Gentlemen:

Please send me another pair of those "W.-A." special tans; the number is 8504A 41 2.

One of the most necessary qualifications for a successful athlete is that his feet be in proper condition, free from corns, bunions and aches caused by ill-fitting shoes. The only way to have this qualification is to be properly fitted to the right kind of shoes, - lasts adapted to your individual feet.

Your lasts and methods of fitting appeal to me as the best in the city, and I can recommend them to all my schoolmates and friends.

Yours truly,

CLASS PROPHECY, '13

SENIORS, ATTEND!

If ye would know what, in the course of time,
Will be your fates,
Then follow well the words of one you call
Your Prophetess and hear what she relates.
One day I seemed to wake from out a trance;
The world was changed; I knew not where I was.

Then from the stars, I thot I heard a voice
That spake to me. Then looking up I spied,
Amid eternal space, an airship, wondrous large.
Its silver bars shone in the sun. It soared
With sails of garnet o'er the earth and lured
Me thence. On Wings of Progress I arose,
And with a marvelous instrument I viewed
The earth as it revolved, and o'er it all
Familiar faces met my sight, yet so changed,
Withal, I scarce knew them to be my friends.
Then my old pilot thus spake unto me:
"Behold, full twenty years have passed since last
Ye gazed upon this earth and time has wrought
Great changes. Yonder are thy classmates
And ye may clearly see
The fate of the 'Class of One Nine One Three.'"

Society belles of our city

In Central High, Catherine Seamans

HISTORY

Prelude

IT WAS early in September, 1909, when all the world was beautiful, that the principal leader, Davis, of a tribe of Gypsies known as the Romanies, called together a band from all the countries 'round about to tell them of a journey they were to take to the City of Success. The Gypsies, responding to this call, came from far and near, from the hills and valleys of the River Grand, to hear the plan for starting on their wanderings. When all had gathered at the meeting place appointed by their leader, he told them that their journey was to extend through four countries, and in each they were to spend a year. These Gypsies, by nature wanderers, experienced a thrill of pleasure at the thought of such a long and pleasant journey, although there were a few who at first felt just the least bit of fear and timidity at starting out. Their principal leader, however, soon dispelled these fears by telling them that their way was to be directed by Minor Dignitary Bacon, one who had successfully guided many a tribe through this first land. Leader Davis then told them that they were to start immediately, and as there were many necessities which they would require on their journey, they disbanded to procure these and to make preparations for the long march ahead. Early the next day they assembled, a very joyous and expectant band, ready to start on their journey.

The Land of Verdancy

The first land they traveled through was known as the "Land of Verdancy." At first they walked along with their heads high, thoroughly enjoying the new atmosphere of this wonderful country; after a few days, however, they found themselves stumbling over the sharp rocks of Algebra, or sinking into the sands of Latin, or becoming entangled in the long, twisted vines of German. In spite of the assistance of the minor dignitaries who accompanied them through this land, the Gypsies soon found that they must travel with care, if they would reach the end of their journey with safety. From the day on which they started, they could see in the distance a huge old castle looming up before them. This, leader Bacon said, was the Castle of Ancient History that they must attack and conquer before they finished their wanderings in this first land.

ANNUAL HELIOS

On account of these obstacles the leaders saw that many of the band were becoming discouraged, and so in the evening, campfires were built around which these Gypsies gathered to enjoy each other's company, and learn to know their fellow travelers better. But even these pleasant times did not prevent a few from falling by the wayside, or turning back, hoping to find an easier road to the City of Success.

With the coming of June, when many were tired of travel, they found themselves at the end of the road leading through the Land of Verdancy, and on the banks of a beautiful, sparkling river. Here, their guide told them, they were to rest before beginning the second stage of their journey. The Minor Dignitary then gave to all the Gypsies a string with a beautiful gold bead of credit on it for each obstacle which they had successfully overcome in their journey through this first land, and after this ceremony was over, each Gypsy wandered where he pleased for many weeks.

The Land of Indifference

After the hot summer was over, their chief, whom by this time they had all learned to respect very highly, called them together. To each was given a map of their wanderings for that year. They noticed in the middle of this map an abrupt turn of the road. The leader promised that when they reached this turn, they would come into a very beautiful land. The Gypsies then followed their maps and found themselves on a hill, at the very top of which stood the one who was to be their leader through this Land of Indifference, one whom they found had always a smile or word of encouragement for them when the way seemed hard. And so, under the guidance of a most able Palmer, the band started out once more. While the rocks were not so large or sharp, the sands were even deeper, and many times the ghost of that ambitious man, Julius Cæsar, appeared before the Gypsies casting a heavy gloom over a company that chose a path full of quicksands. There were also many deep, dark caves of Science through which many had to pass.

Then came the long-looked-for turn in the road. It was February, 1911, when they reached it, and Oh, what joy was theirs in anticipating the scenes to come! As the Palmer led them around the bend, there lay before them beautiful fresh fields through which no other tribe had wandered, and in these fields they found many new enjoyments that gave courage to the weary wanderers, and they entered upon the remainder of their journey through this Land of Indifference with a zeal and vigor they had never shown before. It was hard traveling, but what that is worth while is not hard to attain? Soon the days became long and tedious, and the Gypsies began to look with longing at the quiet lakes and sparkling rivers that they were passing. At last the long-looked-for day came when the eight precious gold beads of credit were added to their string.

The Land of Achievement

Then after many happy weeks spent in roaming the fields and woods, this band once more answered the call of their leader in September, 1911. They were more serious about their journey now, for they realized that before them lay a rougher and harder road than any they had traveled before, and they knew that if they were to reach the City of Success, they must overcome all obstacles in this land, the Land of Achievement.

