1968

John Henry Newman wrote in the Idea of a University, his classic work of educational philosophy, that the word education "implies an action upon our mental nature, and the formation of a character; it is something individual and permanent, and is commonly spoken of in connection with religion and virtue." Centre College of Kentucky seeks to make a reality of Newman's concept of a liberal higher education. Students at Centre are offered the opportunity of studying and living in a community of scholars for whom the cultural and intellectual heritage of our civilization is alive and important for the life of the present. It is the purpose of the College to stimulate the active power of the intellect to its most creative and productive level.

Of great importance to the college atmosphere at present and in years to come is the significantly new and carefully conceived curriculum adopted by the College in 1966. Our society is increasingly dependent upon men who have mastered highly specialized areas of the vast and growing body of knowledge which our civilization produces. The essence of creative human activity, however, lies in the breadth of a man's intellectual horizon and in his ability to evaluate his experience and environment in discriminating general terms. The preservation, development, and expansion of a morally ordered society demand persons in all fields who understand and respect the literature and the arts, the languages, the sciences, the history and philosophies which constitute our human inheritance. Realizing these facts, Centre's faculty has designed a curriculum which will allow the student to acquire a broad intellectual perspective in his freshman and sophomore years which he will continue to develop as he goes on in his junior and senior years to concentrate on an area of special interest.

At the foundation of Centre's academic program lies the conviction that ethical values must infuse learning. The College seeks to provide an environment where students consider the values embraced by the Christian faith, along with comparative values in other systems of belief. Affiliated with the Presbyterian Church, Centre maintains a non-sectarian, ecumenical attitude.

GRACE DOHERTY LIBRARY

After his years of life in the Centre community, the student ideally will have gained a mature understanding of the physical universe and the cultural traditions and relationships which are the foundations of his life. He will have examined the validity of the system of beliefs under which he was brought up, and after having evaluated and compared other value systems, he will have formulated values which are uniquely his own. He will have learned to make incisive analytical and critical judgments, and he will be ready to use these powers of independent reason as a creative member of society.

Centre stands in a long tradition of dedication to the highest ideals of liberal learning. Founded in 1819 under the leadership of Presbyterians who had been involved in establishing higher education in central Kentucky since 1785, the College opened its doors in the fall of 1820. Prominent early Kentuckians were instrumental in setting the college in motion. Isaac Shelby, who had served as the state's first governor, was the first chairman of the Board of Trustees. In spite of difficulties and crises including five wars, the college has never failed to carry on its academic program.

Although Centre was founded by Presbyterians, its instruction has never been narrowly denominational. When in 1824 the Presbyterian Synod assumed the full financial responsibility for the college, it was with the stipulation that "The college shall at all times be conducted upon liberal, free, and enlightened principles, and no student shall be excluded in consequence of his religious opinions, or those of his parents, guardians, or relatives."

Instruction at Centre began with a faculty of approximately five teaching ten or fifteen students in a curriculum characteristic of the classical nineteenth-century theories of education in the humanities. Courses were concentrated in the areas of ancient languages (Latin and Greek), history, philosophy, literature, and mathematics. During the presidency of Dr. John C. Young, from 1830-1857, however, the College moved with the educational trends of the times towards more specialized courses including the scientific fields which were at that time developing into valid and important individual disciplines, chemistry, physics, and biology.

The faculty was enlarged, and the student body increased five-fold. Centre took her place among the respected liberal arts colleges in the United States.

Since Dr. Young's time, the physical aspect of the College has been developed and improved significantly. In 1901 the Central University at Richmond was consolidated with Centre; in 1926 Kentucky College for Women was merged with Centre; in 1961 the College became fully co-educational when the separate women's campus was replaced by a new residential complex on a site adjacent to the main campus. During the same year a fraternity quadrangle was constructed. In 1966 a new concept in college facilities was realized in the Grace Doherty Library. The Boles Natatorium was completed in 1967. The next few years will see the completion of a new science building, additional residences, and a fine arts complex.

The inner workings of the College have changed and developed in correspondence with the physical aspect of the campus. Curricular offerings have been enriched over the years, while demands made on the quality of the students' work have grown higher. After a self-study undertaken in 1962-1963, the faculty and administration realized the need for a giant step in the continual process of the development of the academic program. The new curriculum was the product of their thinking, study, and careful planning.

The quality of education at Centre College is reflected in the achievement of her alumni. The College ranks first among all coeducational institutions in the South and sixth among the nation's private, co-educational, liberal arts colleges in the percentage of alumni included in Who's Who in America.

Since 1904 the College has been a member of the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools. It holds membership also in the Association of American Colleges and the Southern University Conference. Though the College is now governed by a self-perpetuating board of trustees, it continues its affiliation with the United Presbyterian Church in the United States of America and the Presbyterian Church in the United States.

STUDENT LIFE

*For some, college is a means to an end.
For some, it is the fulfilling of an obligation to the social structure which produced them.
For some, it is an idyll.
For some, it is an ideal.*

Ultimately the true nature of a college will be a composite of all the ideas its members hold about themselves, and about it.

A college yearbook is a collection of caught moments of how we live. It is a collage of the diverse activities of a group of more or less individualistically inclined people whom we lump together and refer to as the college community.

MISS BETTY JEAN COPENHAVER
Homecoming Queen

A yearbook is an attempt to imprison on glossy pages, the essence of academia, an essence frequently unacademic. It is a collection of pictures and words that are in themselves meaningless but which combine to give testimony to the reality and meaning of a way of life.

It is impossible to describe and impossible to picture what it is to participate in and give meaning to the life of a college.

The nature of a college is not to be found in the records of an event. It can only be perceived and recalled by the individual from and through his store of personal experience.

MISS DARLYS ROWLAND
Gardenia Queen

The nature of a college is written on the faces of its members. Its expression, like theirs, will vary from frenzy to lethargy; from the radiance of dynamic involvement to complete apathy.

On the faces of a college will be written all the concerns of the world. Love, hope, ambition, fear, panic, compassion, delight . . . all are a part of our everyday experience, and can be seen and recognized in the short space of a walk across campus.

Perhaps in looking at the Olde Centre, 1968, you will recall these emotions. Yet we know a picture will stimulate recollection only as much as the repetition of one word . . .
