

jewels.

About 11:45 the last guest had been received, and the receiving party, with the Ambassadors, cabinet members and other high officials, and their wives, had supper and in the senators' reading room at the end of the south corridor. A long table was laid in the center of the room, and small ones about the walls.

Supps With Vice President.

At one of these the prince had supper with the Vice President, Secretary and Mrs. Lansing, the British Ambassador and the Spanish Ambassador and Mme. de Riano. The tables were all adorned with American beauty roses and Fed shades on the candles. After their supper they proceeded to their dressing rooms amid the enthusiastic applause of the assembled guests, who lined the corridors.

Mrs. Carter Glass wore white satin, with iridescent trimming; Miss Glass, blue taffeta; Mrs. Palmer, gray satin, made with a train, with iridescent trimming, and diamond ornaments, and her guest, Miss Mary Dixon Norris, in light blue satin, trimmed with roses; Mrs. Burleson, blue satin and tulle; Mrs. Daniels, black net, heavily embroidered in jets, with diamond ornaments, and deep red feather fan; Mrs. Lane, dark red chiffon and velvet; Mrs. Houston, orchid-colored satin and tulle; Mrs. Gillett, green and gold brocade; her daughters, Miss Frances Hoar, in orange velvet, and Miss Louisa Hoar, blue and silver brocade.

Miss Bolling in Black.

Mrs. W. A. Bolling, mother of Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, in black thread lace over cloth of silver and set of rare old cameos, an heirloom in her family, and her daughter, Miss Bertha Bolling, in sole de Paris, with overdrapery of gold tissue and ornaments of fire opals; Mme. Jusserand, a gown of amethyst and jet sequins, a dog collar of pearls and a narrow band of diamonds in her hair; Mme. Riano, black net and jets with diamond ornaments; Senora de Mathieu, black lace and jets, her nieces, the Misses de Gana, in pale blue satin and crystals, and white satin, severely plain, with a henna ostrich fan.

Mme. Le Breton, black net embroidered in cut steel, a diamond coronet embroidered in jets, pearl and diamond dog collar, string of pearls and diamond hairpins; Mrs. John Allan Dougherty, French blue satin and tulle; Mrs. Winterhalter, white satin brocaded in silver, with point lace and pearl ornaments; Mrs. Lawrence Townsend, black velvet, with jet tiara and ornaments; Mrs. H. C. Corbin, midnight blue brocade in gold, diamond tiara; Miss Patten, pink and gold brocade.

Mrs. Marshall Field's Gown.

Mrs. Marshall Field, blue and gold brocade, and tulle, a crown of diamonds, a double diamond necklace; Miss Amaryllis Gillett, amethyst velvet and tulle trimmed with silver lace; Mrs. Walter Tuckerman, peacock blue velvet and silver lace; Mrs. James McDonald, white satin with an overdress of pale gray embroidered net, diamond tiara and a string of pearls; Mrs. George Barnett, white satin, made with train, and trimmed with ropes of pearls.

Miss Gladys Hinckley, white satin trimmed with tulle and cloth of silver, and pearl ornaments; Mrs. William L. Marshall, cloth of silver with touches of rose color, and trimmed with silver and lace; Mrs. John Harrison Knapp, white satin trimmed with gold lace; Miss Laura Harlan, midnight blue brocaded in gold; Mrs. A. Garrison McClintock, black crepe de chine; Mrs. Delos Blodgett, midnight blue tulle heavily incrustated with sequins of the same shade.

In Pink Velvet and Tulle.

Miss Blodgett, salmon pink velvet and tulle; Miss Mona Blodgett, pink satin and tulle; Mrs. William Belden Noble, white satin and point lace with ornaments of pearls; Mrs. Stigand, white satin trimmed with peacock blue with a fan of peacock blue ostrich feathers; Mrs. Frederick Atherton, coral satin trimmed with rhinestones; Mrs. Thomas McLoughlin, light blue brocaded satin and pearls.

Miss Mabel Boardman, green tulle over cloth of gold; Mrs. Charles Boughton Wood, black net embroidered in jet, trimmed with rose point lace, and diamond ornaments; Miss Morgan, black and gold brocade; Cora, the Countess of Strafford, orchid satin brocaded in gold, and a double string of pearls and sable scarf.

Mrs. William Miller Graham, black net heavily encrusted in jets, with a diamond ornament on the bodice, a diamond necklace and tiara.

Miss Geraldine Graham, coral tulle beaded in white over satin; Miss Harriet Keim, white satin and silver, with pearl ornaments; Mrs. Thomas S. Lovette, of Texas, pink satin, with a draped skirt and touches of French blue and gold lace, and Mrs. Robert N. Harper, iridescent sequins over white satin, with ratin of satin and a diamond necklace.