SPRING GREENERY decorates the campus for open house.

Open House Begins

Open House, featuring the new Student Center annex, Health Careers and Administration-Classroom buildings, will begin at 2 p.m. Sunday on campus.

Visitors will tour new buildings, the Lake Brazos Waterfront

Visitors will tour new buildings, the Lake Brazos Waterfront development and the Child Care Center. New streets, walkways and parking areas will be shown to visitors, making access to the campus easier. One of the loveliest campuses in Texas, MCC has the added beauty of blooming redbud trees to enhance open house day.

College faculty will greet visitors in each building and student hosts will present displays, exhibits and demonstrations. Performers include the Concert Band, MCC Singers, members of the Speech Department and others in health and physical education classes.

The Concert Band will perform at 2:30 p.m. outside of the Fine Arts Theater. The Singers begin at 4 p.m. in the Fine Arts Theater. A reception in honor of all students and their families is scheduled from 2 to 5 p.m. in the Student Center. President Wilbur Ball, Student Government President Harold Note, and Board of Trustee members will receive visitors at the reception. Circle K Little Sisters will serve refreshments during the reception and Circle K members will act as tour guides to all buildings.

The purpose of open house is to present to the community the results of the school's efforts to educate students and expand their facilities.

"Open house is a good time for students to bring their families and friends to visit the campus and for prospective students to view the facilities," said Don Bynum, director of Student Activities.

Veterans Loans Retroactive to September 1

The local Veterans Administration Regional Office is processing applications for new education loans for veterans attending school under the GI Bill. The loans, up to a maximum of $600 in one academic year, were established by the Vietnam-era Veterans Readjustment Assistance Act of 1974, enacted by Congress last December.

Regional Office Director Jack Coker said the effective date for the loan program was Jan. 1. However, he added that all eligible veterans, wives, widows and children will be considered for initial loans based upon the full amount of their tuition and all other costs of attendance anticipated for the entire 1974-75 academic year. This is considered to have started about Sep. 1.

Under the new law, those granted loans will be required to execute promissory notes agreeing to repayment of principal plus 8 per cent interest. Repayment will be deferred while the student is attending classes at least on a half-time basis.

Installment payments must start nine months after the student ceases at least half-time enrollment, with full payment within 10 years and nine months after that date. Part or all of the loan may be prepaid without penalty. Interest will accrue on the loan balance until the required beginning date of repayment.

The new measure provides that applicants must have exhausted all efforts to obtain student loans administered by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare. The student must list all lenders applied to, with dates notified of final decisions. If denied a guaranteed student loan, copies of denial statements from two lenders must accompany the VA application.

Coker also said the school must certify the student's course of study and tuition and fees and any room and board charges.

No loan may be approved for intersession or other enrollment periods of less than 10 weeks.

Students may contact Brad Underwood, VA representative, from 8:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. Tuesday through Friday, in the Veterans Affairs Office, or call 756-6551 ext. 404 or 405 for further information to apply for a VA student loan.

Round Ballers Fall In Regional Tournament

By Louis Haak

MCC 84 -

Westerners 101

Behind the play of sophomore guard Bob Miller the Western Texas Westerners defeated the Highlanders 101-84 in a game that decided the Region V basketball championship Saturday night in the Amarillo Civic Center.

With the win the Westerners will advance to Hutchinson, Kan., March 18. They carry a 32-1 record into the contest and a top 10 national ranking.

Miller collected 40 points as the Highlanders tried everything to stop him. Danny Kuspar, who was assigned to guard Miller, gave a valiant effort but to no avail.

Coach Johnny Carter had the Highlanders keying on Miller knowing full well that he was probably the best "pure" shooter they had faced this year. Miller was named the tournament's most valuable player with his performance against the Highlanders.

The Big Orange never really played good, sound basketball during the regional tournament but had rolled up until the final game on their superior talent and size to dominate their opponents.

The Westerners would not be intimidated and even when John Derrick blocked shots back into their faces they just scrambled after the ball and put it in the basket.

The Highlanders seemed to be playing the role of Dr. Jeckle and Mr. Hyde as they played fantastic basketball for two or three minutes and then collapsed into a trance-like time when they went for two or three minutes without scoring.

