

Inter-Racial Council Hears E. J. Hornick

"The country will accept the removal of segregation without much anxiety," E. J. Hornick, executive director of the local Community Chest, said last night in addressing the monthly meeting of the Bristol Inter-Racial Council, held at John Wesley Methodist Church on Lee Street.

"At a time when we move almost constantly from one world crisis to another, those concerned with the well being of his fellow-men in democratic communities, have placed faith in people, the dignity of man, and his right to be free and his responsibility to assist in maintaining that freedom," Hornick said. "The real divisions among men are based on character, not color."

The Council voted to offer the two local boards of education its assistance to bring understanding to the problem of de-segregation resulting from the decision of the U. S. Supreme Court.

*A vote of encouragement was given to the board of directors of the old Mercy Hospital in the conversion of the building into a social and Negro recreational center.
