What's this sentimental nonsense about dear old school life? There may be some truth in all this, but "there's daggers in men's smiles." However, "we believe in truth. We believe in honesty. These we have set to be our goal." It might be all right to say "sweet nothings" about that school auditorium when we punched in at 8:30 in the mornings. It was miserable. And the one-way stairs. Three minutes. 101 to 201. "Yours not to reason why—yours but to do or die."

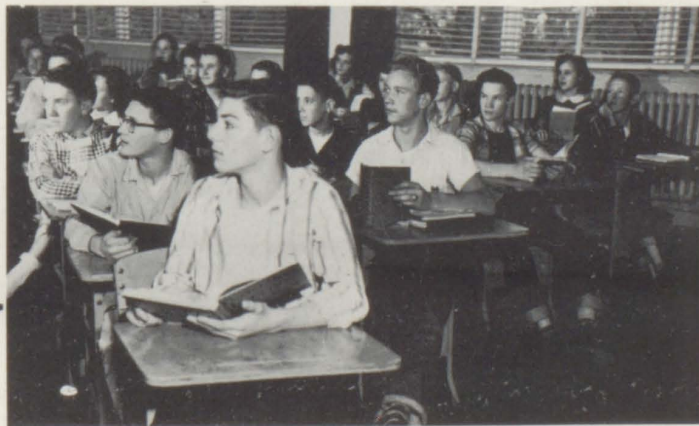

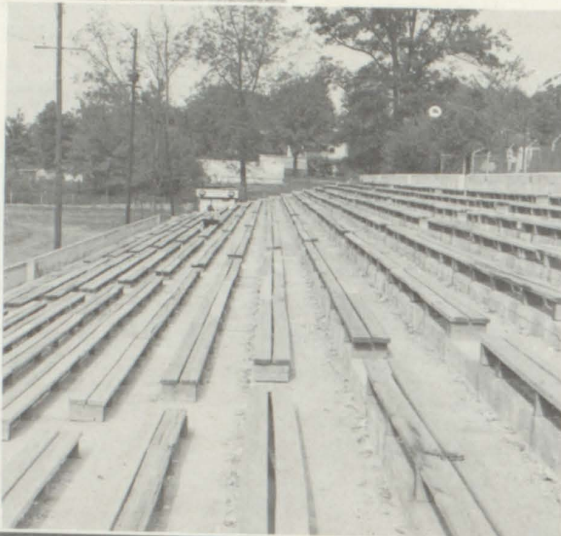

Lunch time—"Into the cafeteria rode the six hundred . . . It's monkey meat and jello . . . and a cookie. National Smoker's Society after lunch. And those assemblies—especially those by candlelight. "Report to homeroom for last-minute seating instructions and bomb shelter assignments for the General Motors atomic experiments." "We are the bloomer girls. We wear our hair in curls . . ." I'm Bored of Education.

Fight fiercely College Park. Demonstrate to them our skill. Impress them with our prowess, do. Won't it be peachy if we win the game . . . Seven come eleven. Shake hands and come out fighting. We thought we were having fun, but we were miserably crowded. And we had confetti in our hot chocolate.

For whole tones, half tones, pearls, perfection, and pediatric shoes, we throw this book at you, Miss Barron.