The season ends with the Highlanders owning a record of 27-5 which is nothing to sneeze at by any means.

They simply were outplayed in every sense of the game by the well-disciplined Westerners. The Highlanders were outrebounded by the Westerners 57-63. The Westerners' zone defense forced the Highlanders to shoot from the outside and their shooting percentage dropped to 36.3 from the field.

The game showed moments of furious temperment with three technical fouls being called on the Highlanders — one on Carter and two on Malcomb Patton. The Big Orange had a total of 19 personal fouls called against them with 20 whistled against Western Texas.

The Westerners were able to shut down Derrick both on the boards and in the scoring department. The 6-foot-7 freshman had averaged 20.4 points and 18.3 rebounds per contest during the regular season but was held to 10 points and 10 rebounds against Western Texas.

The Highlander's full-court press was effective in producing mistakes but the Big Orange was unable to take advantage of the 21 turnovers committed by the Westerners.

The Westerners were leading the contest 48-42 at the half after the Highlanders had pulled to within two at 44-42.

The Big Orange pulled to within five early in the second half but scored only nine points before they got stuck at 51. While the Highlanders hibernated the Westerners scored nine unanswered points to widen their margin to 67-51.

With 0:30 left in the contest, the Westerners were leading by 19 points and they were never challenged after that.

Craig Smoak, who played one of his best games against the Westerners, got to go "warm up the bus" as he left the game with five fouls with 0:20 left in the game. Smoak finished the night with 23 points to lead all Highlander scorers and 9 rebounds.

With Smoak out of the game the Western Texas zone defense could sag in on Derrick shutting him off for the rest of the game.

A. C. Kuykendall was the leading rebounder for the Highlanders with 12 and the second leading scorer with 20.

"Wenel" Johnson could not find the range during the early going but finished strong with 16 points. Johnson had six points, 5 assists, and 3 steals at the half.

Watergate Conspirator Tells Tale

By Francy Richings

The confusion, inconsistency and overall deception by the White House during Watergate has created a dazed condition among the people of the nation as well as the conspirators themselves.

The appearance of John Dean, former legal council to Richard Nixon, in Waco Hall on the Baylor campus Monday, seemed to break the daze, if only for a short time, for a standing room only crowd of Baylor students.

People in his presence seemed awed, perhaps because questions and uncertainties that have been brewing since the beginning of Watergate could be brought out and answered by the source without interpretations or filtering by the media.

Even though the press was sometimes as contradictory as the conspirators, Dean gave it a lot of credit for bringing the nitty gritty to the people.

"I saw how they were digging and how relentless they were. But for a lot of their efforts, Watergate would never have been unraveled. I think the American people can be very thankful for the vigilance of their press," he said.

Even so, no matter how the press treated it, Watergate and its aftermath was a shock to the people.

In working on the coverup, Dean was assigned to find all the dirty linen from past administrations to dilute the impact of Watergate. However, though Presidents have romped around in the past, Nixon was the first to play in the mud.

The dinge of Watergate overshadowed even the worst stains of the past. But even with the stark harshness of Watergate on his shoulders, Dean somehow could not find himself capable of realizing it was wrong. His involvement did not trouble him deeply until January or February of 1973.

"The President told me, 'John, I want you to take full charge of the cover up, so to speak.' I kept deluding myself that what we were doing was right," he said.

There is no doubt that being legal council to the President of the United States involves a great deal of responsibility, courage and leadership. Perhaps, at the age of 27, Dean was not ready for such pressure. He did not even have the presence of mind to realize he was being used by the President.

In one incident, the President called Dean to his office and told him they would be discussing the budget at a certain time that day. They had never discussed the budget before.

That day a group of "long hair" college newspaper editors were supposed to visit the President. Dean was called to the President's office, where budget records had been stacked, at the appointed time. Soon after his arrival, the President was informed that the editors were there.

The Presidents asked Dean a few questions about the budget, answered a few questions from the editors and terminated the meeting. The "long hairs" were impressed, however Dean was rather baffled. In his confusion, he called Haldeman and asked for an explanation to which he was answered, "The President thinks you look hippy."

