to use the equipment. Gym classes provided a needed break from classes for most students.

Meredith Holt becomes extremely nervous when she realizes that her homework has not been completed. Luckily her friends are willing to help her get it done.

Sophomores

Sophomores returned to school, cool and confident. No longer would they have to check the numbers and the arrows on the walls to see which way their next class was No more getting hit by pennies, buying bogus elevator passes, or having "freshie" yelled at them as they walked through the halls. The torture was finally over, and privileges such as open campus and driver's ed had arrived.

Selecting coarses seemed easier because a wider variety was made available. The majority of sophomores produced schedules consisting of classes such as geometry, biology, and Western Civilization, among many others. Fortunate sophomores who met the requirements of a specific cut-off date were able to begin driver's ed, while others were forced to either wait until junior year of take private lessons.

The only remaining dilema for sophomores was the fact that they were still considered underclassmen. However, receiving the title of upperclassmen gave them something to look forward to, for they knew that it didn't lie very far ahead.

Sophomores find that making friends becomes easier and easier as the years progress. Students find time to during lunch or before and after school to visit with friends and make plans for the weekend.

After hours of tiresome dancing, sophomores race for the Pepsi macbine in the far end of the cafeteria. The Frosh-Soph Mixer provided a fun time for freshmen and sophomores alike.

After her last final, sophomore Sandy Matan sets her books aside and prays that she did well. Final exams are a hectic time for many students.

The Real Thing

They entered their assigned rooms, not fully aware of the task being undertaken. As they sat down and checked in, the tension grew. Then they received their test booklets and answer sheets. While taking out their #2 pencils, sophomores listened to the instructor explain the directions for taking the PACT. Most students hadn't anticipated the level of intensity for the test.

The examination lasted three hours, and began with questions pertaining to the student's personal background and study habits. The test then progressed to the harder questions, which dealt with English, Math, Reading Comprehension, and Science. As the hours passed, students felt drained. "The test was so long that by the time I reached the last part, my mind was like a mashed potato," said Karin Much. Some spent most of their time rereading the information given, while others randomly filled in ovals.
After completing the PACT, sophomores had strong feelings about the changes they would like to see in the test. According to Yvonne Barazi, "They should have split it into two separate tests, or at least had five minute breaks between each part." Elizabeth Holden added, "They should consider that just sophomores are taking the test and not make some of the areas, such as the science, so difficult." Marc Slutzky echoed the sentiments of many sophomores when he said, "They should eliminate the 'personality' questions, which are pointless." Nevertheless, as juniors, these same students must face this challenge again, but then the test will really count.

Days Of Glory

Jimmy Johnson squirms in his seat anxiously watching the clock in anticipation of one thing - the weekend. A time for rest and relaxation, the weekend serves as two days of cherished freedom from the everyday drudgeries of school. Many students believe they can only survive five consecutive school days by knowing that they are sandwiched between the crusts of life. According to Junior Niki Antonakos, "On every Monday morning, I begin the countdown to the weekend. Being in school five days out of seven, those two free days are absolute paradise."

Actually, the school week consists of only three days: Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday. Monday, also known as the day after the weekend, can be better described as a day of gloom, made bearable by remembrance of the days before. Offsetting the gloom of Monday and somehow balancing it, comes Friday. Also recognized as the day before the weekend, Friday means a day of cheerful anticipation for the days to come.

Generally, the weekend serves as a time to indulge in the advantages of going to sleep late and waking up a half day later than usual. The other half day provides time to ponder idle thoughts or catch-up on homework neglected throughout the week. Frequently, students find themselves glancing at the clock and calculating what class they are missing at the moment.

For most student, the escape of the weekend can't come soon enough, or last long enough. Every time the tension of school overwhelms students who think they can't go on, the knowledge that a weekend will come gives them the strength needed to survive.

Sophs Get New Respect

After surviving the grueling journey through freshman year, the sophomores find themselves in possession of a new status. Instead of occupying the lowest rank in the school, they have gained control of the low-but-higher-thanfreshmen status. Consequently they can walk confidently through the halls, knowing no one will mutter "freshmen" behind their back and get away with it. The sophomores also receive the privilege of cutting in front of the freshmen in the lunch line.

At the "Freshmen-Sophomore Mixer," a social given to welcome freshmen, the sophomores like to try out their newfound "sophomoric powers" and practice being able to push the freshmen around after having been the "pushees.'

Aside from the mixer, other events and activities let the sophomores show their true colors. At pep assemblies, the sophomores join forces with the juniors and seniors in chanting "go home freshmen," and during Homecoming week the sophomores readily challenge any class to one of the games held during lunch mods because their school spirit has increased $100 \%$ since the year before.

Even though the sophomores have to respect their elders, the juniors and seniors, they earn respect and flaunt their new status by playfully teasing the freshmen.

Everlasting Legends

Flinging pennies at freshmen cial" freshmen elevator passes the marketing of "offithrusting freshmen into lockers .... or .... perhaps starting rumors about prominent teachers.

These fascinating legends lurked in the halls of Niles West throughout the year. Passed from generation to the next, with new ones created every year, these myths appear indestructable. Seniors employed these myths to frighten underclassmen and prepare them for the years ahead. To upperclassmen, these myths provided something to look forward to and brought humor into the class when these tales appeared to have some truth.

Junior Beatrise Revelins, on her experiences as a freshman, commented, "I knew they were totally false because students of previous graduating classes told me the truth."

Many times these myths appeared fabricated and ridiculous in the cold light of reality. Originated in spite or just out of humor, they still prove popular among students. Making up a new tale, while explaining how they originated, junior Donna Wezio explains, "I think it was provoked by Nancy Reagan .... No .... perhaps Satan .... then it just became convenient. Isn't that special?'

In any case, for the future arrivals to Niles West these myths continue to be a tradition. So ... underclassmen watch out! ... Because of the uncertainty about the truth of these legends, you'd better play it safe and believe them!

During the day, students don't have a lot of time to keep up on the latest news. Sophomores Erika Blustein gets a minute of gossip in with Rachel Rosenberg before their Geometry class.

A True Friendship

Friendship means a learning,
A sharing between two, A keeping of old feelings,
And making room for new.
To keep a friendship solid,
Certain standards are a must:
Not having to say sorry
And never breaking trust.
When we need encouragement,
Or just someone there
Friends sympathize with feelings,
They listen and really care.
Problems, troubles, and sorrow,
If we want a helping hand
Friends are always there when needed
They guide and understand.
We must treasure closeness
And never break strong ties
The friendship that we speak of, Is one that never dies.

Manic Monday

After a hectic weekend of going to parties and staying up all night comes the most feared and tiresome event of the week, Monday morning. At 7:30, students return to the tedious world of school work and exams. In homeroom, probably the hardest part of the day to face because it's so early, students struggle to listen to the daily announcements half awake. Students still hear their ears ringing from the concert they attended Saturday night. "I'm lucky if I get to my classes on time on Monday mornings. When I do I end up falling asleep," states junior Danielle Singer.

As lunch time approaches, students view the new week with more optimism because the day is half through. "I look forward to lunch on Mondays because it gives me a much needed break," says Senior Ann Valenti. As the difficult challenge of surviving Mondays comes to an end at 2:40 many students have defeated the ever-so dreaded Monday morning blues.

Sophomore Dana Mohrlein attempts to cohcentrate on school work after a fun-filled weekend. Monday mornings are usually extremely hectic days.

Daydreaming, sophomore Lisa Tepper tries not to think about the exam in her next class because she spent the whole night talking on the phone with her friends instead of studying. The telephone to many, seems to be one of the biggest distractions while trying to study.

Discipline Shock

"You're busted." Whether they liked it or not, many freshmen, unaccustomed to much discipline at their junior highs, may very well have been greeted with this statement within only a few weeks of their entering school. Freshmen most often complained about the lack of the benefit of the doubt extended to them by teachers when they lacked knowledge of the rules. Junior Scott Toban stated, "During one of the first weeks of school, I arrived a minute late. Thinking that late is late, I stopped at my locker before going to homeroom. When I showed up, I couldn't believe I had been given a detention for being over five minutes late."

Regarding the intensity of change between junior high and high school rules, Mr. Zorn stated, "I teach eighth grade in my spare time, and I am often forced to remind my students that they had better prepare themselves for the transition to high school. Their behavior is often far below par." Certainly some pains must have been taken by freshmen to adjust their habits to high school rules.

The problem of adjustment to the detention, mods, and closed hall system for freshmen was universal, yet hardly serious. More than anything else the change requires the student to adapt himself to a new and more demanding set of regulations, definitely an educational experience of sorts. Consequently, students should not have look upon this experience as something awful, but rather as an initiation into high school.

Sophomores Brian Markus and Jenelle Levinson show-off their latest dance steps at the Frosh-Soph mixer. Tye-died shirts and fancy beaded necklaces were among the many types of dress at this "Return to Woodstock" bash.

As early as the first day of school, freshmen find that different class levels are confined to specific areas of the cafeteria. Freshmen eventually become accustomed to such rituals, knowing that one day their turn to sit in the senior section of the cafeteria will arrive.

Freshmen

Dozens after dozens of frightened, yet eager freshman faces scanned the unfamiliar hallways of Niles West. Incoming students were confronted with new faces, unaccustomed sounds, and a terrible case of the "high, school jitters.

The very first thing that freshmen learned in high school was that it is an entirely different experience from their grammar school years. More homework was one of the many changes they discovered. Students now had to set aside more time for homework and studying. An increased effort was found to be a necessity: for academic success.

Freshmen also found it difficult to adapt to a larger school. Happenings such as sporting events, school plays, and of course, the Freshman-Sophomore Mixer - helped students to break the ice and meet new people.

As the year progressed, freshmen found themselves feeling more comfortable with the school environment rather than feeling pressured by it. Many close and intimate friendships developed among students, and previous fears disappeared. Freshmen became accustomed to a new way of life, and the "high school jitters" slowly faded away.

Gym classes are an entirely different experience for freshmen compared to the gym classes offered at their junior highs. A freshman student finds the equipment in the gymnastics room to be rather entertaining.

The Frosh-Soph Mixer provides students with their first taste of high school dances. Many intimate friendships develop that are sure to last throughout high school.

On The Line

For the fifth time that evening, the telephone rang and Suzy Ayerhead leaped up to answer it. Like the rest of the calls that night, it came from one of her friends calling to make plans for the forthcoming weekend, compare homework, or just gossip.

Many students like Suzy employed the telephone to enhance both their social and academic lives. "Nearly every night, I talked on the phone about school, work, and various subjects," claimed Jeannine DiModica. Calling a classmate on the phone remained a convenient way to obtain help with homework. Marla Schrager added, "When I didn't understand my assignment, I usually called one of my friends, and they were able to teach me over the phone."

While many teenagers used the phone exclusively for their own needs, many employed it for emergency purposes. When running late, students found the phone a great way to notify parents that they wouldn't be arriving on time for their dinner or curfew. Because underclassmen lacked driver's licenses, they often needed to call home to ensure a ride from after school activities.

Since its invention in 1876, by Alexander Graham Bell, the telephone has become a vital part of many lives. Because of the phone's convenience and easy access, many students relied upon it for personal, academic, and emergency purposes. By using the phone, communication was as simple as pushing seven buttons.

Moving To The Top

Clothing fashions, cars, and hairstyles change from year to year, unlike the ways of freshmen and sophomores.
The freshies, young people with an expanding set of values, rules, and responsibilities, now become part of something entirely new, high school. High school seems so appealing and different from grammar school, and the academics and new friendships become more exciting. The mysteries of algebra reveal themselves problem by problem, and English class explores the family feuds in Romeo and Juliet.

The sophomores, a more mature group of underclassmen, begin approaching new experiences, such as geometry and other sophomore level classes. With their new status of "nonfreshmen," they begin to walk down the halls with their heads held high. The worries of pennies being thrown their way no longer exist, for soon they will reach the title of "Upperclassmen."

The freshmen and sophomores learn and mature, growing physically and mentally during the years of being an "Underclassmen" on their way to earning the prized designation of "Upperclassmen."

Freshman year is usually a time of meeting people and creating new friendships. Sophomore Mara Okmin and freshman Vince Romano take a brief moment to discuss their plans for the weekend.

Revisions Appear, Again And Again

Every year students at Niles West find that their Student Guildbook has become more confusing and contains more senseless rules than the previous year. Invariably, the revised policies and student behavior seem longer and much more severe. Inappropriate behavior, dress codes, parking regulations, off campus rules, and grounds for detention are always revised when students receive a new edition of the guidebook. "I don't think it's fair to give a student a Saturday detention simply because he/she doesn't carry his I.D.," stated Luey DiCeasar
Most students agree that rules remain necessary, but should be enforced less severely. "Getting a detention for walking in the door after 7:30 a.m. just isn't fair," pouted Toni DiModica.

Students would much rather prefer rules that were made by class-elected representatives to assure fairer treatment. Sophomore Matt Toarmina declared, "Students should make their own rules if they decide to follow any at all."

Extra help from a teacher is often required when students have difficulties with school work. Freshman Mike Kaferly studies independently while waiting for the assistance of his teacher.

Forgotten Memories

On a cold, icy-gray morning, the fatigued students of Niles West entered the building, prepared for yet another seven hour day. With eyelids half shut, still groggy from sleep (or lack of it), and tired of being dragged out of bed before the sun even rises, they endured the years at West.

But being in school wasn't as dreadful as it may have seemed. Amidst the term papers and constant exams, the happy memories sometimes got pushed aside and forgotten. Those treasured moments of binding friendships, football games, school activities, and intellectually stimulating classes, often became overlooked. People's lives were too chaotic and hectic to take time out for joyous recollections. But while students pounded chemical formulas and historical events into their minds, they also left a little space to save a few good memories for the future.
Take heed. One chilling, gray day in the future, when high school has long since passed, a former Niles West student sitting on a park bench feeding pigeons may remember those four years spent in high school. He won't recall the early mornings or homework overload, but instead the memories of good times and friendships.

Delightful Disturbances

RNR-RNR-RNR-RNR. The fire alarm sounds as NiWeHi students, taken by surprise, rush out the doors. Whether in the midst of a stimulating lecture or eating lunch, students always respond the same way. They file out the doors, wondering about the cause of the disruption.

Fire drills teach students how to respond in an emergency. In case of a real fire or bomb threat, knowing how to act could save many lives. While the classroom learning process may be halted, the emergency knowledge gained is indispensable. Sometimes, however, students pull the alarm as a prank, needlessly causing much extra expense to the school and disrupting school progress. No matter whether the alarm is genuine or false, the firemen can be counted on to show up and the school must pay.

In good weather, fire drills may serve as a time and place for students to socialize and enjoy the fresh air. On the other hand, in rainy or snowy weather, students would rather avoid them. Christina Gabriel summed up the attitude of most students about fire alarms, saying, "My feelings about them depend on what class I miss."

As Cross Country runners Gail Dennis and Elissa Leboy approach the finish line, the competition grows more and more intense. Many hours of practice are dedicated by runners every week.

Hot Spots

Destinations vary, but fun is guaranteed. Many students look forward to their late December winter vacation and April spring break because they plan trips to exotic, exciting places. Whether headed for the beach or the ski slopes, students enjoy these two breaks from the daily routine. "I just can't wait; it's time for a break, and I haven't been to California for so many years," said sophomore Jakie Katzman anticipating her winter vacation.

The two-week vacation for the winter holidays allows for many adventures with relatives. Family trips to Florida, California, Mexico, and the Caribbean, along with ski trips to western states such as Colorado and Utah are among the favorites. Cruising, a popular way to spend both vacations, gives the Ca -ribbean-bound a new option. Florida, a common place to visit, especially Ft. Lauderdale and Daytona Beach, await the students from Niles West who arrive in the springtime.

Breaks give students a chance to reward themselves for the work they have completed and to relax and prepare for the weeks ahead.

Academics

Anxious students scurried into their assigned classroom. As the bell sounded, silence swept over the entire room. All eyes gazed towards the front, for class had begun.

Although extracurricular activities, sports, dances. and various other happenings took many hours out of students' schedules, the majority of their time was spent in classes. Academics were the most major part of a student's year. For this reason, students selected specific courses that were not only appealing, but also beneficial to their future. Counselors played an important role in course selection by giving advice and guidance when needed.

Teachers always encouraged students to strive for success. After school sessions were often provided by dedicated teachers wishing to offer additional help to their students.

