15 1/2 River Street

River street was called a way in 1739; road, 1773; private road, 1778; lane, 1782; and River street in 1796." (Essex Antiquarian, vol. 7 page 116)

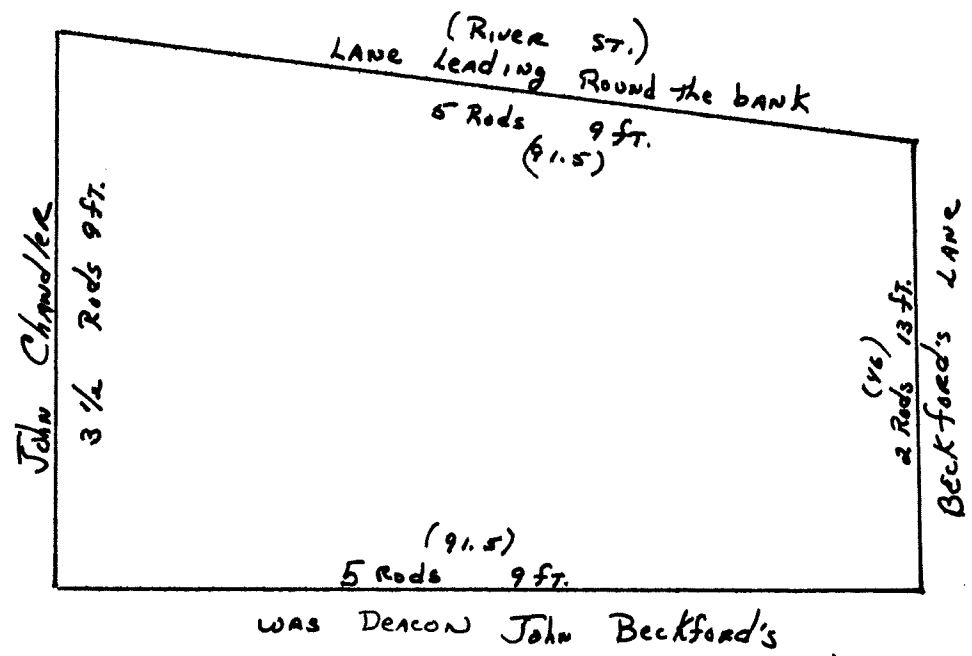

Although the name River Street hardly seems to apply to this high and dry road today, during Salem's early history this was a way bordering on a beautiful, broad river, clean and so deep that vessels were built and launched at the head of it. The area around River street was known as Cape Driver, for the land which jutted out into the river was occupied by the Driver family.

The lot on which this house stands was part of a large tract of land owned by the Beckford family for many years:

John and Rebecca Beckford moved to Reading around 1735, where he was a yeoman. Mr. Beckford sold portions of his estate to his children during the mid 1700's. The lot on which this house stands was in the possession of their grandson, Ebenezer Beckford, by 1778.

1788 July 17 - Ebenezer Beckford of Salem, merchant, sold for 200 pounds a dwelling house, barn, woodhouse, necessary house and two lots of land to Benjamin Punchard a shoreman:

The second lot was directly across the street and was bordered by the river. The old house, mentioned above, formerly stood at 1 River (sometimes called 29 Beckford St.) and was removed after 1897.

1804 Dec. 24 - Benjamin Puncahrd an inspector, sold for the sum of $1,600 "my dwelling house and out buildings and land under and adjoining The estate which I now hold by deed from Ebenezer Beckford." (book 175 page 152)

1810 Sept. 5 - Capt. William Punchard died at Martha's Vineyard. Probate #22943 - "I give and bequeath to Sarah my beloved wife, the use and income of all my estate, real and personal, so long as she shall remain my widow." "On the decease of my widow, the whole of my estate, both real and personal to be equally divided among my children."

