

Organizations Donate Scholarships:

The increase of scholarships to McLennan Community College is exceeded only by the demand for them, according to Keith Geisler, director of Financial Aid.

"Applying this year for the 60 scholarships given by Centex individuals, business firms, and clubs and for the numerous federally-funded scholarships in the law enforcement and nursing programs, were about four students for each available scholarship," Geisler said.

"The obvious answer to this problem of four students for each scholarship," he added, "is an increase of scholarships next year."

The nursing fund grants range from $150 to $500 this semester, while local scholarships were from $25 to $250. Some individuals give partial scholarships, like the $25, while other individuals and organizations give up to seven full scholarships.

Some scholarships are given specifically to the College for MCC students; others are given to students who then choose to use them at MCC. For example, a girl from Florida brought her scholarship from her high school's PTA to use at MCC.

Local PTA's giving scholarships to students at MCC this year include Midway, McLennan County Council, Robinson, Northcrest and Barron Springs Elementary Schools, China Spring, and Lakeview.

Two student organizations, the Interact Club at Waco High School and MCC's Spanish Club, show their interest in fellow students by awarding scholarships.

Other organizations giving scholarships include men's and women's civic and professional organizations, local unions, and social clubs, as well as some businesses.

Noting the Scottish theme of MCC, the Scottish Society of Texas at Austin gives a scholarship annually.

Waco's Mexican-American Alliance has provided several scholarships and is collecting funds for more scholarships now.

Three endowments are being established from which the interest will provide scholarship funds. One is the J.M.C. Amos Scholarship which was begun in memory of Francis Sams; several Baptist churches are cooperating in raising these funds, under the direction of Mrs.

'About Four Students Apply For Every Available Scholarship'

Andrew Green. Also, a scholarship honoring Mrs. Green is being initiated by Mrs. R.H. Lynam.

A local doctor has established endowment fund to help nursing students, and Peeler Williams, Jr., local attorney, is setting up a fund in memory of his cousin, Ruby Reid Robinson.

Scholarship recipients are selected according to criteria set up by the person or organization giving the money. For instance, the Air Force Aid scholarship requires that the recipient's father must be, or have been, in the Air Force. Other scholarships require certain courses of study or simply an established financial need.

The 60 locally-given scholarships come from a wide range of sources.

Many scholarship donors prefer some contact with their recipients. Mrs. Phil Teeling, for example, has taken a personal interest in the students who receive scholarships through the Carol Cooper Combs Memorial Fund. The fund, in memory of Mrs. Teeling's daughter, is one of the Waco McLennan County Bar Auxiliary's Memorial Trust Funds. The Bar Auxiliary also gives scholarships.

Although the Auxiliary administers the fund, Mrs. Teeling often meets recipients of the memorial fund scholarships. "Sometimes they come and talk things over with me, or call to talk or to tell me their grades," she said. "It has been very gratifying."

Special Election Brings 4 New Members Into Student Government

By DAVID WALLINGSFORD

The Student Government continues to go through changes in personnel. Four new members of the Congress, a new Supreme Court justice, and a temporary Parliamentarian were all ushered in recently.

Four new members were elected into the Student Congress on Feb. 18-19 by a special election.

The new members are Debbie Jones, Janet Turner, Mike Dates, and Gary Jinks. They were sworn in on Feb. 23.

The election was held to replace departing members Dan Oats, Jim Martin, David Smith, and Dennis Clark. All of these except David Smith left MCC at mid-term.

Over 250 persons voted in the special election. Mike Alford, Secretary for the Student Government, said that the turnout was "excellent for a special election."

A temporary Parliamentarian was appointed at the Feb. 23 meeting of the Student Government to replace departing member James Brooks.

Brooks, who stated an intention to leave MCC as the main reason for his resignation, was replaced by Danny Manos. Manos is also a Student Congress Representative.

There has been no date set for another special election to establish a permanent parliamentarian.

Student body president Clint Lewis stated that this close to the spring elections, it might not pay to hold another special election.

The third changeover in personnel came within the Supreme Court. Mike Hurst, who left at mid-term, was replaced by Bob Cooby.

This action was also taken at the Feb. 23 meeting of the Student Government.

