

a face in the crowd . . . a product of academic and overall uncertainty... grateful for the unbiased situation, yet anxious to preserve my high school inscrutability.

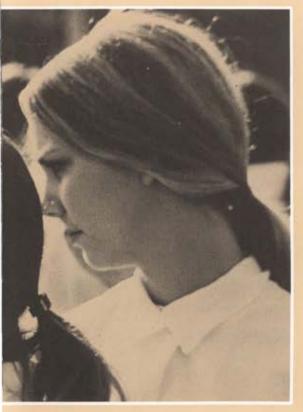

willing to trust the even smaller Centre College community over an already small-enough Danville ready to admit certain standard objectives which provide a secure framework for the emergence of particular goals.

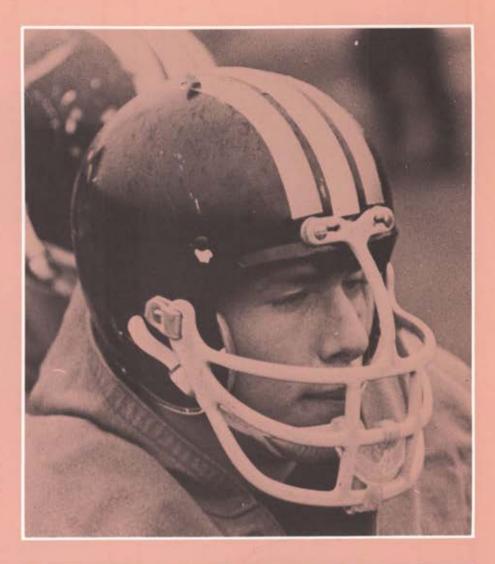

But I am
more than a potential scholar
I am equally the product of those diversions I enjoy, those friendships I cultivate ... and yet there is no substitute for the Self.

And I become ... aware of my essential isolation
I begin to feel the pressure for singular achievement, the need to become a unique face in the crowd:
it scares me ... I am not ready
... even paper deadlines try my capacity.

a crucial period the moratorium on my future cannot continue unrelieved by personal compensation. I escape through the moment to those people and activities that give me private satisfaction, a sense of belonging do not look for me on weekends.

Somehow I survive it all... the tension ... the stress
the boredom ... I have become inured to those things which once would annoy me ... tolerant of that which once would repel me
... I have come far in accepting myself.

a method for our madness . . .

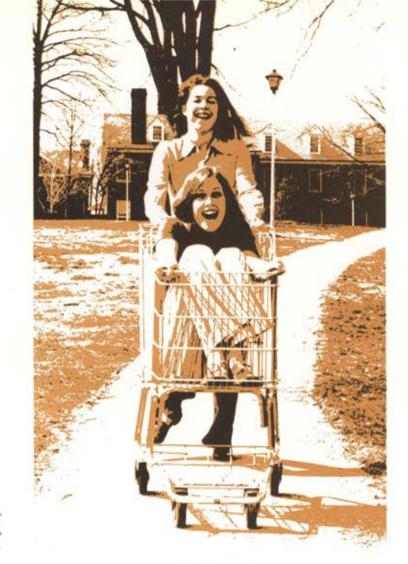

... a madness in our method

Realizing our academic pickle, we hasten to release ourselves turn to simple, silly pleasures, forging them with solemnity