The greatest amount of education possible was given to students through happenings such as the Speaker of the Month program, peer counseling, field trips, and various classes. Spots such as the Oakton Street Lobby, the library, resource centers, and study halls presented a peaceful atmosphere to study or complete homework. Through the year, students found that their teachers were not only teachers. but also exceptional friends.

A freshmen class gets a bit out of control when a substitute is present. Although they try, substitutes usually cannot compare to the original teacher.

Mr. Carr shows his excitement now that the week is finally over. Fridays are anxiously awaited by students and teachers as well.

Teens Are Great

Finding an "exciting" class at Niles West is a difficult task. Mr. Strnads' Biology 3-4 enjoys an excellent rating because of the teacher's dedication and availability to his students for extra help.

Student Bob Adams, declared "When the students come for help afterschool, Mr. Strnad never turns them away. He makes them feel welcome and exclaims, "Teens are great!" Mr. James Strnad makes sure that all of his students understand what he teaches before moving ahead. Whether a student earns an A or D, Mr. Strand still cares about giving each the best education possible. He wants his students to succeed and feels proud when they do. "If I did not want teenager's to do well, I would not be working here for 25 years," exclaimed this dedicated biology teacher.

Some of the highlights of Biology 3-4 include dissection of a frog which involves examining the heartrate and finding out how long a frog's heart remains alive. By dissecting a shark, students analyze and compare shark and human organs and their functions.

Students setting up next year's schedule should be sure to consider adding Biology 3-4 with Mr. Strnad because of the enthusiasm of the teacher and the interesting labs.

Study Hall: Badly Needed Time, Or Not?

Forty minutes in Room 138, 139 or 140 spells stiudy hall. or does it? For some students, study hall signifies bad-ly-needed time to complete home work. For others, it means snoozing time, and for others still, it adds up to another period of noise and distractions

Since the majority of the students wait until the last minute to finish homework of study for exams. study halls provide a vital service. "I don't usually do my homework at home, so I'm glad that I have forty minutes in school when I can actually study and catch up." comments junior Mike Havdala. Students may leave study hall to go to the library. a quieter study area. to research. read magazines and books, or use the computer.
Some students may use the study hall time to relax. "I usually sleep in study hall. because I've done everything at home, and I need the rest." states junior Sharon Huang. "In the morning. I'm not fully awake yet. so I sleep during my study hall." comments freshman Pam Dressler

For other students, though. study halls create problems and inconveniences. "I don't like my study hall because of the restrictions ... I'm not allowed to talk with a friend. even if we have to discuss homework." objected freshman Tiffany Noe. Limitations in study halls usually include no talking: eating or drinking. as well as five-minute washroom and locker passes. Freedom in study halls depends mainly upon the teachers and for some students. these teachers fail to add enough restrictions. Senior Amy Fan states. "The students in my study hall make too much noise despite the teacher's warnings.

Although for some students. study halls provide needed study and recreation time. other students find them either too restrictive or too chaotic to meet their needs. In any case, as Jerome Orr. English teacher comments. "An ideal study hall should be a small. quiet and comfortable place where students can concentrate and prepare for their classes

College Prep, Well Worth The Work

Wake up! For many Seniors, college lurks just around the corner and thinking about it gives some students a very scary feeling. The solution to these unwanted fears may be College Prep English. Especially designed for seniors who anticipate the difficulties of college English. College Prep enables a student to experience the rigors of English 101 while still in high school. Offered for either a semester or a year. this English-credited class provides an excellent background in writing essays. translating poems, and finding criticism. "The idea is not to exempt students from college English, but rather to prepare them for the level of difficulty they'll find in reading and composition so they will have an approach and understanding of how great literature works." states College Prep teacher Mrs. Shapiro. Even if some students have difficulty. they can still benefit from this class. Senior Karen Pintz states. "I'm not doing very well in College Prep, but I think even a little bit of information about college English will help me alot." Counselors highly recommended College Prep for any col-lege-bound senior. Senior Rossini Parayno commented. "College Prep is definitely one of my hardest classes this year, but it will be well worth the work!" Finally, the most important point: adds senior Stephanie Gold is, "College Prep has broadened my English horizons and prepared me for my college education. I feel as though I will have a great advantage over other students in college.

Field Trips Offer Inspirations

Designing houses, sketching diagrams, and creating new mechanical pieces sound like pastimes for inventors or dreamers, but Technical Drawing covers everything from the basic fundamentals of drafting to the more modern methods of the C.A.D. and Auto-C.A.D. computer systems. Through these modern techniques, students learn about the fields of engineering and architecture.

To enhance his students' creativity, Mr. Mel Schmidt plans a field trip each year to the Illinois institute of Technology where the students view the annual exhibits of student projects ranging from models of buildings to complex engineering inventions. This experience provides information about the expectations of an engineering college. "After talking with one of the IIT students, I don't think l'd ever make it with all the homework involved," stated Ken Chmielimski. For most students, the field trip suggests new ideas for changes and advancements in the building industry. In addition, the trip influences some students in making career decisions. "The trip certainly made my mind up on two things. First, it helped me decide that I really would like to become an architect, and second, it made me very interested in IIT as the school I would like to attend," explained senior Herbie Diaz.
The Technical Drawing class offers much to a student, because unlike other classes, it teaches students an occupational skill. Mr. Schmidt adds, "I have many students working for architectural firms at the moment who have great potential for advancement within the company from the education that they received from this class alone."

Harmonious Hinck

A new style of openness approached District 219 with the arrival of the newly elected superintendent, John Hinck.
Having previously acted as an interim superintendent while the school board tried to find a replacement for James Ercikson, He also assisted in the hiring of Kenneth Olsen as superintendent. When the board offered the position of interim superintendent to Hinck for the second time, he declined, feeling that acting as an interim superintendent could be done only once for a district.

He agreed to accept a long-term contract with District 219 for three reasons. Firstly, he has always wanted to accept a long-term position. Secondly, he enjoyed working with this district and school board as an interim superintendent and felt he would be able to work with the new school board as well. Lastly, he feels he has a lot to offer District 219, including "a willingness to listen, the ability to stand behind decisions, and the ability to acknowledge mistakes."

At the current time, Hinck has no specific plans for the district. He wants to take some time to study what has happened in the year and a half since he left. His long term goal: "to have everyone working together as harmonious as possible." He anticipates having a successful term.

Teachers To The Rescue

While out of school for three weeks ailing in bed and enduring boredome at home, a homebound student welcomes the doorbell ring. Startling enough, a teacher appears; this lucky pupil will experience home tutoring. This scenario may sound like a nightmare to most students, yet it saves the day for students who cannot attend school. If the student cannot go to school, then the school must go to the student. Dedicated teachers give homebound instruction through rain, sleet or snow so that education can prevail. Carrying books, tests, movies, projectors, and even science experiments, the teachers faithfully arrive at the homes of students. Each classroom recreated lecture enhances the learning experiences for that special student. These teachers realize the student's unfortunate situation and help them through a difficult time, from experiencing the one-on-one teaching procedure, the teachers and students both gain a better understanding of each other. Thanks to this system, students do not fall behind in their works while unable to attend school in person.

Mr. Katzman - Athletic Equipment Manager

Excuses, Excuses

"Where's my homework?
Uh ..." Most teachers have heard this a million of times. Teachers are tired of listening to the same old excuses. The most commonly used are:
"The computer I wrote it on last night is not compatable with the one here at school." -Mr. Broy
"The cat used it as a litterbox." -Mr. Bloom
"My dog ate it." -Mr. Orr "My locker partner took it by mistake." -Mr. Capitani "I used it when you told me to throw my gum away." Mrs. Georgiev
"My friend is copying it." Mr. Waddell "It's in my locker." -Ms.

'I brought the wrong folder." -Mr. Dvorak
"I can't find it." -Ms. Oldham "What homework?" -Mr. Geisman
"My backpack was injured when I jumped into the middle of the street this morning to save a little boy from a large steamroller. The backpack, which contained my homework, became as flat as a pancake." -Mr. Albiani

This final excuse seems as creative as one could get, but failed. Go ahead, try your luck with your own, but beware of those overly used, the faculty is way ahead of your game.

Make A Difference

Principal Don Ring, upon his arrangement of the program "You Made a Difference," has recognized and distinguished students who have done something special, but wouldn't normally be awarded for it. The monthly program consisting of about ten to fifteen students (faculty appearance optional) pleasanly surprised many students.

In order to partake in "You Made a Difference" a faculty advisor must submit an application for a student stating his or her accomplishment(s). Students are honored with a certificate and breakfast with Dr. Ring. Senior Karin Orsic, one of the first participants to receive this honor claimed, "It's a nice way to chat with Dr. Ring and to know that things I have done are appreciated." Mr. David Lee thinks the program "handles the situation for the kids who deserve recognition but won't be awarded anything for it during a particular school assembly.'

Not many students, before this program, were able to sit down with Dr. Ring, have breakfast, and just talk. "You Made a Difference" seems to have made it's claim and has started a tradition that will make a difference.

Food For Thought

Although most teachers disapprove of eating in their classes, lucky students must sample various foods in one class- Chefs Course.

In this class, students prepare foods as simple to make as pudding and as complex as a Thanksgiving banquet. Lab periods accompany the classroom study of different food types. Activities in labs include preparation, cooking, eating, and cleaning up of delicacies, all in 55 minutes. Senior Danny Gold commented, "I look forward to the labs because I discover that the foods I cook usually taste good.'

Classroom lessons consist of lectures and filmstrips on the nutritional value of food, guidelines for storing and preparing food, and information about different food types. Teacher Barbara Chausow explained, "With the evergrowing stress on nutrition in our country, the importance of good eating is intensified. Through Chefs course, students learn how different foods aid their bodies while having fun preparing them."
Because students may have to provide meals for themselves at one time or another, Chefs Course teaches them to prepare and enjoy the wonderful world of food.

Enthusiastically finishing their painting of their favorite hero Superman, Rohit Patel and Laura Gunnarson add the finishing touches to their masterpiece.

Anticipating the outcome of their mural, Karin Orsic and Carolyn Song work hard to create a real masterpiece. Art class not only needs talent, it needs patience.

Alix Kogan dreams about the delicious taste of his cookies while his helpers Dawn Jacobs and Kevin Lochner make their kitchen spotless. Cleaning up is also an important responsibility that these cooking students have.

Mr. Jurek explains a certain procedure that the students must know in order to become fine mechanics. Many class periods are devoted to lectures, explanations, and hands-on training.

Gus Katsis, Scott Moreth, Kirk Oliver and George Langis pay close attention to the daily lesson. They know that a pop quiz is bound to come soon.

Autos and Industrial Arts are very popular courses among many students, but they're not the only ones. Computer courses, as shown by Ken Zeff, are also among the favorites.

Displaying their Industrial skills, Rob Springer and Chris Atkinson perform the perfect cut on the table saw.

A Worthwhile Course

In a recent T.V. commercial people say they're not going to pay a lot for their mufflers, and after taking the elective course Automotive Mechanics, students can fix their own mufflers. Glenn Jurek and Lee Sellers teach autos, which introduces students to the fundamentals of the car. The curriculum includes reading books and writing several reports. Senior Keith Kleiner stated, "Autos is a lot of fun because you can really learn a lot about cars." In addition, the fine facilities include two; work labs with excellent equipment, and people donate old cars to enable students to further their studies by actually working on the cars. Present and past students can bring their cars in the shop to work on after school or during their free time. Students looking for a challenging course may consider taking autos as one of their options. Classwork and hands-on experience, make autos a worthwhile course.

Family Living: A Class For Everyone

The course Family Living does not resemble the ordinary day to day class. "I think the course touches on values that aren't viewed in other classes," pointed out Julie Hedrich. Students may opt to take this course rather then European History, Sociology, or Pyschology to meet the graduation requirement because in Family Living, students acquire fundamental knowledge about human relationships and real life situations. "You learn about yourself as well as others," commented Stefanie Krakow.

By taking Family Living, the student gains a broad view of marriage, divorce, parenting, family roles, and children. Teacher Mr. Bovers spends a great deal of time on the topic of divorce and each semester provides a field trip to divorce court, an eye-opening experience. "I couldn't believe people were granted a divorce within less than ten minutes," remarked Ellian Levin.

Throughout the semester, students work on a family tree project in which they must track down their family ancestors, interview a family relative of two generations ago, and gather old pictures of family members. In this unit, Mr. Bovers always stresses the importance of a camera and the sentimental value a picture can have in years to come.
"Unlike other classes, Family Living is a class where you learn about real life relationships and discuss how problems should be handled," said Howie Aronesti. Most seniors agree with Kirk Oliver that, "Family Living is a class for everyone."

Kevin Lochner listens carefully as Mr. Solovy explains the problem. Looking on to make sure he doesn't make the same mistake, is Ralph Anifiotis.

Defensive Driving: A Must In Drivers Education

Settling into the bucket seats of the fiery red machine, tension mounts and blood pressure rises. Hands clenched tightly to the wheel making knuckles white. The static from the intercom interrupts concentration. The man in the tower screams, "Students start your engines," signalling the beginning of the range lesson.
The range lesson, one of the components of the Drivers Education course, gives students the opportunity to experience and familiarize themselves with actual street driving. Situations similar to those one might come across in reality are set-up so that students will know proper procedures when confronted with them

Two experienced and trained professionals. Carl Van Cleave and George Earl, share the responsibility of conducting classroom and behind the wheel lessons. Students spend a majority of the classroom periods viewing films showing real life driving situations and ways to avoid possible hazards.

The students in the course consist of sophomores and juniors who meet the age requirement. Although not all schools offer a drivers education course. West recognizes the program as a necessity for later life. According to Van Cleave, "Drivers education trains you for something you will be doing sixty to seventy years of your life. The course prepares you for possible dangers one might come across. It teaches you to be a defensive driver which is the key to becoming a good, safe person behind the wheel.

Homecoming is a special time of celebration among all members of the school. Homecoming King Anthony Irpino and Queen Joy Grossberg prepare to lead the traditional Homecoming parade.

Special Events

All work and no play??? Never at Niles West! The student government, along with various other organizations, made certain that students calendars were always packed with exciting and entertaining events

The Back to School Bash started off the year with wild students celebrating their return. Homecoming highlighted the calendars of both underclassmen and upperclassmen as they chose funky and original dress up attire satisfying a specific theme. Furthermore, the Homecoming parade. game and dance were also included to spark the Indian spirit in all NiWeHi students. Other dances included Turnabout Frosh-Soph Mixer, and of Brad Jones fills out the necessary forms required of blood doners. West doners gave a total of over 100 pints of blood.

Brave Blood Doners

Stiff bodies lay everywhere. Pale, motionless seniors had collapsed on stretchers in the once cheery Oakton Lobby. Each body was tagged as the tubing was removed from its limbs. Were these emaciated students the unfortunate victims of senioritis?

By springtime, senioritis is a strong trait among the graduating class, but these casualties were caused by professional nurses drawing blood for the annual Blood Drive, sponsored by the Na tional Honor Society for Life Source. The goal of attaining 100 pints of blood was reached with ease as donors eagerly swarmed the Oakton Lobby to give blood. Most of the donors were senior students, but anyone fitting the age, weight, and health requirements was permitted to give blood.

Greatly Appreciated

"I was pleasantly surprised to find out how easy it was to give blood. And contrary to what I thought, I felt fine afterwards," said Mrs. Horwitz of the blood draining process. Donating a pint of blood was a small part of her contribution toward the success of the Blood Drive. Mrs. Horwitz along with Mr. Boevers was involved with organizing the Blood Drive.

By the end of the day, not only was the sponsor's goal fulfilled, but the donors themselves felt a sense of accomplishment. Life Source expressed their thanks to those who gave blood with twinkies and pins declaring each as a humanitarian for the day. Spanish teacher Mr. Murphy shared his feeling, "It's a wonderful thing to give blood!"

A Niles West participant chuckles while she donates to a worthwhile cause. Many eligible students took part, and it proved to be a success.

Taking a puff from his cigarette, David Allen brings his character to life in last spring's production of The Odd Couple.

Odd Couple Provides Dynamite Comedy Drama

Walter Matthau and Jack Lemmon. Jack Klugman and Tony Randall. Dave Allen and Arthur Tiersky. These are just a few people who have played the roles of Oscar Madison and Felix Ungar in the classic Neil Simon comedy, "The Odd Couple."
"The Odd Couple" tells the story of a preppie-type, Felix Ungar and his best friend, a slob, Oscar Madison. The bulk of the plot takes place after they move in with each other following Felix's attempt to commit suicide, for his wife has thrown him out of his home, and there is an impending divorce.

