Every part of our building is symbolic of some phase of our school life—some parts, more than others. But the columns are the most significant symbol of all. The graceful line of the geometric design—the link to an inspirational talk—a cold trek to a phys. ed. class—the try for a coke at Mr. Duke's.

But as the columns stand for the constancy of school life, the clock marks the passing of time. It is, perhaps, the most looked-at fixture in the school.

There are other things to remember, however—activities in which we've participated—or a particularly beautiful part of the building . . .

. . . And there are people whom we will always remember. Mr. Hutchinson, who certainly deserves a special citation for his service—Mrs. Cochran—Andrew. Because all of us know that if Mr. Hutchinson approves, and if Mrs. Cochran gives her O.K., and then, if it suits Andrew, everything is just fine . . .

. . . Many of us have seen the school after 3:15. The halls almost empty, but not quite—the deserted classroom when we're making up a test—and the paper left on the stairs—or that certain boy and girl taking the long walk home.

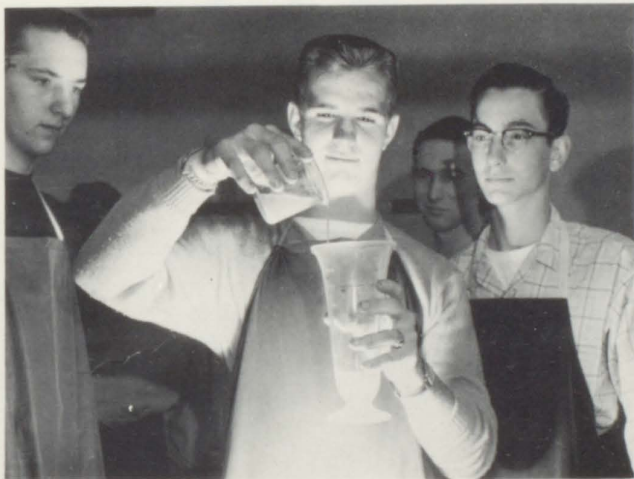

To MR. ZACHERT

for his quiet manner . . . for his positive way . . . and for his sly, know-it-all grin.