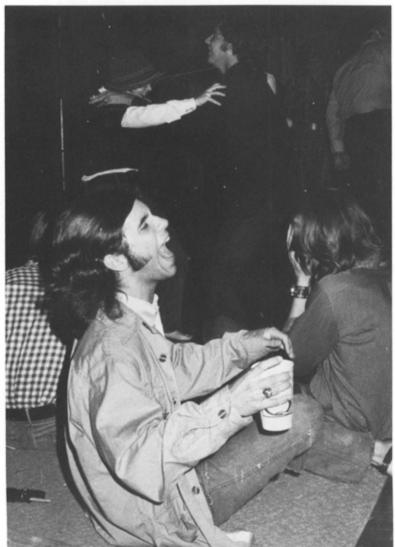

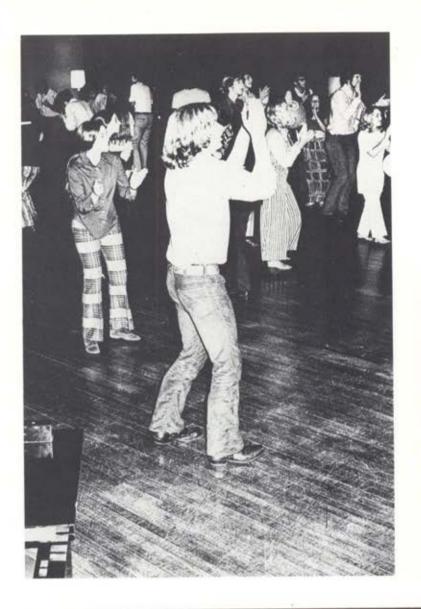

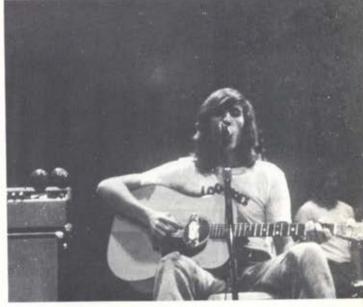

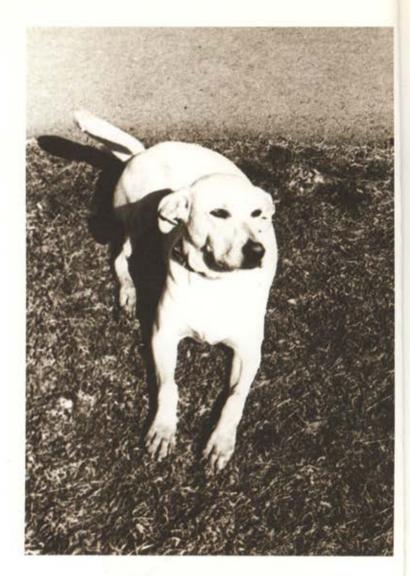

... or turn professional ... win cash prizes and a weekend away from Centre ...

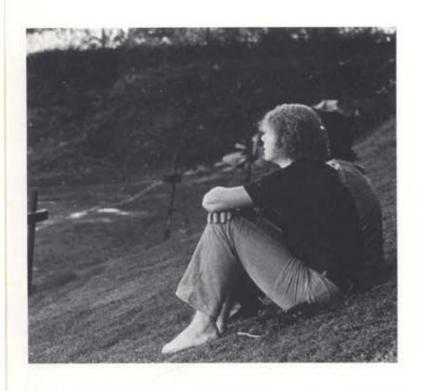

... they also serve who only sit and watch...

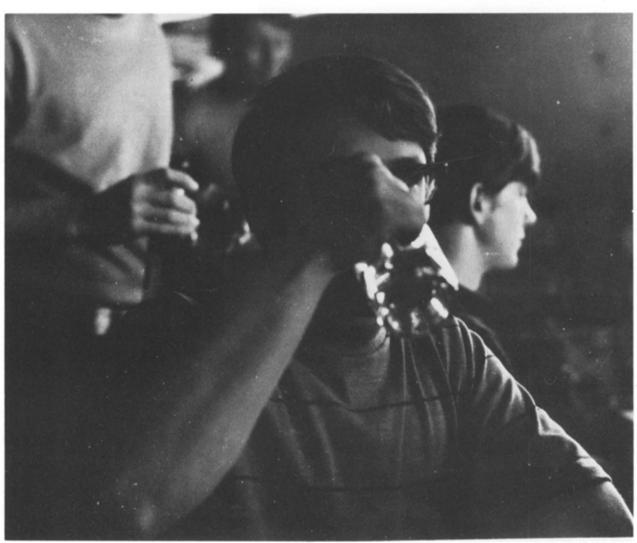

in the throes of oblivion . . .