Every Friday evening, the two host a poker game for their friends. They are slobs like Oscar, and dirty up his apartment constantly. When Felix moves in everything changes. They cannot be messy any longer, for Felix, being the prep that he is, always keeps the place spotless, no crumbs, dust or other slobby things. Oscar and Felix's friends go crazy. Murray, portrayed by Larry Mills, is a paranoid policeman; Vinnie, played by Joel Dalinka, a complete "nudge,"; Speed, played by David Lieb, a cigar-smoking gangster-type who has no patience; and Roy portrayed by Paul Katz, an accountant with a lust to complain about everything.
A few weeks later, Felix and Oscar begin to get on each other's nerves. To get back on their feet romantically, Oscar asks two women who moved into the apartment on the other side of the building, the Pigeon sisters, over to their house for dinner. The sisters were portrayed by Ann Fisher and Jennifer Collins. Many more escapades take place, leading to a final battle between Felix and Oscar, which is considered some of the best comedy in American history.

James Batts, English teacher at Niles West, directs the spring play each year. He stated, "I feel I've chosen an excellent cast, they are hard-working, and I had a lot of fun with them. Directing the spring play is the best time of the school year for me, because I get so into it that I usually lose a lot of weight during it!!" The set was designed by Cynthia Philbin, Lee Goldberg and Peter Sharpe. The crew who built it was comprised of Niles West students from both the theatre department and the debate team, of which Mr. Batts is a sponsor. Performances were held April 30th, May 1st and 2nd, 1987.

Oscar Madison, played by David AIlen, has the face of victory without agony of defeat. However, Felix Hunger, played by Arthur Tiersky, relishes in his dissatisfaction.

Senior Arthur Tiersky relays his troubles to fellow cast members Jennifer Collins and Ann Fisher. Last spring's production of "The Odd Couple" was a huge success.

Not just schools from the United States are represented at college night. Jay Rosenbaum has difficulty deciding if a move halfway around the world will satisfy his educational goals.

An Educational Evening

For one night in the year, West served as the center of all excitement in the Chicagoland area. Cars jammed the school lots, and people packed the hallways, while helicopters landed on the front lawn. Parents and students were not enjoying a night's entertainment, but rather were participating in a rare opportunity to find out about colleges and universities across the nation.

For the diverse needs of the students, College Night offered over 300 choices for post-high school planning, the largest such representation Niles Township has presented. These alternatives included nationally revered schools, state schools, schools for the Arts, private schools, and religiously oriented schools. Programs were also presented by the Armed Forces, the Paris

American Academy from France, and our own Oakton Community College.
Happy with the program of College Night, Junior Lenny Katz said, "I thought College Night was a great success from the standpoints of the overwhelming amount of universities attending, and the great amount of families who benefitted extremely. However, I thought it should have lasted longer."
Junior Shirley Choi summed-up the value of College Night. "It's good, because you get a chance to talk to the college representatives. I like that the school did this, because I got to know about colleges I didn't know about, and for those that I had in mind, I was able to find out the requirements."

Relaxing after some strenuous dancing, these sophomores relate the theme of the Frosh/Soph Mixer. The Mixer was sponsored by the Sophomore Cabinet on Sept. 19th.

As an excited Doreen Kestler boo gies her way through the crowds at the annual Frosh/Soph Mixer, her face genuinely expresses that she is having a wild and crazy time.

Being an underclassmen is not all that bad. These freshmen and sophomores found that out at the Frosh/Soph Mixer.

Meet Me At The Mixer!

Dressed in tie-dyed shirts, prepared to make new friends, and catch up with the happenings of old, freshmen and sophomores rushed into the Niles West cafeteria at 7:00 p.m. for the annual frosh-soph mixer, sponsored by the Sophomore Cabinet on September 19th.

The purpose of the mixer was for the more than 300 attending to attempt the nearly impossible task of meeting all the others.

The theme was Woodstock, and the common dress was the latest style of tie-dyed shirts. To liven up the party, some sophomores wore togas.

Doughnuts were served as refreshments, and as a break from the dancing, the people went into the courtyard and chatted with old and new found friends.
At 9:00 as the last chord of the evening was played, students reluctantly inched out and freshman Robin Yu commented, "The mixer should have been longer." Many others agreed.

Truly expressing the theme of The Frosh/Soph mixer which was Woodstock, Ann Pullano, Lule Jusufi, and Dana Mohrlein clad themselves in tiedyed togas. Togas are usually a popular form of dress at the annual mixer.

Specialized license plates and bumper stickers are only a few of the accessories that adorn the cars in the student parking lot. The unfortunate people that don't have transportation most often ride the school bus.

A group of upperclassmen check out their friends new purchase Motorcycles proved to be both effective and popular among students.

Cruising At The Crack Of Dawn

"Bye Mom, Gotta run!" yells a typical NiWeHi student as he dashes out the door to catch the bus. "See ya later, Dad!" says another as he crosses Oakton Street to school. While students come to school in a variety of ways, they all have one thing in common - they must all be in homeroom by $7: 30$. Whether they drive or run, the third tardy usually means a detention.

The freshman dream is to drive to school senior year, leaving the house five minutes before school starts. This happy thought is all that gets them through those long, cold winter mornings waiting for the bus. Did you ever wonder, though, about why those seniors often drive up before the buses even arrive? No, they aren't crazy. It's that mad competition for a parking space. Only a sadder but wiser senior can tell you the horrors of trying to run from the far end of the parking lot to homeroom in two minutes. Maybe after an experience like that you freshmen wouldn't leave the house five minutes before school starts, either. Still, many seniors would die without their cars.

Though driving is the preferred way to go, many other means of transportation exist. Some students live close by. Others can't get the family car and would die before taking the bus. In either case, students may choose to walk to school every day, and the bicycle racks are often full. Those affluent students whose parents approve may even ride a scooter to school.

When all else fails, students still shouldn't give up hope. They can often count on parents for a last minute ride in an emergency. Still, to all who dream of driving up in a Lamborghini or a Porsche, dream on; you never know when your dreams may come true!

Keith Kleiner peers cautiously over his motorcycle, carefully parking it to avoid damage. Motorcycles are one form of transportation.

Dale Sherman and Elaine Barrington dance the night away at the Hyatt Regency. They are just one of the seven couples running for Prom King and Queen.

A Night To

JUST YOU AND I
"Just You And I," the Ju-nior-Senior Prom sponsored by the Junior Class Cabinet, provided prom-goers with a glamorous and memorable evening. After arriving at the elegant Hyatt Regency downtown on May 29 at 7:30 p.m., the couples began rocking the night away on the dance floor and munching on delicious assorted appetizers.

Prom King and Queen, Jeff Gassel and Jodi Isreal, were chosen from among six couples by the promgoers. Traci Dreier commented, "Choosing the Prom King and Queen was a hard decision. All of the candidates were special in their own way."

When Prom ended, couples went out to dinner, stopping for a carriage ride or walking down Michigan Avenue. Some people even made a weekend of it, driving to Wisconsin the next day or spending the weekend at a downtown hotel.

The Junior Class President, Benjie Malkin, concluded "The time and effort put into making this year's prom the best ever brought tremendous results. To see that everyone had such a great time made all of the work rewarding."

Bye-Bye Class Of '87

Red and white hats surged into the stifling air when Dr. Ring called the last of the names in the class of ' 87 . Graduation at last. Sunday, June 7, 1987, marked the final day for those students to belong to Niles West. The leaders of the graduation procession consisted of Dale Sherman, President; James Van Osdol, Vice President;

Craig Keer, Secretary; Diane Smason, Treasurer; and the Valedictorian, Sou-Pan Wu. Dr. Roger D. Stein, Senior class adviser stated, "The Class of ' 87 contains a number of very special, intelligent, hardworking, and dedicated people. Niles West is sorry to see them leave, but we are certain that they will succeed in their future endeavors." After four long years of anticipation of leaving many seniors still felt that they would miss Niles West. Joe Bass stated, "As much as I couldn't wait to graduate and get out of this so-called "Jail", I know I will miss NiWeHi. I had some great times here." Many graduates left Niles West with mixed feelings of nostalgia for the past and anticipation of the future. Some Seniors couldn't wait to get ouf of high school, while others left Niles West reluctantly. Whether those students graduated Niles West feeling happy or sad, the Class of ' 87 will always be a part of the school.

Videoscreens Enhance Homecoming Assembly

Silence shattered as the entire school escaped from homerooms and stampeded down the halls. The gymnasium rang with chaotic thunder on October 5, as spotlights flew around the gym and added a sense of excitement to the occasion - The Homecoming Assembly.
The noise didn't cease after the introductions had begun, and the music and videoscreens brought forth everyone's interest. The pompon squad made their second pep rally appearance, and the varsity cheerleaders led the class levels in a cheering competition.
As their faces were magnified on the videoscreens, the varsity football and soccer team ran down the center of the gym and accepted the wild response of the spectators. Indian mascot, Julie Wozniak, paraded the floor, performing the traditional ritual of her Indian dance.
Tension mounted, and everyone became silent as the announcement of the nominees for Homecoming King and Queen began. Jinjer marched out of Ni-We-Hi's Oakton exit. The "Ticker Tape Parade" packed the streets with spirited students and colorful creations. The King and Queen proudly lead the Homecoming procession followed by their court and the marching band. Thundering drums and crashing cymbols dominated the grey October day. Blowing in the breeze, strands of toilet paper and shreds of newspaper marked the parade route.

Brody, Amy Chertow, Kelly Cordes, Karyn Elliott, Amy Fullett, Joy Grossberg, Helen Hart, Karin Janessa, Karin Orsic, and Stacy Stratigakis made their way to the main floor as they heard their names announced as the nominees for Homecoming Queen.

Student Union, the class
clubs worked together by sponsoring floats, and promoting spirit. Exploding with enthusiasm, the spirit committees: Pom Pons, Cheerleaders, and Midnight Riders lead cheers which echoed throughout the parade. The Orchestra, "noted" for its elaborate floats won first place in the traditional float competition. For the second year, Students Against Drunk Driving contributed to the festivities with their lifesaving theme float. The athletic teams and N Club expressed their support for the football team by participating in the celebration. Attracting the attention of spectators, police sirens escorted the parade in its route through Skokie and Morton Grove. When the parade reached its end, Indian spirit raged as the war-painted Niles West tribe, hungry for a victory, made its way to the stadium. The Homecoming Parade captured the intense excitement of the students and the community as all anticipated the big game.

Throwing "The" Ball

Student Union scored when they "Threw The Ball" for their eager, enthusiastic fans!

As couples filed in for the final Homecoming activity, they saw a gym transformed into a grand ballroom. Ball masks and brightly colored steamers lined the walls to complete the ballroom theme.

Some couples boogied to the beat of "Adventures in Dining", while others waited in line to have a photographer take a memorable portrait of them. While the band took their break, the couples chatted about dinner plans, carriage rides, and romantic prospects for the evening. Others took advantage of the hors d' oeuvres table, which consisted of carrot sticks, vegetable dip, and miniature club sandwiches.
Returning to the edge of the dance floor, the couples watched as the Queen, Joy Grossberg and King, Anthony Irpino danced to the theme from "Dirty Dancing" marking the highlight of the evening.
In addition to upperclassmen, many freshman and sophomores attended the festivities. One underclassman, Stephanie Israel, exclaimed, "If all the dances at Niles West are this great, I'm in for an exciting four years!"

As the ball neared its end, couples gathered their belongings, found their friends, said their goodbyes, and headed for an equally exciting night on the town!

A "Good Time" Production Returns

When "Bye-Bye Birdie" first hit the Broadway scene in the early 1960's, the nation greeted the show as a "good time": production with cheerful songs and an energetic cast that would keep a smile on one's face until the night was over. Now, some twenty-seven years later, Conrad Birdie and the town of Sweet Apple, Ohio have been reborn on the Niles West stage as the premiere production of the school year.
The musical opens with Birdie, senior Matthew Winer, a rock star modeled after the late Elvis Presley, being drafted into the army. Upon hearing this, the millions of female teenagers who love this man with a passion prepare to secede from the Union. Albert Peterson (originally to be played by junior Carl Helwing, whos unfortunate illness resulted in director Arthur Tiersky's takeover of the role), Birdie's songwriter who practically survives on his star's career, does not know how to handle the drafting situation either. His faithful secretary, Rose AIvarez (senior Lisa Lasowski) comes up with a plan to send Birdie away happily while still in the hearts of girls everywhere. Birdie will perform Albert's latest song, "One Last Kiss," on the Ed Sullivan Show the night before he leaves for the army. When he is finished singing he will plant one final kiss on the lips of Kim Macafee, (senior Joy Grossberg) chosen at random from a selection of Birdie's greatest fans. Along the way, the characters experience fights, disagreements, and hilarious misunderstandings that lead to the happy ending. Major cast members also included junior Kirsten Gieler as AIbert's obnoxiously domineering mother; juniors David Lieb and Amy Flack as Kim's conservative parents; senior Wendy Doyle as Kim's sister; and junior Yuri Keegstra as Hugo Peabody, the jealous boyfriend.

For the third year in a row, the student steering committee chosen to direct this annual production decided to perform a pre-written show rather than an original story. Stated senior director Arthur Tiersky, "The shows chosen for this production in the last two years have required an amount of thinking about strange underlying morals. This year, we all wanted a change, and 'ByeBye Birdie,' one of my alltime favorite shows, was my first choice all along."

Fun and games didn't occur all the time, however. Everyone on the committee believed that they cast roles extremely well, but when lead Carl Helwing had to back out, many thought disaster might strike. Senior co-orchestral director Joel Dalinka related, "The last few weeks of rehearsal, I was scared that the show might not come together as well as past shows have; I am elated that I have been proven wrong!"

Back To School

One Wednesday evening, October 28, at approximately 7:30 p.m., it happened again. School commenced for the second time that day, but not for the students. Hundreds of parents of Niles West students swarmed the hallways to endure the obstacle course of their child's schedule. That night was the 30th annual Open House.

Open House gave parents the opportunity to personally meet and talk to their child's teachers. During each shortened class, parents listened to short lectures on the course curriculum and content. Curious parents could ask questions about the student's progress in the class or about the class itself.

Unlike students, parents didn't have to attend study halls and physical education classes. Instead they walked aimlessly around the school peeping in rooms or proceeding to the cafeteria for refreshments and observing displays. Student representatives of numerous clubs such as sports teams, special interest clubs and student government anxiously waited to answer parents' questions. In addition to cafeteria displays, parents could see other exhibits on Niles West life after school situated throughout the building. The art center presented an art demonstration and slide show in the display case. While orchesis performed in the dance studio, thespians rehearsed "Bye Bye Birdie" in the auditorium. Gym teachers led a formal discussion about fitness in the Gymnasium while the Board of Education spoke about the Illinois State Report Card in room 016.

Counselor Tom Meyer talks with a parent during the Open House. The Niles West faculty was on hand to answer any questions, and keep the night running smoothly.

Cheerleaders Lena Quilici and Angela Hanga take a break from assisting lost parents at the open house. Students also attended to help parents find their son's/ daughter's classes.

The Niles West Concert Orchestra performs for parents attending the Open House. They played for almost two hours and did not strike a wrong note all night.

Haunted Hallways

Ghosts and goblins float down the hallway while other students walk in everyday attire. "Halloween comes but once a year and I enjoy dressing up", said Senior Ross Fischoff who has been a dedicated Halloweener for four years. Many students enjoy dressing up, but "the students who don't dress up are the ones who miss out", stated Senior Brad Carstens. Many of the students who do dress up in costumes, trick-or-treat during the day, while others trick-or-treat well into the night.

After school, students prepare for the night time festivities. Costume parties, the most popular type of party on Halloween, require a lot of work. Lots of time also goes into the costumes which may need hours of sewing and face painting. "Bombing", another favorite activity of some students, requires a heavy stock of eggs, shaving cream, and toilet paper since to achieve the objective of "bombing" one must smother others with these materials without becoming a victim first.
Is Halloween really scary? Many students would deny that they are afraid, but they won't be seen crossing the path of a black cat, visiting a graveyard, or trick-or-treating past midnight.

Showing real school spirit, an unknown NiWe Student parades around school on Halloween. There were a variety of costumes displayed on October 31st.