They were led through this country by the able leader Snell, one who knew by experience how to help them best. The first obstacles they encountered were the swift streams of Geometry. The Gypsies tried many times to float lazily across these streams in boats, but each time their leader stopped them with the warning that if they were to arrive safely at the City of Success, they must wade boldly into the depths of these rivers before they would be allowed to land on the farther shore. In this land there came to them gentle breezes wafting sweet songs. Many, allured by these songs, strayed into the path from whence they came and were led into the country called France.

As the months passed by, their steps began to falter and many times Leader Snell had to remind them of the gold beads that they would get only by hard and steady travel; but even these days passed by quickly and when the sun grew too hot for travel, they came to a clearing in a cool, dense woods where they encamped to rest, and the beads of credit were once more given, one more year was completed, and their travel through the third land, the Land of Achievement, was finished.

The Land of Heart's Desire

With the cool breezes of September came that last and now familiar call of the leader to start on their journey through the last country, the Land of Heart's Desire. The Gypsies, being cheered by the tales told them of the many tribes that had been led through the gates of the City of Success by the one who was to lead them, the much-loved, honored and esteemed leader

Ginn, started out with light hearts on their journey through this last land. Their experiences in overcoming the many obstacles in the lands through which they had previously traveled, made the obstacles now seem very small. Then came a day when it was heralded among the tribe that they were to choose leaders from among their band who should march at their head into the City of Success, for they knew that they must be nearly there. For these leaders they chose a King and Queen, a scribe who should write a record of their achievements and one who should keep the spoils that they had gathered along the way. These leaders were chosen from those who had shown the most courage in their travels thus far. As they journeyed on, proud of these new and able leaders, the obstacles became smaller and the road smoother. One fine day in the early part of the year 1913, this happy band approached a high hill from whose top the country for miles around could be seen, and far in the distance appeared the faint outline of a city. It was March 7th when its high and lofty turrets first came into view and with it the knowledge that their journey together was nearly at an end. On the evening of that long-to-be-remembered seventh of March, the principal leaders and minor dignitaries led the tribe to a sheltered nook and entertained them most royally. They sang and danced as only a happy band of Gypsies can. Then came other days of frolic and merriment, for the leaders now saw that the City of Success was very near and that they could reach it without such strenuous travel. They chose a banner of garnet and silver, the colors of the tribe, and embroidered on this was the motto, "Finimus Coepturi," the language of which they had borrowed from one of the lands as they were passing through it, and which, translated into their tongue, meant "We finish to begin."

After this event, one day when they were feeling especially merry, their leaders allowed them to play sportive tricks on their fellow travelers. They chose two of their number and dubbed them "sharks." They measured to find who had attained the greatest number of inches and who had managed to stay the smallest. They also crowned the prettiest Gypsy maiden and the handsomest Gypsy youth, and after this they ended the afternoon of fun with a dance. It was found that there was one who excelled all the rest in telling fortunes, that a number of maidens could make sweet sounds on Gypsy instruments, some had sweet and charming voices, and one rare girl could make music from words. All these were chosen to give an entertainment for the band one evening. So they journeyed on and came nearer to that famous city, arriving just outside the gates on June 18th. Here they stopped before entering and commemorated their four years of wandering with a sumptuous feast. There was joy mingled with sadness on this night, for now they realized as never before, that their happy tribe was about to disband. On June 20th, they marched, one hundred and seventy-two strong, their banners floating in the breeze, into this wonderful City of Success whose gates had swung wide open to receive them. Now their string of gold beads was completed; and now they realized as never before the meaning of their motto, "We finish to begin," for they found leading out of this City of Success, many paths, and now realized that their journeys for four years had not been to reach the City of Success to remain there, but because they would more easily find those roads in this city which would direct them to the greater and better things of life. Some chose paths leading back to the lands through which they had come, in hopes that they might help others profit by their experience. Others, contrary to their custom, chose the path which led to broad acres which they were to make beautiful with growing grain, while many having an ambition to wander farther into the Land of Higher Knowledge, took the paths which would lead them to the Sacred Temples of Learning.

And so the Gypsies of this merry tribe bade adieu to those with whom they had traveled so long, and each, taking the key to what he wished to do for the remainder of his life, found the road open for him to pass from this city of first Success, into the great wide world of opportunity and service.

Class Song '13.

H, come, let us sing a song of joy,
A song of our loyalty;
Come, hail the class we hold so
dear,
Our class one nine one three;
Joyfully now raise our banners
high,
Loyally now let our voices ring,
And join one and all in the glad refrain,
As to our class we sing.

Chorus.

Hail to our class, let the echoes resound,
Let each heart full of gladness and joy now be found.
Hail to our class, 'tis the class we love so well.
Gladly we let our voices swell,
As of our loyalty we tell.
Many are the happy days we've spent together here,
But swift the moments fly
Here in Central High,
While each hour is filled with gladness, and each moment filled with cheer
In dear old Central High.

We've labored together day by day,
We've striven so earnestly,
Ever we've tried to faithful prove
And true to our G. R. C.
Many an obstacle we've o'ercome,
Now we've at last won the victory,
So sing with a will, to our class this song—
All hail, one nine one three.

The moments have sped so fast away,
The parting time draws near;
Life has new duties for each one
When tasks are finished here.
We would not stay though 'tis hard to part,
Bright is the future our hopes foretell,
But now ere we go let us sing once more
Farewell, dear class, farewell.

Chorus. (last verse)

Farewell, dear class, we must answer the call
Of new duties which now are awaiting us all.
Farewell, dear class, our own one nine one three.
Ever we'll think with joy of thee,
Never forget our loyalty.
Happy school day mem'ries are so dear to every heart.
We leave thee with a sigh,
Dear old Central High,
For our hearts are touched with sadness at the thought that we must part
From dear old Central High.