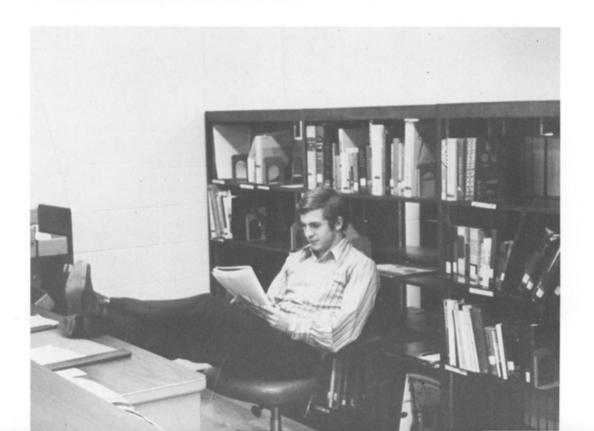

... or necessity

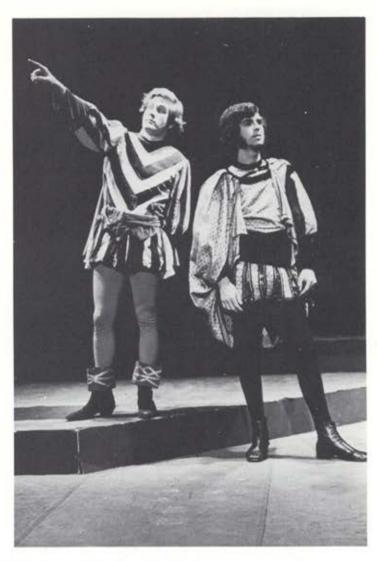

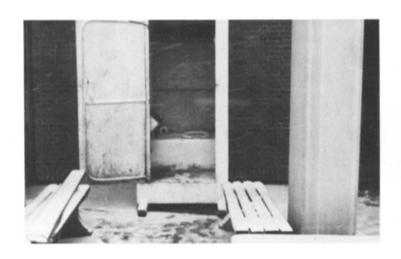

talent runs high . . .