If poor John Dean could not smell a skunk by then, maybe someone should have questioned his rise to office.

When asked how the people knew if the elected official serves himself or the public, Dean said that the people must look at the politicians' track records. Does this mean Dean does not plan to continue his career in politics?

"Liddy said, 'The reason Dean turned to testify was to save his own ass,'" said Dean.

However, when Dr. W.J. Wimpee, Baylor University chaplain, introduced Dean, he said, "Dean changed from servant of the President to servant of the people."

At present, the pressure of Watergate may make him seek public sympathy and financial support, but he's still in the old campaign, playing politics with the "long hairs" to help himself.

Living Together Can Be Rewarding

By Jim Munson

Have you ever thought what it would be like to live with your lover? Have you ever wondered just how the whole thing might come about?

Cohabitation is living together, not just spending the night or the weekend. For our purpose here, let us define the word as sharing a bedroom and-or bed with a person of the opposite sex for four or more nights a week and for three or more consecutive months. This is how Psychology Today defined the word in a study that was undertaken at Cornell University.

Eleanor D. Macklin, the researcher that conducted the study, has a doctorate in educational psychology and human development from Cornell.

According to Dr. Macklin, 300 students were questioned in the survey, and less than a third of them had cohabited by the above definition. Of those that had, 44 per cent had no religious preference, 36 per cent were Jewish, 12 per cent were Catholics, and 10 per cent were Protestants.

Of those that cohabited, there was no sign of a lack of academic standings. Also when the cohabitants were contrasted with non-cohabitants there was no significant difference in the desire eventually to marry.

According to Psychology Today and Dr. Macklin, only 7 per cent of the people that did not cohabit did so because they felt that it was morally wrong. About 25 per cent stated they were too far away from their desired partner, and an equal number of persons said that they had not found the right person to live with.

As for College administration and staff acceptance of cohabitation, more than 90 per cent of the cohabitants stated they had received no trouble. Neither had they received any static from their landlords.

Many reasons were given as to why people live together:

- 1) The loneliness of a large university,
- 2) The superficiality of the "dating game,"
- 3) The search for more meaningful relationships with others,
- 4) The emotional satisfaction of living and sleeping with someone who cares about you,
- 5) The desire to try out a relationship before marriage,
- 6) And the widespread doubts about the institution of marriage.

One surprising thing the research uncovered was that only about 25 per cent actually discussed the situation before indulging. Most of the people started out sleeping together occasionally, and it grew more and more frequent.

As for marriage, only 10 per cent had marriage plans before they started to live together. But on the other hand, only 10 per cent saw the experience as temporary. Most of the people had strong emotional feelings for their partner, but had not come to the stage of making a life-long commitment.

At Cornell, nearly 60 per cent of the time, the woman goes to live at the man's residence even though the man may be living in an apartment or a house with several other men. About 20 per cent lived in a dorm room, and almost 10 per cent shared a fraternity room. Only about 15 per cent lived off campus in their own private dwelling.

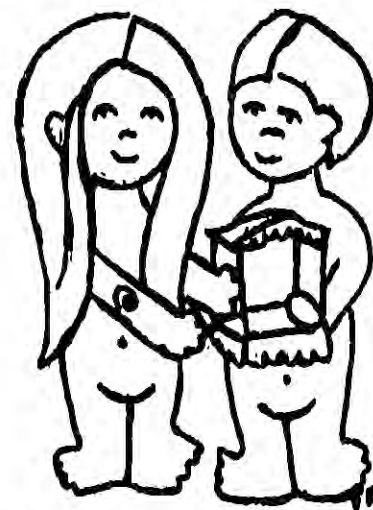

Even though the cohabitants lived together, most still kept their old place. The woman would sometimes go to her old residence to pick up mail, clothes, belongings and to visit with friends.

When asked why two residences were kept, the most frequent reasons were for occasional privacy, to maintain a relationship with friends, to have a place to turn to if things did not work out, and to have a place to show parents if the need arose.