Robinson Scholarship Gets Additional Funds

Elizabeth W. Estes has added $1500 to the Ruby Reid Robinson Scholarship Fund at McLennan Community College.

The scholarship fund was begun last month by Peeler Williams, Jr., Mrs. Estes's brother, in memory of their cousin. First recipient of the scholarship will probably be named next fall.

New Careers Student Gets Civil Service Appointment

Mary Hooks, a student in the New Careers Program at McLennan Community College, is the first New Careerist in the nation to achieve a career appointment in Civil Service.

Mrs. Hooks attained this distinction through competitive examination.

As a New Careerist since the spring of 1969, Mrs. Hooks has studied at MCC and worked half-time at the Waco Social Security Office.

"She applies herself to her work and seeks to learn all she can about Social Security," said Pete Wall, her supervisor. "Her personal motivation to learn and to be thorough and accurate while possessing a most likeable attitude and ability to get along with people have combined to help her become an outstanding New Careerist and Social Security employee."

Mrs. Hooks has been hired by Social Security, but she will continue her academic work at MCC where she hopes to receive her A.A. degree in May, 1970.

At MCC Mrs. Hooks has been active in the Afro-Student Kindred and served as an officer. She has recently been named to the 1969-70 edition of Who's Who Among Students in American Junior Colleges.

Campus Always Feels Effects of Registration

Registration is over, but, as usual, the effects of the hectic procedure will be found for weeks to come.

"During registration," said Counselor Fred Scott, "we have to work quickly and efficiently in order to get the job done." He added that both the registrar's office and the counseling office have very heavy loads at registration.

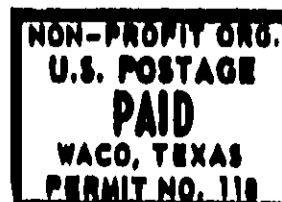

The registrar's office is especially busy at the end of the old semester and the beginning of the new. In addition to registering large groups of students, the office is responsible for publishing grade reports and examining student's records.

All grade reports are double checked by the registrar's office. Before the grades are transferred to a student's permanent record, they are again double checked for accuracy. Corrections are then made on those reports which have errors.

"The business of registration is a long process," said Harvey F. Spross, registrar, "and we are currently compiling registration statistics for the spring semester."

Statistics on the spring registration will be released within the week, according to Spross.

David's DetourWonder Writer
Discovers Apathy

I was sitting in my office deep in reverie (contemplating an glossy center-fold placed on my wall to help me think) when the editor rushed in with a tear in his eye.

"Wonderful Wallingsford," he said, "only you can save us!"

"Naturally," I said.

"The Huddled Masses are awaiting with baited breathe to find out about apathy (and we need to fill 12 inches). Please enlighten us."

"It's not a subject I really care for, but I'll see what I can find," I said. So I sallied forth in search of a man on the street.

Not finding anything there but cars, I turned towards the student center. And lo and behold! That's where it's at.

I made my usual dramatic entrance by riding my Bonanza mini-bike with its 14 foot white streamer with orange neon lettering spelling out WONDERFUL WALLINGSFORD, BOY WONDER AND WRITER through the double doors of the center.

Instantly, my adoring public gathered round shouting, "Use me! Use Me!" (they meant as a source for my story.)

Waving them aside with casual disdain, I headed for the people who remained in their seats (For if they could ignore The Coming of a folk hero, they really didn't care about anything).

"Excuse me, youthful type sitting there," I said to a youthful type sitting there, "but I wish to know about apathy."

"Who cares? Flake off," quoth he.

"What! You wish to not help me?" I cried, so aghast that I split an infinitive.

Glancing up, it dawned upon him who I was (I was wearing my Wonderful Wally sweatshirt that glows in the dark). "Forgive me! I didn't realize it was you."

Somewhat mollified, I began my interview. Getting right to the heart of the matter, I asked him why he didn't care about anything.

After admitting that he had never really thought about it, he proceeded to do so under my careful supervision. In about an hour I figured he had thought long enough (didn't want him to strain anything), so I woke him up.

But the time had not been wasted, for he told me about it.

It seems that people don't want to get involved with things that do not affect them.

Having never been to Missouri, I asked him to show me specific examples. He gave the typical trivial trash--a girl killed while people looked on because they didn't know her, and the war in Viet Nam is an ocean away.