LAKE OF THE HILLS

By Marion Holden, '13

[Senior Class story. Prizewinner in the HELIOS contest.]

It is a June morning—very early; the sun is just rising over the eastern mountains. Come and stand on the western ridge of the foothill range and watch the valley below awake to life and action. The first rays of the sun strike the tall, stone buildings of the university campus below us with a Midas' touch. The far, blue line of the bay becomes visible beyond. The great bell in the church tower tolls the hour, and is answered far and near by lesser voices, at whose summons the whole valley begins to stir and prepare to meet the day.

Behind us lies another smaller valley caught in closely by the smooth, green hills, with a little built-in lake at its heart. Such a queer little lake, with its broken cascade at one end and its two small, grass-grown islands, hardly large enough for two men to stand on. It is the relic of a time gone by, when explorers sailed into the distant bay, and sometimes came inland, to inhabit the land for months at a time, while they discovered what manner of country they were in, or enjoyed themselves at their ease.

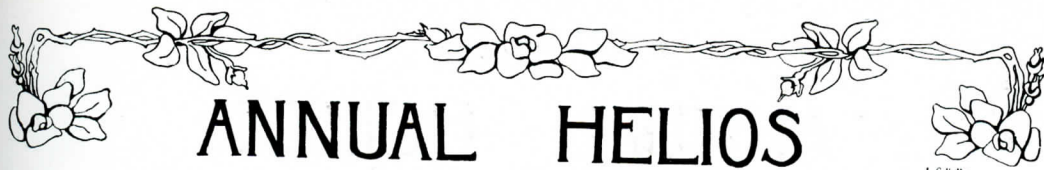

But look! Through the gap in the hills comes a boy—running. He stops at the water's edge and stands, head bared, looking carefully around the little valley—in search of something? No, he has the air of one looking at familiar objects for the last time, and looking carefully that nothing may be unremembered. He is the president of the class that graduates this very day from the university on the other side of the ridge. He smiles a little as he looks at the white fence, high on the opposite hillside, where the numerals of his class stare blackly out at the valley. They had put them there one night in his Freshman year, with the aid of a good moon and a few cans of paint. It had been the night before the Sophomore-Freshman rush, and the next morning found a very much surprised Sophomore crowd whose numerals had been covered by those of the new class.

As he looks toward the lake and the islands, he chuckles reminiscently over the memory of one part of his fraternity initiation, during which he sat and sang hymns on the very peak of the smallest island for half of an uncomfortable night and then got to shore as best he could.

Now he is taking a manuscript from his pocket. He glances it over, throws it on the grass at his feet and launches forth into a torrent of words—eloquence, perhaps. From our hill only the rise and fall of his clear voice can be heard. But now it is over and he is disappearing through the hills. A few short hours and he will be giving that same address in the chapel of his college, and the throng will listen, if he can make them feel, through him, the spell of the morning in the open, the breath of the pines beside the lake, his own reluctance to leave his Alma Mater, yet his eagerness to get into the realer world of men and things.

And so he disappears toward the campus. The breeze stirs more briskly and the sun mounts higher. The valley is now all hustling activity. A swiftly moving speck leaves the buildings and soon develops into a horse and cart driven by two girls. At the roadside, the horse is left to graze and the girls come up the narrow path, the short, plump girl pulling the taller, more dignified one, by the hand and talking excitedly: "Heavens, Mollie, I really had no idea that it was so late. Wouldn't it be perfectly ghastly to be late to 'grad' exercises, 'specially when it is undoubtedly your only one! It would be like being late to your own wedding. But I did so want you to come up here for a long farewell look at all this loveliness. I imagine that you aren't the only one to come up here to say good-bye to our little lake where we've had so many wonderful times. I do hate to think of next year, when I'm a lonely sophomore and you and Nan and all the other Seniors gone. But if one goes to college, one should be a philosopher about mere partings, I suppose."

"Look, Dot," Molly is exclaiming, "it's low water today and you can see the very hole that you fell into the day of your first Freshman picnic. Oh, but the picture you made wriggling around in the mud, and the time we had getting you back to campus without being seen. But there's the bell—come on, we must hurry."

"Oh wait, please wait, for my last little ceremonious act," Dorothy wails, "and then we'll make Jerry simply fly back to 'grad.'" As she speaks she hastily robes Molly's white-clad figure in the black gown of the Senior class and places the mortar-board jauntily upon her head.

"There — you're simply stunning. Come on, now; don't let's spoil the splendid effect by being late." And with this Molly and her little friend dash madly through the gap to the road and jerk a very much surprised Jerry to the road toward "grad."

It is quiet on the hillside after their departure, but that quiet is soon broken by the second tolling of the deep-voiced bell, and we know that the throng has gathered behind the great doors of the chapel and that the graduates are forming to pass in to receive the little piece of sheepskin that stands for hours of study—for four years of unceasing vigilance.

But let us stay on the ridge. The sun has passed the zenith and is drooping westward. It is cool here among the fragrant pines that crown the hill, and a little breeze from the bay just touches with a ripple the dazzling mass of buttercups on the hillside. Shadows begin to creep across the lake, and the bees hum drowsily. The afternoon is passing rapidly, and the stillness is broken only by the swift whirr of automobiles on the hard road below, bound for the neighboring towns, after the events of the day.