Prisoners of the wicked witch in her gingerbread house are Hansel and Gretel, played by Adam Telengater and Laila Stein.

Fairy Tale Delights Audience

"Don't trust strangers," is the archetypal theme of the children's theater presentation, "Hansel and Gretel."

This classic story of two lost young children, who come across a gingerbread house in the woods and end up prisoners of a wicked witch, succeeded greatly, bringing in full houses for the two afternoon performances and a half-full house for the Saturday show. Students from thirty-five schools came to see the show during the day-time showings.

The enthusiastic cast, headed by skillful direction of Cynthia Philbin, consisted of sophomore Adam Telengater as Hansel, junior Laila Stein as Gretel, and sophomore Jennifer Collins as the Witch. Other cast members included freshmen Barbara Bouboutsis, Julie Doyle, Kelly Hogan, Davita Levin and Kim Lowenthal, sophomore Karen Guthrie, junior Carl Helwing, and senior Wendy Doyle.

Describing the difficulties and pleasures of performing for young children, Telengater commented, "You have to capture them, which I think we did in the first few scenes. Then they really respond well." Sophomore Jennifer Collins shared the delight. "Working with kids was really fun; it was great to see how they reacted.'

Before the show began, an innovative skit, called Etiskit, performed by Katy Born, Joel Dalinka, Joy Grossberg, Lisa Lasowski, Matthew Winer, and Arthur Tiersky, who also wrote and directed the piece, received rave reviews. Etiskit showed the young children in the audience how they should behave during the performance talking about gum chewing, applause, and when to get up during the show.
According to enthusiastic audience member sophomore Nicoletta Harris, "The scenery was magnificent, the singing was superb, and the audience was truly involved."

Hansel and Gretel get down on their knees, hoping and wishing for a way out of the witch's gingerbread house.

Kim Lowenthal and Davita Levin put on a perfect performance for the Children's Theater's presentation of Hansel and Gretel. A wonderful show was the result of weeks of rehearsals.

West Groups Perform At Fiesta Bowl.  GO!,  ished by December 1, 1987,  spent on perfecting music,

"Attend Hut! Parade Rest! ......... UGH!" No, this is not about going to the army, but about being a member in the marching band. The marching band, directed by William Koch, diligently worked on their marching techniques from the hot, scorching days of August to the cool, shivering nights of October, in order to prepare a show that was to be watched by millions. The occasion, the "Sunkist Fiesta Bowl Parade."

Last May, the band accepted their invitation to play in the Fiesta Bowl, in Phoenix, Arizona on New Year's Day, 1988. Many hours were put into making this tour a success. All of the fundraising, arranged by Mrs. Fern Katz, had to be fin-and early deadline which meant everyone had to work fast.
Also attending the festivities were the colorguard, pom-pon, and cheerleading squads. All of this adding up to one of the largest and most expensive tours ever held. But, not to fear. As for the money, the band was lucky to once again have the support of Mrs. Fern Katz. With her complete dedication to the band, she was able to help students nearly split in half the original cost, from $$ 570$ per person to $$ 275$ per person. She overall helped the students to raise a total of $$ 45,000$. But, the money was just one of the main concerns. Now, the numerous hours had to be marching in step, and looking their best. This was accomplished under the direction of Mr. Koch and his wife, who was also the Colorguard instructor.

The tour took place from December 28th and continued into New Year until the third of January. Due to the inclement weather on Monday, the students were forced to fly out of Chicago the following morning. The band lost many hours of practice time due to the delay, but spirits were kept up. They arrived in Phoenix that Tuesday afternoon and everyone was anxious to get started. "We missed about fifteen hours of rehearsal, but that only made us work twice as hard in the shortened time that was given to us, stated clarinet player Suzy Bohigan.

The four mile parade down Central Avenue excited everyone. "When I saw the people along the sides of the streets, it was in serious numbers, like 300,000 people. We're used to marching down Oakton Street where people are there because they just happen to be," commented another clarinet player David Steiner. This recognition and success has brought a smile not only to the band, but to the members of the community. "It was great to see everyone (local businesses) care whether we could go.

Spanish Club Visits Day Care Center

The Casa Central Day Care Center was filled with Niles West students as well as little children one December afternoon. No, the students did not need supervision or parental guidance, but they did feel the need to spread some holiday cheer. The day care center had been visited by the Spanish Club for a number of years, and this year's club did not end the tradition. Sponsored by Mrs. Georgiev and Miss O'Reilley, the Spanish Club trekked to Casa Central with about a dozen of its members. Careful planning went into the afternoon's schedule, filled with all the old games learned in fourth grade. The bunny hop, for example, progressed almost to perfection, but its tricky footwork caused the students and friends some problems. A miniature play was enacted with hand puppets, and a little "roughhousing" occurred among some of the more aggressive boys who had eaten all their "Wheaties" that morning. To top it all off, President Eric Orsic, donned in a Santa suit with all the trimmings, distributed presents to the children. Junior Randy Feldman concluded, "Nos divertimos a Casa Central."

The audience watches this trio perform during the second annual lip sync contest, the group consists of Craig Gramatis, Benji Malkin, and Ben Yashon.

Watching a lip sync contest can almost be as fun as participating in one. These spectators realize this during the event, sponsored by sophomore cabinet.

Keeping In Sync

The second annual Lip Sync contest took place in NiWeHi's auditorium on Saturday, January 9th. This event was sponsored by the Sophomore Cabinet, and once again had a very large turnout, which raised a great deal of money for their treasury. Prizes were given to the group or act that had the most originality and best lip sync performance. The sponsor of Sophomore Cabinet, Mr. Puff, stated, "I am very pleased with the turnout we had. All the kids worked hard to make it work. 'First place award was presented to Andy Bok, Richard Dubin, and Andy Browder.

A Late Night Show Stopper With Orchesis

It's imagination, it's excitement, it's creativity, it's "Late Night with the Orchesis Dance Co."! As the curtain opened, five dark silhouettes posed on stage. Suddenly, a spotlight illuminated the stage and the dancers appeared. The audience applauded as the opening number commenced. The midwinter show consisted of twenty-two different numbers varying from jazz to ballet based upon different types of music which ranged from Michael Jackson's "Bad" to the more balletic style of "Arthur's Theme". Members of the company choreographed the various dances and alumni-sponsor Gretchen Galder took charge of the overall direction of the production.
The show differed from past years in that it contained a special number for the twelve senior members leaving the company. Sponsor Gretchen Glader voiced regrets about have a senior dance, saying, "I can't stand seeing all the dancers I'll be losing next year at one time."

Finally, the dancers each took their bows to the tune of "Dancing in the Street", and ran into the aisles, still dancing with the same energy and enthusiasm that filled the show. The two hours of entertainment came to an end as the dancers concluded their performance and the curtain closed behind them.

"Late Night With the Orchesis Dance Co. concludes with a dramatic pose, ending another year of hard work and determination.

Orchesis members perform another of their creative dances, which are all choreographed by student members.

Banks Praises King

When one envisions a man who fought for the equality and freedom of all people, Martin Luther King immediately comes to mind. No other man is so universally known as the crusader of justice. King spent much of his life promoting the welfare of his people and the rights of all those whose rights had been ignored. Unfortunately, few of his accomplishments were recognized until after his death.
On January fifteenth, West held an assembly honoring King. The guest speaker, Dr. Lacy Banks, gave an eloquent address describing Martin Luther King as the true king, one who contributed greatly to the cause of his people. Unlike other kings who have come and gone, Martin Luther King made a difference in the lives of those who followed him. He gave his life fighting for a cause he believed in. Having helped his people, King died a satisfied man.

Dr. Banks advised students to devote a few moments thinking about King's accomplishments in the field of human rights. Students left the assembly feeling love towards all of mankind and respect for a great man Dr. Martin Luther King.

Spaghetti Serenade

What a better way to spend a chilly February night than to eat to the heart's content with beautiful music playing in the background. The Niles West band, orchestra, and choral groups provided over two hours of entertainment at the "Pasta and Pops" concert on February 27th. This event was sponsored by the Music Parents Association, and with cooperation from dedicated members and school faculty, the evening proved successful. The concert took place in the gym, thanks to Mr. Turry, the athletic director. Mr. Dr. Rodakavich and Dr. Ring attended and enjoyed the result of many hours of grueling practice. Mr. Kaitchuck, the Orchestra conductor remarked, "Everyone enjoyed the performance, and the evening was very successful."

Many hours of planning took place before the evening's festivities. Faculty and parents alike helped to position the tables and chairs, laid out tablecloths, organized food display etc. Were it not for these dedicated people, the evening would not have turned out to be as complete and fulfilling as it did.

The drum line performs for parents and faculty alike during the concert. Many hours are spent rehearsing and practicing before a performance.

Mr. Kaitchuck conducts the Concert Orchestra for a packed gymnasium. The orchestra stopped rehearsing only when perfection was reached.

Seymour, portrayed by senior Paul Katz, feeds the Audrey II for the play "Little Shop of Horrors." Almost every day of the week was devoted by cast members in order to perfect the play.

Little Shop - A First For The West Stage

"'LOOKOUT, HERE COMES AUDREY TWO!," ex-

 claimed the publicity posters for this year's musical, LITTLE SHOP OF HORRORS. Niles West bears the distinction of being the first high school in the Chicagoland area to secure the rights to perform this 1982 off-broadway smash hit, which has delighted audiences all over the world.The story, narrated by three girls called the Ronnettes (a parody of the sixties girl group The Supremes), centers around Seymour Krelborn, a down-on-his-luck nerd, who while working at Mushnik's Skid Row Florists, discovers a new breed of plant life hitherto unknown on this planet. He names his new discovery the Audrey Two, so he can perhaps win the affections of the girl he has a crush on, Audrey. Seymour discovers that while his plant looks incredibly unusual, the Audrey Two demonstrates some disgusting eating habits: it will not grow unless fed human blood! After introducing the plant to Mushnik, his boss, Seymour discovers that his plant's unusual appearance is doing wonders for business in the flower shop. Seymour continues to feed it blood, and finds himself suddenly successful, with TV and magazine offers being presented to him. However, as the Audrey Two grows, it begins to talk and orders Seymour to feed him large quantities of blood at a time, meaning Seymour must kill people to get the plant to bring him more success. It then becomes a battle between human morals and the Audrey Two's night feedings.
Theatre sponsor and director Robert Johnson stated that he had wanted to stage a production of LITTLE SHOP since he had first seen it over four years ago. "I have never been so pleased with a show as I have with this one," stated Johnson. "The cast, crew and orchestra and all my fellow directors have done an excellent job with an extremely difficult production. I am very pleased." Johnson was assisted by choreographer and costumer Gretchen Glader, band director William Koch, vocal director Sheri Owens, and technical directors Lee Goldberg, Cynthia Philbin and Peter Sharpe. The lighting for the show was creatively designed by Marc Schwartz.
Casting was a very special aspect of this show. Many of the larger roles were "double cast", meaning two people would hold down one role in the show. The only exceptions were Pascale Trouillot as Crystal, the leader of the Ronnettes, Arthur Tiersky as Mr. Mushnik, Seymour's boss. Dave Lieb as Bernstein, a pushy NBC contractor, and Laura Persky as the customer. John Barba and Paul Katz portrayed Seymour, Michelle Dayan and Beth Lichtenstein characterized Audrey, the Fay Wray-like female lead, and Carl Helwing and Kevin Steele played the sadistic dentist boyfriend of Audrey's. The other Ronnettes were Laura Abrahams and Kristen Gieler as Ronette, and Joy Grossberg and Melinda Hepner as Chiffon.
Production dates for the show were March 9-12 of 1988. The show will be remembered long after it is over by cast, crew and orchestra.

Audrey, played by Michelle Dayan, captures the attention of the packed auditorium in the closing minutes of her life. Little Shop was originally performed in New York.

The Ronnettes, played by Joy Grossberg, Pascale Trouillot and Kiersten Gieler, narrate in three part harmony the events surrounding Mushnik's flower shop.

Escape To The Orient Via Turnabout

That time of the year when the guys sit back and let the girls do the asking, the annual Turnabout Dance, did its job once again in granting couples good memories and a great time. "Escape To The Orient" occurred three weeks after Valentine's Day leaving a chance for couples to celebrate the 14th of February on a later date. The Student Union beautifully decorated the gym in green, black, gold, and yellow and set out a delicious buffet composed of assorted Chinese snacks and appetizers. D.J. Cary Smolenski, played the latest hits while creating an atmosphere of love for dancing all night long.
Student Union Vice-President Staci Stratigakis commented, "We all worked hard, but the time spent on organizing the dance paid off with a tremendous turnout."

Lori Utanoff dances to the latest hits played by D.J. Cary Smolenski.

Elena Leibovich and Joe Camilli enter the decorated gym on the way to the Orient Express. Student Union sponsored the dance which had a great turnout.

Steve Posavac and Heidi Fradkin share a special moment at Turnabout 88 . This is the last formal dance before Prom, which is in June.

Carlene Oleander and her date enjoy a slow dance together during "Escape to the Orient." Couples crowded the dance floor throughout the entire evening.

Freshman Vicki Rappin and Andy Bok are thoroughly enjoying themselves at Turnabout. There was a mixed variety of underclassmen as well as juniors and seniors.

Ben Yashon and Melissa Connell are all smiles while jamming to the hits of D.J. Cary Smolinski. The variety of songs satisfied all those who attended.

All that dancing tends to make a man hungry. Alumnus Dave Allen and friends glance over at the tray of appetizers.

The audience watches closely as a diver takes her turn off the board. Diving competitions were held along with swim meets.

Sports

Unrestrained voices yelledi and cheered from the bleachers as a Niles West' team strove for another victory. Who provided all of this excitement? The athletes did, of course. Athletics allowed students to display their talents whether it was in football, soccer, swimming, golf, basketball, or other various sports.

Athletes had to learn to use their time wisely in order to succeed in both sports and school. Having to practice many hours a day and still keep up on homework wàs a difficult task. Yet it was required of athletes to sustain a fairly good grade point playing. "As a freshman on Cross Country. I realized how difficult it can be to handle both homework and daily practices. It was a lot of hard work, but it was worth it in the end." stated freshman Elyssa Leboy.

Athletes contributed excitement and pride to our school. This was evident by the large crowds which appeared to suppopt them. even in cold and stormy weather. Loyal Indian fans sat upon the bleachers regardless of the weather and cheered their team on to one victory after another!

Varsity Discovers Sufficient System

Transition describes the varsity gridders, and one of the biggest transitions from last year occured from offense to defense. Eleven fresh players entered the field as the platoon system hit Niles West. The new system gave the team twentytwo starters, eleven on offense and eleven on defense. Coach Richardson employed the platoon to keep players from tiring out, while allowing more participation. The system also allowed injured players to be more easily replaced, with specialists at every position.

The varsity squad adapted to the system well, despite early losses to state powerhouses New Trier and Evanston. The Indians put it together in game three with a solid victory over Maine East, 26-13.
Although the Indians encountered other rough losses, including Homecoming, the team remained hopeful and played to the final minute. With more players coming out in the summer, the platoon system will give the football program a great boost. Each year the presence of more returning players with varsity experience and a greater number of students playing will result in a powerful Indian squad for years to come.

Coach Richardson shows his anger as the Niles West Indians miss a key opportunity in scoring. The Indians lost to the New Trier Trevians fortyfour to twelve.

Free of distraction, Quarterback Tim Queen releases the ball which turns out to be a thiry-five yard fumbled pass. West lost to Waukeegan East in the Homecoming game fifteen to six.

Showing speed and quickness, a freshman runner bursts through a huge gap in the line. With good strong blocks from the front line, the runner ran for a touchdown.

White 19! White 19! Go Go! Screams the quarter back as he receives the snap from the center. Freshman year football is usually for learning of the game.

Young Gridders Gain Strength

"'Ropes", "Sleds", "Reactor", and "Chutes" developed into dreaded vocabulary among the frosh-soph football teams. Although these apparatus required a great deal of energy while bordening on tedium, they greatly enhanced the skills of the underclass teams.