With pity in my eye and a soapel in my hand, I pointed out that the next victim of a killer MIGHT be known to him and someday he MIGHT have to go overseas.

Understanding came into his eyes as he realized that any situation can affect anybody. "Oh, Wonderful Wally, you have done it again. You have shown me the light! What can I do to repay you?"

I replied, "Go forth, my son, and apathy no more."

Lebanese Student Pictures
Texans All With Big Cigars

By DIANE TEMPLETON

Did you know the sky is higher in the United States than in Lebanon? So observes Pierre Faraj who is attending MCC since coming to the United States from Lebanon in October.

Faraj, 20, was born in Baghdad, but in 1956, his family moved to Beirut, Lebanon to be with his father.

He had no intention of attending MCC when he left Lebanon. After visiting his brother in Lawrence, Kansas, Faraj went to Omaha, Nebraska to study commercial art. He soon realized he wanted to "broaden his knowledge," so he wrote to his uncle, Rudy Faraj, who lives in Waco, to ask if he knew of any school in Texas Pierre could attend.

"He knew MCC," So Pierre came to Waco on Christmas Eve and started attending MCC this spring semester.

So far, Faraj likes MCC. "I like it because, as far as education, it's the same thing (as in Lebanon) except for American history. We don't study that in Lebanon."

Faraj has become very interested in American history, and he may major either in history or in French.

Faraj speaks French fluently since he has studied it for 13 years, nine of them with the Jesuit priests. He also speaks Lebanese, Iraqi, and English. After studying English for four years in Beirut, he thinks, English is the easiest language.

Texans are hard to understand, though. "I understood Americans in Omaha, but it's hard to understand Texans and new American expressions.

Just as Americans picture camels and deserts in Lebanon, the Lebanese idea of a Texan is "a man in a big, shiny car with a big cigar . . ."

Faraj is anxious to learn how to drive. In Lebanon, everything is close enough to walk to, so he never learned how to drive a car.

He would like to become an American citizen, "an American citizen, but the heart of an Arab; never forget home."

The Highland Herald is a publication of the students of McLennan Community College, Waco, Texas. The Herald is published twice a month during the school year. Offices of The Herald are in the Science Building, Room 211, telephone 756-0551, Ext. 303.

The Herald welcomes letters to the editor. Publication of signed letters will receive thorough consideration.

The opinions expressed in editorials do not necessarily reflect those of the college.

Before coming to the United States, he said he thought it would be a perfect place. But when he arrived and heard on the radio about the murder and robbery, he knew the United States was not perfect.

"There is no perfectness here or anywhere; you've got good and bad," he said. "You appreciate your country and your parents when you leave."

Pierre likes Waco and MCC so much that he is encouraging a friend who is studying in England to come here next semester. His parents and his brother who still live in Lebanon may come to the United States sometime next year.

Many Americans, Pierre noted, do not really know where Lebanon is. For instance, when he was studying in Omaha, a student asked Pierre where he was from.

"I'm from Beirut," Pierre answered.

"Oh, Beirut. Isn't that in Kansas?"

Pierre laughingly replied, "Yes, it's in Kansas."

Well, Paris is in Texas too!

PIERRE FARAJ, who came to MCC only by chance, studies in the library. Faraj was born in Baghdad and later moved to Beirut, Lebanon before coming to the United States last October.

BSU Devotes Time to Children
During Friday Night Missions

By DONNA PICK

When you have energy, dedication, and concern for others, you have members of the Baptist Student Union volunteering their time and talents every Friday night to help bring a little happiness into the lives of the children at Bellevue Baptist Church at 1400 N. 5th.

The project called Friday Night Missions includes such things as games, singing sessions, Bible lessons and refreshments for the children living in the area of the church.

"We are trying to teach these children morals and ethics so that they will know how to live in the world and community and to be wholesome citizens," said Rollin DeLap, BSU director.

Besides giving Bible instruction, the members also teach the children personal grooming and cleanliness, health care, and etiquette. They also plan to have a policeman visit with the children as a friend and guide.

BSU member Robert Latta said, "I remember when we had the Christmas banquet for the children, we pretended that we all were learning the rules of etiquette so that the children would not feel singled out."

