The USUAL school day consisted of the alarm ringing, and slowly getting ready for school. Catching the bus, of driving a car, got kids to Niles North.

The $7: 55$ tone was the final warning to get to AAA. Mods $2-29$ were filled with classes, Jurch, resqurce periods, and extra activities. "I'm tired!", and "! can't wait to go home." were often heard in the halls. Wibrary, cafeteria, and trips off campus tilled the stuudents' day.

The 3: 10 tone sounded and students left for home and afterschool activities.

The UNUSUAL day had shortened mods. Fire alarms, and an occasional assembly disrupted the normal day. Military reps., college counselors, senior citizens, and guests who had presented special programs, visited the school. Each day was unique for Niles North Each day

In the springtime, more students took advantage of the courtyard - enjoying the warmer weather.

Seniors decide to take the top down, before leaving for lunch, Steye Goldman, Jerome Barnett, Marc Strongin, Dave Fineberg, and Rich Korners, catch the early summer rays.

 PERIODS

Whether it is the five minute passing period between Trig and Bio, or the forty minute lunch break, freetime and passing perods break the monotney of a long school day. Students worked quietly in the library studying for exams or getting the homework out of the way. Others dashed from class to class because the five minute passing perood was to brief.
Each grade had its own way to spend their freetime and passing periods. Bewildered freshman ran from class to class in constant fear of not making it on time. In contrast, relaxed sophmores walked casually stopping to talk to friends just making the tone. Junior year students could be seen doing last minute studying reminded that the ACT was around the corner. College bound seniors could be seen with stacks of apllications preparing for their future.
Lunchtime was the one of the highlights of a typical Niles North day it gave students a chance to relax, talk with friends and get extra studying done. Bathrooms were a popular place during freetime or passing periods. Girls used a brush and hairspray, or touched up their makeup. Guys, on the other hand, took a shorter time in the bathroom. The college resource room was always a crowded place. Seeing the counselors was scheduled during freetime. Needing a throat lozenge or stopping in for a visit was a reason to see the nurse. Old Orchard Mall was a popular place for lunch or shopping. It was an escape from the routine of school.

Lori Isaacson

Students stopped at there lockers during freetime. Senior Amie Goldberg takes advantage of her freetime to put her books away.

The vending machines provided snacks for students. John Tran stopped at the machines to grab a snack before hurrying off to class.

During high school many friendships are formed. Sandy Diamond, Jeff Ickow, and James Nimmers help out their friend Seven Elmayan with his homework.

Gossiping was as much a part of lunch as eating. JuniorsFrani Bulmash, Marianne Soriano andJenny Chin do just that.

The library was always a great place to relax and study. Jin Cho takes a break from studying his spanish to read about the latest in sports.

Getting up extra early every morning was essential for riding the big yellow limousine.

Girls cheerleading was exciting. Kelly Kloiber tries to get the football fans to cheer for the Vikings

After leaving the pool it was necessary to take a shower. Freshman Lyle Richmond tries to wash the chlorine out of his hair Forgetting to do homework was usual for some students. Dan Shanahan, David Shaoul, and Brian Stevens do some quick studying.

The cafeteria was used for eating lunch, studying and gossiping.

The stress room was not only used by Euchres. Every morning from 6 to 7 me Wiles and other Faculty tried to tasty in shape.

Niles North is our home away from home. Some love it and some don't.
conversation with friends were part of the normal day. We all went our own way after school ended. Sports, studying, jobs, and watching TV were regular evening activities. As the day moved on there were fewer people in the school and silence once again filled the building.

Days Between

Friday: the $3: 00$ bell had just rung-a fast break out of the classroom and a mad dash for the locker. Books and homework and off to the cafeteria to meet friends. While huddled around a table, plans were discussed for the weekend. Partying, sleeping, shopping, getting together, relaxing, and watching TV were suggested. At another table, some guys suggested something different. A game of football, going to a danceclub, working, sleeping, listening to music, and watching TV were on the list. The suggestions were similar but the guys wouldn't consider shopping, and the girls refused to play football. After some talking, we developed a plan.

At home, school clothes changed into party clothes and hair was teased up. The car horn honked and climbing into the already crowded car, we headed for our destination. The party was great, but curfew was at 2 A.M.

Saturday morning began with lunch. By 1:30, we were on the CTA and shopping at Old Or-chard-a popular weekend hangout. Later, at home, a book and the radio provided relaxation. That night, the movies and pizza at Gino's East were fun and exciting. A babysitting job, the phone, and television filled Sunday afternoon. Then the idea of hitting the books clicked in. With books on the bed, and the radio on, the homework was finished by $9: 30$ P.M. By 10:30, I fell asleep, thinking about Monday.

Amy Freedman

The library was the place to get work done over the weekend. Many students escape to the library to study or relax with a book. Michael Levy is helping his sister, Melissa Levy, with her homework.

Bumpkins was a popular place to hangout among Niles North students During the day or on the weekends, students went to Bumpkins to get a good meal.
Football is a favorite pastime of the Viking guys. When they weren't watching TV, they were playing a friendly game of football at the park. Hyun Sung is looking for someone to pass to.

Shopping was among the most popular things to do after school or on the weekends. Many Niles North students went to Old Orchard to meet friends and shop at their favorite stores.
headed for the movies or the shopping mall. Michelle Molay, Laura Kaeske Ellen Feldstein and Wendy Katten are looking forward to a great weekend.

With the arrival of winter their was a return of leather jackets. The popular fashions are worn by Alex Kipershtein, Todd Fingerman, and John Chun.

For junior Matt Gordon, and other underclass students, catching the $3: 20$ bus home was important.

Between the Months

As seasons change, so the tempo of some students' lives change. The change of activities, football to basketball, outdoor P.E. to indoor P.E., homecoming to Prom, signal change.

Change is anticipated or feared.
At the semester, the chance to start over is burdened with taking finals.

A big change of seasons occurs between summer and fall. Summer is full of the beach, vacationing, and friends. At the end of August there is a challenge to face, a different style of life. Fixed schedules, hours of practice and conditioning, and making decisions becoming part of our school life style.

Whether it be sun, falling leaves, snow, or fresh new green grass the seasons and other challenges are only as good as we make them.

Creative Cooking was a popular class Cleaning up at the sink was as important as cooking at the stove. Alex Kipershtein shows Tresa Gilfillan and Dave Cohen he's not afraid to get his hands wet

Students used lunch as an escape between classes. Luisita Francis talks her way through her lunch period.

