

Saroun Bun May 19, 1989

How I Felt Being A Cambodian Immigrant In The United States

When I first came to the United State I saw things that I never saw before. I was Surprised I couldn't believe I saw a person on the tv. I didn't know what a tv was. When I walked near my house I saw black people and white people playing basketball. I saw a girl and boy kissing each other. Girls and boys don't do this in Cambodian. And my brother went to play basketball everyday. I couldn't play basketball. Three year later I was 11 year old And I started to play basketball. And I was good in basketball. Then I went to my grandfather's and he let me go to a picnic at the park.