It is late afternoon. The sun just dips to the bay and a pale moon becomes visible in the sky. Look! Half way down our hillside there are two figures seated watching the sinking sun. The boy is talking, and the same clear voice that we heard in the morning rises to us now but in a different strain:

"And I thought," he is saying, "that my lonely rehearsal here this morning would be a satisfactory farewell of the place, but——"

"And I," she breaks in, and the voice is Molly's, "thought that the dazzle of the place at noon—with Dorothy here to add her little spirit of sentiment, would leave the memory that I should want to carry through the years, but this——" Her voice is drowned by the sound of many footsteps on the road and at the gap. A silent group of black-gowned men are moving toward the lake, and as they reach its edge, they begin suddenly to sing. The boy goes down to join them and then, as the western glow fades and the moon becomes large and bright, they sit on the grass at the water's edge singing the songs of their college. It is their last

"Senior sing" and to the listening girl, the old songs bring new meaning, and the voices of the men thrill through the valley with a new and sympathetic note that she has never heard in them before.

The moon is bulging big and mellow now above the hills as the men rise and march single file back toward the college that will know them no more, singing the song that of all songs is to them the sweetest—their Alma Mater:

"Where the rolling foothills rise,
Up t'wards mountains higher;
Where at eve the coast range lies,
In the sunset fire,

Flushing deep and paling;
Here we raise our voices, hailing,
Thee our Alma Mater.

"From the foothills to the bay,
It shall ring,
As we sing,
It shall ring and float away;
Hail, College, hail!
Hail, College, hail!"

And as the last echo is stilled, two figures may be seen standing together by the water's edge and the little lake hears again an old story that it knows so well, and takes into its depths a new, sweet memory to guard through years.

CLASS POEM—'13

Friendship

MEN STRIVE through weary years to gain success,
The road to fame is ever rough and steep;
Men seek to find a key to happiness,
From effort sown they hope content to reap.
But he who, friendless, treads life's way alone,
Though he win fame, no true success has known.

True friendship is a thing of beauty rare,
More precious than the costliest gems of earth;
And those who would its joyous blessings share
Must ever prove themselves and show their worth.
No man can buy rare jewels except he spend;
No man wins friends except he be a friend.

In times of gladness, times of joyfulness,
Naught thrills us like the clasp of friendly hand;
There is no greater comfort in distress
Than loving friends who know and understand.
In token of the best success, God sends
This gift so rare, so beautiful, our friends.

The inspiration that a friendship brings,
Uplifts us, gives us courage for the fight;
For friendship's sake we do the bravest things,
We stand with greater firmness for the right.
'Tis friendship makes for us a golden past;
'Tis friendship holds us faithful till the last.

THE FACULTY PARTY

The entertainment by which the Seniors learned it was a custom of the faculty to entertain them, was given on the seventh of March this year. The faculty called the affair a party, but owing to the three-fold entertainment, the Seniors find the word lacking in breadth.

On the arrival of the Seniors, they attended the receptions of the various departments in their rooms, after being received in the office by Miss James, Miss Ginn and Mr. Davis, besides the president and vice-president of the class. Following the reception, the gong called the Seniors to the auditorium, where Miss Hayes, in cap and gown, gave the prologue to the play, "Does the Coat Fit?" The play was a clever farce about the writing of a vocational theme. Mr. Upton was the unhappy boy who had to write the theme, and Miss Bodwell was his sister, while the rest of the faculty helped him with his essay. Perhaps the Seniors had a chance to "see themselves as the faculty sees them."

After the play, all adjourned to the lunch room, which was beautifully decorated with pink blossoms. There they enjoyed the rest of the evening, dancing.

The Helios Staff

The HELIOS staff has had a very successful year since the last Annual appeared, both in a financial and a social way. During the last term, the meetings have been held at the homes of the members, and this has helped materially in bringing the members together for a social time. We have been fairly successful financially, as is shown by the fact that we were able to contribute one hundred dollars to the piano fund. We reluctantly surrender the HELIOS to next year's staff, with best wishes and highest hopes for the future. The climax of the year was the annual HELIOS party, given in May, which was very successful. The members of the staff for the year were as follows:

Editorial Staff

- Editors-in-Chief—Paul L. Steketee, Howard A. Stevenson.
- Assistant Chiefs—Howard A. Stevenson, Donald Baxter.
- Business Manager—J. Edward Simmons.
- Assistant Manager—C. Leroy Austin, '13.
- Literary Editor—Charlotte Fisher.
- Assistant Literary Editors—Ingle Whinery, Fay Reed, Marion Holden, Jennette Kiekinveld, Lillyn Ferriss.
- Athletic Editors—William McMahon, Tys Wigman.

The House of Representatives

Eleventh Session

- Speaker—Donald Wells.
- Clerk—E. Ray Baxter.
- Assistant Clerk—J. Edward Simmons.
- Sergeant-at-Arms—Raphael Rowe.

Twelfth Session

- Speaker—E. Ray Baxter.
- Clerk—C. Leroy Austin.
- Assistant Clerk—Bruce O. Burlingame.
- Sergeant-at-Arms—Harold Clemetsen.
- Librarian—Eugene Elzinga.
- Historian—John De Maagd.

During the past two sessions, under speakers Wells and Baxter, the most successful work in the history of the House has been achieved. At the convention of the Federated Houses, which was held in Grand Rapids three days of Christmas week, representative Sprietsma of our House was elected to the speakership of that body.

Many of the bills considered by the House show the earnestness of the members in using the House to bring out opinions on great national affairs. "To allow United States ships to pass through the Panama Canal free of toll," "To provide for workingmen's compensation," "To give a seat in the senate to ex-presidents and cabinet officers," etc., are a few of the interesting bills that have been debated.

Judging by the high quality of the bills introduced this last session, which will come under consideration next semester, the House will enjoy many entertaining meetings which will help to make the House more successful in the future, even though many of its best members will be lost by graduation this June.

Sock and Buskin

The fifth year of the Sock and Buskin Club has come to a close, with the members well satisfied that it was by far the most successful year in its history.