Lunch was one of the many times during the day where students had a chance to catch up on days' events Jason Blevins, Jung Lee, Hyun Song, and Mike Kim discuss upcoming events at school

THE YEARS OF CHANGE

Freshman Orientation to Graduation-high, school students looked forward to these events. They marked the begiinning and the end of an experience. In-between these events, students faced changes that shaped their lives.
"Since my freshman year I got a lot louder," announced senior Steve Omachi. Senior year was characteristically a time to lay back and relax for Having freshman football team members stand on the tables one by one is a favorite ritual among students John Gelb finds himself speechless while everybody cheers him on practically everyone. The underclassmen enjoyed several advantages. "Getting your license gives you more freedom," pointed out junior Hun-Sook Kim. Sophomores looked forward to being anything but a freshman. "People treat you with more respect when you're not a freshman," boosted Tanya Shenderovich.

For freshman, Niles North was a new experience that introduced new situations. They had a lot more books, were assigned a locker partner and their next class always seemed to be miles away. "The teachers are a lot harder and give more homework unlike junior high," complained Paulette Sallas. Graduation symbolized freedom and independence to many Niles North students.

Jeanne Janowski

Gym class was a required class no matter what year students were. Whether it was liked or not, they had to push themselves to learn the advantages of physical education. This class has mixed feelings between like and dislike.

Graduation was the final step in this period of time. As students walk up to the front, they remember back to the earlier years when graduation seemed so far away. Here, students cheer on their friends as they receive their diplomas.

IT'S OUR YEAR — CLASS OF '89

As members of the 1989 graduating class, we recall watching the movie "The Greatest Years of My Life" at freshman orientation. In the movie, a comedian entertained a senior class with his memorable moments from high school. Having shared a funny experience, the seniors in the movie and the freshman audience laughed. Speaking about graduation, the comedian remembered how his friends had each gone separate ways after high school. Seniors were shown with tears in their eyes as they spent last moments together. We were unaffected. As freshman, we were unable to recall similar memories. Four years later, we now understand how those seniors felt.

As sophomores, we pretended we had never been freshman. We buckled down and did schoolwork to raise grade point averages over our freshman grades. Remember the varsity football team which won the North Suburban Conference title? That was the rowdiest school football game that we saw! Were we worried abo (Not the fire in the aun, disrupted really!) Although biology film, we that stimulating switched places would not have sho modeled with the stud fashionable swim the school's fashouncement wear! As the anat students were broadcasted thal day, students ran in every direction Considering that no one was allowed back inside, even to get their books, we had a whole day of fun ahead of us! Remember driver's education? We thought we looked pretty hip driving in those little red Vettes on the range. Remember ... the feeling of exhilaration when you got your license? Rain or shine, football games had to go on. Even though it rained during the Homecoming football game, the cheerleaders managed to keep the crowd enthused. Senior Clarissa Roman, flashes her dimples despite the weather conditions.

Q: Do you think the minimum wage is sufficent for a teenager in the 80 's? Why? A: I make about $$ 100$ a week and I spend about $$ 50$ for college. My money for a date is about $$ 40$. That leaves me with $$ 10$. Working 32 hours and getting $$ 3.35$ an hour for only $$ 100$ is not good for teenagers.

SENIOR YEAR 88-89

Three words describe us - ENVY OF ALL. We were priviledged. We drove to school or bummed a ride. Our lockers were on the first floor. Ours was the first senior class to walk on carpeted halls. Being accepted to college relaxed some students and provided a chance for us to enjoy the final month at Niles North. We got our ACT together and built a winning Homecoming float! A spirited Homecoming pep assembly, an Amnesty International Rock Concert, and Norsecapades were three of the most high spirited events. Remember- . . . your first day of high school? ... dances? ... favorite classes? favorite teachers? ... the Viking Special? graduation? ... friends? In 1989, there was hope for the future and a desire to see one another at our ten year class reunion ... (1999!).

Q: What do you feel is the most important thing that is going on in the world today that will effect your life in the next century? A: The most important thing going on in the world today is the reduction of nuclear weapons by the United States and the U.S.S.R. Even though both countries still have enough nuclear weapons to destroy the world 100 fold, it's a good beginning. Hopefully, in the years to come, more weapon treaties will be made to reduce or wipe out all nuclear weapons around the world. Then, our children and grandchildren will know what total world peace is without the threat of world destruction.

Feature E.P.

Although rock-n-roll was popular back in ' 64 when Niles North opened, the idea of adding a rock band to Niles North's musical department came up only a couple of years ago. Finally, Electric Purple became a realization in 1988. It included Martin Bany (drums), Ryan Cohan (keyboards), Lauren Cohan (bass), Randy Goldberg (guitar), and Doug Mytnik and Joanne Llorente (vocals).
Having access to the orchestra room for practice was just one of the benefits of being a school-related band. 'Being disciplined isn't enough you have to learn to like practicing." replied Martin Bany. The band members also chose the music that they played. There was only one rule, the music had to include parts for all of the instruments.

Members of Electric Purple who hoped to make music their future career were Ryan Cohan and Martin Bany. "Everytime I perform, I have to psych myself up, by telling myself that l'm going to perform better than I've ever performed before." responded Ryan Cohan. Two members who related to music as a hobby were Randy Goldberg and Doug Mytnik. Randy believed "More stress should be put on the fine arts at school."
Electric Purple's goals were to sound good and to be the best high school band there could possibly be. Besides performing at an Amnesty International concert, they also played at other public events. Doug admitted "The reason I'm in the band is because I like to entertain people. I also like being in the spotlight." Martin, Ryan, Lauren, Randy, Doug and Joanne were members of niles North's first rock band. Could they have started a tradition?

The Man Behind The Band

Being a band director may look easy, but it requires more than just waving your arms around and taking trips. Mr. Elton Eisele was in college for five years, taking courses in directing and reading scores as well as learnig about all the instruments in the band.
"Directing gives you a new outlook on music. I want my students to be able to enjoy music and have the same good experiences that I had,' commented Eisele. Conducting is Eisele's thank you to his old directors who gave him his good experiences. During September, the symphonic band and jazz band were chosen to go to the Presidential Inauguration in January of '89. "I was really excited about this. It was a great opportunity and a memorable experience for everyone," said Eisele.

075 NEEDED
An administrative certificate is needed by anyone who acts as a summer school principal. Getting the certificate prepares the educator for the administrative duties involved in operating a school.

Pete Christie has been a business teacher in Niles Township for 15 years. He has also been a summer school principal for 11 years.