"It was really interesting," he continued, "because the little kids caught on to it fast and really enjoyed it. Even during refreshment time, the boys would pull out the chairs for the girls."

The essential purpose of the Friday Night Missions, which was begun in October of 1960, is to serve as a witnessing agent to the faith in Christ. Many problems, however, had to be overcome at the start.

"First we had to win the confidence of the children at the center," said BSU member Arthur Vestal. "Some of them are responding and learning while some are still not too sure."

After the adjustment period was over, Latta agreed that BSU members were able to reach most of the children and gain their friendship and confidence.

BSU members cater not only to the spiritual needs of the children but also to their physical needs. During the Christmas (See BSU, Page 5)

Melinda Bronaugh Crowned Basketball Sweetheart

'You Have to Make Your Own Fun — If You Don't, It's Your Own Fault'

By TONY PEDERSON

While McLennan Community College is not very likely to make any contributions to the University of Texas in the way of football players, there is someone on the way who is sure to catch some attention.

Melinda Bronaugh, MCC's basketball sweetheart, is headed in the direction of Austin with a few ideas of her own before she gets there.

"I like to have fun," she said recently. "I know everyone is always complaining that there's nothing to do.

"You have to make your own fun. If you don't have anything to do it's your own fault. I think it's that way just about everywhere."

Miss Bronaugh came to Waco from Abilene in her junior year in high school. She went on to graduate from Richfield High School.

The 5-5 hazel-eyed freshman said she would like to teach biology.

"I guess it's sort of odd," she said, "but I have always had an interest in biology and ecology.

"I think pollution is really bad.

There's not an awful lot that can be done immediately—but we can stop the polluting of our environment and begin thinking seriously how we can clean up what we have already messed up."

Miss Bronaugh also said that she had always been interested in sports, and enjoyed participating herself as much as possible.

She represented Circle K, and although she seemed to take the announcement lightly, there was actually quite a feeling.

"I guess I was so shocked that I didn't know what to do," she said. "I knew I wanted very much to win, but I had no idea that I would—I was taken totally by surprise."

Miss Bronaugh was crowned during halftime ceremonies of the MCC-Schreiner Institute game. Captains Simpson Degrate and Dennis Edwards presented her with a bouquet of roses and a gift from the basketball team.

She is a member of Delta Phi Beta, and is planning to attend MCC another year before going to the University of Texas.

32 Students Designated For Who's Who

Thirty-two students from MCC were recently designated to be included in the national publication "Who's Who Among Students in American Junior Colleges."

Criteria for selection include scholarship, citizenship, participation and leadership in academic and extra-curricular activities, and general promise of future usefulness to business and society.

Students selected by student representatives, instructors, counselors and administrators are as follows:

Cynthia Blackburn, Patty Boffing, Elaine Burt, Jane Bushnell, Linda Cloor, Kay Driskell;

Troy Fountain, Donna Kay Gant, Daryl Godfrey, Sally Gonzales, John Haley, David Hayes;

Glen Hendrix, Mary Hooks, Benjamin Hughes, Susan Jones, Clint Lewis, Mike Magid;

Jerry Meadows, Cynthia Montemayer, Jeri Morris, Beverly Neal, Ronny Rigney, Leanne Sanders, Lana Shivers;

Judy Smith, Charlene Spode, Donna Spross, Sue Stolte, Diane Templeton, John Ucol and Mary Zigel.

Sounds of Silence

Editor's note: From time to time, the Highland Herald will reprint articles from various campus newspapers because of their particular interest or novelty. The following article was written by Dan Hunter, staff writer of The Graphic, student newspaper of Grayson County College.

Ever since President Nixon gave his passionate, yet tricky, speech on Vietnam, a strange, noiseless animal has been roaming the country. This creature is known as the Great Silent Majority (not to be confused with the Lesser Silent Majority). It is sometimes called by its scientific name, flagis wavyus pat rioso.

The animal is tended by a hitherto unknown zookeeper named Agnew. Its diet consists mainly of peace marchers and news commentators.

The Graphic recently managed to get an interview with this elusive creature. It went vaguely like this:

"Mr. Majority, I notice that you have a flashlight strapped to each side of your head. Is there any special reason for this?"

"I'm glad you asked me that. These flashlights are my way of showing support for the war when I'm not in my car."

