Confusion . . . . . cries of "hippie" . . . . "hippie" . . . . a "gap" for this . . . . one for that . . . a "gap" for everything . . . it seems that everything . . . and everyone . . . is labelled, stamped, and sealed in a package . . . . through these cries we seek some way of maintaining our ideals—of having something . . . . or someone . . . to whom we may turn . . . . there is someone who cares not only about the mass but especially about the individual . . . . someone who can always manage a smile or a few friendly words which are sincere . . . . someone who gives of her own time if we need to discuss a problem . . . . someone who gives us honest respect which we can only return . . . . someone who helps us to realize that we will have problems, but that to let them discourage us would only be letting ourselves down . . . . someone who is always willing to listen—which is much more than simply hearing . . . . there is someone . . . . to her we dedicate the 1971 Aries . . . . there is Mrs. Gloria Howard . . .

The seasons change and so do we . . . . . like autumn leaves cascading from multicolored trees, we drift apart—not understanding or inquiring why . . . we merely accept things as being the way they have to be, although our minds and hearts are troubled . . . . we are swept apart by circumstances, but in our minds we are together—and will be always . . . the days grow shorter and colder; the nights are darker, lonelier and longer . . . . . the day we will part creeps nearer and nearer . . . . it is soon to come . . . you will go one way; and I, I will go another . . . the days, like the heart, grow still colder . . . . the seasons, like the pain, will pass . . . . feelings, however, will not . . . Spring will soon arrive; again things will grow . . . . . warmth returns to the heart . . . but the mind still keeps its memories from seasons back, and thoughts of sadness throb inside . . . . . and I cannot look back . . . . . I cannot look back

Once again the sun rises . . . . . the chill of night melts away with the arrival of another dawn . . . . . another day begins seemingly endless sometimes — but only microscopic in a lifetime . . . . . again Nature continues her daily routine as we continue ours . . . . . although we haven't conquered space . . . . . or discovered a cure for the cold . . . . . or stopped the war . . . . . or solved the population explosion . . . . . or rid our air of pollution . . . . . we have time— which is of priceless value . . . . . never again will we have these seconds to relive . . . . to re-enjoy . . . . . to recreate . . . . . each day is a gift to live to its fullest possible extent . . . . .
. . . . . until it overflows and carries into the dawn . . . . . when once again the sun rises . . . . .

Amazing grace!
how sweet

That saved
a wretch
like me!
I once