Mr. Christie has a master's degree in school administration and earned his 075 certificate in 1967
Christie was a assistant principal at two Chicago high schools before coming to Niles North.
The summer school principal starts planning the summer school six months ahead of time. Planning publicity, hiring teachers and secretaries, determining the bus schedule, cafeteria set up and scheduling classes are time consuming.

Meeting the educational qualifications to receive an 075 certificate is only part of what it takes to be a principal. Knowing what to do "on the job" gives valuable experience.

Mrs. Mary Murphy and Project Lead
Looking for the third floor and dodging pennies were just some of the obstacles Niles North freshmen faced. They no longer worried after they met a Project Lead Member who helped them through the first tough days.
"By helping someone in need," emphasized Mrs.
Mary Murphy, the advisor of Project Lead, "you relieve the pain you feel for them and in that way you're helping yourself.'

Project Lead was the organization that sponsored the canned food drive for the needy and helped ease fears of freshmen during orientation. "I help the leaders make their own decisions. That's what being a leader is all about," remarked Murphy.

Mrs. Murphy insisted that the students in Project Lead received leadership training and were willing to give others a helping hand.
"A leader must be open-minded, care about others, be a good listener, organized, flexible, and responsible.

Amy Freedman

Many people didn't know what went into making a school work. The people of the District 219 Board of Education made everything possible.

If the faculty didn't show spirit, how could you expect the students to? Principal Tom Giles and Athletic Director Frank Houlihan cheer the Vikings on, encouraging the student body to do the same.

Many students often learn that not all computers are user friendly. This resulted in teachers, like Mr. Kelley, to demonstate proper computer commands to students.

Learning to make many different types of meals and sweets inspired students to enroll in a cooking course.

Like many students, teachers also would converse freely while the lecturer was not present. While waiting for their speaker to return, Mr. Kelley, Mr. Poznansky, and Mr. Wicinski talk amongst themselves.

Child Development taught students proper methods in raising children. Junior Wendy Allen earns her class participation grade by teaching a young student about peacocks.

1988 was the year when ten new faces were added to the teaching staff at Niles North. The hiring of these eager men and women for teaching positions at Niles North was a result of several veteran faculty members retiring. A large group of teachers being hired at one period of time was a rare chance since Niles East closed. Among the new faculty members include Julie Kalnin (English), Kevin Kelley (Business Education), Bradley Krumpolz (Science), Roberta Price (Spanish), Gina Ross (Science), Daniel Rusk (Math), Ann Stuart (Spanish), Robert Wicinski (Science), Sandra Wilson (Social Studies), and one new director, James Blum (English and Foreign Language).

The new teachers also worked as coaches and sponsers of Niles North organizations. Sandra Wilson and Gina Ross were teachers who found time in their schedules to give help to various teams and organizations.

Satyen Patel

Listening to students questions and comments was an important part of seaching. Ms. Ross patiently listens to a concerned student's remarks about an assignment.

Grading tests often creates conflicting views between teachers and students. Ms. Wilson and Diana Livshin attempt to correct a miscalculation.

Higher levels of gym gave the students the chance for good competition. Senior Luke Golata sets the volleyball into play.

They were new! They were improved! They were the courses at Niles North!! The change that affected the most students was not an academic course, but in Gym! A new Coeducational Pilot program was instated during mods 11-13 and 20-22. "We observed other schools that had this program," commented coach Pat Grant. "We saw they were successful in improving students physical fitness." The program grouped students by overall physical fitness and emphasis was put on improving physical condition. "We were satisfied with the initial results. Students showed improvement between fitness tests. But, we need more facilities to accurately test fitness.'

Dr. David Schusteff, director of the Math and Science department, said that there were no new courses started in the ' 89 school year, but, like most other departments, there was a continuous review of the cirriculum in most of the courses.

Commented Mr. James Blum, the new director of the English department, "We are thinking of changing the senior curriculum. It should go into effect in the fall of 1990." A new emphasis on listening was instigated. "You can take the best notes in the world, but if you don't pay attention during class, you could get home, look at your notes, and say 'What the heck does this mean?'"'

A new Fine Arts department was established and Mrs.
Rita Stewart was named director. The theatre courses were moved from the English department to the new Fine Arts section. The new department opened up the oppurtunity for visual art, music, and theatre teachers to discuss the courses that were taught and how they could cooperate as arts instructors.

Mr. John Lorenz, Director of Administration at Niles North, helps many students organize activities for the school.

Pep Assemblies were part of renewing school spirit. Doug Mytnik and

The excitement of the assembly brought students out of their seats and onto the dance floor. Senior John Tran moves his feet to the beat.

Study halls meant different things to different people. To some it was a time to talk or write notes, but, Benny Levy takes advantage of this time to do homework.

The library was a place to read or do homework. These students study for an upcoming algebra test.

Sometimes the lunchroom is just too noisy to do homework. The library gave Jodi Glickman a quiet place to concentrate on her homework.

Resource center was quiet but the chairs and desks were uncomfortable distractions. Amy Hsio couples with a difficult math assignment.

Doing homework sometimes requires a friends explanation of material. Jason Smith and Ronni Bolbat compare notes.

Resource and study were used to fill the 200 minutes of scheduled time for each student. Jenny Vasaloski works in the Foreign Language Resource Center.

What happened the last time you put your feet up on the table and your nother cracked you for writing on the soles of your shoes? What happened Te last time.you had trouble getting the pen marks off your hand? Have jou ever worried about whether you would get caught with the answers witten on your protractor? Or if the teacher would be too involved in rading papers to notice you glancing at your neighbor's paper? The Academic Honesty Policy", in coordination with the teachers, was adopted to deal with these extracurricular classroom activities.

Pcture this, it's Thursday and John has a major Chemistry exam on Friday. Thinking that the material is easy, John blows off studying for this exam Fidday morning in a study hall, John realizes he does not know the material ind thinks frantically what to do to save his grade. "What can I do," he trinks to himself. "Ah ha. I'll cheat. But what about the Academic Honesty Folicy? Naaa, those teachers are too stupid to catch me. I'm going to theat." Writing as small as he can, John squeezes all the information he reeds for the exam, onto this little piece of notebook paper, he then gets a sece of tape from the study hall teacher, rolls up his sleeve and tapes the cheat-sheet" to his forearm.