Started in 1909, it has gradually grown until the present membership exceeds sixty. The policy of the Club is to create and maintain an interest in dramatics and public speaking. Very nearly every meeting has been devoted to playlets in which the members have taken part.

The annual play, "Christopher Junior," which was presented in the Auditorium, April 11, was so much a success that the Club was asked to repeat it for the Teachers' Club May 14.

The annual party was "danced off" February 14 in the lunch-room, about fifty couples being present in masquerade costumes.

The club has adopted a pin in the shape of a mask, which the large membership is now wearing.

The officers for the last year are as follows:

President—Will Lindsley.
Secretary—Maurice S. Wetzel.
Treasurer—Eleanor Stinchcomb.
Business Manager—D. Rathbone.

Aero-Wireless Club

The second year of the Aero-Wireless Club was a success from every standpoint. A new interest has been developed in the subjects of experimental wireless and aeronautics, brought about by a new systematic mode of presenting the subject to the members. At all the meetings, apparatus was used to illustrate the subject at hand, and by this means the wireless and the aeroplane are brought within the grasp of the layman rather than being the object of experimentation by research laboratories and scientifically inclined geniuses.

Some new wireless apparatus has been added during the year, making our already excellently equipped station so much the more efficient.

The social part of the Club has not been forgotten. The first annual party was given April 12, in the lunch-room, which was decorated in blue and white.

The officers for the last year were as follows:

Third Term

President—Donald Baxter.
Vice-President—Maurice S. Wetzel.
Secretary—Burke Ewing.

Treasurer—D. Rathbone.

Fourth Term

President—H. Blake Vinkemulder.
Vice-President—D. Rathbone.
Secretary—Bruce Burlingame.
Treasurer—Maurice S. Wetzel.

The Girls' Leadership Club

The Girls' Leadership Club was organized in March by Miss James, to whom the success of its efforts is largely due.

Its members are those girls of the Central High School who have proven their leadership in some capacity. The membership is limited to twenty. Each member pledges herself to be in readiness to take up practical work along leadership lines as the opportunity opens.

The purpose of the organization is to bring before the girls of the Central High School speakers of ability to discuss topics of present or future importance to them; also to do those things which shall, in the judgment of the Club, be for the advancement of the girls of this school. Already the Club has conducted an assembly, when Mrs. Hollister spoke, and has given a successful dance to raise money for Senior medals.

Goodfellowship Club

The Goodfellowship Club has experienced a most successful year, made evident to the public mainly through the Goodfellowship Party of January 31, given in Press Hall, and open to all the members of both Central and Union High Schools. By this successful party, the Club has doubtlessly set a precedent which will be followed yearly by the future members of the organization in making the Goodfellowship Party an annual event in the school life. The officers of the Club for the past year were as follows:

June to October

President—Milburn Palin.
Vice-President—Lawrence Cornelius.
Secretary—Russel Crozier.
Treasurer—Harry M. Hurd.

November to February

President—Lawrence Cornelius.
Vice-President—Clayton Dennis.

Fauna and Flora Club

The Fauna and Flora Club was organized in the fall of 1909 for the purpose of promoting interest in natural sciences, mainly along the lines of botany and zoology. Membership was open to girls taking these subjects. It started out with a very few members and has steadily increased until there are now twenty members enrolled. The Club has held regular meetings every two weeks. Some have been social meetings, and in others, programs have been given by members of the Club.

The Club has taken several trips, which have proved instructive as well as extremely interesting. This year it has visited Putnam Dairy Farm and Hill Bakery.

The Ninth Grade Court

District No. 306

The Ninth Grade Court of Central High School is one of the oldest organizations of the school and is under the immediate supervision of the ninth grade session room teacher. It serves a two-fold purpose: it creates an interest in and develops a knowledge of our local court system, and it also gives an opportunity under careful direction for student self-government.

The organization consists of a Judicial Department composed of two judges, a clerk, and a court stenographer; a Department of Justice, with a justice of the peace, a prosecutor, two assistants, and a clerk; a Police Department with a sheriff, two deputies, and their detectives; a Jury Department with a panel of all girls of the Honor Roll; and a Bar Association composed of all boys passing in at least three subjects, whose written application, having been made to the court in due form, has been accepted by the Judge, filed by the clerk, and announced in open court.

The jury, in any case, consists of either seven or nine girls who render verdict by majority vote.

The jurisdiction extends to all cases of misdemeanor affecting pupils of Room 306, and to all cases of misdemeanor committed on the third floor of the high school building by pupils of other rooms.

The Girls' Literary Society

The Girls' Literary Society is continuing the work of the Girls' Sophomore Society of last year. The officers of this semester are:

President—Helen Hudson.

Vice-President—Gladys Townsend.

Secretary—Eline Owen.

Treasurer—Marian Dunnette.

Sergeant-at-Arms—Dorothy Wilde.

The society meets on alternate Wednesdays for a literary and musical program; also the Club has been entertained at various homes. Miss Hopkins and Miss Church have given several very interesting illustrated talks on their travels.

January 24, the society held its first annual party in the lunch-room, and a house party at Port Sheldon is planned for late in June.

K. E. E.

Throughout 1912 and 1913, the K. E. E. has had a most prosperous and successful year. The programs, with the efficient help of Miss Hayes and Mrs. Anderson, have steadily grown more interesting and instructive, and the discussions of current events, which form a main part of the club work, have often been varied by talks or lantern slides.

The Club has been equally successful in its social affairs. A spread for the new members was given in October, the annual dancing party in January, and an entertainment for the alumni, faculty, friends, mothers and sisters of the girls, in April.

Officers for the First Semester

President—Albertine Loomis.
Vice-President—Lucile Ruffe.
Secretary—Ruth Mayo.
Sergeant—Vera Johnson.

