Foreword

A well organized plan and properly conducted program of clean athletic sports and exercises are an essential element of any educational institution. The spirit of the cadets at The Citadel makes such a course of especial value. There is no better character building agency than manly physical contests, inspired by healthy rivalry and the desire to play the game, win or lose. If England's battles were won on the cricket field, America's destiny rests far more than we may realize upon the fortitude, courage and fair play that are developed on the athletic field. All cadets are urged to take advantage of the opportunity afforded to gain a maximum of benefit from their college life.

C. P. SUMMERALL,

President.

Intramural Managers

The intramural managers system is worked on the same system used in the selection of varsity sports managers. There are three senior managers who are in direct contact with the Director, and who render great aid in the supervision of the Program. These managers, if their work is satisfactory, will be recommended to receive a regular Manager's letter and will be eligible for membership in the Monogram Club. Besides the Senior Managers, there are junior, sophomore and freshman managers who are supervised by the senior managers.

Suggestions to Intramural Units

Managers

Each Company team has an Intramural manager who shall be the captain. This manager is the point of contact between the team and the Intramural Department, and if a team is to compete successfully in Intramural sports, a good manager is necessary. Matters affecting his team are communicated to him and he in turn is responsible for passing the information on. Good teams and good managers go hand in hand.

The selection of such a manager should be made after due consideration of the individual's qualifications. He should be a man interested in the team's welfare and he should, of course, be interested in sports.

Much publicity is given to the teams taking part in Intramurals. Experience has proven that the top notch teams, the aggregations that are always battling for the top position, are the ones with the alert and efficient athletic managers.

Managers should carry on their work by direct contact with the department. They should visit the office frequently and keep in contact with the men in charge of activities.

The Handbook is the official organ of information, and by following it closely a manager will be able to take care of his duties in fine shape. The job is more or less a thankless one; but the reward of having his team talked about on the campus, coupled with the pride that goes hand in hand with a successful season, more than repays him for the effort put forth.

Some duties of the team manager:

1. Enter team in the proper sport by the time set as closing date.
2. Notify team members as to the place, date, and time of contests.
3. Find out when postponed games are to be played.
4. See that team members are on hand by the scheduled time.
5. Be familiar with the department eligibility rules.
6. Write initials, name, and class of all players in score-book before each game.

Publicity

The most important medium of publicity for the Intramural Office is the Bull Dog. The rapid growth, expansion, and interest shown in this department is due to a great extent to the willing cooperation and assistance given by the Sports Department of the Bull Dog.

The Intramural Booklet will be given to all competitive units and others interested.

The office maintains a bulletin board where all tournament cards and any special notices of interest to contestants in intramural sports are placed. Throughout the year the office sends out mimeographed letters to the companies and other organized groups giving them information concerning the entry dates, schedules, and information regarding special activities.

Intramural Data

This is the second year The Citadel has had an organized Intramural Program. There are thirteen sports on the program and there is a possibility of adding new sports in the future if the demand, time space, and equipment are available.

In addition to these sports, there are many games and other forms of entertainment in the Intramurals Cage that are in continuous use, although they are not considered part of the regular program.

Entering it's second year, The Intramural Program has had one year of experience. This year the Program should be better and more varied.