1840 May-Sept. - The heirs of William Punchard sold the message bound:
 South by Henry Whipple
 West by Chandler
 North by River St.
 East by Beckford St.

to Eliza E. Cutts wife of Benjamin Cutts a blacksmith. "Being the same estate conveyed to the late William Punchard from Benjamin Punchard by his deed recorded in the Essex Registry book 175 leaf 152." (book 318 page 254)

Eliza E. Cutts was the daughter of John and Mary (Erwin) Frye. She married, in Nov. of 1825, Benjamin Cutts who was born in Maine. Mr. Cutts was an accomplished blacksmith having a shop at 8 Sewall St., Salem. (appendix A is a sample of work done by Benjamin Cutts for the Salem Street Dept.) The Cutts family owned other property on River St. (#2 & #4) and resided at 32 Beckford St.

1845 - Benjamin Cutts was granted permission to build a dwelling house on River St. (Street Books at the Essex Institute). The house was built on the west portion of the land purchased by his wife, Eliza E., then #5 River St. (the number has frequently changed from 5 to 3 over the years).

This is a large and typical Greek Revival, two story, plus pitch roof wooden, gable end to-the-street house. It has broad entablature under the eaves and a main entrance in the side yard. (Salem Historic Commission District Study)

Gazette - "Mr. Benjamin Cutts, who had continued his habitual industry in the blacksmithing business to the end of his life, was a descendant of the old Portsmouth family of that name, which anciently took a leading position in N.H.

Funeral (this Tues.) afternoon at 3 o'clock at #32 Beckford street. Relatives and friends are invited to attend without further notice."

Register - "Mr. Benjamin Cutts, a well known citizen, died suddenly on Saturday, from ossification of the heart."

Gazette - Nov. 26, "In the death of Benjamin Cutts, we are called to mourn for a man of rare excellence, one who by his life and conduct made this world a better place to live in. He was one of the oldest, ablest, most honored and respected mechanics, unselfish, honest in thought, word and deed. He was a faithful and loving parent, a devoted father and a sympathizing friend. He has ever been the counsellor and guide to the dear ones who now mourn his departure from earth. His sufferings were short, but borne with great patience and resignation, and it is to be regretted that one shadow should have been cast to have shortened his declining years.

He will be missed from the home that has been blessed many years by his patient ministries of love. His memory can never be otherwise than a benediction to all who knew him.

Blessed are they that mourn for they shall be comforted. Blessed are the pure in heart for they shall see God." (appendix D contents of blacksmith shop - Probate #36809)

The earthly course of this Christian scholar, which closed at Salem on the 9th inst., affords a fresh illustration of the transfiguring power of the Christian view of life. To appearance, his life's work was shattered and frustrated; in reality, it was rich in beneficent results.

As a young scholar, he was called in 1842 from his studies in Andover Theological Seminary to Amherst College, where he had been graduated two years before. After serving as tutor there two years, he opened a school for young ladies in Lowell, from from which he was recalled to Amherst, in 1850, as professor of Latin and modern languages. Five years later, he entered the Christian ministry, and became pastor of the First Church in Nashua, N. H. In less than a year, however, his pastoral career was ended by the collision of the carriage containing himself, his wife and only son, with a railroad train, by which he and his wife were maimed, and the son lost his life.

With this tragic event which crippled him and left hardly a waking hour of his last thirty years free from pain, the peculiar attractiveness and usefulness of his career may be said to have begun. Taking up his residence in Salem, he and his wife maintained a home which has been to many a visitor like "the land of Beulah, where the sun shineth night and day." His interest in the great world, especially in its literary and religious movements, never flagged. By generous counsel and guidance to young people, by intimacies with candidates for the ministry (especially during a two years' residence in Andover), by hospitable welcome to preach or lecture, by stated gatherings in his study for the perusal of some choice relic of Greek literature, by such occasional pulpit service as his strength permitted, by casual contributions to newspaper or periodical, and also by literary undertakings of larger scope, he sought to rise above the depressing bodily ills which beset him.

For two or three years his time was given to verifying with extremest care the classical and Biblical references in a forthcoming New Testament lexicon—which, with a mysterious congruity, he was destined never to take in his hand. Among his other literary labors was a sharp critique (which led to a pamphlet controversy) on the Revised New Testament, issued by the American Bible Union; the editing of the 4th and 5th (posthumous) volumes of the History of Congregationalism by his uncle, George Purnchard; and the translation of the notes for Wendell's one volume edition of Farrar's life of Christ.

