Listen Nurse

I was hungry and could not feed myself.
You left my food tray out of reach on my bedside table.
Then you discussed my nutritional needs during a nursing conference.

I was thirsty and helpless, but you forgot to ask the attendant to refill my water pitcher.
You later charted that I refused fluids.

I was lonely and afraid, but you left me alone because I was so cooperative and never asked for anything.

I was in financial difficulties and in your mind I became an object of annoyance.

I was a nursing problem and you discussed the theoretical basis of my illness and you do not even see me.

I was thought to be dying and, thinking I could not hear, you said you hoped I would not die before it was time to finish your day because you had an appointment at the beauty parlor before your evening date.

You seemed so well-educated, well-spoken, and so very neat in your spotless unwrinkled uniform.

But when I speak you seem to listen, but do not hear me.

Help me, care about what happens to me,
I am so tired, so lonely and so very afraid.
Talk to me—reach out to me—take my hand.
Let what happens to me matter to you.

Please, nurse, listen.

WHAT IS A STUDENT NURSE?

Student nurses are one of the nicest things that can happen to a hospital.

They come in all sizes, shapes, uniforms and caps. They show up everywhere—in wards, in utility rooms, at chart desks, and in classrooms. Doctors yell at them; head nurses criticize them; interns tolerate them—and patients love them.

A student nurse is courage under a cap, ambition in a crispy starched uniform, energy in person. She's a dedicated heart, a cheerful smile, a comforting voice.

A student nurse likes days off, mealtime, boys, pediatrics, certain doctors, pretty clothes, and yes, her nursing school. She doesn't care much for alarm clocks, getting up for fire drills, making beds or walking long halls.

A student nurse is a wonderful person. No one else gets so much pleasure from adjusting a bed or fluffing a pillow. No one else gets such satisfaction from changing a bandage or holding a cool drink to dry lips.

You can criticize her, but you cannot dishearten her. You can hurt her feelings, but you cannot make her quit. Her hours are long; her studies are difficult, but she is a hard-working young woman, full of determination. And she looks forward to that wonderful day when she can proudly say—"I'm a nurse!"

DO IT NOW

I expect to pass through this world but once;
Any good thing, therefore, that I can do or any kindness
I can show
To any fellow human being, let me do it now.
Let me not defer nor neglect it; for I shall not pass this way again.

You can't buy memories, or borrow or steal them—but you can't avoid collecting them, either. Memories improve with remembering—extra little details and embellishments are added. New people—both adults and children—are invited to share and enjoy. Such memories stay with loved ones always, and become a strong and invisible bond that draws hearts together through good days and bad.

No memories are more highly cherished than those private recollections that are shared by people who love. Romantic things, silly things, serious things, important things, everyday and once-in-a-lifetime things . . . all have a place in the hearts of people who are interested in everything that ever happened to each other, alone and especially together.
