NOTES:

22 ANDREW STREET

PERIOD: FEDERAL

"A pair of elongated columns support the roof of the portico of this two-story, brick house (Flemish bond) with a brick cornice and typical Federal front entrance with fanlight. According to B. F. Browne's recollections, it was built by Loammi Coburn." (Salem Historic District Study Committee Investigation)

The first mention of a dwelling house on this lot appears in a mortgage, taken by Loammi Coburn from James Browne, on February 6, 1808 (book 183 page 144).

Salem tax records:

Coburn Loammi

1807 - not listed

1808 - living in ward 4, taxed for a house valued at $800

1809 - same

1810 - still listed under the ward 4 tax rolls, but is taxed for a house in ward 2 valued at $800. (He sold the house during this year.)

Loammi Coburn, the son of Ezra and Phebe (Winn) Coburn, was born in Dracut, Mass. on November 14 1777. He married Mary Marshall, in Dracut, on February 5, 1805. She was born in Westford, Mass. on April 1, 1785 and died in Salem on March 17, 1836. Their children were:

George b. 1805

Loammi S. b. 1807; d. 1807

Loammi S. b. 1808; d. 1884

Simon M. b. 1811 in Dracut

Mary Ann b. 1813; d. 1813

Augustus b. 1815 in Salem

Mary J. b. 1825

Esther L. b. 1831

He married second, Joanna Butterfield on August 11, 1852. Loammi Coburn was also employed in the construction of 3 Broad Street (The Oliver School), 17 Chestnut Street, Saint Peter's Church and undoubtedly many other brick structures in Salem. Mr. Coburn died in Haverhill, from liver disease, on Dec. 3, 1850. His remains were brought to Salem and buried in the Howard Street Cemetery.

As shown in the chain of title, the house was sold to Elijah Fuller in 1810. Some insight as to the Fuller family can be found in the 1850 Federal Census:

Elijah Fuller	age 73,	tin plate worker,	born Mass.
Harriet	"	" 52,	born Mass.
Mary Ann	"	" 37,	born Mass.
Lucy	"	" 35,	born Mass.
Henrietta	"	" 33,	born Mass.
Edward A.	"	" 25,	tin plate worker,	born Mass.
Sarah	"	" 19,	born Mass.
Charles H.	"	" 17,	cabinetmaker,	born Mass.

This house was called #20 Andrew Street until the mid 1860's when it was given its present number.

Elijah Fuller, tinsplate worker, made a will on March 16, 1852 (probate 39838). The lower half of the dwelling house and land on Andrew street was bequeathed to his wife Harriet, for and during her natural life. After her decease the same was to go to "her two children Sarah and Charles" for their natural lives. The upper half of the dwelling house was bequeathed to Elijah's three eldest daughters Mary Ann, Lucy and Henrietta, for and during their natural lives. His shop and contents were bequeathed to his son William P. Fuller. Edward was left shares in the California Railroad. (Inventory enclosed) bought after his death, which happened in March, 1803, when he was aged 45, by Wm. Stickney, who removed it in parts to Bridge street. Mr. Briggs had a private cemetery, bordering on the court, in which several of his family were interred, and he had likewise a nursery for young poplar trees. There were several of these nurseries in the town, the poplar having been about that time introduced, and being a very graceful tree of rapid growth, was a great favorite, but its decay proved as rapid as its growth; it soon lost its beauty, and most of them were cut down and the nurseries abandoned. North of Mr. Briggs's house, stood the bakehouse of Benjamin Brown. I remember the bakehouse but not the man. He could not have been long gone, for he advertised ship bread and crackers for sale at his bakehouse near the Common, in 1791. I do not know anything more of him. Mr. Briggs left an only child, Anna, who married Jabez Baldwin, who erected the present Baldwin house. Baldwin was not a native of Salem, but came here a young man, and established himself as a jeweller, and kept his shop on part of the land where now is West place. He was an enterprising man, and kept a much larger stock of goods than any other person in the same line in town, and manufactured a large quantity of silver spoons and other articles of silver. He had a number of apprentices who boarded in his family, and as they passed two or three times a day over the Common, the path leading from the first opening in Newbury street, by the town pump, opposite the Franklin Building, to his house, was the best trodden on the Common. Two of his early apprentices are still living, viz.: George Baker, at Providence, R. I., and Stepheus Baker, at Beverly, and also one who came a few years later, James Gould, at Baltimore. Mr. Baldwin built the brick house a little north of Mr. Briggs's house, subsequent to 1806, in which he afterwards lived, and in which he died, and which his widow and daughter now occupy. While carrying on business in Salem, Baldwin established in Boston, the house of Baldwin & Jones, of which Shreve, Stanwood & Co., are the successors. Baldwin's store in Salem, was entered by thieves the night of October 25, 1805, and jewelry worth $3000 and over, stolen. This was a very large robbery for Salem, and, as I remember, caused much excitement. The robbers were never discovered, but some months after, about seventy of his watches, and a considerable part of his jewelry were found secreted in the garret of the small pox hospital in great pasture; and on the 19th of April, following, four boys discovered in a hollow tree in North Salem, into which they had chased a squirrel, the remainder of the watches. Mr. Baldwin died Nov. 8th, 1819.