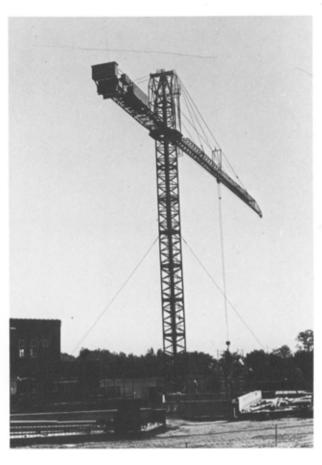

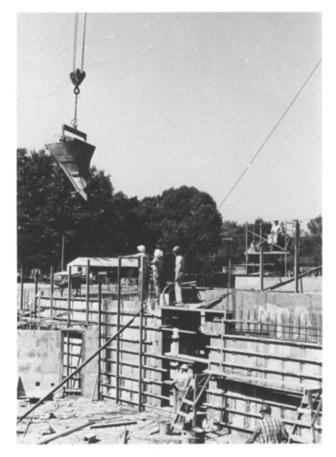

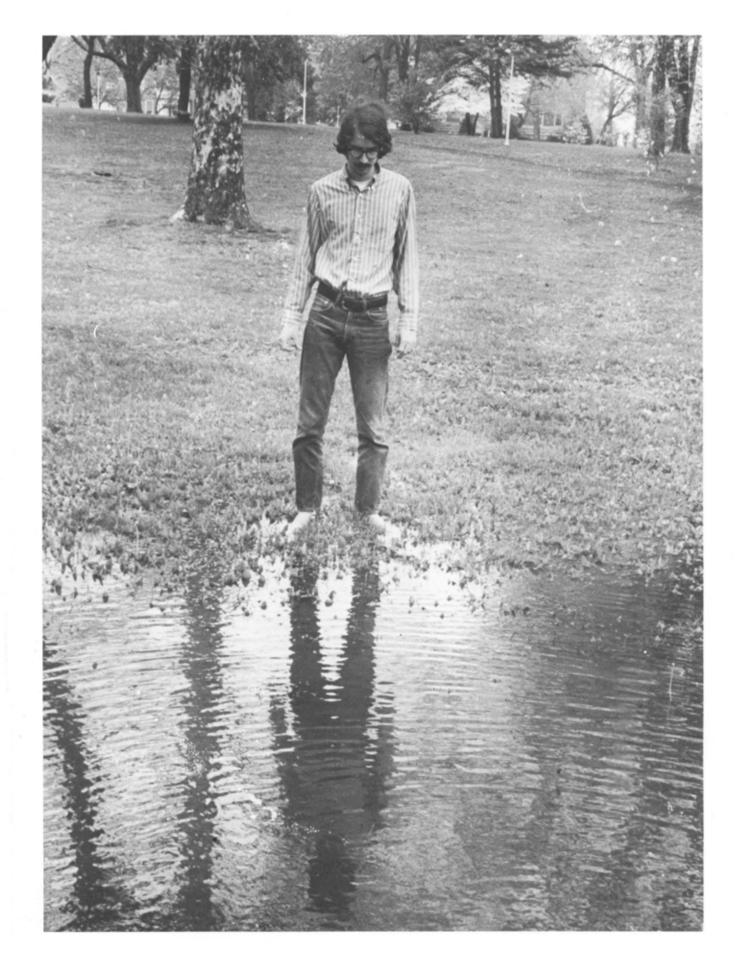

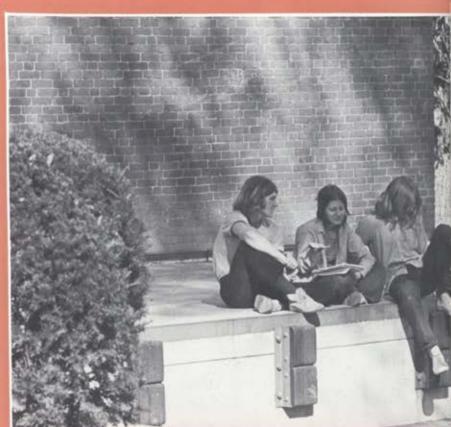

compassion is not found — it happens . . . unfurling as slowly as a flower

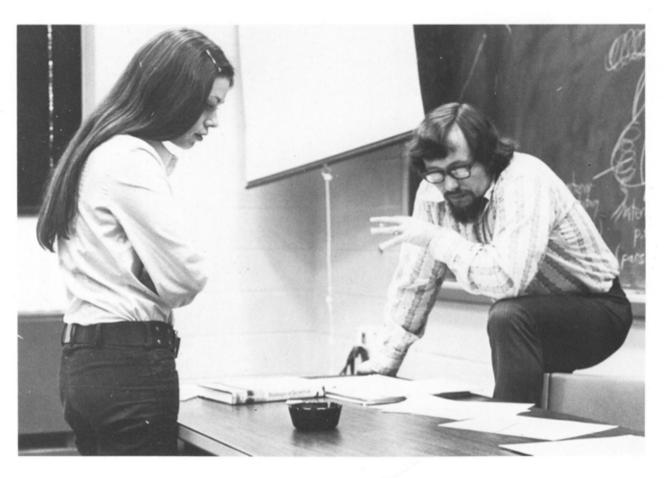

to become something quiet and untouchable

. . or aspiringly unique

Wednesday morning...have to get up...hope my kid doesn't show...

...we share each other...