The season began early each day for the sophomores and freshman with 7:30 a.m. double practice sessions that lasted until 1:00 p.m. Many valuable lessons and ideals learned by the young gridders stemmed from these grueling workouts.
The sophomores opened the year winning two of their first three games. Following the Varsity coaching strategy, coaches Murphy and Schmidt employed the platoon system to the fullest. The sophomores, already acquainted with the system, will enter junior year as welcome additions.
Besides getting a taste of the game, the freshmen learned to enjoy the competition and camaraderie of high school football.
The combination of new talent and hard work in the underclass level makes the future look good for Niles West. A continued level of improvement from the first years can only mean a more successful Indian football team.

Tough Season Provides Struggle

Most students know volleyball as just a game to play on the beach or at a picnic, but for the girls who make up the Niles West Volleyball Team, volleyball holds the title of most important sport.

The Niles West Varsity Volleyball Team struggled through a tough season with a six and thirteen record, despite the fact that co-captains Sarah Kim and Karin Janessa and members Kim McAllister, Sandy Stergious and Kelli Lochner returned from the previous season with hopes of a good year. "During the early and midseason we didn't play well and had trouble getting motivated, but towards the end of the season we started to play up to our potential." commented Kim McAllister. Victories over Niles North at home on cable, close games with Deerfield, beating St. Scholastica in the regionals, and having a great final game against Evanston highlighted the season for the team.

Coach Paula Sfickas stated "Although the team record may not show we had a successful season, the progress and teamwork showed by the team made it a winning season for me." According to Sfickas, next years team should be stronger with the help of more experienced players coming to the varsity team.

Sandy Stergios concentrates on spiking the ball. Stergios' height and swiftness helped the Indians in their victory over Niles North 15-8, 15-11.

Kickers' Spirit Never Lost

Kicking off the soccer season with four returning starters led Coach Brennan to have an optimistic outlook for the season. The team began to practice in August and continued the whole season.

The Indians' first and toughest competition was in the Zeedyk Tournament which found them facing the best teams in the Chicagoland area. Although the Indians lost to Hoffman Estates 2-0, and Gordon Tech 4-2, the Indians challenged every team by putting pressure on them the entire game.

According to Coach Brennan, "We were always in every game, yet a step behind at the final buzzer. The reason is our players do not start playing soccer until high school, while other areas begin at an earlier age."

A new addition to the coaching staff this year was Coach Melnick, who in his earlier years played soccer for the Indians. He was a real asset to the team by preparing them for the games.
Two senior soccer players related their opinions about why the team had not realized its goals this year. As John Puljic stated, "We had a lot of individual talent but it did not come together as a unit." Ray Castro added, "One of our major problems was lack of communication on the field and not enough movement."

One thing was for sure: win, loose, or tie, the soccer team played each game with spirit and always tried to put their best "foot" forward.

Goalie Bill Pergl grimaces as he deflects a bouncing ball kicked toward the goal. Goaltenders usually do anything to save a potential point.

While listening to the coach during halftime, Andreas Harris and Lambros Kalamaris decide to take a water break. Halftimes are usually used by the coaches to decide on the game plans for the next half.

Surpassing Swimmers' Success

From the hot summer mornings of August, to the cool windy evenings of November, the girls' swim team took charge of their season.

Though there might not have been a powerful girls' swim team these last few years, this fall a handfull of individuals proved the season a worthwhile one.

Key swimmers for the Indians included senior varsity captain Wendy Martin who, despite her bad shoulder, pulled through the season in the 200 Medley relay, 100 Fly, and 200 I.M. Senior Mary Theodore, also a main swimmer, took good care of the 200 yard free and 500 yard free. Junior Patty Tzortzis excelled considerably by switching over to the sprints. "I'm very happy that coach Lucas agreed to put me in the freestyle sprints. The 200 yard free and the 500 yard free seemed to be a little bit too long for me. As I've been told by coach Lucas time after time, when they make up a 150 yard freestyle event, l'll be the first to sign up, until then, I'm going to stick with anchoring the Medley relay, and swimming the 50 yard and 100 yard free."

Two key swimmers were newcomers this year. Niles North transfer Miki Vucic, a junior, earned many points for the Indians in the 200 Medley relay, 200 Individual Medley, and the 100 Fly. Sophomore Jessica Western also gave the team an extra boost in the 200 Medley relay and the 100 breastroke.

Practices were led by assistant coach Jodi Nebbia, who made sure everyone started by 3:00 p.m. Practice usually consisted of a warm up, some sprints, long distance, and a cool down, which roughly averaged to 5000 yards a day. "Since our yardage has slightly increased from last year, I feel that it has given the team an extra push towards the winning way," stated sophomore Joan Jovero. Jovero helped considerably in the 200 yard and 500 yard freestyle, and is a second year member of the varsity team. She concluded, "I feel our team was better organized due mostly to our coaches and to our three outstanding captains, seniors Wendy Martin, Mary Theodore, and junior Marny Pierini. They helped make sure our practices were always challenging, enjoyable, and most importantly, worthwhile.

Diving coach Louis Torrez once again proved to have a successful season with his divers. Returning to the team were juniors Marnie Malnekoff and Annette Polek. Senior Dawn Jacobs, the diving team's newest addition, helped the team not only with her outstanding performance, but also with her encouraging spirit. One diver to look out for in the upcoming seasons will be freshman Nicki Gardner.

Gardner competed both on the varsity level and the junior varsity level. Overall, the swimming team and diving team have been breaking barriers in all of their set goals. They hope to keep up the number of swimmers and plan to take charge again, next September.

Junior member Shanin Zarate concentrates on a double back flip. This dive has a difficulty level of three. Zarate has been on the diving team for three years.

Spread like an eagle's wings, sophomore Wendy Valencia's arms fly on the stroke. Carefull placement and strong strokes are vital race winning abilities.

Up, up and away! Nicki Gardener inwardly pikes a dive. Gardener has been on the diving team for one year and already made the varsity team.

Cross country coach Patrick Savage follows his runners to provide help in case of unexpected injury. Like Savage, all coaches are required to possess First Aid skills for emergency purposes.

As the sweat drips down his body, runner Marty Bach keeps pace. Daily workouts and determination are major factors in a runner's program.

Running on his opponent's shoes, Steve Rosen gains ground. At a steady pace, Rosen will endure.

"Come on down," the spectators cheer as Steve Rosen makes his pass in front of his opposition. Not only is Rosen a speedster in cross country, but he also participates in track.

With wind blowing through their hair, toes pointed in the air, and time running, Brian Morreth and his opponents try to out run one another. Morreth's superior skills come through again as he wins the race.

In the lead, Steve Rosen finally made his way. A good pace, a good pair of running shoes, and a lot of suffering put him in front.

Accelerated Abilities

The cross country season got off to a slow start but gradually stabilized. In the pre-season, three members quit, ruining an almost definite conference title. But due to hard work and dedication, the team pulled together and did their best.

Led by junior Marty Bach and senior Steve Rosen the team placed much higher in meets than expected. At conference time, Bach had run 15:19 for three miles, making him the favorite for first place. Bach ended up second after giving his all. Rosen was expected to place in the top seven to be all conference, and ended up with a ninth place finish.

In the summer, the team started working double practices along with running road runs to prepare for the season. With the help of other runners including senior Bryan Mittleman and juniors Ken Smith, Tim Hieber, and Keith McMath, the team held it's own.

The freshman and sophomore teams were led by Brian Moreth and Oscar Palacios. Both runners led their teams on to wins and were occasionally moved up to the varsity or sophomore levels.

Swift Sprinters

Faster than a speeding bullet, pushing themselves to reach higher bounds, outrunning the competition ... Girls' Cross Country streaks across fields, leaving opponents behind Runners are a unique breed because of tough training and intense competition. To be the best, a runner must develop her stamina until everyone else breathes in her dust. The Girls' Cross Country Team realizes this, and they act on it. To get in running shape, they do different types of workouts and run 5 to 7 miles a day. Their 5-1 conference record and 13-1 record in duel meets illustrate their dedication and ability. Of all of Niles West's fall Varsity Teams, Girls' Cross Country boasts the best record.

Coach Judy Sloan summarized the teams efforts, "Our team was smaller this year, because a lot of the kids that came last year dropped-out. Considering this, we've had a wonderful year. The JV and Freshmen were fantastic. We won meets, and we did $100 \%$ better than I thought we would."

Despite the energy and force that Girls' Cross Country exemplified during the season, "West Word" failed to acknowledge the magnitude of their success. Although disappointed by the lack of coverage by the newspaper, the girls realized that they were running for themselves, and not for fame or praise.

For Debbie Pozdol, running makes her feel great. "Cross Country is like a team spirit, even though you run individually." Halina Orawiec added, "We feel like a family. It's exciting!'

Mrs. Sloan pointed a picture of the girls in Cross Country. "It's easy to quit, but I'm proud of the girls who stayed. I wish more kids would join and see how talented they are, because it really is a great sport."

Two members of the Girls Cross Country Team travel smoothly down the final road to the awaiting finish line. Even though some races last only ten minutes, they sometimes seem to last hours.

Antagonistic Amusement

Standing on the first hole at Wilmette Golf Course, one can hear the familar echoes of swinging golf clubs. These sounds could only come from the Niles West Golf Team. Golf requires patience, skill, and coordination. If these significant elements do not combine, a game can be lost.

Even though this season turned out below Head Coach George Gallas expectations, he still stated, "I was pleased with the showing in the regionals, and I was happy to see the team capable of competing with other schools." Just because the final season scores were not that impressive, the team members did not lose faith. Nick Stratigakes added, "We have a good young team but we need more players to build a real good team."
With the passage of another season, the players plan to combine patience, skill, and coordination into one succesful season. Jeff Goby stated, "We can be competitive if we practice more."

A few last minute instructions are received from head coach George Galla. This is Galla's first year as head coach.

Heading toward the next hole, a member of the golf team hopes to improve his score. The golf team plays on the Wilmette Golf Course.

Many golfers enjoy a crisp fall day on the course. Junior Jeff Goby anticipates a successful putt on the thirteenth hole.

Back Again!

Taking to the courts for the first time in four years, the 1986-1987 Junior Varsity Tennis Team began the season by acing Niles North, Waukegan East, St. Viator and Maine South. The Indians maintained an even record in conference play 4-4. Senior players Debbie Berman, Sabina Puthuseril, Meena Revella and Sue Chung brought experience to the court.
During the season, the Indians hosted an invitational tournament which included Deerfield and Highland Park. The Indian players finished third and fourth in this tournament.

Team Captain Debbie Berman thought she would have been a more qualified player if Niles West had had a Varsity tennis team during her underclass years. She would have had a goal to aim for. According to Nancy Penn, next year's captain, "The team played hard, never gave up and looks forward to a great year."
Coach Len Winans feels encouraged by the return of seven out of ten starters next year. He feels the team still lacks the depth to win it all; however, the ability to beat many teams seems on the horizon.

Wrestler's Spectacular Season

The boys wrestling season ended in spectacular fashion. They posted another winning season record of 202. The varsity team also captured the conference and regional titles winning the 16 Team Glenbrook South Invite and taking second place in the Leyden Tournament. The Indians also claimed four regional champions: John Lee, 105; Greg Rudin, 112; Scott D'agostino, 126; Angelo Tsagalis, HVWT. The following placed second in regionals: Mark Tadelman, 119; Preston Clark, 138; Mike Gershbein, 167; and Mike Nauman, 155; Brett Youstra, 145; and George Santillian, 132, piaced third. At the teams sectional at Leydan, the Indians fell short of the State Tournament, losing to the sixth ranked Lake Park Lancers, by the slightest of margins. Rudin, Lee, and D'Agostino advanced to the IHSA state tournament held in Champaign, Illinois. As a junior, Rudin had placed fourth in the State Tournament, but, in his Senior year he missed a good portion of the season battling mononucleosis. Eventually he recovered and took third place in the State Finals. Senior Preston Clark stated, "We all worked hard and achieved the goals that we set forth." Sophomore Coach Bob Porter summed up the season with a final word, "It was a great season, we had 9 out of 12 wrestlers selected for allconference, it was a whole team effort."

Aggressiveness proves to be dominating as Senior Mike Nullman demonstrates his skill. He advances to take down the opponent.

Conference Title Won

Jubilant voices rang through Niles West when the Varsity and JV Wrestling teams won their eighth conference title in nine years. Although the JV team didn't receive nearly as much credit as the Varsity, much of the Varsity's success was due to an excellent JV program.

Grueling practices with Varsity and utilization of all age levels contributed to the success of this crew of JV wrestlers. Despite the JV's constantly changing lineup, the nucleus of the boys included Nasser Amer, Pablo Blanco, Kevin Hansen, Ed Lee, Rory Selman, Scott Sharpiro, and Larry Wishnick. Often due to a lack of wrestlers in a particular weight class, the team would have to forfeit two matches per meet. "Even when we gave the opposition an edge by forfeiting two weights, we still destroyed them", said Pablo Blanco.

Most importantly, the JV team gave wrestlers the valuable experience to one day wrestle varsity and carry on a great wrestling tradition.

Deciding about his next move, Mark Tadelman prepares to move in for the takedown. Although only a sophomore, Mark wrestles varsity.

The determination on the face of Elliot Malkin shows strong as he maintains control of his opponent. The 98 lb . wrestler is on the freshmen team.

Sure that he will win, Nick Atsaves waits for the opportunity to pin his opponent. Atsaves wins the match by a pin.

Long Awaited Relief

Three! Two! One! Bzzzz! The Indians won their eleventh game which snapped the ten game losing streak caused by a series of disabling injuries to four returning senior starters, Danny Gold, Leo Gubenko, Don Nole, and Dave Smolinski. The first Indian victory came against Pontiac in a tournament over Christmas break. "It was a great feeling of relief and elation," remarked Senior Robert Keller. Unfortunately, the ball just didn't bounce the Cager's way all season. Although many of those first ten games began with close scores, the Indians fell apart in the second half too many ties. Senior Don Nole commented, "In the second half we couldn't get our act together." After an uneventful and unsuccessful second year of coaching, Tom Meyer joined his players in hoping that next year would be the Cager's year with a returning group of five juniors and two sophomores, that dream just might come true.

JV Cagers Down But Not Out

The junior varsity basketball team had a productive season, despite an 0-10 record. Juniors John Lally and Max Shulman started for the team and showed strong potential for varsity play next year. Seniors Bill Burns, Robert Keller and Brian Buehling also started for the team.
Coach Jim Doyle had nothing but positive things to say of the teams play this year, "Although we had a bad record, the team was in every game. We lost most of them in the last couple of minutes. The players hustled and showed progress the entire season. It was very enjoyable for me." said Doyle. Starting guard Robert Keller said, "The team played and worked hard all season. We just couldn't pull the games out in the final quarter.'

Commitment And Domination

If one word could describe Coach Earl's varsity squad, it would be domination. Winning 17 of their first 19 games, the Indians slaughtered a majority of their opponents. The squads success stemmed from their well-balanced attack. Guards Lori Yetter and Heather Donlon shot impressively from the perimeter while Debbie Pozdol and Sandy Stergios handled the inside game. Linda Steiner, who filled the fifth position, created havoc by shooting well from all over the floor. Besides displaying offensive prowess, the LadyIndians also presented an uncharitable defense, backed up by depth on the bench.

Commitment characterized the great success of this team which practiced together in the off-season. Knowing each others playing abilities allowed the girls to use their strengths and weaknesses to produce a team victory.

While the team's seniors received their fair share of playing time, Coach Earl also played girls from all age levels, giving them needed experience for the future. The way things look, Earl's Girls will be a dominating force for the future.

Off To A Difficult Start

Starting the year with six sophomores and four fresh "women" provided a difficult beginning for the girls' basketball team. "This year's team overcame inexperience by determination and hard work," said sophomore Julie Berg. Sophomores Doreen Kestler, Julie Berg and freshmen Karen Miller, Theresa Danguillan and Jill Hammond showed their skills and dedication throughout the year. In one of the more exciting games of the year, the Indians losing to Waukegan East by 3 points at halftime, regrouped and went on to win by 17 points, building confidence for future games. After watching the Junior Varsity team perform, Coach Klebba felt that their aggressive play and improving skills would make next year's varsity team a real competitor.

Full Potential Swimming

Many close meets meant a hard long year for the swim team even though they had strong starters Scott Adams, Homberto Hortua, and Art Sanchez. Coach Larson had high hopes for some of these players and said they had the potential to go far in swimming. According to junior Homberto Hortua, "Even though most of the close meets could have been won, everybody swam up to their potential." According to head coach Larson, "The assistant coaches did an excellent job in training the athletes." Over all, the team ended the year six and six with both coaches and players believing the record should have had more wins. The swim team's future looks good with some strong returning swimmers.

