

Paul Tsongas

A Strong Democrat
for Congress

“Paul Tsongas is an excellent example of young men in public life today who place integrity and honesty above political horse-trading.”

Lowell Sun,
Sept. 13, 1972.

Paul Tsongas cleaned up Middlesex County, leading the citizens' revolt against the most scandal ridden government in Massachusetts and winning election as county commissioner by 122,000 votes. Since then he has fulfilled his pledges by closing the county training school, upgrading the county hospital, and providing for the conservation of Walden Pond.

He brought a new spirit to Lowell politics when he was elected to the City Council in 1969. There he built a record as an effective innovator, leading the fight for competent city administration and speaking out for services to the elderly and for victims of drug abuse.