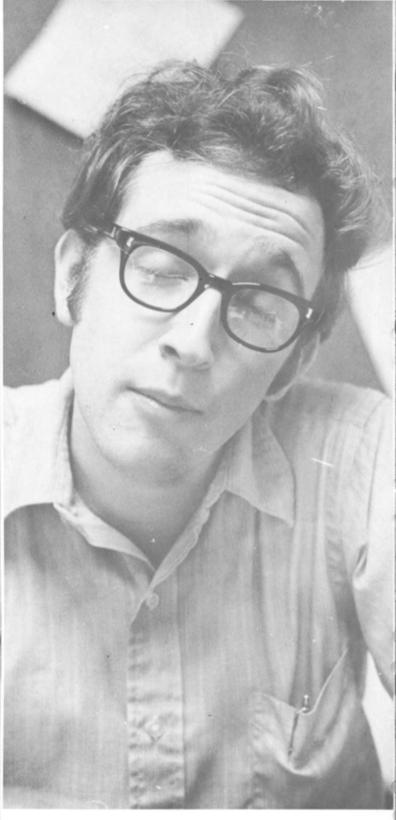

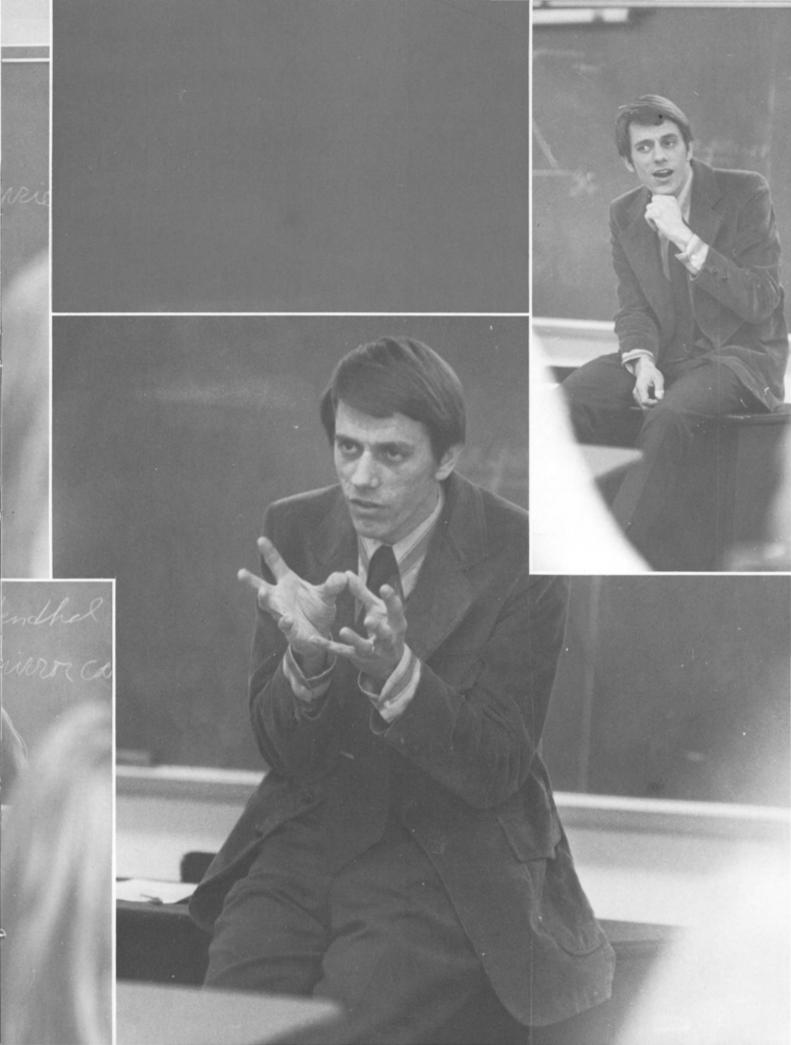

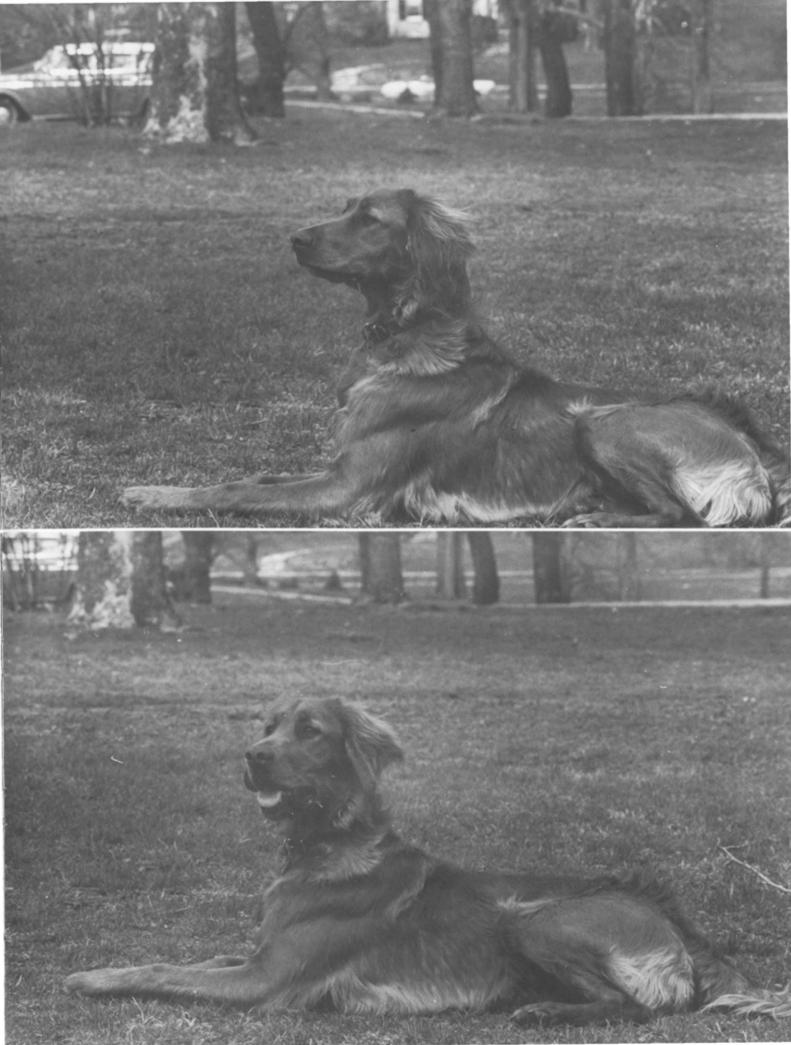

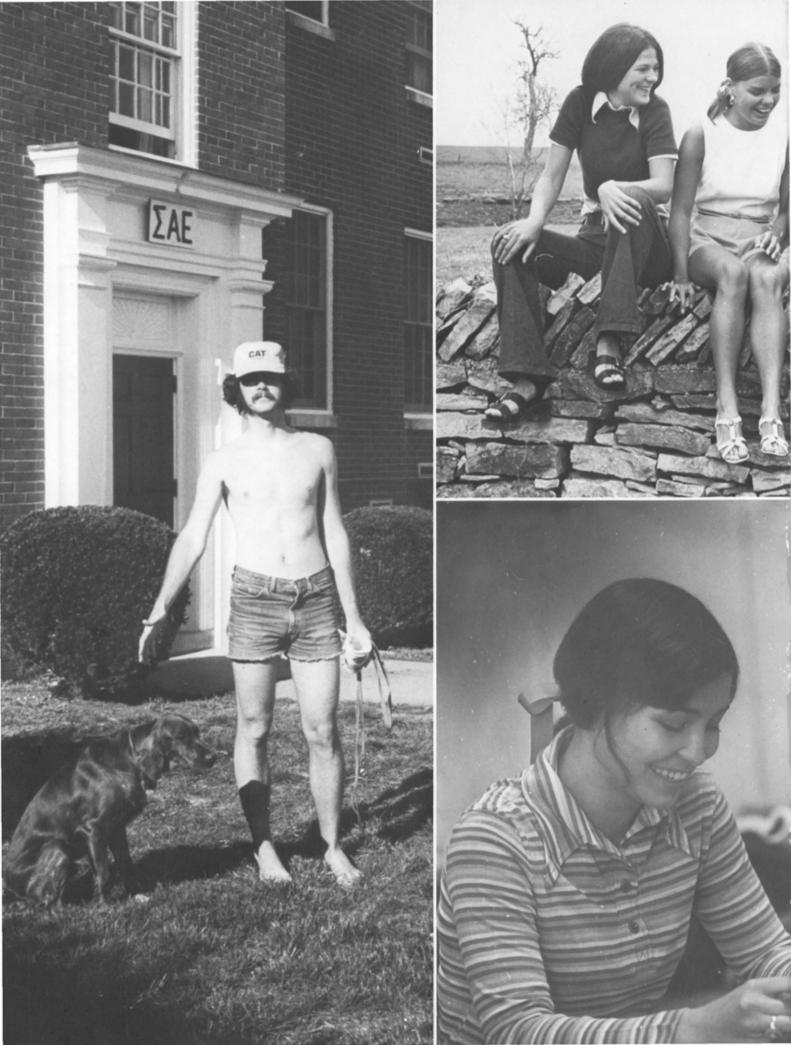

