

answered
Impeachment
Out of District

1722 So. Carson
Tulsa, Okla 74119
Nov. 21, 1973

Representative James R. Jones
Tulsa, Okla.

RECEIVED

NOV 29 1973

Dear Sir,

I believe Archibald Cox never should have been appointed. Mr. Richard son knew his back ground of Kennedy affiliation but again the president went along with it thinking it would be a fair and objective investigation. The president knew there were leaks; he knew also that Mr Cox was determined to gain more power, more money and more time to get the president. Of course we would never have known about Mr Cox "babbling" (his own words) if he had not been fired and had to go before the Senate Committee. When I was a school teacher I taught my students that the president had to be a leader, of the people but at the same time ahead of the people. And I think that is an example in the case of Mr Cox, I think he was guilty of the most gross misbehavior in "giggling, babbling" to the arch enemies of the President. How many other times did they meet in the Kennedy home for these sessions? Of course no such questions were asked him. Furthermore, the entire "massacre, bombshell, stunning horrors" (TV news inciting words) was blown up out of all proportion and <sup>some</sup> the gullible people and a few congressmen fell for the propoganda. I never saw Cox on TV that he was not "giggling" making light of what ever the question was about and the newsmen and committees sat there like a class of first day law students all "ga ga" at the Professor. Nothing of what the President did that week even strained my confidence in him and that is the way most of my friends and acquaintances, not only here, but in this area feel, according to my correspondence.

Very truly yours,
Mrs Jessie J. Martensen

Dear Sir,

I believe Archibald Cox never should have been appointed. Mr. Richardson knew his background of Kennedy affiliation but again the President went along with it thinking it would be a fair and objective investigation. The President knew there were leaks; he knew also that Mr. Cox was determined to gain more time to get the president. Of course we would never have known about Mr. Cox "babbling" (his own words) if he had not been tried and had to go before the Senate Committee. When I was a school teacher I taught my students that the President had to be the leader; of the people but at the same time ahead of the people. And I think that is an example in the case of Mr. Cox. I think he was guilty of the most gross misbehaviors in "giggling, babbling" to the arch enemies of the President. How many other times did they meet in the Kennedy home for these sessions? Of course no such questions were asked him. Furthermore, the entire "massacre, bombshell, steering horrors" (TV News enticing words) was blown up out of all proportion and some the gullible people and a few congressmen fell for the propaganda. I never saw Cox on TV that he was not "giggling" making light of what ever the question was about and the newsmen and committees out there like a class of first day law students all "ga ga" at the Professor. Nothing of what the President did that weekend strained my confidence in him and that is the way most of my friends and acquaintances not only here but in this area feel, according to my correspondence.