The bell rings and John walks into Chemistry class. He feels confident that he won't get caught. The teacher spreads the students out to prevent them from using "visual aids". When John receives his exam, he waits until the teacher is at his desk grading papers before he starts. Checking to see that the teacher isn't looking. John pulls back his sleeve slowly and begins copying the answers onto his exam. John occasionally glances up to make sure the teacher isn't looking. Finishing his exam. John rolls his sleeve back down and goes to hand in his exam. Feeling like he has "pulled a fast one" on the teacher, John gives the teacher his exam. To John's surprise, the teacher tears up the exam right in his face. John is furious. The teacher first points to the video camera in back of Albert Einstein's picture and then to the closed-circuit T.V. monitor below his desk. BUSTED!

John faces a possible zero on his chemistry exam, an $F$ for his six weeks grade, and a teacher, student. parent conference.

The moral of this story is: Cheating doesn't pay!

Tara Schlifka

During a student's four-year stay at Niles North, he experienced many different classes. Electives were as diversified as Economics to Sculpture and Child Development to AP Computer Science. By taking different kinds of classes, the students would encounter different kinds of tests, not to mention the aptitude tests for posthigh school education.

Art classes involved reading from textbooks, doing homework, and completing projects. Taking a test in an art class would imcorporate all of these. A teacher may have prepared short-answer exams related to the textbook. He would also ask the students to apply their skills on a one-class period project.

In the Math Department, students learned skills and formulas relating to the subject matter. Students believed that they would never use advanced math in real life; however, Director of Math and Science, Dr. David Schusteff believed there were real-life applications for advanced mathematics. He also thought that tests should have covered these, for instance using the Pythagorean Theorem to proove that a room is actually a box with right angles. For tests in computer classes, students were not asked to repeat facts, but insteaad they were to write a program and hand it in at the end of the period.

Students in physical education classes were even tested. Upon completion of a section dealing with a specific sport, the students were tested on their knowledge with a written test or tested on skills. For instance, after volleyball, the gym teacher would test the students on their serve, bump, set, and spike.

During the Junior and Senior years, students would take the ACT and SAT tests. They were aptitude tests given nationally and used by colleges and universities for admissions. Emphasis of these tests varied from college to college, usually less emphasis from the smaller, more selective schools.

As diversified as the programs and classes were at Niles North, so were the methods of testing. Multiple choice, essay, and fill-in-the-blank were but a few of the many ways to examine students' knowledge.

They were not exciting football games, nor were they thrilling track meets, but they were challenging and fun to participate in. Many students took part in academic competitions because it gave them the chance to compare their knowledge with students from other schools. In order for the teams to prepare throughout the year, most competitions occurred in the spring of ' 88.

The bands were engaged in competitions. In the All American Music Contest in Florida, the Concert Band placed third, the Jazz Band placed first out of seven bands, and the Symphonic Band placed first out of fifteen bands.

The Niles North Math Team was competitive. They placed sixth in state finals last spring.

The Academic Bowl Team participated in annual competitions. The tournaments involved any academic subject and occasionally, questions covered sports activities.

DECA, Distributive Education Clubs of America, was composed of a group of seniors who were interested in marketing and business management. They participated in contests which had twenty-nine events. Advertising, business, and writing sales were included. Individual students won scholarships, trophies, and sometimes shares of stock.

Forensics competed in IHSA invitationals from November to January, and state and National competitions in February and March. The variety of events included duet acting, verse reading, extemporaneous speaking, radio speaking, etc.

Advisor, Mr. Robert Wolf, said, "With increase in Freshmen participation, the future looks promising and exciting."

Every year there has been a Conference Spelling Bee in which Niles North competed. Four years in a row, Vikings brought home a trophy.

Student of the Month awards were given to approximately ten students and several teachers each six week period. They were recognized by individual accomplishments. Academic achievement was not a requirement for the award. Students from any grade level could become a Student of the Month.

Chemistry teacher, Mr. Frank Cardulla, was awarded the Presidential Award for Excellence in Science and Mathematics Teaching. The finalists went to Washington D.C. and an award was given to one teacher in each state.

In the spring of ' 88 , at the end of a very prosperous year, sixty-three students were named Illinois State Scholars. They were the top $5 \%$ of their class and received an award.

Each year one High School Science teacher in the United States received the National Catalyst Award. Two years in a row, Frank Cardulla received this honor.

Information on colleges was located in the first floor College Resource Center. Mrs. Shirley Foss, college counselor, helped students select a college. Dean Wei takes notes for writing his college essay.

This year at Niles North something new was created. Programs took place that were extensions of classroom education. Creative ideas were gathered to produce programs that contributed to classroom education. Lillian Mann, Special Program Coordinator, organized events for International Week, Youth Art Month, Holocaust Day, Martin Luther King Day, and programs dealing with drugs, stress, divorce, and human relations. Videos were shown, and speakers were brought in to address these special topics. "I aim for programs that will bring a sense of well being and some insight into issues that are important for our students to know," commented Mrs. Mann. In order to organize these programs, Mrs. Mann made calls, wrote letters, found information about the performances, and publicized the programs. "I use the daily bulletin, newspapers, and the pulic address system so both faculty and students are aware of what's available." These programs were open to any of the students and faculty. "I've been organizing programs for thirteen years and I love what I do."

Peter LaForge organized Seminars for Scholars. The seminars covered a wide variety of topics. The purpose for the Seminars for Scholars was to confront capable students with discussion topics. Biomedical Ethics and the American Penal System were highlighted. The group met six times during the year. To be a part of the seminars, students were juniors or seniors with at least a B average.

The goals for both the Special Programs and the Seminar series were to expand student's learning outside the classroom.

A special program arranged by Mrs. Mann used volunteers from the Response Center. They discussed the topics of teen suicide and stress with students at North.

Students attending SADD meetings showed their concern for drunk driving accidents and issues. Guest speakers discussed the dangers of driving drunk. Students listen intently to the presented information.

Mrs. Lillian Mann, Special Program Coordinator, organized programs. The presentations generally took place in D100 and added information to classroom education.

Debora Souza.

Debora came to the United States through the student exchange program Youth for Understanding Association. The association assigned Debora to live with a young couple with whom she would be comfortable with.
Debora came from Belo Horizonte (Beautiful Horizon), Brazil where she lived with her parents and older sister. In the fall of 1988, when she was 17 years old, she left home to attend the Federal University. There she began a program which led to a degree in psychology. The Federal University was considered the best university in Brazil and required vigorous testing in order to be accepted. "It was difficult because I graduated a year early. The other students had an advantage over me." she commented.
ife in the U.S. was quite different for Debora than life in Brazil. "In Brazil we live in an apartment or condos, here there are more houses with backyards, this is what I envy." she commented. In addition to her family, Debora missed the yearly Carnival which started on Ash Wednesday. "Rio is famous for its yearly Samba school contests. I look forward to it every year."
"During these six months I got to learn a different culture- a different way of life. It was an excellent learning experience," she replied excitedly, "but when I leave the states l'll miss the different kinds of candy and food. They are delicious but I'm so scared of gaining weight!'"