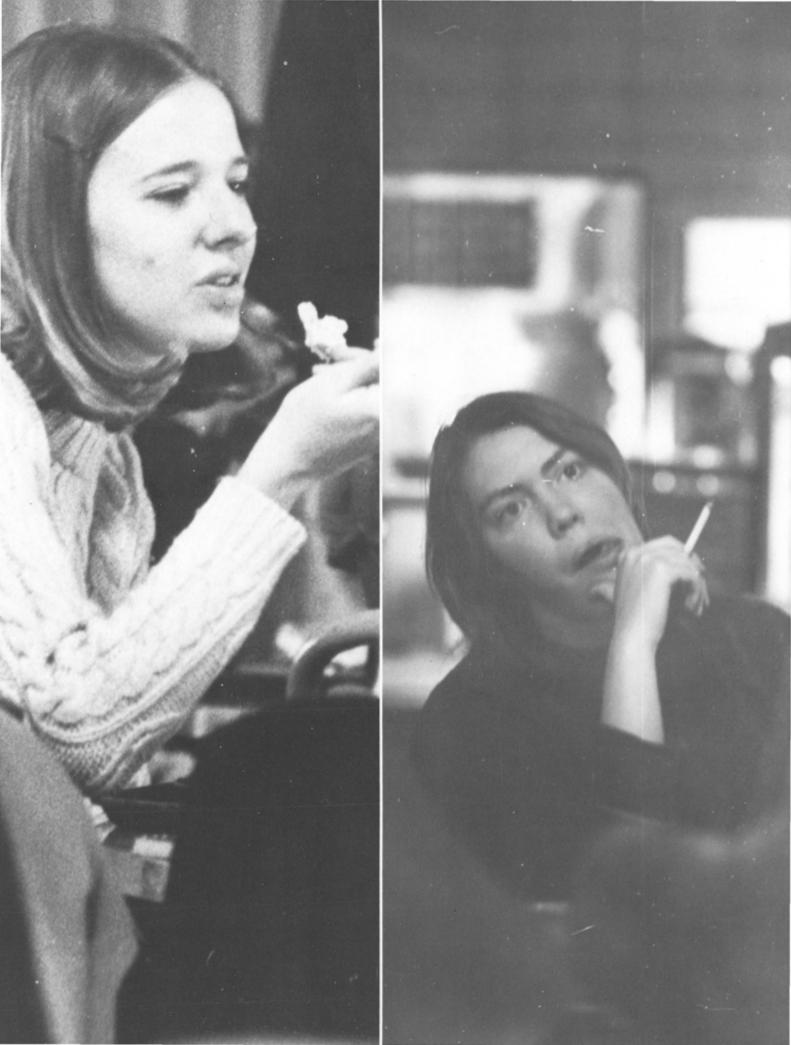

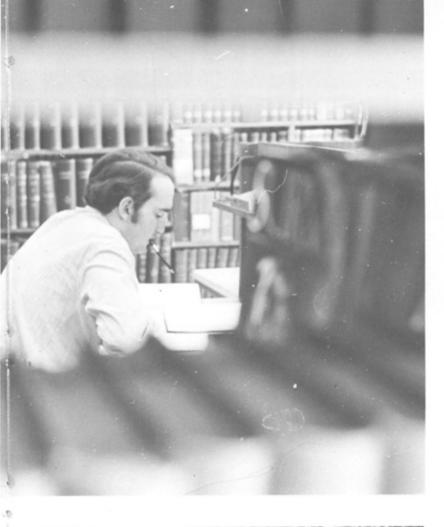

a textbook . . . a sweatshirt

an old pair of jeans ... a brand-new dog