Officers for the Second Semester

President—Julia van Leeuwen.
Vice-President—Elline Owen.
Secretary—Florence E. Perkins.
Sergeant—Olivia Demmon.

College Club

The College Club began the regular meetings of its fourth year with a talk by Josephine Heyman on her trip abroad. During the year, talks have been given on several colleges, among them Mt. Holyoke, Olivet, and Michigan University, and one on "Responsibilities" by Mrs. Clay Hollister. Early in the fall the Girls' Literary Society joined with the College Club in giving a party for Freshmen girls. A dance and a spread were given each semester and the year closed with a party given for the senior members at the home of Katherine Johnston. To the officers, Dorothy Botsford, Marjory Ford, Marian Jennings and Helen Cryder, and to the efficient work of the committees, the success of the year is largely due.

M. E. C.

The German Club

The aim of the German Club, which was organized during the latter part of last year, is to give the pupils studying this language an opportunity to become better acquainted with their German cousins, to learn to converse with them fluently, and to learn their interests and industries.

The only requirements for membership are that the applicant be really interested in the work of the Club, and that he complete at least two years of German before joining.

This Club is unique in that it has no officers; but all the work has been done under the able leadership of Miss Rosenthal, and appointed committees. Programs have been arranged for each meeting, in which the members have taken part. Illustrated talks in the German language have helped to familiarize the members with German mythology, history and art; also with many places of interest and note.

The Club has had a very successful year, and promises to become a permanent organization in our school.

The Senior Sorosis

The Senior Sorosis owes its success to the leadership of Miss Bodwell. Perhaps two of the literary programs most enjoyed were those by Miss Laura Rood, who told about her trip to Ireland, and Miss Hinsdale, who described her visit to the Scandinavian peninsula. Many other interesting and profitable meetings were held. In March, the Alumni and the Senior Sorosis held a party in the lunch-room. At one of the meetings the "Sorosis Annual," which consisted of a literary, grinds, puzzle, question and advertising department, was read. Through the whole year their leader advised and assisted the girls in every way possible.

Basket Ball

Although we make no claim to the championship, we succeeded in beating many of the best teams in the state. We are all satisfied with the outcome of last season and especially so with our coach and captain-elect.

I am positive that under "Din" Upton's coaching, the remaining players, combined with the new material, are bound to be winners next year.

CAPT. LEON STANDER.

Baseball

After being without an organized baseball team for three years, the students of Central High were hungry enough for a team to show a great deal of enthusiasm when it was announced that the Athletic Board had consented to equip a team for the year. This enthusiasm was manifested when, in answer to the first call for candidates, over sixty fellows responded. Then and there it was decided to organize class teams and run off a series between them as well as to have a school team. The new suits arrived for the team and the first game of the season, with Union, was hardily won. The Alumni, however, proved rather too strong for the beginners, and took them into camp to the tune of 9 to 1. In playing Union the second time, all the pent-up errors and bonehead plays, the accumulation of two weeks of hard coaching, were let loose with the result that our West Side rivals evened up the count and took the "farce" by a 7 to 4 count. The other teams scheduled are Holland High, Hope College, Ionia High, Otsego High, and Ferris Institute. The rather reserved schedule is accounted for by the fact that it was not decided upon to have a team at Central until the baseball season was here. All that was needed to make our new team a real winner was the support of the student body.

C. J. MENHENNICK.

Track

With the closing of school this June, Central ends her twenty-seventh year in track athletics. Although it is too early to predict the outcome of Central's fortunes on the track this spring, great preparations are made for a championship.

Its first meet was a victory at the Inter-scholastic at Adrian, by double the number of points scored by the next best team. We are putting forth our best effort to win the inter-scholastic meets to be held at Ann Arbor and Lansing. If we are successful there, the team will make a trip in June to the Northwestern University, where all the high school teams meet for the United States championship.

Thanking the members of the team for their loyal support, and hoping that the succeeding teams may be as successful as I know ours will be, I bid High School athletics good-bye.

HUGH BLACKLOCK, Captain.

BURLINGAME LANDS JOB

Throws the Bull for Next
Four Years

The long-expected news of Pres. Steketee's appointment of Bruce Burlingame as chief wrestler for the United States has caused much satisfaction in this, the home town of the Peerless Leader. As is known, the office, which involves the official throwing of the bull, is an important one; but in this instance the best man for the place has been found.

STEVENSON HERE

Noted Editor in Town—Talks
at High School

Mr. Howard Stevenson, the head of the Associated Press, was in town yesterday on a business trip. After a conference at the office of THE HOWLER, at the invitation of Principal Whinery, he addressed the students at Central High. He was introduced to the assemblage by a Senior, Mr. Tyler Winslow, who knew the great editor when he was a small editor. Mr. Stevenson was happy in his remarks, "reminiscing" in a delightful manner.

TO THE PEOPLE OF THE UNITED STATES:

Be it hereby decreed that during the months of July and August, all good citizens of this country shall cease from labor and devote themselves to having one grand and glorious time. Rest yourselves with easy consciences, looking back over a year of hard labor, much pleasure, increments in wisdom, correct thinking and higher living. The year past has been fruitful; in this vacation store up generative powers to bear increasing fruitfulness in the year to come. Give over ease of living and return to labors on September the second. Signed:

L. S.,
By the President.
LUCILE RUFFE,
Secretary of State.

PAUL L. STEKETEE,
President of the United States.

STRANGE CASE OF SLEEP

Beattie Puzzles Doctors —
Latest Points

Grand Rapids doctors are exceedingly puzzled over a case at Butterworth hospital, of Arthur Beattie, who has been asleep since March. Joc Doane, who had the case at the start, has called into consultation the brain specialist, Dr. Everett Hebard, who states that this phenomenon of continual sleep has evidently been the outgrowth of a bad habit which might have started when the patient was but a child in high school. On looking up the young man's record, it was found that he was often found asleep in classes and, evidently, the habit grew.