Another surprising fact that was uncovered by Dr. Macklin was that although nearly all of the cohabitants had full sexual relationships, most had lived together for three or more months before having sexual intercourse. According to Psychology Today, "Cohabitation seems to develop out of a desire to know another as a whole person and to be with and to share as openly and completely as possible with that person. To focus exclusively on sexual involvement leads to a very narrow interpretation of the situation."

Despite problems with poor groups and parents, more than 90 per cent of the couples said that their experiences were successful, pleasurable and maturing. Of these people, three-fourths said they would not marry without first living with the person, and all but one that was 'unsure' recommended the set-up to others providing they are mature enough to handle the situation.

Most seem to have profited from the relationship and have found out something about themselves, and what it is like to share everything with another human being.

On The Ball Unique Names Abound on Field

By Louis Haak

Baseball players are the world's worst about picking up nicknames. The Highlander baseball team has quite a few.

Rusty Rogers was tagged "Poodle" by his teammates because his red hair reminded them of a poodle. Steve Harriman goes by the nickname of "Hair Bow" because of his short hair cut. He brought this nickname with him from Waxahachie and it sort of stuck.

Craig Stephenson acquired the nickname of "Lick" by repeatedly showing up for practice with hickeys on his neck.

Sometimes Craig Stephenson refers to Glenn Jones as "Jonesy" in "Lick's" imitation fag voice. They usually go through a fag-routine in front of the opposing team's dugout. It makes the other team wonder what kind of guys they are up against.

Richard Koenig is referred to as "Sarg" by his teammates because of his Marine-style haircut and the fact that he is the only married man on the team.

I am not sure if Wayne Thompson is called "Possum" because he slightly resembles the animal, or maybe because he likes to roam the streets at night digging through garbage cans.

Mark Fournier bears the name of "Grand Funk" because their guitar player's name is Mark Forner.

Rodney Schrader has acquired the nickname of "Hot Rod" I hope referring to his car.

All Garza is called "Chi-Chis", which is Spanish for something that should not be translated.

Ali Garza uses the alias Wayne Martinez when he calls out for pizza because no one can spell his name correctly.

Garza, through his interpreter Paul Dickenson, said he swam the Rio Grande River from Mexico where he was born. He said that he had to hide in Falfurrias until his fake papers arrived. Garza said he was working as a watermelon picker when Coach Butler recruited him.

Anthony Cepak, freshman pitcher from La Vega, said that when the team went on road trips he had to send someone into the restaurant after the game to see if they would accept Czechs.

Pitcher Paul Dickenson said the team would win some games if they could score one more run in each game than the other team. This shows only a bit of Dickenson's brilliant mind.

Dickenson's parents were down from Fort Worth to see Paul and his brother Mark, former third baseman for the Highlanders, this weekend. Paul's father brought Mark a pair of beautiful cowboy boots and a Coor's belt buckle, but all they brought Paul was a ham sandwich. It makes you wonder if they were glad to see Paul. Paul's mother told me not to say anything about it in front of him for fear of making him cry.

Honor Society Meets For State Convention

Phi Theta Kappa members attended the state Phi Theta Kappa convention last weekend at the Emerald Beach Holiday Inn in Corpus Christi.

Sophomores Amy Dvoracek, Robin Roberts, Harold Nolte, Pat Urbis, Cindy Mellgren, Jack Weaver, Marsha Minnix (reporter), Jerry Lynn (president), and Kathy Voss, freshman, attended the convention along with sponsor Don Reeves. The theme of the convention, centered around the Bicentennial Celebration, was "Jefferson and Franklin had much to teach, and we have much to learn."

The convention program included three business sessions Friday and Saturday. Next year's state officers were also elected. Pi Chi, MCC's chapter, was elected district chairman. A seafood dinner was served Friday at Del Mar Tech, followed by a boat cruise under the International Harbor Bridge into the Gulf.

Convention goers had the option Saturday afternoon to visit Padre Island, go shopping, or just rest. A dinner and dance, which lasted until 1:30 a.m. was on the agenda for Saturday night.

Besides learning more about the organization at the state level, Waco Phi Theta Kappa members had the opportunity to meet other members and enjoy a weekend filled with sand and surf.

