ARCHITECTURAL SIGNIFICANCE (describe important architectural features and evaluate in terms of other buildings within community)

One of the smallest houses on a street of some of Lowell's grandest late nineteenth century mansions, this mansard-roofed building has a tall corner tower, topped with a mansard roof.

HISTORICAL SIGNIFICANCE (explain the role owners played in local or state history and how the building relates to the development of the community)

The owner of this house in the 1890s, F.C. Stone, is not traceable in directories.