If external conditions are favorable, Dr. Hebard is going to try to awaken him tomorrow by shouting in his ears several things that used to startle him when he was young, such as "Duck the pill, Art!" "Here comes J.

Walter!", etc. The case is very interesting and many will be present at the trial.

GROVER ON TOUR

Vice-President in Chicago—
Grand Rapids Next Week

Chicago is spreading herself today in honor of Vice-president Grover, who is the guest of the city while on a tour of the country in the interests of the Reform party. Miss Grover, who is the first woman occupant of the vice-presidential chair, has had a very interesting history. Born very young, she early exhibited marked precocity, being the inventor of alcoholic refrigeration (See Wik) while in high school. After leaving college, she threw her lot with that of the suffragists, and became the head of the feminine wing of the party when the franchise was extended. Miss Grover speaks in Grand Rapids a week from today.

WASHINGTON

Jandorf Speaks—Votes "Yes"

Rather a humorous occurrence took place yesterday in the House of Representatives. Rep. Jandorf, who is serving his first term, was called on for his vote on the tariff bill. Mr. Jandorf arose, and the representatives, thinking he was about to make his maiden speech, all went out in the lobby for a smoke. However, when Mr. Jandorf had finished, after about two hours, the clerk explained that he had merely voted "yes" for the bill.

MLLE. OSBORN'S BEAUTY CHAT

Dear Readers: I am going to tell you of a letter I received this morning from Senator Clemetsen. The Senator, as you know, is called by his colleagues, "The Handsome Scandinavian," and in the letter, he told me that he was a devoted reader of my letters, and that his beauty is the result of closely following my precepts. The Senator is such a dear fellow, and with his omnipresent ravishing smile, his delicious "Cupid's Bow" mouth, his rapturous pompadour, he makes a fit subject for any artist's brush. The Senator bears a very close resemblance to the Representative from the Muskegon district.

In the Realm of Books

I have just finished reading the second of Miss Paterson's series of three books, and I find it as delightful as the first, which I told you about last week. The first, "The Diary of a Gossip," is good; the second, "Confidential Chats with Young Men," is charming; the third, "Fifty-seven Varieties of Breaks," I am about to read, and I am filled with a pleasurable sense of expectation. I read in the paper, the other day, that Miss Paterson had been pinned down in regard to her age, and had admitted that she was but 26 years of age. Such charm of writing in one so young is astounding, and shows either much experience or a lively and well-developed imagination.

Theatricals

Grand Rapids is to have the honor of being the first to judge a new play, as H. M. Hurd's dramatization of his famous novel, "Who Put the Mel in Melodrama?" is to be played at Powers next Thursday. Especial interest is attached to the event, because of the fact that a Grand Rapids product, Russel Crozier, is to be the star. Crozier has been a devoted adherent of Shakesperian plays during his career, and his departure, in this instance, is only at the request of Mr. Hurd, who has been a personal friend of his since infancy. Mr. Hurd will be here for the first night. Mr. Hurd's rise has been exceptional. For some years he traveled with a circus as the "Harry" dwarf from Madagascar, after which he wrote and published his one famous novel with wonderful results.

Foot-ball Prospects Best in Years

Coach McMahon, of Central High, in an interview, stated that Central expected to have the strongest team next year that they have had since he was on the team himself. He is confident that his team will be so successful that he will be able to land offers for a tour of the country for the boys. Capt. Hugh Blacklock, Jr., is even more optimistic. "With a majority of the team back, we will go through the season triumphant," he said and, the best part is, he believes it. In the meantime, the baseball team is concluding a very successful season, both financially and from a percentage viewpoint.

A Romance of 1913

There once was a Miller, both honest and grouchy,
 Who lived in the town of Z.
 A Ward he had, a very Young Lass, as pretty as she could be.
 She sat in her Pew, de Muir and sweet,
 Each Sunday the whole year through,
 For the Powers which governed her life, you see,

Were strict and exacting, too.

But she fell in love with a Strong Young man,
 A Carpenter of great renown,
 Who was truly a dasher and quite a Hart-
smasher,

With hair and Van Dyke beard of brown.
 The Carpenter asked for the hand of the maid,
 But the Miller grew White in his rage.
 He said, "You're a Free-man, but blest if I see
 Why you shouldn't be kept in a cage.

"If you come here again, I will put on my Mitts

And knock you down flat at the door.
 I'll Kik you straight out to the street," he said,
 "Now go! Let me see you no more!"

But the Lass, from the Garratt had watched in despair,

And Daily did pine for him there,
 And thought of the Waltz with him she had had,

When he gave her a bright Jewell rare.

The Miller then put a Black-lock on the gate,
 And set his Bernard dog at large,
 For he Hurd that this Weaver of snares
 around hearts

Had planned to elope with his charge.
Young Simon, the lock-Smith, a friend of the maid,

In secret their messages took—
 He once was a Porter of prowess and strength,
 And could not be killed by a look.

One night came a signal from on the hill's
Peake,

And they met at the Wells in the valley.
 He whistled, so she would be sure it was he,
 "Has any one here seen Kelley?"

A Herron which stood on the ridge of the Ruffe,

Saw her wrapped in his great Seaman's
 coat,

While he started to Rowe to the other side
 Of the stream in his frail little boat.

The river was Fuller than usual then,
 The water was Reily and high,
 A Reed on his right oar, a Weed on his left,
 Clung fast and would not let him by.
 Each one was an excellent Walker, it chanced,
 So to Wade to the shore it was planned,
 And then while it thundered and lightened
 and rained,
 They walked cross the Ford to land.