TO THE TOP

With Perfection

What is cheerleading all about? The cheerleaders of Niles North were the people who tried to bring spirit to our school. "Our school needs to get more involved." commented Dana Lyall, senior co-captain of the varsity squad.

A camp which the squad attended each summer helped them learn moves, cheers, and taught them everything they needed to know. The girls live, eat, and sleep cheerleading. Sleep is minimal but they get a lot of cheering experience. Improving their form, getting along with everyone on the squad, and being competitive were some benefits of the camp.

New people, different cheer formations, and fresh enthusiasm prepared the squad for the school year.

Dana added, "One of the best things about being a cheerleader is being able to act stupid and get away with it. The serious things that we need to think about, involve choosing cheers and when to do them. The cheerleaders needed to have a good time cheering without worrying about winning or loosing. There is always another game to play."

As a co-captain of the varsity squad, Dana set goals for her fourth year. "Enthusiastic cheering and having an outrageous time at camp made the year fun," remarked Dana.

It was hard to cheer on a rainy day, but the game must go on! Stacey Skolnik smiles and has fun in spite of the rain Cheerleaders often joined together in pep assemblies to show their school spirit. Junior Jenny Apfel and Freshman Marni Berg show to others that age difference does not matter in cheerleading.

During a game the Sophomore Cheerleaders boosted the energy in the crowd.

The Niles North varsity baseball team had 3 bright stars: Seniors: Jeff Chalem who was all conference for 1 year and all area for 2 years, Seth Novoselsky who was all conference outfielder, and Junior Sonny Gallman who was all area and all conference pitcher who has been observed by pro teams, and major universities.

Going into the 88 season the team had high expectations, but were unable to fulfill all of them. Pitching as usual was the teams strong point, which depicted one of the finest pitching staffs in the Chicago area. The teams E.R.A. was a remarkable 2.8 for the season, and the staff was led by senior Scott Zuckerman and junior Sonny Gallman. According to Jim Sakas the head coach "One of the keys to our pitching success was the outstanding control of our pitchers.

The team was motivated going into the 88 season due to a great summer season. Sakas went on to say, "Early in the season we had a slump, but I think it had something to do with the cold weather. We have problems hitting in the cold, but as soon as the weather heats up so do our bats." The team had some other problems as well, in the middle to late season the junior and seniors boys split into two separate teams. When asked what three words would describe the varsity team of 88 senior Matt Smith answered "Experienced, strong, fun.'

After losing to Glenbrook the team did a complete turnaround by winning both games of a double header from Evanston due to a great pitching performance by Scott Zuckerman and Sonny Gallman who won and 11 inning one hit shutout. Even though the team didn't meet up to expectations they had a good year.

ABOVE THE REST

The Z-95 team of the week and conference bound Vikings proved basketball was more than just a game. Our tall, cool heros made it an adventure.

Most people do not realize how much hard work, practice, and dedication it takes to play good basketball. After the days of try-outs and the teams were picked it was practice, practice, and more practice. Strengthening up the offense and toughening up the defence were major obstacles along with deciding who the five starting players would be. Most important the coaches stressed teamwork. "Five guys on the court working together to play the best basketball they can," emphasized Pete Christie, coach for the Boys Varsity team.

Each of the teams had their own practice schedules. The boys varsity team practiced Monday through Saturday having special practice nighs Wednesday from 5:45 to 8:00. Every practice was set up to follow a strict schedule touching on all major aspects of the game. The girls team practiced on the same Monday through Saturday schedule although, during the first half of the season this time was spent adjusting to a new coaching staff, and the coaching staff adjusting to the players.

BOWLERE STRUCK HIGH

Confidence in Yourself is Based on Encouragement From the Team

A good bowler needed concentration and desire to play. The girls on the Niles North Bowling Team demonstrated these techniques and were determined to do well.

The team practiced hard three times a week, so they would do their best at the meets. Oakton Bowl was the Bowling home of the Vikings. As a school group, they got a discount for practicing there.

Coach Lange emphasized the need for participation. The right combination of girls could put together a strong team. Lange was willing to help anyone whio was interested in learning to play.

Participation increased from past years. This season there were thirteen girls on the team. They had their first victory this year and there was a huge improvement in scoring.

Niles Township is not a bowling community. Only four bowling alleys are located in the Niles Suburban area. This lack of enthusiasm for the sport is apparent in the small number on the Bowling team.

As long as there was continuing interest and enough girls to field a full varsity team, Bowling continued to be a sport at North.

Freshman Jenna Harra gently places the ball on the alley, hoping to avoid the gutter.

The teams are ready and they make a run for the finish line.

Three words Paul Peltekian used in describing the 1988 Track Team were, determined, hardworking, and enthusiastic. Team effort was important to the entire group of athletes. They were serious about supporting one another and doing their best on their own. "The teams began to think as one, and they realized that losing wouldn't do," commented Kevin Pogany

During a practice session the teams stretched out for about fifteen minutes. The sprinter ran a half mile while the distance runners ran a mile. "Stretching out before a meet or during a practice helped loosen up all the tense muscles. It also prevented cramps during a run," commented Nateba Montgomery. Most of the runners ran about 700 to 800 miles during the track and cross country season.

During the cross country season the team members did not do anything out of the ordinary. Before a meet they would run the entire three mile course to warm up. Last year the team started a tradition. Before a meet they gathered in a huddle and they screamed simultaniously. This brought the team closer together. It showed, commented Kevin Pogany. Team members cared about one another regardless if they won or lost. "They looked on the bright side," explained Gina Poczekay. Paul Peltekian remarked, "Track is an individual sport. Even though our record didn't show it, the team was unified and worked well together." Enthusiasm, was a major contribution to their success. After the teams first victory, enthusiasm increased. People made personal sacrifices of other important issues for the team. Kevin Pogany, who was selected for All-Conference in boys cross country said, "This season was the best in six years."

Exhaustion was a factor that the runners had to try to avoid. With no one around she had a clear advantage in the race. Tanya Livshultz shows great form as she strides in for a victory.

Stretching out was a great way to motivate yourself before a meet. Showing no pain, the Viking runner stretches to his best ability. Jeff Olson takes a break from the action and shows his flexibility as he prepares himself for the race.

