BALANCED BUDGET—TAX LIMITATION CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENT (S.J. RES. 58)

Ford amendment: Requires President to submit to Congress balanced budget each year. (45-53)	259
Cranston perfecting amendment (to Domenici-Chiles, et al. modified amendment): Provides that Congress and President shall "by legislation", rather than "pursuant to legislation or through exercise of power under first and second articles" of Constitution, ensure balanced budget. (23-74)	260
Domenici-Chiles, et al. modified amendment: Makes clear that nothing in amendment grants President any new impoundment power; extends base period for establishing rate of growth in Federal revenues to more than just previous year's growth in national income; and stipulates that Congress shall enforce this Constitutional amendment by appropriate legislation. (97-0)	261
Moynihan amendment: Provides formula for determining what constitutes "national income". (13-81)	262
Cranston amendment: Waives balanced budget requirement in national emergency. (34-61)	263
Dixon amendment: Waives balanced budget requirement when national economic emergency is in effect and retains reported waiver when declaration of war is in effect. (30-67)	264
Ford modified amendment: Requires President to submit to Congress balanced budget for each year. (43-53)	265
Moynihan amendment: Provides that no budget may include reductions in social security entitlement benefits. (39-59)	266
Leahy amendment: Allows outlays to exceed receipts when necessary to prevent unemployment from exceeding 10 percent or 11 million unemployed. (25-68)	267
Leahy amendment: Allows outlays to exceed receipts when necessary to prevent unemployment from exceeding 16 percent or 17.6 million unemployed. (29-65)	268
Leahy amendment: Permits outlays to exceed receipts when necessary to prevent unemployment from exceeding 20 percent or 22 million unemployed. (29-66)	269
Leahy amendment: Permits outlays to exceed receipts when necessary to prevent depression. (30-66)	270
Gorton-Rudman amendment: States that Federal courts shall not have jurisdiction over any case or controversy brought under this article (by plaintiff seeking to reverse Congressional or executive action/inaction) except to define terms used in article or implementing legislation. (45-51)	271
Dodd substitute amendment: Requires balanced budget by statute rather than by Constitutional amendment and requires President to submit budget in which new outlays would be financed by equivalent increase in revenues. (25-70)	272
Mathias-Baucus, et al. substitute amendment: Requires balanced budget by statute rather than by Constitutional amendment and requires three-fifths vote of both Houses to run deficit. (28-67)	273
Moynihan modified amendment: Allows outlays to exceed receipts by same amount by which total outlays for national defense exceed outlays for preceding fiscal year. (12-83)	274
Cranston amendment: Requires President to submit balanced budget each fiscal year with statement of monetary policy. (36-58)	275
Cranston amendment: Strikes requirement for three-fifths vote by both Houses of Congress for outlays to exceed receipts. (18-76)	276
Armstrong-Boren, et al. amendment: Makes debt limit that exists on date of ratification permanent and requires three-fifths vote by both Houses to increase. (51-45)	277
Baker motion to reconsider Vote No. 277. (40-56)	278

Cohen amendment: States that judicial power of U.S. courts shall extend to any case or controversy arising under Constitutional amendment and that any person may commence an action for appropriate redress in any Federal court. (0-96)	279
Exon amendment: Requires President to submit to Congress balanced budget or statement explaining why outlays exceed receipts. (45-52)	280
Hart modified substitute amendment: Requires by statute that President submit to Congress and that Congress pass balanced Federal budget that distinguishes between capital and operating expenditures. (23-74)	281
Tsongas substitute amendment: Requires by statute that President submit to Congress balanced budget for 1984 and succeeding years, and, if not balanced, statement recommending necessary changes. (23-72)	282
Levin amendment: Provides waiver of balanced budget if three-fifths of both Houses declares national emergency. (37-60)	283
Heflin-Randolph modified amendment: Provides that if, after having adopted balanced budget, Constitutional majority of both Houses passes joint resolution declaring that nation is subject to unforeseen and imminent threat to national security, Constitutional majority of both Houses may appropriate funds needed to finance military response to emergency. (47-51)	284
Bumpers-Ford substitute amendment: States that nothing in this Constitutional amendment grants President new impoundment power; stipulates that Congress shall implement this Constitutional amendment by appropriate legislation; requires President to submit to Congress balanced budget each fiscal year, and, if not balanced, to submit statement as to why; allows waiver by majority vote in event of war or national economic emergency; and states that no court shall have jurisdiction over matters arising from claims relating to this Constitutional amendment except to extent provided by Congress. (32-65)	285
Biden substitute amendment: Prohibits increase in outlays at rate greater than rate of increase in GNP in last calendar year, unless authorized by three-fifths vote in both Houses; reduces allowable rate of increase in outlays if inflation rate for previous year is greater than six percent; and waives provisions for national emergency. (10-85)	286
Cranston-Moylhan amendment: Requires by Constitutional amendment that President submit, and Congress adopt, balanced budget each fiscal year in which outlays may exceed receipts only to maintain social security and veterans benefits; allows waiver for national emergency; and requires Congress to enforce this amendment by appropriate legislation. (27-73)	287