"Yes, I heard about your campaign to get people to drive with their lights on. Have you had much success with this?"

"Well, not so much in the daytime, but we come on like gangbusters at night."

"That's very interesting! Have you made any other plans for your silent campaign?"

"As a matter of fact we have. You no doubt have heard of the John Lennon and Yoko Ono peace billboards being plastered in cities across the country?"

"Yes, I have."

"Well, we intend to use the same technique. We're going to have billboards picturing John Wayne standing in a smoldering Vietnamese village, holding a can of napalm and saying "Burn, Baby, Burn!"

"That sounds like quite a project."

"Yes, we're counting on this campaign making Spiro T. Agnew a household name."

"Won't this cost a lot of money?"

"Yes, but it's being financed by a great American product that's also a household name."

"What's that?"

season, they collected and repaired articles of clothing to serve as gifts at the Christmas banquet given in honor of the children.

However, Friday Night Missions is not a one-way type of giving. "There is no one who can go and give without receiving many blessings in return," said DeLap.

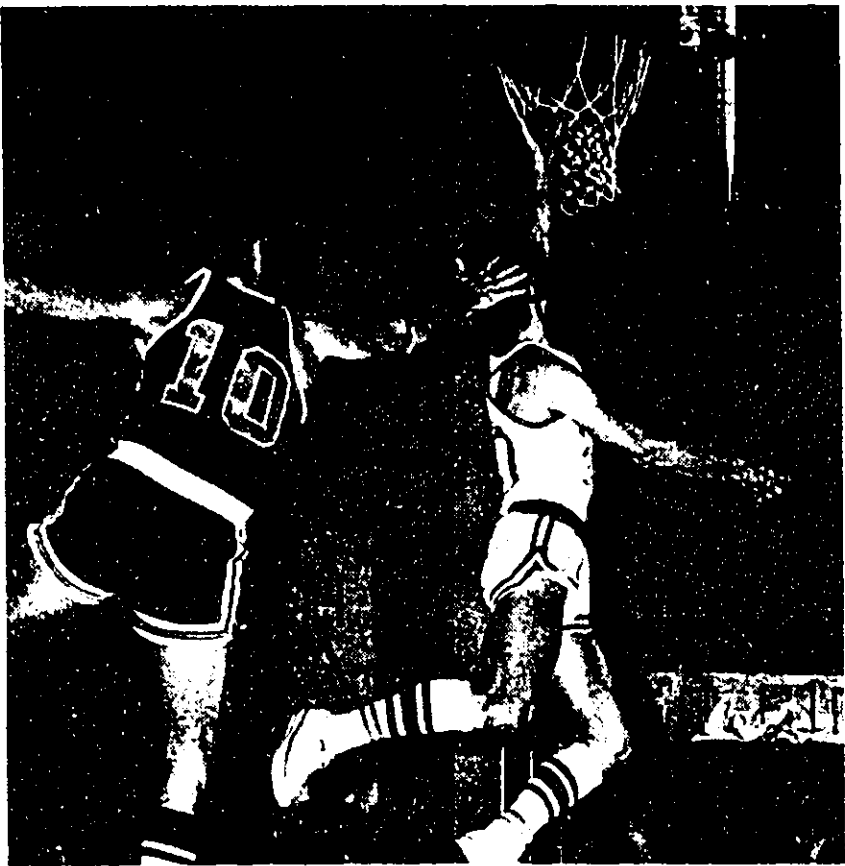

"One thing that amazes me about these children is that they live in harmony without any type of racial discrimination," said Laite. "I think they can be an example for all of us."

DeLap said that any one interested in becoming involved in work like the Friday Night Missions could contact him at the BSU Center on campus.

As a part of the program, BSU members will be taking the children from the mission center on a trip to Austin to visit the capitol on March 14.

JANET TURNER and DIANE POPE cheer the Highlanders on to a victory over the Schreiner Institute which won a berth in the playoffs.

MCC GUARD JIMMY KNOX sweeps past a San Jacinto defender for an easy layup in last week's playoff game with the Ravens. MCC could not pull the game out and went down, 90-83.

San Jac Takes 90-83 Win As MCC Bows In Playoffs

The MCC Highlanders' comeback fell short in the closing minutes last Monday night and the San Jacinto Ravens took a 90-83 victory to advance in the playoffs.