Near shore A Fish jumping playfully,
 Did frighten them half to death;
 Then voices were Hurd and they quickened their steps

'Till the maiden was quite out of breath.
 The Hunt had begun for the maiden so fair,
 And the Miller was leading the men.

"We'll find him and Lynch him," he angrily
 said,

"And bring her back home again."
 The Webb was entangling them more and more,

But they crossed to the other side;
 They boarded the train and it went "Toot!
Toot!"

And our hero had won his bride.

—E. S., '13.

WANTED TO DIE HAD TOOTHACHE

With his face swollen so that he could hardly see out of his right eye, caused from an ulcerated tooth, a man was wandering up and down Monroe Avenue, finally stepped in to see Dr. C. D. Owens, at 106 Monroe Avenue, and when questioned what he wanted, said he wanted to die.

The result was the tooth was removed in its ulcerated condition and the man didn't know when it was taken out, and he had been given no drugs to produce sleep. He left the building rejoicing, saying "Long live me and the Owensolar method." Same method used in crown and bridgework.

You have wished for just such a convenience many times, and now your wish has come true.

All the ranges we sell are now equipped with self-lighters.

You can have one put on your present range at a small expense, but before you do so, let us show you the many other improvements that have been made since you bought your stove and you may decide that it is time you had a new one.

Tell them that in the twenty-four years they have been printing this, that and the other for the people of Grand Rapids, and elsewhere, that no single job has given them the satisfaction in the completed work that this one has; that the printing of the records and chronicles of a year's doings among the young men and women who are preparing themselves for the business of life, has been a privilege.

Tell them—well, look this book over, compare it with others you have seen and tell them just what its appearance indicates to you, and that would be a sufficient recommendation for even the most critical.

¶ Electricity and electrical comforts, once called a luxury, are becoming a necessity in the average home.

¶ And while the climbing cost of other necessities is putting them in the luxury class, the falling cost of electric lighting is making it easier and easier for all to enjoy.

¶ Electric light is one of the best things we know of that has grown cheaper within the last 20 years. Electric light in your home is an investment and not an expense. Just give us an opportunity, and we will show you why.

Remarkable and exceptional silence, secured through extremely close fitting of parts. Long life thereby assured. The life study of this firm in motor cars, we are, therefore, qualified to make good selections and feel that we take less chances in maintaining our guarantee. Built into this car are some wonderful new ideas. The car design has been started right and cannot be duplicated in its engineering features of improvement by the older car builders, simply because they will not discard their old-idea designs until they are obliged to—it costs too much. It will astound you to take a hard country ride in this car and compare the riding qualities with other cars at higher prices. ### Over the Telephone

DOROTHEA: Hello, Francis! Are you all through cramming for that Latin quiz?

FRANCES: Horrors! No, I've had the worst toothache for the last hour and a half than you could imagine. I wish Latin and all the other dead ones were buried. I can't study, look pleasant, or anything else.

DOROTHEA: Why don't you go and see Dr. Stebbins, the dentist, in the Wonderly Building across from the Boston Store. He will stop that pain in two seconds and treat, fill or crown it for you without hurting a bit. He has just gotten through with my work and, honest, he never hurt me at all. You know what a big coward I am, and I wouldn't have had a thing done if it had hurt.

FRANCES: Well, you know the last time I had dental work, I nearly fainted, so I have been standing this pain rather than have the tooth treated.

DOROTHEA: Well, I've found that if you go to the right man you need not be hurt, and he does beautiful work, too.

RIDING COMFORT ALL THE TIME

The POPE "TWIN" is notable for its balance. Everything works in perfect harmony to produce a perfectly comfortable motorcycle. The Pope "Twin" holds the road like a big 6-cylinder automobile and wafts the rider along with a smooth, steady, gliding motion that gives him riding comfort all the time. The faster he goes the more he appreciates its easy riding qualities. It balances beautifully and controls with perfect ease.

Three Great New Features

Pope Rear Spring Suspension

Simple, compact and strong. Insures riding comfort without retarding speed. Freedom from sideplay and recoil shocks. If you wish to carry a passenger, you may do so, to the pleasure of the passenger, as they get same benefit of the springs as the driver, which no other machine affords.

Pope Spring Fork

Simplified and with new features. The strongest made, and most flexible in riding, the most certain in steering. Ordinary shocks and jars do not reach the rider. They must pass through this compression spring and are absorbed by its perfect action. Other spring forks may look like it but none ride like it. Vibration practically eliminated.

Pope Overhead Valve Motor

Gives the most power, the smoothest running, the greatest speed, the least need for attention, and the greatest accessibility. Entire explosion takes place directly over the piston. All energy is applied instantaneously, straight downward with full force. Best cooling, most positive exhaust of spent gases. Valves of highest grade Chrome nickel steel, drop-forged, stems integral. Accurately ground and fitted.

A SPLENDID RECORD

MISS Mae O'Connor took up the study of SIMPLIS SHORTHAND on January 3, 1913, and on April 3rd, just three months later, wrote court testimony at a speed of 170 words a minute. This is a record of which anyone might well feel proud, but she did not stop here. She is called upon very frequently to give demonstrations in fast writing, at rates of speed that would seem almost unbelievable.

Any ambitious young person can learn SIMPLIS SHORTHAND. There is no risk whatever. It is not only the shortest shorthand, but it is the most swiftly written. It is the express train of shorthand systems. None of the old time plodding is necessary to master it.

It is a modern system for modern requirements.

Send or call for our new book. It is free, and is packed full of facts concerning speed, ease of learning, testimonials from satisfied users, and from business men who are pleased with writers of Simplis Shorthand. This book has specimens of swiftly written shorthand by Miss O'Connor and by Miss Russell. Just say, please send me your new book as advertised in HELIOS.