Dr. Jewett was naturally exact and exacting—clear and decided in his views, and unflinching in loyalty to what he deemed the truth. These traits, while they made him a devoted and chivalrous friend, sometimes gave him, in the eyes of those who differed from him, an aspect of austerity. But so sweet in his experience were the uses of adversity, so responsive was he to the divine discipline, that the rugged elements in his character came at length to be clothed with softness and beauty. BIOGRAPHICAL.

The earthly course of this Christian scholar, which closed at Salem, on the 8th inst., affords a fresh illustration of the transfiguring power of the Christian view of life. To appearance, his life's work was shattered and frustrated; in reality, it was rich in beneficent results.

As a young scholar, he was called in 1849 from his studies in Andover Theological Seminary to Amherst College, where he had been graduated two years before. After serving as tutor there two years, he opened a school for young ladies in Lowell, from which he was recalled to Amherst, in 1850, as professor of Latin and modern languages. Five years later, he entered the Christian ministry, and became pastor of the First Church in Nashua, N. H. In less than a year, however, his pastoral career was ended by the collision of the carriage containing himself, his wife and only son, with a railroad train, by which he and his wife were maimed, and the son lost his life.

With this tragic event, which crippled him and left hardly a waking hour of his last thirty years free from pain, the peculiar attractiveness and usefulness of his career may be said to have begun. Taking up his residence in Salem, he and his wife maintained a home which has been to many a visitor like "the land of Beulah, where the sun shineth night and day." His interest in the great world, especially in its literary and religious movements, never flagged. By generous counsel and guidance to young people, by intimacies with candidates for the ministry (especially during a two years' residence in Andover), by acceptable welcome to preacher or lecturer, by stated gatherings in his study for the perusal of some choice vols of Greek literature, by such occasional pulpit service as his strength permitted, by casual contributions to newspaper or periodical, and also by literary undertakings of larger scope, he sought to rise above the depressing and absorbing bodily ills which beset him.

Their number and violence, and the patient heroism of his life-long struggle against them, only those can appreciate who saw him familiarly day after day. When his jangled nerves rendered even reading impossible, he calmed himself with needle and worsted work; when the skill of the maker of artificial limbs proved unequal to his needs, he invented the "Salem leg," on which he walked, even without a cane, so naturally that many a stranger has hardly suspected his disability; when sleep forsook his wearisome nights, he would beguile the solitary hours with his pen. For two or three years his time was given to verifying with extremest care the classical and Biblical references in a forthcoming New Testament lexicon—which, with a mysterious congruity, he was destined never to take in his hand. Among his other literary labors were a sharp critique (which led to a pamphlet controversy) on the Revised New Testament, issued by the American Bible Union; the editing of the fourth and fifth (posthumous) volumes of the History of Congregationalism by his uncle, George Punsbard; and the translation of the notes for Wendell's one volume edition of Farrar's Life of Christ.

Dr. Jewett was naturally exact and exacting—clear and decided in his views, and unflinching in loyalty to what he deemed the truth. These traits, while they made him a devoted and ardent friend, sometimes gave him, in the eyes of those who differed from him, an aspect of austerity. But so sweet in his experience were the uses of adversity, so responsive was he to the divine discipline, that the rugged elements in his character came at length to be clothed with softness and beauty.

In strange harmony with the distressing experiences of his life were the circumstances of his close. A runaway horse, after having passed for half a mile along a thronged street without injuring any one, singled him out, as it were, from the group in which he was standing, and gave him the shock resulting in his death. A superstitious mind might fancy that the frown of heaven reared on him, but an hour's converse with his unrepining and trustful spirit, a sojourn for a season amid the serene and gracious courtesy which encompassed him like an atmosphere, sent a Christian's way repeating to himself, "Whom the Lord loveth . . . chosen in the furnace of affliction."