The Ravens managed to hold Simpson Degrate, MCC's leading scorer to only 13 points while winning their 23rd straight game. Leon Huff poured through 28 points in leading the Ravens while teammate Bob Nash collected 26 points. Otis Smith chipped in 22 to help round out an attack that proved too much for the Highlanders to overcome.

Dennis Edwards, MCC's 6-5 sophomore forward came through with a fine effort to lead all scorers in the game with 32 points. Harry Johnson hit 18 and Bruce Crowley added 12.

The Highlanders had trouble from the outset with Nash hitting the first seven shots in a row to give the Ravens a 23-14 lead early in the game.

Edwards and Degrate led a brief rally, but Nash was not to let up, and the Ravens went into the dressing room with a 43-33 halftime lead. Edwards appeared to be the only thing the Highlanders had going as he pitched in 13 points in the first half.

When the teams came back out for the second half, the situation got no better for the Highlanders as the Ravens continued their torrid pace.

With a little over one minute remaining, the San Jacinto second team was put in. The Highlanders managed to rally their losing forces to within seven points, but the Ravens had already secured their first playoff win. The Ravens had a record of 31-4 after the win.

The Highlanders obtained their berth in the playoffs with a fine 85-73 win over Schreiner Institute the Thursday before they played the Ravens.

The game was the exact opposite of the one with San Jacinto as the Highlanders seemed to do all the right things in taking their 19th win of the year.

Degrate had a fine performance as he scored 32 points and collected most of the rebounds in leading the win. Johnson finished the night with 16 points while Edwards had 14.

Schreiner guard John Needy rallied in the second half and ended the game with 24 points, but the Highlanders were already on their way to the playoffs, only to lose out in the first game.

The Highlanders' season is not through, however, as they were appointed to a berth in the Region Five Junior College Tournament last week. The tournament will be held in Amarillo on March 5-6-7.

There will be eight teams competing for a chance to advance to the National Junior College Tournament in Hutchinson, Kansas.

MCC will face Howard County in the first round on March 4. Other teams which will be competing in the tournament are Amarillo, Christian College of the Southwest, Lubbock Christian, Odessa, Cisco and either South Plains or New Mexico Institute.

MDTA Program Graduates 21

By DONNA PICK

Graduation ceremonies were conducted Saturday night, Feb. 28, after a banquet at the Hamilton House for the 21 girls who participated in the Man Power Development Training Act secretarial program this fall at MCC.

Officiating at the ceremony were Cecil L. Reynolds, Chairman of the Department of Business and Office Education, Mrs. Linda Elder, and Mrs. Linda Taylor, both instructors in the MDTA program.

Hattie Webster, secretary to Dean Roybids gave a speech in the form of a challenge to the graduates relating her experiences as a previous MDTA member.

Mrs. Elder stated that this is the first time that all of the girls enrolled in the sixteen-week program have completed the instruction period.

"This class was really unique, I suppose you could say that they were a teacher's delight. All of the girls were ambitious; they worked hard, and they worked together," said Mrs. Elder.

Both Mrs. Elder and Mrs. Taylor agreed that this was the best class that had ever completed the MDTA program at MCC because all of the girls contributed to the success of the class.

Four of the girls have accepted job offers, and the other girls are going out on job interviews arranged by Mrs. Elder and Mrs. Taylor with assistance from the Texas Employment Commission.

Janie Ortega is a business student at MCC and is involved in the work-study program as a secretarial assistant to Dean Reynolds.

Three other MDTA students Janie Casillas, Jo Ann Henkelman, and Josie Casillas have been employed by the Texas State Technical Institute, the City of Waco, and EOAC, respectively.

Mrs. Elder said, "I think that any employer who hires those girls will really be gaining a lot."

Having completed the MDTA secretarial program, many of the girls plan to get a good job and then continue their education in night school.

"I plan to further my studies by attending night school at MCC," stated Mary Frances Smith. "Eventually, I hope to be a business teacher."

Teresa Hurtado added, "Because I enrolled in the MDTA program, I can now get a good job so that I can later take IBM computer courses at night school."

During the 16-week course, the girls learned typing, shorthand, practical office filing, telephone techniques, dictator and office machine operation, and charm.