Amazing Talents

An amazing thing happened to wooden and metallic equipment when members of the Girls' Gymnastics Team performed. The hardware became a tool for the display of style, grace, and beauty. A flat mat became an ocean on which the girls danced and soared. On the bars and vault, the girls floated, turning flips as smoothly as dolphins in the sea.

Although gymnastics seems to be an individual sport, when competitions rolled around, all the individuals combined to form one powerful representation of the teamwork needed for success. The season went smoothly, with the team performing consistently and confidently. A tough loss to Highland Park was avenged at the Conference Meet, where the team tied for second place. The season ended with a 6 win- 3 loss record, a "flip-flop" of last year's results and a "leap" of two places from fourth in the Conference.

The strength of all four levels led the team to its winning record, and the promise of the freshmen and sophomores gives the team a chance to develop into a first rate competitor. With their outstanding performances, sophomores Laura Bowman and Barbara Kozlowski showed the bright future in store for the team. According to sophomore Sarah Harris, "There was a lot of team work, and we helped each other more." With such cooperation, dedication, and talent, the team seems ready to take on the world.

Rollercoasting With The Gymnasts  sophomore team flexed

After a rollercoaster ride of ups and downs, the gymnastics season ended on a very disappointing note. Favored to win the CSL conference title and place in the top five of the state, the Indians missed both of these goals due to the crippling injury that Tom Joseph received at the end of the season. Pulling together, the team redeemed themselves by stealing the regional title from Highland Park, the conference champions. Coach Burkel stated, "This year's team had more potential than last year's seventh-in-the-state-team." Dairin Baim, Adam Cohen, Scott Jackson, and Sung Kim still made Niles West's presence felt at Forest View High School, site of the Boys Gymnastics State Meet. The

Her heart beat quickly as she turned the corner, gasping hard for breath and wondering how to escape from her pursuers. The chase seemed endless, and she grew tired. track and field exhibited ambitious exertions, practicing daily throughout the season which began in mid-January and ended in late May.
The coaches this year included Mrs. Armour, the head coach; Mr. Armour, who worked with the distance runners; Mr. Sweeney, who worked with the jumpers and helped the sprinters; and Mr. Spagnoli, who worked with the throwers. "We had a respectable team this year, and I felt the girls put forth great effort," commented Mrs. Armour.

Tennis Team Regroups

The boys tennis season promised to be a memorable one. After the loss of Eric Schulman to Deerfield Township, the team had to regroup, and regroup they did. The Indians posted a 500 record, and John Yefsky qualified for the state tournament.

The sophomore team posted a winless season under Coach Ron Gralewski.

Varsity team members seemed optimistic about the upcoming season. The returning players of the new season included Kyung Chang, Benjie Malkin, Rohit Patel, and John Yefsky. Head Coach Ernie Mitropolis summed up the new season by saying, "If we work hard at our game, we can accomplish a lot this season.'

Runners Keep On The Right Side Of The Track

The track team is experienced and is looking forward to the season. The 1988 track team is a favorite to capture the Central Suburban League team title.

With returning athletes including seniors Doug Hirsh, Larry Meyer, Noel Garfinkle, Steve Rosen, and Angelo Tsagalis, juniors Keith McMath, Scott Moreth, Rod Pintang relaxes after running a long streneous race. Pacing yourself is an important part of running any race.

Marty Bach, Hak Kang, Jovino Valignota, Harry Yoon, and Bill DeLaHuerta the Indians will hold their own in invitationals and dual meet competition. Larry Meyer commented, "My freshmen year, schools used to invite us to their meets to get an easy $W$ in the win column. Now teams don't expect that W to come so easily. Actually, these teams generally end up with L's at the hands of the Indians." Doug Hirsh added, "Our track team is looking hard to beat. Everybody's goal is for the Conference victory come May 14. This is the year Coach Campbell is going to see it happen!"
Teams expected to give the Indians a run for the conference title include Deerfield, Highland Park, and Maine West. Coach Ron Campbell stated, "This year's track team should have an excellent run for the conference title. The 1988 team is the best team of the decade!'"

Members of the track team prepare themselves for a race. Adjusting the starting blocks will help someone get a quicker start.

Kickers Reach The Top

When thinking about a girls state soccer tournament, Niles West High School should ring a bell. For the first time ever in Illinois, the Illinois High School had sanctioned a girls state soccer tournament, and the IHSA chose Niles West to host it because in the past years, Niles West had organized a local tournament, consisting of teams in our division.
Taking pride in the IHSA giving NiWeHi the honor of hosting the tournament,

Varsity Coach Brennan stated, "We are the pioneer school of soccer, and l'm excited they chose our school for the first girls state soccer tournament in the history of Illinois." The decision also impressed the members of the varsity team. Senior player Karin Janessa commented, "As a four year member on the team, I take this decision as an honor. l'll always remember that IHSA chose my alma mater to hold the first girls state tournament."

Not satisfied with the score, head coach Sfickas stares at her team on the field. With the coach's experience and the players' skill, the team is sure to score.

Completing the double play, Kim McAllister retains her balance to make the throw. Perhaps the double play will prevent the opponents from scoring.

Trying to beat the runner to first base, Tamara Kramer uses all her strength to throw the ball. The runner will be called out at first base if she succeeds.

Linda Steiner keeps a close eye on the third base coach for signals. She will do everything possible to keep her opponents from scoring.

Practice Makes Perfect

Practicing for months on end, the girls softball team continued on with one goal in mind: to win the conference championship. Finally, their long hours of practice were put to the test; the girls' softball team beat Deerfield to achieve the title. The team ended with an 18-4 record. Hard work and dedication had finally paid off. Thrilled with last year's team, head coach Paula Sfickas remains confident about this year's new players. Practicing next to the varsity diamond, Niles West future varsity softball players improve their experience and skills by playing on the Junior Varsity and freshman teams. With each game, the Junior Varsity and freshman players get one step closer to playing varsity softball.

Firstbaseman Jim Ciemny awaits the pick-off throw from the pitchers mound. Pick-offs require perfect timing and hours of practice.

Moving into the pitch, Todd Kassell helps his team onto victory. Hitting plays a major role in baseball.

In an attempt to beat the throw to first base. Centerfielder Sung Soo Kim flies through the air. Jumping towards the bases sometimes get players there quickly.

Rounding first base, varsity baseball member Brian Israel glances at second base, checking if his single can be stretched into a double. Often singles, with quick running, can be turned into doubles.

High-Powered Hitting

By winning three straight conference championships, the Niles West Varsity Baseball Team led students to expect a victorious season. "The hitting will be fair and the defense strong. If our pitching can come through, we should have a winning season," said coach George Galla optimistically, hoping for a fourth straight conference title.

Returning seniors David Neuhouser, Craig Harris, and Brian Israel were expected to start for the Indians, along with some work from junior Tony Stegich. The team could have had a strong pitching staff if they fulfilled Coach Galla's expectations.

According to Coach Gaila, everything fell into place last year, which led the team to a championship season. If this happens again, Niles West can look forward to a rewarding year.

Practice Makes Perfect!

The perfection of any sport requires many different elements, such as skill and determination. One element though stands out above the rest and that is practice.
As the saying goes, practice makes perfect. Here at Niles West, practice plays an important role in all of the sports such as Football, Volleyball, Basketball, Wrestling, Baseball, and Track. Whether it is practicing shooting baskets, hitting baseballs, or catching passes any kind of practice is necessary. After school you can always find a team either inside or out practicing and perfecting their skills. You will find the baseball team outside on the field hitting balls, or the basketball teams inside shooting free throws.

Not only is practicing the basics of any sport but also in conditioning. The weight room is always filled with athletes building up their strength and stamina. Coaches are also always making sure that their team players are doing their situps, push-ups, and running laps. Conditioning is also a major necessity in practicing for a sport.

Practicing for an upcoming event takes up more time than the actual event. This is why practice is so important. If a team practices hard, then eventually practice will make perfect.

Nick Stratigakis concentrates as he putts his ball into the hole. Nick is going onto his fourth year as a team participant.

Racking up the runs, Henry Yim brings it home during an early season game. Doing what he does best Henry scored a lot of runs for the varsity squad.

Checking over last minute details, head Tennis Coach Lenn Winans gives his final orders. The girls season either took place out on the courts or in the gym.

Organizations

Extracurricular activities have always been an enjoyable way for students to become involved and meet others outside of a classroom environment. Students express their thoughts, ideas, talents, and interests through the wide variety of organizations available. In addition, organizations such as the pom pon girls, cheerleaders, wrestlettes, and the marching band add to the enjoyment of sporting events and assemblies.

The student government which consists of freshman, sophomore, junior, and senior cabinets, student union, and student senate represent the students of Niles West and provide many fun activities. The Homecoming dance and contests, prom, the Lip Sync contest, Frosh-Soph Mixer, Turnabout, and other activities are all provided through the hard work and dedication of these organizations.
'All organizations play an important role in your future as well," stated junior Mindy Grossberg. "Colleges are very impressed with students who became involved during their high school years.'

Do pictures really replace a thousand words? Any Photography Club member would say they do. According to sponsor John Beeftink, this club tried to, "Expose the student/photographer to the darkroom environment where the students can process and make their own black and white pictures." The Photography Club staged a photography contest for the students and faculty to promote interest in this hobby.

Faster than a speeding bullet . . . it's an aeronautics rocket. To involve members in a group project such as the Polack 3-A two stage rocket, sponsor Wayne Rogoski promised to "once again give out a free Warehouse Club frozen pizza to anyone who keeps a plane in the air until it runs out of gas." President Vince Fang summed up the student response to this challenge by responding, "make mine anchovy with double cheese."
Although these clubs have no more in common than three p-words, each captures the enthusiasm of the members. From pawns to pictures to planes, these clubs challenged students to explore their special interests.

Medical Checkup

Dissecting human and animal bodies might remind students of horror movies, but for some members of the Medical Careers Club these activities represent future intentions

The purpose of this club said Biology teacher and sponsor Rita Kay, "Is to expose the students to fields in health sciences." As one activity to promote that goal, the club held the Great American Smoke-Out, a national event encouraging smokers to voluntarily quit for one day. On November 18, 1987, club members exhibited a Quitter's Guide, in formation pamphlets on the dangers of cigarette smoking, book markers and but tons in the cafeteria. In addition to the Smoke-Out, the club took a tour of the Northwestern Memorial Hospital to visit its various departments. Other activity plans included a bake sale, another hospital tour and hosting a speaker
Referring to one of the organization's strengths, Secretary Sophia Shakir, said, Ms. Kay is always there when we need her." Other officers included junior Yong Tae Yu as president, junior Sharon Huang as vice-president and junior Shoma Cahtteyee as treasurer.

The Medical Careers Club benefited other students as well as the club members through such activities as the Smoke-Out, encouraging everyone to quit. For its members, though, the club served as an important means of learning more about their future careers. Junior Michael Latash stated, "The Medical Careers Club is very valuable . . . the members visit hospitals and learn more about their respective fields of medicine.

Preservation Proclamation

During the 1960 's, the strong ecology movement brought about a new group at Niles West. The Ecology Club founder, Tom Mitchell, began his exploration of the environment with sixteen active members. As the years progressed and the ecology movement slowly diminished, the club still survived.
'This year we have an entirely new group. Everyone is enthusastic and appreciative." stated Gerald Firak.
the club sponsor. The seven dedicated members shared a common interest in learning about the relationships between organisms and the world. Members strove to fullfill their growing interests in ecology by exploring Illinois' vast environment.
The club kept busy this year taking fall trips to Cantigny and to Morton's Arboretum, visiting the Museum of Science and Industry in the winter, and enjoying a spring trip to Starved Rock.

In addition, members also cleaned and planted praire seeds in the greenhouse

The Ecology Club helped the students to become more familiar with nature and brought them to understand more about their relationship with the environment. Through field trips and hands-on praire experience, members also learned the importance of conservation.

Yearbookers Keep On Checking, Checking, Checking

The echo of vigorously working typewriters and troubled, complaining voices sounded from the Spectrum room constantly. Severe threats of a late delivery hung over the heads of editors, staff members, and photographers. To assure a spring deliver, demanding deadlines had to be met, often requiring hours of extra work either after school or during several allnighters. Nevertheless, the 1987-88 Spectrum staff worked diligently towards their goal of promptly completing "The Annual Check-Up

The staff consisted of two classes which sometimes brought about difficulties with communication and cooperation. "It got really hectic at times," stated Estelle Nikolakakis, edi-tor-in-chief of the staff. "There were certain days when deadlines were approaching and everyone got all crazy. but the staff worked well together and got the job done.'

Spectrum advisors Jerome Orr and Linda Horwitz dedicated much of their valuable time and effort to proofreading dozens and dozens of stories. Section editors carefully designed layouts, staff members wrote still more stories, and photographers focused their attention at various happenings throughout the building.

When the entire 299 pages of "The Annual Check-Up" finally reached completion, everyone involved breathed a sigh of relief. Amidst the leftover carbon sheets, unused photos, and broken orange cropping pencils, a cheerful staff sat back and laughed at memories of a wild ' $n$ ' crazy year

AFS World One Of Progress

With enthusiasm and membership growing, AFS made a world of progress. The American Field Service organized trips abroad for students selected after completing forms and being interviewed several times. In addition, AFS, planned an exchange weekend for its members as well as several fundraisers including their infamous churros sales. The club also created a great experience for senior Michelle Mackey, the exchange student from Australia, with hopes she would take home memories to cherish. Ali Kwon described the group by stating, "This year seems more unified, dedicated, and enthusiastic than past years."

The Executive Board composed of Jeannie Choi, Ali Kwon, and Rachel Posner, led the group to achieve their goals of raising money and increasing membership. Sponsor, Edmund Murphy optimistically stated, "We have grown and I see a bright future for us."

Creative Juices Flow

Out of the left side of the brain comes the spurt of imagination and creativity which sets individuals apart from each other. From the spurts grow talents, which we strive to use in expressing our individuality. "Where can students find the outlet for such literary and artistic talents? At West of Edens." revealed Senior Helen Vayzman. referring to the school's literary magazine. The uniqueness of WOE. as it is affectionately called by its members. represented the "of the students. by the students, for the students" ideal. Not only did students submit their original work, but students also "graded" the work that would be read by students. Peer consideration rather than teachers grades determined what was printed for students to read. Renuirements for membership did not exist: in fact. a large staff provided more opinions to get the best possible review on a given work.
Literary works such as poems. essays. and short stories. accompanied drawings. photographs. and other artwork to create a complete magazine. During each season of publication. the staff has held a contest for the cover design. awarding the winner a cash prize and complimentary issue.
The magazine has changed drastically over the years. from condemning the Vietnam War during its years as OPUS." to more recently criticizing abortion. When asked her thoughts about West of Edens. Junior Yiwen Chang replied. "It's a pool of creativity and individual expression that gives you an enthusiastic feeling

Service, Service, Service

Adults often accuse teenagers of causing problems. but three clubs, S.A.D.D. Peer Counseling, and Tutor's Club are helping students to solve them. Some students work to reduce the number of deaths and injuries by participating in S.A.D.D. Others help students find answers to their questions and problems in Peer Counseling. Tutor's Club provides academically talented students with a chance to help other students conquer difficulties in classes. Each one of these organizations helps members to grow while giving as sistance to others.

Students Against Drunk Driving, also known as S.A.D.D., has more than doubled in size from fifteen members last year to thirtyfive members this year. Sponsored by Mr. James Puff. S.A.D.D. provides assemblies and guest speakers to convince students not to drink and drive. Voicing the opinion of many students. member Henry Rodriguez states "S.A.D.D. has made me more aware of the dangers of drinking and driving.

Students who have problems or simply enjoy talking with others find Peer Counseling the group to join. Small groups with one or two student leaders meet about oncé a week for a rap session. Member Karin Much exclaimed. "Peer Counseling is a great way to meet new friends and learn new skills." According to sponsor David Lee. "Peer Counseling has been a great experience for me. It has allowed me to meet a lot of terrific kids. teach them some new skills. and then combine those skills with their own natural talents to lead groups and help themselves and their peers grow.

Tutor's Club. sponsored by Linda Horwitz. helps any students who need academic support. Students who excel in one or more subjects join this club not for personal gain, but because they want to share their talents with others. Tutor Greg Rosow states. "It feels good to know that you can help other people. especially when they appreciate the time and effort the tutor gives. It's a great confidence builder

Senior Kyung Chang ponders the answer to the latest academic bowl question. The club stimulates members to use their minds to uncover the answers to difficult questions.