TRENCH WARFARE

Vikings Take it to the Limit

This was another down year for the Viking varsity football team, or was it. They started off their season hoping to improve on last years 2-7 record. Most of the critics said the Vikes' defense was going to be the backbone of the team while the offense would struggle. The critics were right. The defense held most of their opponents to under 17 points. The defensive strong point was led by co-M.V.P. Ruel Mallari. According to senior lineman Aaron Hodges and safety Waldemar Mattner this year's team had more heart and wanted to win more than most. The offense was young and inexperienced. Sophomore Brian Brown had to start at QB because of a season ending injury to senior Bill Luckman. The offensive line was very small and not as quick as some of the other schools in the NSC. The brightest spot in the offense was co-M.V.P. and all conference tailback Dwight Smith. Dwight was a very explosive runner who made it through holes that were unsighted by others. The Varsity ended up with an 0-9 record, but it looks very bright for future NN football teams.

Future Golf Pros

It's a fun sport," comments Mark Berkowitz "We encourage other people to try out for the team even if they are not very good." The golf teams only requirement was the use of their own clubs.

The golf season lasted from September to October. Practices took place at the Glencoe Golf Club, which lasted for three to three an a half hours. The team would participate in two or three matches a week. The maximum number of clubs a player could use was fifteen. They ranged from 3-9 irons pitching and sand wedges to drivers and putters.

In the 1988-89 season the varsity golf team had 6 wins and six losses. The Junior Varsity Golf Team had one win and eleven losses. At the beginning of practices in August there were inexperienced freshmen, but during the course of the season they gained more experience.

The team finished the season on an up beat. After weeks of rigourous practice, the teams efforts paid off. The team was looking forward to their next season.

TUMBLINE THROUGH THE SEASON

The Niles North Gymnasts tumbled through a season of hardships and rebuilding. The team was littered with injuries and new members. Gymnasts were not separated by the old, freshman, sophomore, J.V. and Varsity status. "This was a team that worked together as a whole", stated coach Sokalski. Older members helped the new-commers with routines and workouts. Under the training of coaches Sokalski, Goone and Cress teams gained confidence and sportsmanship. Practice after practice the team worked for experience not perfection. Though Niles North was the underdog throughout the season, they always strived for team unity.

Go for the Goal NilesNorth!

For the past four years, the Niles North Girls' Varsity Soccer Team had great teams, and last year was no exception. Led by All-American player Shari Rozmus and All-State player Marlo Kantor, the Vikings were led to the sectional finals and ended with a 23-5 record. Shari's brother Tom Rozmus made All-Conference, and led the Boys' Varsity Soccer Team with eight goals and three assists for the season, even though the Boys Varsity Soccer Team was young and inexperience. Three wins for the season did not give the kind of record they had hoped to achieve. "Five seniors will be missed next year. The team was made up mainly of juniors, but with the experience they gained this year, they should be a success," commented Tom Rozmus. Shari Rozmus and her brother Tom were both captains for their varsity soccer teams. They both scored the most goals for their team, and Shari broke the school record her junior year at Niles North with forty-nine goals. Shari scored a total of one hundred and sixty-nine goals for the four years she attended Niles North. The Varsity Teams for Niles North still hope to be Illinois State Champions. "In soccer, we must play hard and try our best to reach goals," added Boys Varsity Player Alex Brikman. Being part of the Niles North Soccer Team was a learning experience for freshmen soccer players. "Playing soccer, win or lose, everyone had fun," remarked Mike Cha, member of the Sophomore Boys Soccer Team. Although soccer wasn't much of an interest to students, the numbers of fans doubled since last year. Many people are being aware of soccer as a Varsity Sport at Niles North High School.

Potential, spirit, and determination described the ' 88 Girls Varsity Softball Team. The team of 8 seniors, 2 juniors, 3 sophomores, and 1 freshmen was led by Coach Balciulis. Its M.V.P. player was Rhonda Wendt and Danica Petrovic made all-conference. The team practiced everyday from March until June. Their strength was hitting. Six players had an overall batting average of .300. Coach Balciulis remarked, "The eight experienced players were competant. However, both mental and physical errors were made due to the inexperience of the rest of the team." Illness and injuries inhibited the team's consisten$c y$. At the end of their season, and after much practice, the team overcame its weakness as a playing unit, and the players became enthusiastic. Although their record failed to identify them as a winning team, their spirit gave an opposite message. In comparison, the Girls Junior Varsity Team, led by Coach Busch, learned that "winning isn't everything." Sometimes, enjoying what you are doing is more important.

TEAM LEARNS KEY TO VICTORY ENDURANCE
"No one thinks of swimming as that challenging of a sport. People do not realize the time and effort that you have to put in.' stated sophomore Nikki Horberg.

However swimmers did put in a lot of effort, team members practiced twice a day, in the morning and two hours after school. The swimmers also went through weight training and conditional running.

Endurance was a key point since both teams were lacking in numbers. Each had to rely on strength and perserverance in order to pull foth victories.

Even though the girls team lost most of their meets, they had a strong season due to individual successes. for the second year in a row co-captain Dori Mozes was elected most valuable swimmer, while her counterpart Heather Sheck recieved numerous awards in diving.

This years boys varsity team was at a slight disadvantage because of many inexperienced sophomores. Each swimmer put in his best effort, whether it was improving a stroke or breaking a previous record, each little victory led to a general feeling of accomplishment.

Diving was an acquired skill that took long hours of concentrarion and practice. Senior Mike Johnson executes a back dive with style, during a meet.

Boys' Love At Niles North Gives Tennis The Advantage

The boys' tennis team was energetic and motivated. There was a lot of moral support among teammates. The key players who helped win conference and second in the sectional were Ray Arceo, John Chun, Andy Mabadi, and Steve Sand. The boys tennis team competed in the Spring and the girls' competition was scheduled during the Fall. The girls' training usually took place after school while the boys were playing all year round. This gave the boys more experience. Enthusiastic cheers from the fans also helped motivate team members during their matches

Niles North's Volleyball teams improved over the course of the season through many hours of hard work and practice. Although not many victories came out of their efforts, the members of the team were happy. "We all gathered a sense of comradery and friendship," recalled varsity team member Debbie Hedberg. "Weather we won or lost, we were always together."

The Junior Varsity team had a very successfull year. "We came together as a team," said sophomore Debbie Fingerman. "When we played, we played very intense."

The Freshmen teams gained valuable experience. "We really came together," said Sue Ellen Richardson. "Over the year we improved greatly. We'll be ready for a great season next year."

WRESTLERS MADE THEIR MOVE

Wrestlers Have One Memorable Season.