I come now to Andrew street, of which I gave an account not long since in your paper and will now recapitulate. The land through which the street is laid out, was early the property of Capt. Joseph Gardner, son of Thos. G. the first settler. Capt. G. who is spoken of by the early chroniclers as the brave Capt. Gardner, commanded one of the Salem companies in the Narragansett fight, 1675. See Felt's Annals, 1st edition, page 251. In this fight he was slain. His wife was Anna, daughter of Emanuel Downing and brother to the famous Sir George D. She afterwards became the second wife of Governor Bradstreet, and as his widow sold it to Joseph Andrew, in February, 1710-11. In the deed it is described as a piece of land and low mowing land containing 3 3-4 acres, bounded south with land of Christopher Babbidge, east with a lane or highway though now within the fence running from Hodges' cove to another cove nigh Col. Higginson's pasture, north by land of Deliverance Parkman, and west by the Common or training field, being land which Capt. Joseph Gardner purchased of Wm. Browne, Esq. and Mr. Russell, and by his last will conveyed to me. John Gardner as administrator of Jonathan Andrew advertised this land for sale in 1788, as containing 4 1-2 acres, and the survey made by Gen. Gideon Foster in 1802, confirmed this last measurement. Joseph Andrew left this by will to his son Nathaniel A., and he bequeathed it to his son Jonathan A., who here carried on the tanning business, till his death, in 1781. The property was afterwards purchased by William Browne and sons, who carried on tanning here, until 1802, when Andrew street was opened, and the land divided into lots for sale. The tannery was where the house of Charles H. Miller, Esq. now stands, extending a little east over part of what is now the street. Houses were soon begun to be erected in the street. The first one I remember, was built by John Clark, a carpenter; Perley Putnam built the one lately owned by his family; Capt. Samuel Masury, that which until lately was owned by his children. This was a plastered house at first, and the first one I remember to have seen. There were afterward many built in this way, but the plastering did not stand well, and it was taken off and the house clapboarded. The late William Ropes built the house his widow now occupies, quite early. Lemuel Payson, who was a hatter, and had his factory in the rear of the building next west of the Bowker Building, built the three-story house on the south side. Samuel Henderson, shipwright, owned the house in which his family a long time dwelt. Loammi Coburn built the brick house, which was afterwards Elijah Fuller's. Mr. Goss, grandfather of Francis P. G., owned the next one east; a widow Patterson, one east of that, which is not there. The last one on that side was removed from Central street to make room for the Central Building, erected by W. S. Gray and Benj. H. Hathorne, in 1805. This was a house belonging to and occupied by Joseph Young, hatter, and organist of St. Peter's church, who died April 21, 1803, aged 46. On the north side, were two or three small houses that are not there now. The house on the western corner of Andrew street, where it intersects with Milk, was Horton's seed house, which was removed there and made into a dwelling house. Dr. Benjamin Kittredge owned and occupied it till his death. John Pellett, from Connecticut, had a school in one of the rooms in 1807. Next west stood a one-story house, owned and occupied by George Underwood, whose wife was a Wood, of North Salem. She kept a small shop in the house, which was liberally patronized by Master Pellett's scholars and the neighbors. The house lately Caleb Webster's, now owned by F. C. Butman, was a storehouse in Curtis street, removed to Andrew street in 1802 or 3, and fitted into a dwelling house, by two men, masons, who came from the neighborhood of Albany, and did not remain here long. They were Samuel and Timothy Tibbetts.

Capt. Benjamin Babbidge bought this house of the Tibbetts, and occupied it some years. He sailed from Salem, in command of a vessel, in 1811, and was never more heard from. His son, John B., married Sarah, daughter of Francis Pulsifer, a cabinet maker in Williams street, and died at City Point, Virginia, where he was in command of a vessel, August 2nd, 1826. This house had at first a flat roof, covered with tar, paper and gravel, but it did not keep out the water.

I have known the tide to come up frequently to Milk street and beyond. The land has been filled up since. There was a spring of water a little east of the street, abounding in fine water, and it was often overflowed by the tide water, and after that had subsided, the spring water was fresh and palatable. To the east of that I have picked blackberries, and at the bottom near the tide was a row of stunted juniper trees. The south side of Andrew street extended much farther to the east than it now does. The old stone wall which marked its eastern boundary was (I think) as far east as the branch of the Eastern railroad now is, or beyond. It then formed a cove, called in Mrs. Bradstreet's deed, "another cove," but which I always heard called Shallop cove, and was told it was so called because the people in the earlier times laid their shallops up there to winter. The house on Pleasant street, now James Trefren's, was begun in 1799 and finished in 1800. It was erected by Wm. Brown and his son Benjamin, who occupied the western tenement. Joseph Vincent, jr., who had married Wm. Brown's daughter Hannah, in 1798, occupied the eastern one till his death. Pleasant street, from this point to Bridge street, had then recently been laid out, and there was but one small house north of this, occupied by a Reeves family, till we entered Bridge street; on the north side was an open field belonging to Col. Benjamin Pickman. Through this Pickman street was subsequently laid out, and afterwards Spring street. Pickman street was not at first open to Winter street, but soon was, and David Robbins built the brick house recently owned and occupied by the family of Mr. Israel Ward. Mr. Robbins was a mason, and at one time commanded the Mechanic Light