In The Land Of Academia

"What creature inhabits the 'Tulgey Wood?'" A buzzer sounds, and a student calls out, "Jabberwocky." After checking the answer, the moderator awards points to the Niles West Academic Bowl team. Juniors and seniors comprise most of the team, although sophomores occasionally join on invitation from faculty sponsors Faith Shapiro or Car Geis, who supervise the activity, attending the meets with the students and preparing them by running through practice tests, composed of questions similar to those asked during a meet. Usually, the students attend an invitational, where two four-person teams compete, with a moderator asking questions. Covering a wide spectrum, the topics range from math to useless trivia. In early December, the Academic Bowl team participated in a different sort of competition in which the entire team competed via computer. Inserting a disk into the computer, the students projected the questions onto a screen. As the questions appeared, the students shouted out their answers, and the team's typist entered them as quickly as possible. Speed and accuracy determined the number of points earned by each team. Competition went on nation-wide, with the highest scorer declared the winner. Niles West ranked seventh.
Academic Bowl has a 22 year history at Niles West. In 1965, when WGN sponsored a game show called "Academic Bowl," Niles West became one of the first schools to participate.

Today, many members liken the activity to a more recent game show, Jeopardy. In fact, the Niles West team was named the Jeopardy theme song their anthem and Alex Trabec, the host of Jeopardy, their guru. Moreover, participation in Academic Bowl led senior Greg Rosow to apply to actually be on Jeopardy.

During the 1986/87 season, the team took first place in the Eisenhower Invitational and went to quarter finals in the state competition, where they lost to Niles North. Reflecting upon this loss, Geis firmly states, "This year we will beat North, or I'll eat my hat!'"

Speaking of the challenge which the game provides, senior Gail Gutterman remarked, "Academic Bowl is a stimulating mental challenge for people who like to test their knowledge on a variety of subjects.'

The Play's The Thing Thespians Act, Dance, Sing

After a very successful 1986-87 season, the Niles West division of the International Thespian Society had high hopes for the future.
In March, 1987. Niles West took part in a nationwide talent search. under the leadership of theatre sponsor Robert Johnson. and his colleagues, vocal director Sheri Owens. and choreographer Gretchen Glader. Nineteen talented high school students from Chicago. Philadelphia. Los Angeles. Atlanta and Denver joined West's theatre department to perform the critically acclaimed A CHORUS LINE at the Society's annual festival in Muncie. Indiana. Seniors John Barba and Michelle Dayan portrayed Al Dèlucca and Diana Morales in the production. and thirty-two members of the theatre department served as a backstage chorus.

THE ODD COUPLE. directed by English teacher James Batts concluded the theatre season for the 1986-87 academic year. and following that production came a summer community theatre show. "Theatre 219 Revues Broadway." The variety filled production include Niles West alumni. current students and major community talents in a salute to the best musicals of the last half-century. Seniors John Barba and Paul Katz, along with juniors Maggie Duffy. Beth Lichtenstein, and Kevin Steele performed in the production.
In September. auditions were held for the annual stu-dent-directed musical. BYEBYE BIRDIE! Other productions for the year included Childrens theatre. HANSEL AND GRETEL. directed by Cynthia Philbin. and the musical LITTLE SHOP OF HORRORS. directed by Johnson.
Looking back on their successful productions. all Thespians felt pride in their accomplishments. Junior Carl Helwing. treasurer of the department's executive board stated. "The theatre department has shown much promise for the future. I am very happy and proud to be part of such a wonderfully motivated group!

All Strings Attached

Violin. viola. cello. and bass provide music galore throughout the year Whether playing Bach or Beethoven the 90 members of the concert practiced hard deserving the applause they received at performances. Conductor Ted Kaitchuck explained the exceptional quality of their performances by saying. "The orchestra is successful because the school's best are members

The concert orchestra kept busy throughout the year at various functions. At the annual Open House. the Orchestra entertained parents during their free time. On December 16. at the Holiday Festival they displayed all types of music from Baroque to Romantic. Finally, at the Pasta and Pops Dinner concert, the orchestra played exquisite music throughout dinner. In addition. the musicians made stars of thomselves at the Fall and Spring Festivals held November 4th. 1987. and May 23. 1988. The Orchestra participated in the lllinois High School Association Competition. where only the best of schools and best of members performed. and they also auditioned for the Illinois Music Educators Association District and All State Orchestras.

Officers elected by the members. included President Jason Hsu. and VicePresident Xyla Gatilao. who boosted the orchestra's spirit and informed them of fundraisers. Treasurer Tecla Annes took charge of money from fundraisers. while secretary Jeannie Kim kept track of attendance

By practicing daily. cooperating. and performing on stage like professionals. the 90 members acquired experience for the real world. Due to the hard work of the officers and members. the orchestra had a very fulfilling year.

With style, orchestra members Suzanne Ahn and Pauline Koffman rehearse for an upcoming concert. Concert orchestra, conducted by Mr. Kaitchuck, perform in a variety of concerts throughout the year.

The Beat Goes On Band Entertains Fans

The Sound of Music. provided by the band, always added a touch of enthusiastic spirit to football games. school assemblies or parades. The band also performed at half-time with the pom pon squad and in choreographed shows with the color guard. Band director Bill Koch and president Debbie Berman organized competitions, conducted the group, and scheduled performances.

After the football season concluded, endless hours of rehearsal in preparation for the annual tour started. The band visited Phoenix. Arizona, for the Fiesta Bowl Parade. According to member Marija Popovic. .'Tour brought everyone closer. like a family." Band members also kept busy selling candy bars and ad books to help pay their way. "We always try to find a chance for everyone to earn money so all can participate in the tour." explained treasurer Joel Dalinka.

The 20-member Drum Line, one part of the band. placed first at the Marengo Marchng Band competition. Although this group did not perform often for school events. when they did, their volume. precision and enthusiasm captured everyone's attention.

Being in band helped me catch the excitement of every assembly." stated Randy Feldman. " I felt more a part of it." Regardless of the instrument being played, band members always brought a happy note to the school year.

Noteworthy Excellence Characterize Choirs

- Dreamed a Dream in time gone by ...". " Go Tell It on the Mountain". and "One Night in Bangkok and the world's your oyster filled the music wing during rehearsals of the choral department. Now divided into Expressions, Concert Choir and Girls Ensemble, the choral department has expanded in recent years. Vocal teacher Sheri Owens describes her students as. "The best group of kids l've had the pleasure of working with over the last four years

During the very first week of school. nine students began working with Owens to prepare an audition for the Illinois Music Educators Association (IMEA), in which students would be selected for district and all-state choruses. Of these nine seniors John Barba. Michelle Dayan. and Paul Katz, and juniors Kirsten Gieler. Carl Helwing and Pascale Trouillot were chosen for the district division. Stated Owens. 'I am very proud. I thought we may have had one or two chosen due to the competition. but to have six is abso lutely outstanding!
In November. Expressions and Concert Choir worked with choir students from Niles North to sing at Centre East with major performer. Rosemary Clooney. most famous for her role in the film. "White Christmas." A month and a half of rehearsal perfected the music. On the day of the concert. Miss Clooney's daughter gave birth to a baby boy. and to celebrate the happy event. Clooney had every member of the performing choirs sign the stagebill as a present to her new grandchild.

The department performs four regular concerts at Niles West throughout the year, and sang at junior high schools to promote interest among incoming freshman. For many, the groups brought not only a chance to meet people. but to learn as well. According to junior Beth Lichtenstein. "Mrs Owens is a wonderful teacher and the rehearsals are a great time to break away from school by being with friends and having fun

Honor Societies Achieve Goals

Reaching new heights, establishing new goals, and fulfilling them contribute to the qualities of two active organizations, National Honor Society and Spanish Honor Society. Selectively chosen, members of both clubs crusaded to achieve their goals, whether it be a blood drive, a food drive or a cultural learning experience.
The National Honor Society, sponsored by Mr. Boevers, combined their efforts to help various organizations. A blood drive, a spelling bee for Junior High students, interscholastic activities, as well as a canned food drive for the hungry during the holiday season contributed to their achievements. NHS provided a unique and enjoyable learning experience for its members. Summing it up, Senior Nick Nafpliotis commented, "It's a useful function in our society which kids our age can participate in."

Likewise, Spanish Honor Society educates and provides an experience to remember for its members. As president Gail Dennis expressed, "We all get along well and it's an educational experience. The members in this group focused their efforts in understanding the Spanish culture. Visiting a museum of Mexican art and watching a Flamingo Dance Show highlighted their year.

Spanish Honor Society- First row: Emily Yep, Mrs. Lopez. Back row: Helen Yung, Gail Gutterman, Gail Dennis, Lisa Halliday, Eric Chern, Dana Vance, Isam Makhlouf.

On the move to reach higher goals, President Fernando Fen and Vice President Joy Grossberg initiate the NHS meeting. Members are chosen based on their academic talents and participation in extra curricular activities.

Consulting sponsor Mr. Nebbia, Seniors Steven Schaffer and Larry Mills discuss their plan to promote school spirit among the students. To be a member of the N -Club one must be a senior and have received a varsity letter.

Varsity Letter People

Are varsity athletes really better students? Both Mr. Nebbia, the sponsor of the N -Club, and the N -Club members would enthusiastically answer "yes". A student wishing to become a N Club member must be a senior and have a varsity letter. Members take great pride in being an N-Club member. "I worked for four years on the soccer team to earn my major ' N ' and being an N -Club member gives me a great feeling of pride." stated Robert Keller. N-Club members tried to promote good sportsmanship, fellowship, and school spirit. Along with these positive contributions, they also worked the concession stand at the girls' basketball games and kept some of the faculty in shape after school recreational competition. The N-Club members aided in community service such as working at carnivals for the handicapped. Speaking of his work at the carnival Ramel Failma commented, "Volunteering my time for those who are underprivileged made me feel good.'" Throughout the year the members of N -Club worked to set a good example for other students by helping their school and community.

Topically Speaking - That's The Subject

The Seminars for Scholars program also dealt with political issues and even shared the same faculty adviser as Current Events. Only a select group of seniors, who applied for the honor, attended the lectures. To be accepted, students had to have good grades and exhibit an interest in current events. Once a month, these students missed their last two classes to listen to a lecture given by a guest expert on some field of current interest such as nuclear freeze, AIDS, or South Africa. Following each lecture, students asked questions and discussed issues. Senior Meena Ravella voice strong approval of the program, saying, "It gives us a chance to get acquainted with current, volatile issues, and we're also allowed to give our opinions on these issues, which is a big improvement over most of the other programs." McMahon also believed that this group opened students up to a new experiences by providing a forum for provocative, controversial points of view.
Debate shares an interest in contemporary affairs with both Current Events and Seminars for Scholars but debaters do more talking. Veteran Debate members began researching the topic of Latin America during the summer.

Opening her briefcase, sophomore Trisha Hoo Chung sorts through her evidence. Debators must have evidence on hand to use during a tournament.

The debating season extended from September to March, culminating in a state-wide tournament, with top students going on to compete nationally. By early November, the team of Ken Zeff and Tim Paek had already qualified to compete in the state-wide junior varsity division. A new coach, Audrey Skwierawski, Northwestern student, encouraged many new students to join, increasing the team's size to more than twice the previous year. Skwierawski anticipated success for the team, saying "Debate is one of the most valuable activities available to high school students. It combines a working knowledge of world events with communicative, analytical skills in a social, group-oriented activity. Leaders are forged in debate; friendships are formed." Debate team president, senior Greg Rosow, agreed that participating in debate had helped him, but for a different reason. He claimed, "Debate is a great excuse for yelling at total strangers and telling them why they're wrong."

Judging by the number of members in these three groups students enjoyed these activities that encouraged them to carefully analyze the world beyond high school.

The upcoming presidential campaign, the AIDS crisis, political stability in Latin America have all caught the interest of many Niles West students. Three extra-curricular activities encouraged interest in contemporary issues: Current Events, Seminars for Scholars, and Debate.

Faculty sponsor Thomas McMahon explained that the objective of Current Events is "to encourage students to be more knowledgeable about contemporary events and interested in the political process." The Current Events Club gave all interested students a chance to discuss and learn more about politics. Members saw films and talked about major international issues, such as problems in Central America. This year, club members have also had a chance to experience a Presidential campaign first-hand, working as volunteers for the presidential candidates of their choice. "Current Events gives students the chance to realize how events in the past affect the present and the future. It also gives us a chance to express our views in a non-academic setting," commented sophomore Ni coletta Harris.

Awaiting the program to begin, Current events club members contemplate the issues the speaker is to examine.

During the program, Current Events sponsor Mr. McMahon consults with the special guest speaker invited to speak about agriculture to interested students. Current events club allows students to express what they feel in regard to existing issues in the world.

Debate coach Audrey Skwierawski reads the tournament schedule to members of the team. The team has seen much progress through the coaching and leadership of their sponsors.

Fourth row: Linda Choi, Jeannie Choi, Rachel Posner, Carrie Gold, Judy Gutierrez, Back row: Ali Kwon, Mickey Kamenetsky.

Talking to the dancers about the show, sponsor Gretchen Glader offers her advice and critique. The show entitled "Late Night with the Orchesis Dance Co." was held in late January.

Orchesis dancers remain transfixed on stage awaiting the curtain to fall. The Dance Company prepares months in advance for the mid-year show.

All smiles after the completion of their opening number, during dress rehearsal, Orchesis dancers stand in their last pose before dispersing to prepare for their next dance. Students audition in the beginning of the year to be part of the dance company.

Keeping

Sleek silhouettes slide across the darkened stage. Suddenly, bursts of light illuminate the dancers as they jam to a funky beat. On January 23 rd and 24th, the Orchesis Dance Company successfully choreographed and produced the show, "Late Night With the Orchesis Dance Company," consisting of a creative display of a variety of dance styles. Under the leadership of sponsor and professional dancer Gretchen Glader, as well as President Maritess Tamunday, the Orchesis dancers prepared dances influenced by jazz, street, and ballet styles. "The diversity of styles allows the Orchesis Dance Company to creatively express themselves," explained Treasurer Rachel

In Step

 Posner.Throughout the year, Orchesis raised funds to purchase new costumes. Ranging from camouflage to sexy street wear, this wardrobe contributed to the unique and usual impression exuded by each number. The flexible practice schedule allowed individual dancers to practice on specific days, eliminating waiting and providing maximum time use for busy members. Organized practice schedules, eyecatching costumes, experienced leadership, and fresh exciting student choreographed dance numbers all contributed to the Orchesis Dance Company's success in producing a memorable show.

Mathletes Figure It Out

"AAARHGH!" screamed another frustrated math student as he crumpled up his homework paper and threw it away. Members of the Math Team, a group of 4060 students whose common interest in math goes beyond the amount ordinarily done in the classroom, seldom react to math in this way. Pondering over topics as radicals, quadratics, and polynomial functions, members enjoyed Math Team as a fun environment in which to learn more math.
After doing academics throughout the day, some students preferred a fun activity rather than an academic club, however, Math Team made learning fun. As junior member Sharon Huang said, "Math Team is a good learning experience in that the coaches make math fun, unlike math classes during the day. It is a change from other clubs in that we are like one big happy family, one big group of friends."
Each grade level held its own practices, participating in the monthly NSML contests and also the AT-PAC and the IML. The series of contests culminated in a trip to Normal, Illinois, in May. Only the best schools in the state qualified for this event, based on their performance at a preliminary regional exam.

Not just for brilliant wouldbe mathematicians, Math Team provided an activity which anyone with a fundamental knowledge of math could enjoy. Events such as the eight person team, the calculator team, and the oral competition allowed opportunities for those lacking the self-confidence to take math tests alone. Encouraging everyone to join, sophomore Misato Miyama stated, "Math Team is awesome. I love it." Members and sponsors alike agreed that they had a great year.

Pondering over a difficult math problem, junior Janey Yu strives to achieve the answer. Math team members compete in various math competitions throughout the year.

After the thirty minute test, Sam Hwang explains to freshman Delia Lorinez how to solve a puzzling problem. Members have many practice sessions in order to prepare for the monthly contests.

