KINGSLEY SEMINARY.

At BLOOMINGDALE, Tennessee, is situated in a healthful and delightful region of country. The grounds are ample, finely shaded, and attractive. The main building, which is comfortable and well arranged, has recently been improved. The music room is very neat.

This is designed to be a first-class school, in which students will have superior opportunities to discipline their minds and fit themselves for the great work of life. Those who wish to prepare for college, for teaching, for the ministry, or for medicine, are particularly solicited. Arrangements are also made to accommodate such students as may desire to study in this Institution any branch of the regular college course.

To meet more fully the heavy demand upon Kingsley Seminary for teachers, a Normal Class was organized at the beginning of 1883. This department has been very popular. Many teachers have already been trained at Kingsley, and these teachers have given quite general satisfaction. They have but little difficulty to secure the best places.

The moral and religious training of the students is considered essential, and therefore receives special attention. The Bible is read regularly, but sectarian comments are not made.

The government of the school is mild and parental, yet strict. We solicit students who will act as ladies or gentlemen, and who will improve their advantages; but students who are unwilling to conform to our wholesome rules and regulations, would better not apply for admission. Monthly reports are commonly made, and a general average of the standing is usually read at the close of each term.

Good board can be obtained in respectable private families at from $1.50 to $1.75 per week. This includes table board, furnished room, fuel, and oil for lights. Some students secure rooms in which they board themselves. The cost of living in this way is very trifling.

The school has accomplished much good in the past, and it has been steadily increasing in prosperity. Strong efforts will be made to merit continued and increased success. The faithful and thorough instruction given, the wholesome discipline, the high-toned moral and religious influence exerted, the unsurpassed healthfulness of the location, and the cheapness of tuition and board, render this Institution one of the most desirable of its class; and young men and young women desiring a good education at the least cost, would do well to consider the superior advantages offered them at Kingsley Seminary. We think it will be difficult to find better advantages.

Competent assistants are employed.

Each student will pay fifty cents per term as an incidental fee.

Students will be admitted at any time; but it is important that they be in attendance at the opening of the term, and remain until its close. Irregular attendance can not secure the best results.