Before making contact with the other wrestler, Marc Pechter would try to find a weakness in his opponent.

The Varsity Wrestling team was challenging physically as well as mentally. The team had a lot of strength and ability. Junior Marc Pechter and Seniors Bret Balonick and Simon Lee led the team through the season. The team started off on the right foot with a win over Zion-Benton.
"Wrestling is a tough and demanding sport. The conditioning is hard and everyone is always working. Although it seems like an individual sport you really have to work as a team," said co-captain Simon Lee.

The highlight of the season was at the Elmwood Park tournament. The team missed 1st place by one point, but most of the team reached the finals. Commenting on the overall achievement of the team, Simon Lee said, "The general feeling was that we could have done a lot better than we did. We were a young, inexperienced team, and I guess it showed.'

Long practices and hard work taught athletes, such as Julie Wattel, crucial routines for winning on a balance beam.

Ferce competition made wrestling meets exciting. Ian Siliverman emerges victorious from a hard fought match.

Teamwork was the base of every sport. Yuri Dubinsky helps Peter Aglipay run for a first down.

Good eyesight was essential for tennis. Deborah Rosenfeld follows through on her backhand.

All the dancers participated in the finale. These girls seem happy and relieved that the show is almost over.

The fun began with the opening dance.
The audience was silent as these dancers performed.

The dances showed style and coordination. Lisa Friedman and Amy Schwartz flip their skirts as they dance the "Can-Can."

Most of the dances were choreographed by the membe but some were taught by professionals. "Bad", by Micha Jackson, was taught to Auroris by one of Ditka's dancers.

Every year, the seniors of Auroris choreographed their own routine. Julie Perlman and Belinda Okolisan pose for the final minute of the dance.

Costumes were a major part of the dance routines. JoAnn Llorente and Jennifer Vasaloski are "Feelin' Hot" in their south-of-the-border clothing.

A Family of Dancers

The lights were dimmed, the audience was silent in their seats, when suddenly the music began and dancers filled every inch of the stage. It was a beautiful show. There was a big variety of dancing. "It included a little spice of everything," remarked Donna Troka, sophomore member of the Auroris Dance Company.
"I joined Auroris because I love dancing. I thought it would be a fun way to spend my time with friends, and to get in shape," added Donna.
Each dancer choreographed a dance and the club members voted on which ones to use for the show. Dancers met every Wednesday from 3:30 to $5: 30$. The week before was intense. Practice lasted everyday until 10 o'clock.

Auroris was a big family. Everyone was friendly. There was no discrimination against grades. Being in Auroris was helpful with meeting people and making new friends during high school.

The hard work and late nights, that were necessary didn't interfere extensively with work. Coordinator, Suzi Gantz, encouraged Auroris members to be involved in other activities. She was very lenient with those people who had jobs.
"We were all there to dance, learn, and have fun," Donna concluded.

SUPERIOR RATINGS

Bands have what it takes

Don't assume that Niles North didn't have musical talent during the 1988-89 school year. The bands were selected to perform at special events and were featured in their own programs at school. Playing a wide variety of modern and classical band music demanded skill from each band member.
Individual musicians entered in the regional and state competition sponsered by IMEA, Illinios Music Education Association. Seniors Steven Andrey and Steven Omachi were selected for All-State Honors. Senior Natalie Auer and juniors Stephen Penepacker and Kyong Ro were selected for District 7 band.
The band traveled to Washington D.C. during the 1989 Inaugural festivities. In Chicago, the jazz band played in the closing event for the Chicago International Film Festival which was attended by famous actors, producers, and directors.
The band played their usual winter and spring concerts, but added a twist. During their winter concert, the whole music organization joined for a two-hour concert with the orchestra, concert band, choir, and symphonic band playing and singing their favorite Christmas and Hanukah songs. Their spring concert's music was a whole collection of popular music that the audience knew.

During the six years Mr. Eisele has been at North, the bands have come from being average to now being in the top 3\% in the country. Most bands would stop there, but Niles North always seem to find a way to get even better.

Jeanne Janowski

This was Elton Eisele's sixth year as a band director here at North. For the past few years, he has been building our band to level further than we imagined. This year, he surprised us all when two of his bands were accepted to the inauguration.

Out of all the bands, jazz band improved the most, going from the average high school band to one of the best high school jazz bands in the country. Trumpet players Adam Weiss and Abe Lee practiced long hard hours to learn the complicated rhythms of jazz.

Concentration was an important part of playing an instrument because more than one thing is running through the mind. Anna Luk demonstrates how she reads music, keeps tempo, and watches the conductor at the same time

The band instruments ranged from brass instruments like the trumpet to woodwinds as in the clarinet. Jody Sanders demonstrates one of the harder instruments. the french horn

Low brass instruments added zest to a performance by perfecting the chord with their lowest note. During a concert, Phil Weiss follows the conducter to make sure his final note is on the right beat

Francis Alog, Melissa Alog, Steven Andrey, Bradley Arnold, Brian Aron, Sherrie Aron, Natalie Auer, Martin Bany, John Belson, Caroline Cadiz, Angelo Douvris, Lena Dukic, David Fink, Brian Frank, Robert Frank, Jodi Glickman, Paul Harada, Elizabeth Hastie, Jennifer Hodel, Catlin Isfan, Jeanne Janowski, Angela Kalteis, Daniel Kang, Craig Karschnick, Hassan Khamsei, Bradley Leeb, Anna Luk, Julie Mark, Igor Murokh, Practicing for a concert was not as easy as everyone thought. It took time and energy to perfect the music scores.

Practice was a major part of Elien Levin, Angie Roman, and Michelle Kashani's everyday life.

STAYING IN TUNE

In Music Everyone Counts

Orchestra was different in 1988-89. "It took several years to learn how to play the violin or any instrument," commented Bart Rotberg. Concentration was not as important as learning the material. " Mr. Sklar, Orchestra director, gave his best effort in making everyone blend together and create a great ensemble. He brought out the sound of the instrument to their best ability," commented Bart. Playing each section in front of people, and imagining all of the possible mistakes was one way Bart Rotberg prepared himself for a concert.

Chorus sang a wide variety of music. They sang several types of songs throughout the year. "Mr. Anderson, Chorus director, selects the music and plays the general melody, while everyone else sight-reads the music and learns the words so it all comes together," commented JoAnn Llorente. "Chorus can be alot of fun if you sing the music to your best ability and put your heart and soul into it,' commented Evalynn Humphreys. There are thirty-five people who are involved in chorus and each one helps support everyone else," added JoAnn Llorente.