A Show Of Flags

With their waving flags, smiling faces, and new uniforms, the Niles West color guard contributed an exciting addition to the marching band. Hours of long hard practice paid off when the color guard performed to perfection at every home football game. Sponsors Jeff Fielder and William Koch, along with the captain Kathy Schroeder and co-captain, Julie Cook, choreographed and organized these eyecatching routines.
Traveling with the band to Tempe, Arizona, the color guard marched in the FiestaBowl Parade on December 31, 1987. The color guard's other performances included pre-game basketball shows and junior high performances, which helped the color guard program to become a more recognizable group. According to sophomore Wendy Abragan, "It's a big commitment but joining is fun. Doing A perfect routine can be most rewarding."

The color guard proved to be a viable and exciting ex-tra-curricular activity because of good leadership and active members." Hard working, caring, and friendly define the color guard girls who are a joy to work with, stated sponsor Jeff Fielder.

Ethnic Groups Around The World

Students from all parts of the world often choose to belong to one of our many ethnic clubs. The Hellenic Club continued with 6 years experience under the guidance of sponsor Mrs. Angie Panos, while the Korean Club, headed by Mrs. Angela Graham, and the Chinese Club, sponsored by Mrs. Carole Simone, began their second year of activity. Another ethnic group, the Filipino Club, also gained approval. Although these clubs represent students who come from different ethnic backgrounds, members shared the same reasons for establishing their clubs: the desire to develop a secure and friendly surrounding for students new to this country

Throughout the year, these clubs sponsored various fundraisers including bake sales, taffy apples sales, and candy sales. The funds raised went to charities such as the Salvation Army and to people who needed money for serious illnesses. In return for these donations, the clubs gained experience in having meetings, organizing schedules, and balancing books. "It's a course in itself. Belonging to an ethnic club truly makes a better person out of you because you learn to deal with problems that could easily occur in everyday life," stated Filipino Club member Fehlyn Tulen. Each club also held activities such as dinners, field trips, picnics, volleyball games, and horseback riding. Sometimes two or more ethnic clubs joined in an activity in order to promote unity and avoid isolation from the rest of the school. Each of these ethnic clubs involved students who wanted to learn more about their own culture as well as the cultures of others, "Belonging to an ethnic club offers students a terrific experience in meeting new people and it brings them together where they can have fun, and share ideas," stated Korean Club member Judy Kim.

Conducting the Korean club meeting, officers James Lee and Meehee Hong, offer suggestions of possible activities the club can hold. The club plan many activities under the supervision of sponsor Mrs. Graham.

Initiating the Chinese club meeting, Amy Fan reads the minutes and discusses future planned activities Ethnic clubs allow students from the same background to interact.

Foreign Language Clubs Offer Fun, Food And Film

Those students who long for foreign foods and films and enjoy experiencing a totally different culture, make up the foreign language clubs. Each year, enthusiastic students meet on a biweekly basis to share views and to participate in fundraising activities such as bake sales and candy sales.

Because of the devotion of the members, French Club planned many cultural activities including a trip to the French play, "The Marriage of Figaro," as well as their annual trip to a French restaurant chosen by the club members. "We had a lot more people in the group this year, and we had a lot of fun," exclaimed secretary Rachel Posner.

German Club started organizing their priorities very early. A trip to Great America, and winter ski weekend, a culture walk through German Town, lunch at Cafe' Lutz, and a shopping expedition with the West German exchange students, kept members active throughout the school year.
Many new ideas inspired the record breaking membership of the Israeli Club. Along with Israeli Clubs from other schools, members competed in a volleyball game, attended a dance festival, and went to an Israeli restaurant. With the money earned from bake sales, they provided gifts for the elderly at the winter holidays.

With new leadership also came new aspirations for the Spanish Club. Using money from bake sales and donations, members provided toys for underprivileged Hispanic children.

In the spring, the foreign language clubs also joined the ethnic clubs to present different aspects of their cultures to parents and students at an annual International Night. All these activities provided foreign language club members opportunities to learn about particular cultures while helping others.

Discussing their latest plans, freshmen cabinet members put their heads together to reach the best decision. Cabinets hold weekly meetings to plan and organize particular school events.

Cabinets Unified

The Freshmen and Sophomore cabinets both had the same goal in mind: To promote school spirit and plan activities for the classes of '90 and '91. The Freshmen Class Cabinet, led by President Elliot Malkin and VicePresident Josh Feinberg, organized many fundraisers including a Valentine's Day bake sale, and an "end of the year"' banquet. According to sponsor Laurie Zucker, "I was thrilled with the large turnout and eager participation for the Freshmen Cabinet. '"

The Frosh-Soph mixer, lipsync, and a volleyball tournament headed the list of the accomplishments of the Sophomore Class Cabinet, with Brian Marcus as president and Leyla Arsan as vice-president. All forty members helped to make sure the class of '90 had a successful year. Member Lori Utanoff commented, "This year's sophomore cabinet has worked hard and we've enjoyed every minute of it."

Although the jobs were new to some and old to others, members of both clubs had some fun while working hard to reach their goals.

Officers Grace Diaz, Brian Marcus and Leyla Arsan, initiate the sophomore class cabinet meeting. Among the cabinets accomplishments were the Frosh-Soph Mixer, lip-sync contest and volleyball tournament.

Always there for help, Freshman cabinet sponsor Mrs. Zucker aids members in planning future activities. Cabinets promote class spirit among each grade level.

Cabinets Get Together For Varied Activities

"Birds of a Feather flock together" was an appropriate title for the work of Junior and Senior Cabinets. Both Cabinets worked their hardest to ensure an outstanding year.
Senior Cabinet members unified, coming up with several ideas for various school activities. To start the year off, Senior Cabinet successfully planned the Homecoming Parade, followed by a winter visit to the Hull House Orphanage to bring Christmas Cheer and some gifts to needy children. In February, the Senior Cabinet again presented the ever-popular Battle of the Bands.

To finance these activities, several sold-out bake sales took place. Senior, Karin Orsic, stated enthusiastically, "The whole Senior Cabinet has joined together and has been very successful in raising money for our activities and we are looking forward to raising money for the best Senior Issue ever!"

Receiving information from union members Mindy Grossberg. Megan Goldish and Nancy Penn, Junior Hilary Kaden decides upon which event to participate in during the Homecoming week celebration. Union and the cabinets organized the homecoming week which concluded with the game and dance.

Busy at work, senior Monica Uhm designs a poster informing students of the Turnabout dance. The dance sponsored by student union, was entitled "Escape to the Orient."

Does Anyone Second That Motion?

Each week, the bang of the gavel announced the beginning of both Student Senate and Student Union meetings. The members of these two organizations worked to improve the quality of student life.
'Student Senate gives students a chance to work with the administration to better our school and its policies," commented senior member Frank Brodsky. Senate not only worked with the administration, but also with parents and teachers as well. Students worked directly with the administration in the Student Appeals Board where students and directors had equal voting rights. Student Senate, also known as the student body government, handled all the school elections for class Cabinets and Student Union, as well as Student Senate.

Mr. James Sweeny, the sponsor of Senate stated, "The enthusiasm of both the leaders and members is extremely gratifying." Student government members visited another high school for a day to observe that school's government. Senate also provided opportunities for members to meet and work with the Board of Education.

While Senate dealt with school government, Student union took charge of planning exciting activities for all class levels. "Student Union upholds school spirit by uniting all class levels," commented senior member Amy Chertow. This active group sponsored the Homecoming Dance in October, the after finals bash in January, the turn-about dance in March, and Spring Activities Week in April. In addition to planning dances and spirit weeks, the members found reward in working together in order to make school more enjoyable for all students. According to treasurer Stephanie Gold, "Student Union promotes leadership skills which help the members to participate."

Throughout the year, Student Senate and Student Union provided opportunities for interested students to participate in the government and social activities of the school.

Checking Out

The mod 28 bell buzzed throughout the silent hallways of NiWeHi every weekday at 2:25 pm. Mobs of cheerful students filled the deserted halls as they "Checked Out" from their final classes. For a number of these students, the mod 28 bell meant running to catch the early bus, grabbing an after school snack in the cafeteria, going to a sport or club activity, waiting in front of room 140 to serve a detention, or rushing out of school in order to make it to their parttime jobs on time. As for the other less fortunate students, the mod 28 bell did not designate that it was time to "Check Out". They were forced to remain behind closed doors until $2: 40$, therefore the $2: 25$ bell only reminded them that they had 15 minutes left of class. Concentration was difficult for these students due to the constant disturbance of banging lockers, the roaring sound of engines running as classmates exited the parking lot, and other excess volume within the building. These deprived students who either had a lab or an art class envied the others who left at $2: 25$. "Having a class until the 29th mod tended to cause difficulties for the unfortunate students who had to catch the bus," stated Marny Pierini. Checking out at $2: 40$, or $2: 25$ if you're lucky, was actually a privilege that West students enjoyed. Other neighboring schools checked out of school as late as 2:50 pm., or even 3:30 pm!

Despite the fact that classes ended at 2:40, that did not mean that the school doors closed. An abundance of students tended to leave school at a much later time. Being involved in a sport or club activity often meant remaining in the building for quite some time. Eventually, students did check out of school, but only to find themselves checking in again the next morning!

Seniors "Check Out" Fond Memories

As seniors prepare for college and type their applications they begin to reflect upon their experiences of the last four years. They notice the drastic differences between their freshman and senior year.

As Freshmen, they encountered many new and unfamiliar faces, sounds, and sights. They had a strange feeling in the pit of their stomachs, as they wondered what they would encounter from that very moment until their graduation. Some had heard from upperclassmen, that "these are the best years of your life, live them to the fullest.' On the contrary, others heard, "these are the times to buckle down, for college lies ahead." Freshmen accepted this advice not knowing what else to do in this foreign environment. As the year progressed, these inexperienced freshman learned to balance their schedule in an academic way, while also discovering extra time for a new social life. During this time many strong friendships were made that would last throughout and far beyond their high school years.

The insecurities and pieces of life that seemed so distant and scattered developed and came together as seniors. Finally reaching the status, they found themselves giving advice rather than receiving it. Indeed they suspected that there were many moments at Niles West they would never have the opportunity to relive. In fact, they now know that many of the sights that have become so familiar will one day become dim. There are certain faces that they will forget and no longer be able to recognize, and others that will stay with them always. The seniors are leaving, knowing that they are not coming back. But a portion of their experiences and memories that they have shared will always remain at Niles West.

Genius Bill Pergl impresses classmates with his exceptional mathematical skills. Now everyone knows where to turn to when in need of a helping hand.

An anonymous student takes a moment to "clown" around with classmates. A variety of original disguises were witnessed on Halloween.

Before going out into the brilliant daylight, sophomore Kim Pecs adjusts Janelle Levinson's shades. After all, that's what friends are for!

Varsity cheerleaders celebrate as another touchdown is scored. No game would ever be complete without the spirit and enthusiasm of the cheerleaders.

With the attention of all her male admirers, Ann Liosatos wonders which one she should choose. Ann now realizes that school is a great place for meeting other people.

Being the end of the day, junior Mindy Grossberg receives a kiss from ex-student Eric Schulman. Departure time often means not seeing friends until the next day.

It's time to tango! Elyse Decker and Amy Cho share the last dance of the evening together.

Students anticipate weekend plans before leav ing the building. School will not be on their minds again until Monday morning.

CHECKING OUT CHECKING

1. On the last day of school I will $\square$ re-write all of my note so that I will be able to go over them during summer.
$\square$ throw my books out the window and tear up all my papers.
$\square$ stay after school to thank each and every one on my teachers for helping me in this beautiful educational environment, and then take them out to lunch.
$\square$ count the days until school will start again.
2. The night before finals I will $\square$ study, and study, and then study some more.
$\square$ go to a wild party.
$\square$ sleep
$\square$ start a campfire in my backyard using a pile of old spirals and assignments.
3. The last day of eating cafeteria food I will...
$\square$ eat everything on my tray to please the cooks.
$\square$ find out what the "meat special" really is.
$\square$ start a huge food fight.
4. When I finish using all of my books I will $\square$ burn them.
$\square$ eat them.
$\square$ return them.
$\square$ leave them in my locker.
5. My best excuse for not doing my homework was $\square$ my goldfish died and I was too upset to concentrate on my schoolwork.
$\square$ doing homework goes against my religious beliefts.
$\square$ I was getting on the bus when suddenly a strong wind blew all my papers away.
$\square$ I didn't feel like doing it.
6. During the last five minutes of the school day I usually $\square$ watch the clock eagerly.
$\square$ wish I had more time to hear another intense lecture.get excited because Dynasty is on later in the evening.
$\square$ catch my last five minutes of sleep.
7. When my final report card arrives I will $\square$ receive straight A's.
$\square$ receive all incompletes.
$\square$ never bother to look at it.
$\square$ trash it before my parents see it.
8. When it comes time to clean out my locker I will $\square$ repaint it and take down the "Home Sweet Home" sign.
$\square$ disinfect it with Lysol.
$\square$ discover a freshman hiding beneath the mess.
$\square$ make my locker partner do it.
9. Over the summer I plan to $\square$ go on a tropical and exotic vacation with friends.
$\square$ review all of my notes so that I won't forget what I learned this year.
$\square$ watch reruns of Dynasty and Knot's Landing so that I can relive the experience and the trauma.
$\square$ come back to school to help my teachers pack up their belongings.
10. The last time I get yelled at by a teacher I will $\square$ laugh.
$\square$ cry.
$\square$ call my mom to tell her what happened.

Thumbing through the card catalog, senior Ann Valenti searches for a good book to check out. The school library offers a considerable amount of varied topics for interested students.

OUT CHECKING OUT CHEC

11. During finals my wardrobe will consist of $\square$ polyester pant suits.
$\square$ my gym sweats.
$\square$ my newest and favorite outfits.
12. At the last football game I $\square$ didn't show up.
$\square$ took pictures of all the players and sent flowers.
$\square$ fell asleep.
$\square$ ate all of the leftovers from the concession stand.
13. At the graduation ceremony I will $\square$ pull up my gown to expose that I am wearing nothing but my underwear.
$\square$ annoy those who want a graceful ceremony by tossing beach balls.
$\square$ fall asleep during the valedictorian's speech.
$\square$ sit on the bleachers and wish I was on the field.
14. The last time I ride the school bus I will $\square$ carve my name into every single seat cushion.
$\square$ go back to school so that I can ride the 4:45 and 5:45 buses also.
$\square$ get to the bus fifteen minutes early to reserve myself a good seat.
$\square$ give my bus driver a great big thank you kiss.
15. On the night of prom I
$\square$ flirted with everyone else's dates.
$\square$ put goldfish into the punch bowl.
$\square$ cried the whole night because the school year was almost over.
16. When I receive my book fines I will $\square$ torture a freshman until he gives up his lunch money.
$\square$ steal someone else's book and write my name in them.
$\square$ pay for all my books because I want to keep them anyway.
17. The last week of school I will visit my dean to $\square$ introduce myself since we've never met.
$\square$ tell him what I really think of him.

$\square$ tell him how much I will miss him over the summer.
$\square$ see if I have completed all of my Saturday detentions.
18. While taking my last final exam, I will $\square$ fall asleep.
$\square$ make funny faces at the people around me.
$\square$ fill the scan tron with my eyes closed.
$\square$ cry.
19. I usually got kicked out of the library for ...
$\square$ talking.
$\square$ contributing to the grafitti on the carols.
$\square$ knocking over a shelf of books while playing hide and seek.
20. After I graduate, I plan to $\square$ go to college.
$\square$ open up a chain of 7-11 stores.
$\square$ marry into a rich family.
$\square$ live off of my parents forever.
21. On my last day of science class I will $\square$ stay after class for extra help and advice on next year's course.
$\square$ push in my chair for the first time.
$\square$ mix together every chemical I can find until it finally blows up the school.
22. As a graduation present, I will ask my parents for $\square$ a brand new sports car.
$\square$ a swinging singles cruise to the Bahamas.
$\square$ all of the above (why not? I deserve it!)
23. My favorite time of the year was $\square$ holiday break
$\square$ spring vacation.
$\square$ Casimir Pulaski Day.
24. When ! received my report card and saw that I had failed a class I $\square$ cried hysterically for days.
$\square$ grounded myself and swore never to do it again.
$\square$ convinced my parents that the teacher must have made a mistake.
25. The thing I will cherish the most about Niles West is .
$\square$ the wonderful learning experiences I have witnessed.
$\square$ the ugly, but original, pink hallways.