MCC 87 — NMMI 83

The first game of the Region V tournament for the Highlanders found them narrowly defeating the New Mexico Military Institute 87-83 Thursday night in Amarillo.

The Big Orange played an excellent first half and looked like they might blow NMMI off the courts before the game was over. This was not to be the case as the Broncos came out of the dressing room after the halftime intermission with fire in their eyes and a magic spell up their sleeves that put the Highlanders to sleep for much of the remainder of the game.

The Highlanders had a 52-37 halftime lead but this was soon cut down to 6 with the Broncos outscoring the Highlanders 16-4.

John Derrick played one of his best games of the season scoring 28 points and pulling down 15 rebounds. Derrick blocked 7 shots to put on a performance that had the sparse crowd of about 200 fans wondering where he had been hiding.

The Highlanders shot 43.7 per cent from the field and committed 23 turnovers while the Broncos shot a 51.3 per cent and had 24 turnovers.

"Weasel" Johnson scored 19 points, had 7 assists and 6 steals. Craig Smoak and Danny Kaspar had 15 points each to round out the top scorers for the Big Orange.

MCC 109 — Ranger 96

The second game of the regional tournament was a runaway with the Highlanders destroying Ranger Junior College 109-96. The Friday night crowd in Amarillo saw the Big Orange go over the century mark for the eleventh time this season and coast to an easy victory in which Coach Johnny Carter used all 13 players.

John Derrick tied his season high in scoring with 32 points. "Weasel" Johnson scored 24 points — 20 in the first half on 10 of 12 shots from the field. Johnson sat out 12 minutes of the second half with four fouls. Danny Kaspar and Craig Smoak also were plagued with four fouls but none of the Highlander's fouled out of the contest.

Derrick pulled down 20 rebounds and blocked 6 shots. Smoak had 16 points and 9 rebounds. Kaspar had 15 points for the Big Orange.

The Highlanders outrebounded the Rangers 63-37 and shot 54 per cent from the field. The Highlanders took advantage of Ranger's foul troubles by hitting 15 of 29 shots from the charity line.

Coach Carter cleared the bench with under two minutes left in the game and Craig Bagget hit the final two points on a driving layup.

Sophomore Johnson, who averaged 18.2 points, 9.6 assists and 4.1 steals during the season, led the balloting for the second team.

Smoak, a 6-foot-7 sophomore from Brooklyn, N.Y., averaged 13.6 points and 11.2 rebounds after transferring here from Eastern Michigan University.

Derrick, along with Bob Miller of Western Texas, are automatic nominees for All-American honors as they were the two top vote getters.

This team is chosen by the coaches and athletic directors of the Northern and Western Athletic Conference.

Other players on the first team include Larry Gibson of Ranger, New Hicks of Southwest Christian, Eugene Hicks of Western Texas, Mike Russell of New Mexico Junior College.

Golf

The Highlander golf team split up and went their separate ways last week. Half the team attended the Southwestern Recreational at Fort Worth as defending champions and finished in fifth place. The Highlanders finished in fifth place in the Southwestern with a score of 600, next was Grayson County with 603, North Texas State and Paris Junior College tied for second with 601 and Texas Wesleyan won with 598 points.

Russell Orth was the low man for the Highlanders at Fort Worth with a 148, followed by Dale Carlisle with 150, Greg Groat with a 154 and Steve Elkins with a 156.

In the 54 hole event at Huntsville, the Highlanders finished in tenth place with a total score of 803, trailing Rice's 800.

The gun for the Highlanders at Huntsville was Mike Hagan who shot a 234, followed by John Foster with a 237, Tom McConnell and Gil Freeman, who each shot a 238, and Frank Johnson, 244.

The Highlander's next outing will be at the University of Texas in a 54 hole tournament scheduled for Thursday and Friday. "We will have to play well to win there. They are playing on their home course and they probably have one of the better teams in Texas," said Clayton.

Tennis

The Highlanders tied for fourth place in the men's division of the MCC Invitational Tennis Tournament held here

Friday and Saturday.

The Highlanders next meeting is scheduled against Hill Junior College today at Hillsboro.