The MDTA program was designed to secure jobs for the unemployed or the under-employed who had a desire to be a stenographer and had a basic financial aid resulting from family income.

"I think this program offered a great opportunity to anyone who would like to be a stenographer," said Sherry Henson, concerning her experiences with MDTA. "We had the finest instructors anywhere."

Miss Smith added, "I just wish it were longer because I hate to see it all come to an end. It seems like everyone worked together in peace and harmony without any jealous competition."

With the graduation ceremonies completed, the fall MDTA program has come to a close. A new one will begin and offer more job opportunities for another group of girls.

High School Students Tour Campus

Seniors from Axtell and Reliel High Schools toured the campus of McLennan Community College Tuesday, Feb. 24, and Thursday, Feb. 26, respectively.

Mrs. Lucille Gilliam, counselor for the County Department of Education was assigned one day a week to each of four high schools as counselor and guidance director, will accompany the students.

"The purpose of the visit is to give the seniors an opportunity to realize the opportunities offered by a college," said Mrs. Gilliam.

Larry Gilliam, dean of student services, made a brief talk to the students before they toured the campus and ate lunch in the Student Center.

Axtell seniors who came were Don Bolen, Yvonne Bowers, Evelyn Dancer, Celya Doherty, Ronald Dunn, Mike Fanning, Lind Harris, Debra Davis, Jerry Hawthorne, Charlie B. Linkous, Ronald Lynch, John Mach, Donnie Mayfield, Billy Pedigo, Charles Plemons, Diann Swanner, and Thomas Thun.

Reliel seniors included Edward Boeche, Marilyn Denke, Gail Donahue, Nancy Ehlers, Johnnie Ehlers, Martha Federwisch, David Guenat, Clarence Holder, Waldon Iluckaby, Sharon Jenks, Dalores Kattner, Karen Kurmnow, Janis Kuehl, Brenda Lawson, Jerry Lancaster, Tony Lueck, Luellie Martinez, Dwight Pursche, Rose Roddy, Margaret Schroeder, Sammy Stewart, Clifford Viewline, Larry Warneke, Larry Winkelmann, and William Wornatt.

Twenty students from McGregor High School toured McLennan Community College Wednesday, February 18.

Since they are members of a bookkeeping class, the students spent a large portion of their time on campus in the Business Education Department of MCC, concentrating on the Data Processing Center and the MCC's IBM 800/80 Computer.

Mrs. Margaret Cole, instructor of Data Processing, cooperated with Mrs. Gene Manake, McGregor High School business teacher, in arranging the field trip.

Students who visited MCC included Judy Campbell, Rita Epperson, Kathy Jones, Gwen Kallner, Kathy Kirk, Linda McCollum, Lorraine Marshall, Pam Mattee, Larry Mammen, Stephanie Moyer, Jolene Murphy, Shirley Niemeter, Johnny Oliver, Connie Olson, Joan Owen, Jimmy Schoele, Alice Schmidt, Sally Simpson, Kathie Swoveland, and Lois Williams.

COACH JAMES BURROUGHS talks the situation over with the Highlanders during their loss to the San Jacinto Ravens.

Two Enrollees Added To New Careers

Two additional New Career enrollees have been added to the program as two others begin their second year of study at McLennan Community College and on-the-job training.

Mrs. Mary Ballou has become a librarian aide at Moore High School, and Ben Martinez has become media aide for the Waco Independent School District.

Mrs. Ballou will be working under the supervision of Mrs. N.M. Williams, librarian at Moore. Martinez will be working with O.C. Neel preparing instructional aids for use in vocational training.

Mrs. Johnny Emanuel and Thomas Pennick are the two New Careerists who have begun their second year of training. The first year, the Concentrated Employment Program paid their salaries; the second year the employer assumes half of this; when they complete the program New Careerists will be hired full time by the employer.

The Waco Independent School District has worked closely with the New Careers Program, and presently has 28 New Careerists employed in various schools, including Mrs. Emanuel and Pennick, said E.P. Ford, coordinator, teacher aide training, at MCC.

Other educational employers are the Waco-McLennan Public Library; the Robinson, La Vega, Mart, and Connally Independent School Districts; the Joyce Stamp Day Nursery; St. Alban's Episcopal School; and the Educational Service Center.