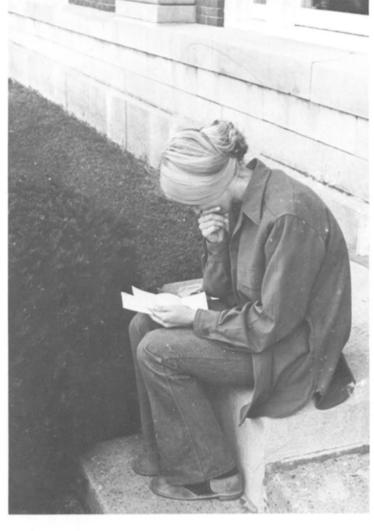

... a marriage;

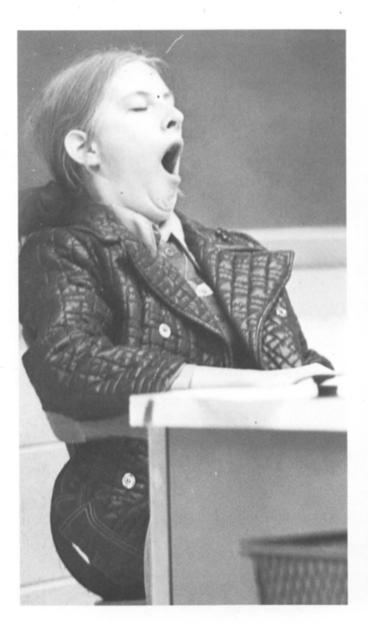

our simple struggle for security.

To sleep without guilt . . .