Holding performances at school was only one of the places the orchestra played. Proud of their accomplishment Ellen Levin and Judy Utschen hold up the school trophies from Orlando, Florida

The violin is considered the most difficult instrument to learn to play because it has no frets. Awaiting individual help on the mechanics, Joel Sachs practices his scores before the concert.

Practicing for a long period of time can take a lot out of a person. Jason Mezey momentarily takes a break from the violin, and decides to hit the books.

Tuning thirty instruments can take several hours.
Before each concert Mr. Sklar tunes each and every instrument to perfection.

It takes time to learn the music and get it perfected.
Tara Anderson sings with her classmates while

Goofing off in class was one way of having fun but the other was participation. Jerome Carson and William Rudder volunteer to help Mr. Anderson with a special music

Some students plan on making orchestra a major part of their lives. On stage Floyd Strimling concentrates on playing his violin at a winter concert.

Concerts were a time to show off school pride and personal talents. Bart Rotberg is dressed to perform for all who attended the winter concert.

Practicing finger position, and proper rythum, were two important factors everyone had to face before a concert. Annabelle Jimenez practices her solo to perfect her techniques, as well as her musical skills.

Playing the piano did not come easy. For some it took several years to learn how to play the piano. Tara Anderson sits in front of the piano looking over her music for their next concert.

The violin was a popular instrument at Niles North, even though it was a hard instrument to tune. Here, Corey Egel is tuning up his violin for a concert.

The atmosphere was electric at Graduation '88. Lisa Mendelson, Shari Rozmus, and Lisa Comitor cannot contain their excitement of leaving high school.

CULMINATION

The Seniors' Last Bow

The temperature: 70 degrees. The sun: brillant. The atmposphere: electric. That summed up June 12; when the 1988 Senior class became the 1988 Graduate Class.

That afternoon hundreds of ecstatic friends and relatives assembled on the football field. "You could hear murmurs from the spectators," recalled band member Adam Weiss. "Then we were signaled to start playing and everybody applauded.'
As the band started, 435 seniors, led by the school board, emerged from the building and meeted the spectators on the field. You could see the excitement in the faces of the soon-to-be graduates and their parents

When all were seated. Tom Giles spoke about the highlights of the Class of ' 88 . After a round of applause, the student leaders spoke to their peers.
Then the moment all concerned were waiting for. Names were called, a senior went up to the podium, and a graduate came back. Some showed no feeling when they took their diploma. Others let out everything out.

Moments later, it was over. The new graduates shedded their caps and gowns and began a new chapter in their lives, leaving Niles North behind them forever; or at least until they open their yearbooks.

VIKING SPIRIT

At its very best

How often do you see school kids dressed in their pajamas? What causes students to wear college sweatshirts and tie dyed outfits in one week? On what occasion do you see cafeteria windows covered with graffiti? Homecoming provided the chance for this out of the ordinary behavior.

This years theme "Round up of 25 years - Massacre the Mustangs shot a wave of school spirit throughout the student body. Homecoming officially began with spirit week. Spirit weeks' five days consisted of college sweatshirt day, tie dye day, favorite sports day, pajama day, and finally, purple and white day. Spirit week ended with the Homecoming pep assembly which proved to be the most successful fall event. "I like it that everyone got involved in the pep rally." exclaimed Vikette Carolyn Sachs, "It shows we have school spirit." During Homecoming the next event to take place was the parade. Floats varied from expensive convertibles to the unique thesbian "glue factory." The rain didn't dampen the Viking spirit, especially that of the Seniors who took first place.

NORSECAPADES

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS OF SONG AND DANCE

This year students and alumni worked together to present another biannual production of Norsecapades. Norsecapades was an entertaining variety show, filled with humorous skits. Twenty-three of the popular songs from the past twenty-five years of school productions were used. Marla Seidell stated, "The experience of being in a play and working with others taught me to make friends out of strangers, to put up with a demanding director, and to work hard not just for my benefit but for the outcome of the play."

Generally, the students auditioned for a singing, acting, or dancing group in the production. The rehearsals for each of these groups usually lasted about two hours after school. As the days grew closer, weekends were also included in the practice schedule.

The production was an overall success thanks to the time and effort by students and alumni.

Memorable

The setting was the Ambassador West Hotel in the Gold Coast area of Chicago. Sleek, black limousines dropped off couples who were dressed and ready for the most formal event of their Niles North high school year ... Prom '88. Stepping into the lobby the 230 couples were greeted by members of the faculty, proceded by conversation and compliments to friends on their elegant attire. The guests then entered through the arched doorways and into Guild Hall a room that was reminissant of a historic european mansion rather than a modern hotel. The tables which were surrounding the wooden dance floor, were decorated with black and silver centerpieces and a display of chocolates.

The music provided by former Viking Carey Scott of Dance Experience, and Rock Videos and a romantic mist provided atmosphere during the evening. The Prom Committee had timed everthing perfectly, from the dinner of chicken and baked alaska to the crowning of the king and queen. All of these things made the 1988 prom one of the most successful.

Student Congress was the representative group of the students. Fundamentally, it served to promote school spirit and a better attitude towards the school, by providing the Niles North student body with social events and different types of school activities. As the representative body, it delegated to the Educational Policy Advisory Council, the students Appeals Board, the Parent Teacher Student Association, as well as a liazon to the School Board. Student Congress served as the "granddaddy" of all school organizations, providing money and assistance to other clubs.

WIND HITS NORTH

Students Get Inheritance

"Large cast needed" caught the eyes of many students as they read the audition sheet and signed up even though it meant that some students would have just a few lines. "I was satisfied, it was an incredible experience and a great way to get into theater," explained Melissa Solovy. "Inherit the Wind" was a production done in the spring of 1988. The play took place in a small Christian town during the early 1900's. The design of the set was very simple because of the number of scenes that were performed. The play was based on a court trial consisting of three lawyers, a judge, a jury, and a very hasty and nosey group of town citizens. "The large cast was really great to work with," commented Andy Levin. "Inherit the Wind" was successful because of the determined effort of the cast, director, and crew.

Luxurious Chauffeur Driven Motor Homes

PARTY MOBILE

JUNIOR - SENIOR PROM

How many times has the party died on you before it even started? If you are planning a party, consider the ultimate travel party. The party is nonstop from the moment you board one of our luxurious motor homes and can keep on going into the night. After the prom, you can have a moonlit boat ride with Captain Steve of the Wendella Boat Rides. Then on to a morning breakfast at one of Chicago's hot spots...or plan your own after-prom party and one of our consultants will meet with you to finalize your plans.
