

From the Barlow Family Bible:

"Died at Andersonville, Ga. in the Rebel Prison Pen, Oct. 9, 1864, Orrin Leland Barlow, son of Rowland & Mrs. Cleo Godard Barlow; a loyal & patriotic volunteer in the service of his Country in the Slaveholders Rebellion; a victim of starvation & exposure, as were many thousands of others who died in the same place, from the same causes, Martyrs to the infernal rage, malice, spite & hatred of Southern Rebels, Traitors perjured before God & Men, who are worthy of all the Hells of the Bible & all such as were shown by the Spirit to Dante, Swedenborg & all the other Prophets & Seers. God is just & will give the Devil & all his Slavery-curst [illegible] minions & emissaries their due in his own good time.

Orrin L. Barlow was born at Granville, May 22, 1835, consequently was 29 years 5 mos & 13 days old when he died. He enlisted at Granby, Ct. Aug. 5, 1862 in Co. E, Capt. Babcock, of the 16th Regiment Conn. Volunteers, Col. Beach. His Regiment was captured at Plymouth N.C. April 20, 1864."

Corp. Orrin L. Barlow (also appears in records as Leland O. Barlow) is buried in Andersonville National Cemetery. There is also a memorial stone at the Silver Street Cemetery in Granville, Massachusetts.