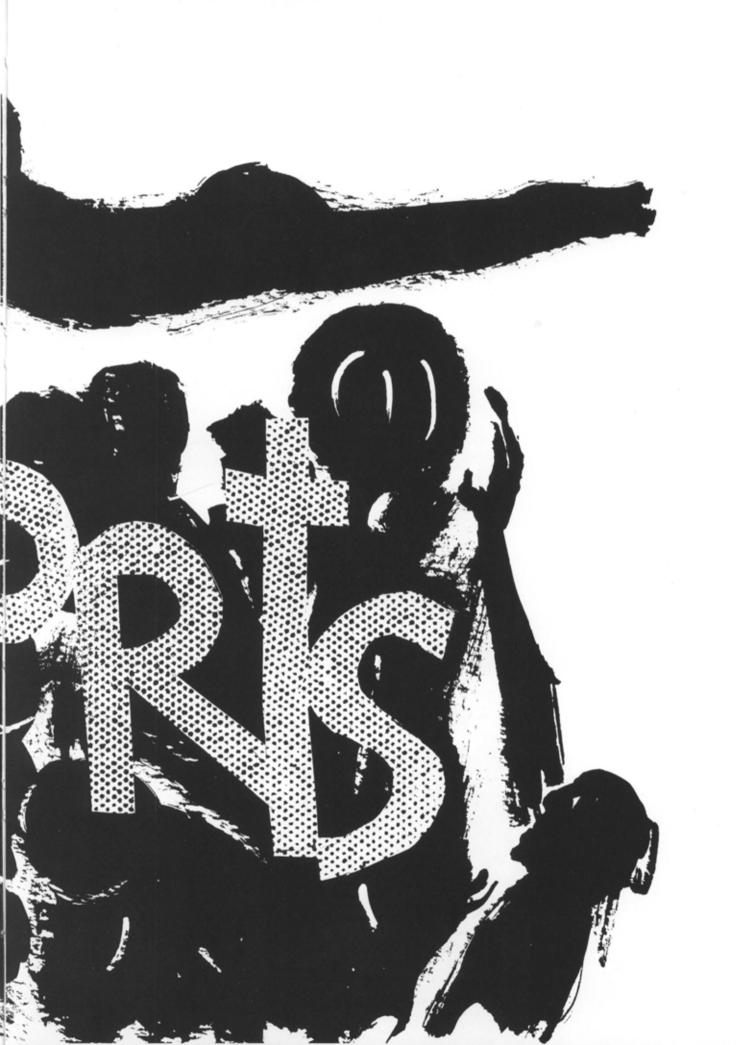

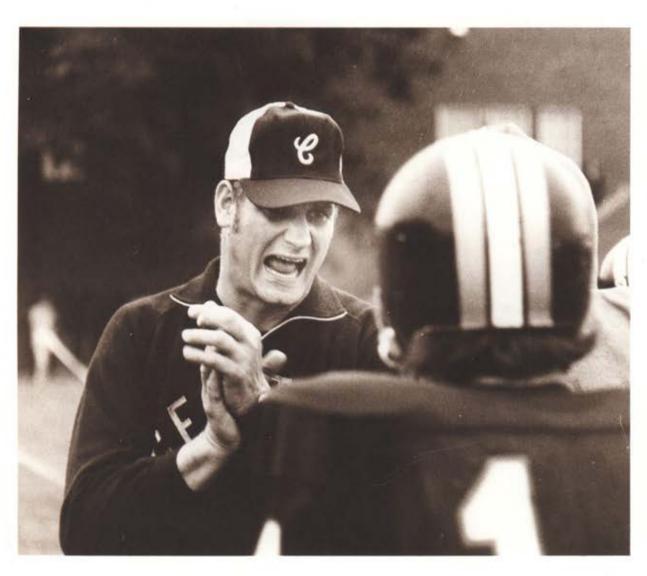

to suffer no thought.

To the people of Centre College . . .

It is a difficult task to pull an entire school into a 2-dimensional book and still be totally objective. So we haven't. We offer our own ideas and prejudices ... some you will share and some you won't. You can either believe us . . . or take us with a grain of salt.

Alan Miles is due untold credit for his work as photographer and supporter. The book would have been impossible without him.

We are the salt of the earth, the stars in the skies, the final goodbye. We pass through the days, the years, the eternities, silently ... sometimes together, sometimes alone. But in the end we return to the Soul ... forever.

Godspeed ...
