JAMES R. JONES, M.C.
WASHINGTON, D.C.

DE-ASKED TO
ment. The House gave its Judiciary Committee $1 million to investigate impeachment.

Let's give the Million Dollars to solve the energy crisis or apply it to the National Debt and get on with the important things facing the Nation.

Let's forget politics and unite as Americans.

Jones - Let me know the things you can't support that the president proposed in his speech.

The American people are sick and tired of Sam Ervin and the Watergate committee.

The impeachment idea is ridiculous. If you proceed with impeachment proceedings. Please advise how we can remove you from office before your term expires.

Dear Mr. and Mrs. Noah:

Thank you very much for communicating with me concerning your opinions on the question of impeachment.

After several resolutions of impeachment were introduced last year, the House Judiciary Committee was assigned the responsibility of investigating the facts to determine whether there was evidence to personally implicate the President in an impeachable offense.

A staff was assembled in December to begin this study. It is expected that the Judiciary Committee staff investigation will be completed sometime in April. At that time, the evidence will be presented and a vote taken to determine whether impeachment proceedings should begin or be dropped.

Most House Members, including myself, believe that we should keep an open mind and decide on the basis of the legal evidence which is presented later in the spring.

In the meantime, Congress has a full agenda of important business in the areas of energy, the economy, and other domestic legislation which will occupy my work and attention.

I do appreciate your taking the time to share your views with me, and I will keep these in mind at such time as I am called upon to decide on this issue.

With best wishes, I am

Sincerely yours,

JAMES R. JONES
Member of Congress
